No. 15-4019

UNITED STATES COURT OF APPEALS FOR THE FOURTH CIRCUIT

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,
Plaintiff-Appellee,

v.

ROBERT F McDONNELL,
Defendant-Appellant,

On Appeal from the United States District Court for the Eastern District of Virginia, Richmond Division, James R. Spencer, District Judge

JOINT APPENDIX VOLUME I OF XII (Pages JA.1-803)

Dana J. Boente
United States Attorney

Raymond Hulser
Acting Chief, Public Integrity Section
Criminal Division
U.S. Department of Justice

Richard D. Cooke
Ryan S. Faulconer
Michael S. Dry
Jessica D. Aber
David V Harbach, II
U.S. Attorney's Office
600 E. Main Street, Suite 1800
Richmond, VA 23219
Telephone: 804-819-5400

Counsel for the Plaintiff-Appellee The United States of America

Noel J. Francisco
Henry W Asbill
Charlotte H. Taylor
James M. Burnham
JONES DAY
51 Louisiana Avenue, N.W
Washington, DC 20001
Telephone: (202) 879-3939

John L. Brownlee
Elizabeth N. Jochum
HOLLAND & KNIGHT LLP
800 17th Street N.W
Suite 1100
Washington, DC 20006
Telephone: (202) 828-1854

Counsel for Defendant-Appellant Robert F McDonnell

JOINT APPENDIX
TABLE OF CONTENTS
No. 15-4019

VOLUME I

I. PLEADINGS

A. United States v. Robert F. McDonnell and Maureen G. McDonnell, Criminal No. 3:14-cr-00012

Description Page

U.S. District Court for the Eastern District of Virginia Docket Sheet, No. 3:14-cr-00012-JRS 1

Indictment (Jan. 21, 2014) (Dkt. No. 1) 81

Memorandum in Support of Defendant Robert F. McDonnell's Motion for the Production of Evidence and Other Relief to Remedy the Government's Interference in the Defense's Investigation (Feb. 13, 2014) (Dkt. No. 52) 124

Defendant Robert F. McDonnell's Motion for Bill of Particulars (Feb. 27, 2014) (Dkt. No. 80) 154

Response of the United States in Opposition to Defendants' Motions for Bill of Particulars (Mar. 10, 2014) (Dkt. No. 84) 173

Reply of Defendant Robert F. McDonnell to the Government's Opposition to Motion for Bill of Particulars (Mar. 13, 2014) (Dkt. No. 86) 189

Memorandum Order (Mar. 17, 2014) (Dkt. No. 93) 207

Memorandum Order (Mar. 19, 2014) (Dkt. No. 98) 209

Order (Mar. 20, 2014) (Dkt. No. 100) 211

Memorandum in Support of Defendant Robert F. McDonnell's Motion to Dismiss Counts 1-11 of the Indictment (Mar. 25, 2014) (Dkt. No. 106) 216

Memorandum in Support of Defendant Robert F. McDonnell's Motion for Omnibus Voir Dire Relief (Mar. 25, 2014) (Dkt. No. 110) 254

Memorandum in Support of Defendant Robert F. McDonnell's Motion to Sever Joint Trial (Mar. 25, 2014) (Dkt. No. 115) 285

Non-Confidential Memorandum in Support of Defendant Robert F McDonnell's Motion for Leave to File Supporting Declarations Under Seal and for Ex Parte in Camera Review (Mar. 25, 2014) (Dkt. No. 117) 313

Order (Apr. 1, 2014) (Dkt. No. 128) 319

Response of the United States in Opposition to Defendant Robert F McDonnell's Motion for Leave to File Supporting Declarations Under Seal and for Ex Parte in Camera Review (Apr. 2, 2014) (Dkt. No. 131) 320

Order (Apr. 7, 2014) (Dkt. No. 135) 334

Reply of Defendant Robert F McDonnell to the Government's Opposition to Motion for Leave to File Supporting Declarations Under Seal and for Ex Parte in Camera Review (Apr. 7, 2014) (Dkt. No. 136) 335

Memorandum Order (Apr. 17, 2014) (Dkt. No. 137) 350

Defendant Robert F McDonnell's Notice of Non-Filing of Declarations Pursuant to the Court's April 17, 2014 Order (Apr. 21, 2014) (Dkt. No. 140)... 353

Response of the United States in Opposition to Defendants' Motion to Sever Joint Trial (Apr. 24, 2014) (Dkt. No. 143) 359

Response of the United States to Defendants' Motions for Omnibus Voir Dire Relief (Apr. 24, 2014) (Dkt. No. 144) 381

Government's Response in Opposition to Defendants' Joint Motion to Dismiss Counts 1-11 of the Indictment (Apr. 24, 2104) (Dkt. No. 146) 389

Reply of Defendant Robert F McDonnell to the Government's Opposition to Motion to Dismiss Counts 1-11 of the Indictment (May 5, 2014) (Dkt. No. 148) 421

Reply of Defendant Robert F McDonnell to the Government's Response to Motion for Omnibus Voir Dire Relief (May 5, 2014) (Dkt. No. 151) 450

Reply of Defendant Robert F McDonnell to the Government's Opposition to Motion to Sever Joint Trial (May 5, 2014) (Dkt. No. 152) 461

Order (May 8, 2014) (Dkt. No. 157) 487

Defendant Robert F McDonnell's Notice of Filing of Declarations Pursuant to the Court's Orders (May 14, 2014) (Dkt. No. 162) 488

Order (May 20, 2014) (Dkt. No. 175) 491

Order (May 20, 2014) (Dkt. No. 176) 493

Order (May 20, 2014) (Dkt. No. 180) 495

Joint Proposed Jury Questionnaire (May 29, 2014) 497

Defendant Robert F McDonnell's Additional Proposed Juror Questionnaire Items (May 30, 2014) 536

Government's Proposed Additions to Jury Questionnaire (May 30, 2014) 551

Defendant Robert F McDonnell's Objections to Government's Proposed Additions to Juror Questionnaire (June 2, 2014) 559

Government's Objections to Defendants' Proposed Additions to Jury Questionnaire (June 2, 2014) 564

Final Jury Questionnaire (June 2014) 571

Memorandum in Support of Defendant Robert F McDonnell's Sealed Motion for Clarification (June 4, 2014) (Dkt. No. 205) 602

Sealed Order (June 4, 2014) (Dkt. No. 206) 616

Order (June 6, 2014) (Dkt. No. 217) 617

Government's Memorandum in Support of Motion to Exclude Expert Testimony (June 16, 2014) (Dkt. No. 222) 619

Memorandum in Support of Defendant Robert F McDonnell's Motion in Limine to Exclude Evidence Relating to Statements of Economic Interest (June 20, 2014) (Dkt. No. 238) 650

Robert F McDonnell's Memorandum in Opposition to the Government's Motion to Exclude Expert Testimony (June 20, 2014) (Dkt. No. 241) 663

Government's Reply in Support of Motion to Exclude Expert Testimony (June 24, 2014) (Dkt. No. 244) 696

Memorandum Opinion (June 26, 2014) (Dkt. No. 246) 716

Order (June 26, 2014) (Dkt. No. 247) 721

Response of the United States in Opposition to Defendants' Motion in Limine to Exclude Evidence Relating to Statements of Economic Interests (July 1, 2014) (Dkt. No. 252) 723

Reply of Defendant Robert F McDonnell to the Government's Opposition to Motion in Limine to Exclude Evidence Relating to Statements of Economic Interest (July 7, 2014) (Dkt. No. 269) 735

Robert F McDonnell's Proposed Jury Instructions (July 14, 2014) (Dkt. No. 287) (Excerpts, Nos. 37, 58, 59) 750

Memorandum Opinion (July 16, 2014) (Dkt. No. 295) 758

Order (July 16, 2014) (Dkt. No. 296) 762

Memorandum Order (July 16, 2014) (Dkt. No. 297) 764

Defendant Robert F McDonnell's Offer of Proof Regarding Expert Testimony (Aug. 28, 2014) (Dkt. No. 468) 767

Memorandum in Support of Defendant Robert F McDonnell's Renewed Motion for Judgment of Acquittal Pursuant to Rule 29(c) of the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure (Sept. 18, 2014) (Dkt. No. 510) 777

VOLUME II

I. PLEADINGS (CONTINUED)

Description Page

Government's Response in Opposition to Defendant Robert F McDonnell's Renewed Motion for Judgment of Acquittal (Oct. 14, 2014) (Dkt. No. 532) 804

Defendant Robert F McDonnell's Motion to Supplement the Record on Appeal (Oct. 23, 2014) (Dkt. No. 539) 834

Defendant Robert F McDonnell's Reply in Support of Renewed Motion for Judgment of Acquittal Pursuant to Rule 29(c) of the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure (Oct. 24, 2014) (Dkt. No. 540) 837

Memorandum in Support of Defendant Robert F McDonnell's Motion for New Trial Pursuant to Rule 33 of the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure (Oct. 30, 2014) (Dkt. No. 548) 860

Defendant Robert F. McDonnell's Reply in Support of Motion for New Trial Pursuant to Rule 33 of the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure (Oct. 30, 2014) (Dkt. No. 549) 892

  Exhibit A to Defendant Robert F. McDonnell's Reply in Support of Motion for New Trial Pursuant to Rule 33 of the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure (Oct. 30, 2014) (Dkt. No. 549-1) 915

Government's Response in Opposition to Defendant Robert F. McDonnell's Motion for a New Trial (Oct. 30, 2014) (Dkt. No. 553) 918

Memorandum Opinion (Dec. 1, 2014) (Dkt. No. 567) 950

Order (Dec. 1, 2014) (Dkt. No. 568) 975

Memorandum Opinion (Dec. 1, 2014) (Dkt. No. 571) 976

Order (Dec. 1, 2014) (Dkt. No. 572) 987

Memorandum in Support of Defendant Robert F. McDonnell's Motion to Unseal Certain Sealed Portions of the Record (Jan. 9, 2015) (Dkt. No. 612) 988

Reply of Defendant Robert F. McDonnell to the Government's Response to Motion to Unseal Certain Sealed Portions of the Record (Jan. 9, 2015) (Dkt. No. 613) 1000

Statement of Defendant Robert F. McDonnell Respecting the "Opposition to Unsealing" Filed by Jonnie R. Williams, Sr. in the Closed Case In re Grand Jury Subpoenas, No. 3:14-ms-67 (Jan. 9, 2015) (Dkt. No. 614) 1008

Reply of Defendant Robert F. McDonnell to the Government's Response to Motion to Supplement the Record on Appeal (Jan. 9, 2015) (Dkt. No. 616) 1015

Government's Response to Defendants' Motions to Unseal (Jan. 9, 2015) (Dkt. No. 617) 1020

Government's Response to Defendants' Motions to Supplement the Record (Jan. 9, 2015) (Dkt. No. 618) 1031

Memorandum Order (Jan. 12, 2015) (Dkt. No. 620) 1040

Robert F. McDonnell Amended Judgment (Jan. 13, 2015) (Dkt. No. 627) 1045

Defendant Robert F. McDonnell's Notice of Appeal (Jan. 13, 2015) (Dkt. No. 629) 1052

Defendant-Appellant's Motion for Release Pending Appeal (Jan. 14, 2015) (Dkt. No. 2-1) 1054

    Exhibit E to Defendant-Appellant's Motion for Release Pending Appeal (Jan. 14, 2015) (Dkt. No. 2-6) 1078

United States' Response to Motion for Bail Pending Appeal (Jan. 21, 2015) (Dkt. No. 29-1) 1084

Defendant-Appellant's Reply on Motion for Release Pending Appeal (Jan. 25, 2015) (Dkt. No. 38-1) 1117

    Exhibit D to Defendant-Appellant's Reply on Motion for Release Pending Appeal (Jan. 25, 2015) (Dkt. No. 38-2) (Excerpt, Tr. 54-60) 1136

B. In re Grand Jury Subpoenas*, Action No. 3:14-ms-67

Description Page

Motion to Seal Case and Documents (Mar. 12, 2014) 1146

Memorandum in Support of Movant's Motion to Seal Case and Documents (Mar. 12, 2014) 1150

Motion to Order Return of Private Information (Mar. 12, 2014) 1156

    Exhibit 1 to Motion to Order Return of Private Information (Mar. 12, 2014) 1169

    Exhibit 2 to Motion to Order Return of Private Information (Mar. 12, 2014) 1177

Order (Mar. 12, 2014) 1180

Response of the United States to Jonnie R. Williams, Sr.'s Motion to Order Return of Private Information (Mar. 13, 2014) 1181

Order (Mar. 13, 2014) 1188

Request to Unseal for Limited Purpose (Mar. 14, 2014) 1189

Order (Mar. 14, 2014) 1193

Motion to Order Return of Private Information (May 19, 2014) 1194

Exhibit A to Motion to Order Return of Private Information (May 19, 2014) 1200

Exhibit B to Motion to Order Return of Private Information (May 19, 2014) 1202

Exhibit C to Motion to Order Return of Private Information (May 19, 2014) 1204

Order (June 4, 2014) 1207

Motion for Limited Unsealing & Return of Private Information (June 5, 2014) 1208

Sealed Order (June 6, 2014) 1217

Sealed Order (June 9, 2014) 1218

Motion of Robert F McDonnell to Intervene (June 11, 2014) 1219

Robert F McDonnell's Sealed Memorandum in Opposition to Jonnie Williams' Motion for Return of Private Information (June 11, 2014) 1222

Reply in Support of Returning Private Information (June 12, 2014) 1245

Motion for Partial Unsealing of the Record (June 18, 2014) 1252

Motion to Stay Order Granting Motion for Return of Private Information (June 18, 2014) 1256

Sealed Order (June 18, 2014) 1268

Sealed Order (June 18, 2014) 1271

Jonnie R. Williams Sr.'s Response Consenting to Partial Unsealing and Opposing a Stay (June 19, 2014) 1272

Response of the United States to Mr. McDonnell's Motion to Stay Order Granting Motion for Return of Private Information (June 19, 2014) 1276

Response of the United States to Mr. McDonnell's Motion for Partial Unsealing of the Record (June 19, 2014) 1278

Reply of Intervenor Robert F McDonnell to the Opposition of Jonnie R. Williams, Sr. to His Motion to Stay Order Granting Motion for Return of Private Information (June 19, 2014) 1281

Sealed Order (June 19, 2014) 1285

Notice of Appeal (June 19, 2014) 1289

II. TRANSCRIPTS

Description Page

Motions Hearing of March 18, 2014 (Dkt. No. 96) 1292

Motions Hearing of May 19, 2014 (Dkt. No. 181) 1312

Motions and Daubert Hearing of July 10, 2014 (Dkt. No. 278) 1382

Motions and Daubert Hearing of July 15, 2014 (Dkt. No. 293) 1440

VOLUME III

II. TRANSCRIPTS (CONTINUED)

Description Page

Trial Proceedings of July 28, 2014 (Vol. 1) (Dkt. No. 330) 1552

    Voir Dire 1553

Trial Proceedings of July 29, 2014 (Vol. 2) (Dkt. No. 337) 1731

    Opening Statements 1747

    Ryan Greer 1828

    Cailin McDonnell Young 1861

    Jerri Fulkerson 1932

Trial Proceedings of July 30, 2014 (Vol. 3) (Dkt. No. 345) 1976

    Jerri Fulkerson 1979

    Phil Owenby 2121

    Robert R. ("Bobby") McDonnell 2151

  - Mark Sykes 2186
  - Jonnie Ray Williams, Sr. 2197

VOLUME IV

II. TRANSCRIPTS (CONTINUED)

Description Page

- Trial Proceedings of July 31, 2014 (Vol. 4) (Dkt. No. 346) 2244
  - Jonnie Ray Williams, Sr. 2245
- Trial Proceedings of August 1, 2014 (Vol. 5) (Dkt. No. 357) 2464
  - Jonnie Ray Williams, Sr. 2466
- Trial Proceedings of August 4, 2014 (Vol. 6) (Dkt. No. 358) 2704
  - Jonnie Ray Williams, Sr. 2705
  - Philip Cox 2854
  - Monica Block 2948

VOLUME V

II. TRANSCRIPTS (CONTINUED)

Description Page

- Trial Proceedings of August 5, 2014 (Vol. 7) (Dkt. No. 359) 3002
  - Monica Block 3003
  - Molly Huffstetler 3037
  - Dr. John Clore 3089
  - Jasen Eige 3143
  - Dr. John Faessel 3251
  - Pamelia Watts 3265
  - Timothy Huff 3298

Trial Proceedings of August 6, 2014 (Vol. 8) (Dkt. No. 376) 3310

Timothy Huff 3313

Dr. John Lazo 3328

Mary Shea Sutherland 3367

Trial Proceedings of August 7, 2014 (Vol. 9) (Dkt. No. 379) 3581

Sarah Scarbrough 3583

Patrizio Caturegli 3682

Dr. Frank Crantz 3703

Dr. William A. Hazel, Jr. 3731

Alfred Walden 3768

Todd Claiborne 3775

Tucker Martin 3782

VOLUME VI

II. TRANSCRIPTS (CONTINUED)

Description Page

Trial Proceedings of August 8, 2014 (Vol. 10) (Dkt. No. 384) 3849

Matthew A. Conrad 3851

Paul Perito 3883

John A. Piscitelli 3992

Trial Proceedings of August 11, 2014 (Vol. 11) (Dkt. No. 388) 4085

Martin Kent 4086

Sara Wilson 4201

Lisa Hicks-Thomas 4223

Michael Uncapher 4232

Sharon Krueger 4299

Jerry Kilgore 4337

Trial In-Chambers Proceedings of August 12, 2014 (Dkt. No. 547) 4382

Trial Proceedings of August 12, 2014 (Vol. 12) (Dkt. No. 398) 4400

Jerry Kilgore 4401

Emily Rabbitt 4430

George Vetrovec 4447

Amy Bridge 4486

Charles Hagan 4495

James Lyons 4565

Donnie Williams 4578

William Sessoms, Jr. 4612

VOLUME VII

II. TRANSCRIPTS (CONTINUED)

Description Page

Trial Proceedings of August 13, 2014 (Vol. 13) (Dkt. No. 405) 4649

William Sessoms 4651

Barbara Tierney 4680

Frank R. Pollack 4686

Nanette Bolt 4694

Jeffrey Creekmore 4795

George Floyd 4812

William Long, Jr. 4820

Stipulations 4828

David Hulser 4834

Trial Proceedings of August 14, 2014 (Vol. 14) (Dkt. No. 412) 4916

David Hulser 4917

Trial Proceedings of August 15, 2014 (Vol. 15) (Dkt. No. 425) 5127

Motions Argument 5128

VOLUME VIII

II. TRANSCRIPTS (CONTINUED)

Description Page

Trial Proceedings of August 18, 2014 (Vol. 16) (Dkt. No. 428) 5173

Brenda Chamberlain 5175

Janet Kelly 5223

Neal Noyes 5334

Laura Fornash 5360

Richard Brown 5370

James Cheng 5381

Trial Proceedings of August 19, 2014 (Vol. 17) (Dkt. No. 431) 5420

Maureen C. McDonnell 5421

Kathleen Scott 5602

J. Allen Kosowsky 5628

Trial Proceedings of August 20, 2014 (Vol. 18) (Dkt. No. 436) 5682

J. Allen Kosowsky 5683

Daniel Cook 5754

Todd Haymore 5789

James Burke 5812

Fr. Timothy Scully 5848
Joseph F Damico 5860
Robert F McDonnell 5870

VOLUME IX

II. TRANSCRIPTS (CONTINUED)

Description Page

Trial Proceedings of August 21, 2014 (Vol. 19) (Dkt. No. 443) 5947
Robert F McDonnell 5949
Trial Proceedings of August 22, 2014 (Vol. 20) (Dkt. No. 451) 6206
Robert F McDonnell 6207
Trial Proceedings of August 25, 2014 (Vol. 21) (Dkt. No. 457) 6426
Robert F McDonnell 6428

VOLUME X

II. TRANSCRIPTS (CONTINUED)

Description Page

Trial Proceedings of August 26, 2014 (Vol. 22) (Dkt. No. 461) 6711
Robert F McDonnell 6712
Trial Proceedings of August 27, 2014 (Vol. 23) (Dkt. No. 466) 6982
April Niamtu 6986
Jeanine McDonnell Zubowsky 7024
Emmet Flood 7074
Robert Ross 7093
Allen James Abel, Jr. 7240
Matthew Hunter 7248

Trial Proceedings of August 28, 2014 (Vol. 24) (Dkt. No. 475) 7260

Kathryn Weber 7261

Motions Argument 7300

VOLUME XI

II. TRANSCRIPTS (CONTINUED)

Description Page

Trial Proceedings of August 29, 2014 (Vol. 25) (Dkt. No. 478) 7385

Closing Arguments 7386

Trial Proceedings of September 2, 2014 (Vol. 26) (Dkt. No. 487) 7641

Jury Instructions 7644

Trial Proceedings of September 3, 2014 (Vol. 27) (Dkt. No. 492) 7705

Deliberations 7706

Trial Proceedings of September 4, 2014 (Vol. 28) (Dkt. No. 498) 7708

Deliberations and Verdict 7709

Sentencing Proceedings of January 6, 2015 (Dkt. No. 604) 7718

Gary Nelson 7745

William Horan 7751

Monsignor Timothy Keeney 7766

William Howell 7775

Clovia Lawrence 7783

Michel Zajur 7791

Nancy Naisawald 7796

Terrie Suit 7807

Albert Poole 7822

Janet Kelly 7826

L. Douglas Wilder 7832

Attorney Argument 7846

III. EXHIBITS

Description Page

GX5: Blank Statement of Economic Interest Form 7899

GX134: Email from Robert F McDonnell to Jonnie Williams, Sr. (May 28, 2011) 7917

GX530: Letter from Dana Boente to Richard Cullen, Esq. and Reid H. Weingarten, Esq. (May 30, 2014) 7918

GX627: Emails between Emily Rabbitt and Adam Zubowsky (Jan. 4, 2013) 7921

RM-0014: Letter from Mary-Shea Sutherland to Jonnie Williams (Jan. 20, 2012) 7923

VOLUME XII
SEALED APPENDIX

IV. SEALED DOCUMENTS

Description Page

Declaration #1 of William A. Burck (filed ex parte and under seal) (May 14, 2014) 7926

APPEAL,CLOSED,PROTO

U.S. District Court
Eastern District of Virginia - (Richmond)
CRIMINAL DOCKET FOR CASE #: 3:14-cr-00012-JRS All Defendants

Case title: USA v. McDonnell et al	Date Filed: 01/21/2014 Date Terminated: 02/20/2015

Assigned to: District Judge James R. Spencer

Appeals court case number: 15-4019 USCA

Defendant (1)

Robert F. McDonnell TERMINATED: 01/06/2015	represented by	John Leslie Brownlee Holland & Knight LLP (DC) 800 17th Street, N.W Suite 1100 Washington, DC 20006 202-828-1854 Email: john.brownlee@hklaw.com LEAD ATTORNEY ATTORNEY TO BE NOTICED Designation: Retained
		Charles Michael Carberry Jones Day (DC-NA) 51 Louisiana Ave NW Washington, DC 20001 NA (202) 879-3939 Fax: (202) 626-1700 Email: carberry@jonesday.com PRO HAC VICE ATTORNEY TO BE NOTICED Designation. Retained
		Christopher Michael Iaquinto Holland & Knight LLP (MA-NA) 10 St James Avenue Boston, MA 02116 NA (617) 305-2092 Fax: (617) 523-6850 Email: christopher.iaquinto@hklaw.com

PRO HAC VICE
ATTORNEY TO BE NOTICED
Designation: Retained

Daniel Ira Small
Holland & Knight LLP (MA-NA)
10 St James Avenue
Boston, MA 02116
NA
(617) 854-1453
Fax: (617) 523-6850
Email: daniel.small@hklaw.com
PRO HAC VICE
ATTORNEY TO BE NOTICED
Designation: Retained

Elizabeth Newell Jochum
Holland & Knight LLP (McLean)
1600 Tysons Blvd
Suite 700
Tysons Corner, VA 22102
(703) 720-8606
Fax: (703) 720-8610
Email: elizabeth.jochum@hklaw.com
PRO HAC VICE
ATTORNEY TO BE NOTICED
Designation: Retained

Henry Winchester Asbill
Jones Day (DC-NA)
51 Louisiana Ave NW
Washington, DC 20001
NA
202-879-3939
Fax: 202-626-1700
Email: hasbill@jonesday.com
PRO HAC VICE
ATTORNEY TO BE NOTICED
Designation: Retained

Hilary Keith Perkins
Jones Day (DC-NA)
51 Louisiana Ave NW
Washington, DC 20001
NA
(202) 879-7647
Fax: (202) 626-1700
Email: hperkins@jonesday.com
PRO HAC VICE
ATTORNEY TO BE NOTICED

Designation: Retained

James Mahoney Burnham
Jones Day (DC-NA)
51 Louisiana Ave NW
Washington, DC 20001
NA
(202) 879-3939
Fax: (202) 626-1700
Email: jmburnham@jonesday.com
PRO HAC VICE
ATTORNEY TO BE NOTICED
Designation: Retained

Jonathan Andrew Berry
Jones Day
51 Louisiana Ave NW
Washington, DC 20001
202-879-3939
Fax: 202-626-1700
Email: jberry@jonesday.com
ATTORNEY TO BE NOTICED
Designation: Retained

Mary Ellen Powers
Jones Day (DC-NA)
51 Louisiana Ave NW
Washington, DC 20001
NA
(202) 879-3870
Fax: (202) 626-1700
Email: mepowers@jonesday.com
PRO HAC VICE
ATTORNEY TO BE NOTICED
Designation: Retained

Noel John Francisco
Jones Day (DC-NA)
51 Louisiana Ave NW
Washington, DC 20001
NA
(202) 879-5485
Fax: (202) 626-1700
Email: njfrancisco@jonesday.com
PRO HAC VICE
ATTORNEY TO BE NOTICED
Designation: Retained

Owen Thomas Conroy
Jones Day (DC-NA)

51 Louisiana Ave NW
Washington, DC 20001
NA
(202) 879-3835
Fax: (202) 626-1700
Email: otconroy@jonesday.com
PRO HAC VICE
ATTORNEY TO BE NOTICED
Designation: Retained

Ryan Dean Newman
Jones Day (DC-NA)
51 Louisiana Ave NW
Washington, DC 20001
NA
(202) 879-5482
Fax: (202) 626-1700
Email: rnewman@jonesday.com
TERMINATED: 12/01/2014
PRO HAC VICE
Designation: Retained

Thomas Brady Shuttleworth , II
Shuttleworth Ruloff Swain Haddad &
Morecock PC
317 30th Street
Virginia Beach, VA 23451
757-671-6000
Fax: 757-671-6004
Email: tshuttleworth@srgslaw.com
ATTORNEY TO BE NOTICED
Designation: Retained

Timothy James Taylor
Holland & Knight LLP (McLean)
1600 Tysons Blvd
Suite 700
McLean, VA 22102
703-720-8600
Fax: 703-720-8610
Email: timothy.taylor@hklaw.com
TERMINATED: 09/02/2014
Designation: Retained

William Frederick Gould
Holland & Knight LLP (McLean)
1600 Tysons Blvd
Suite 700
McLean, VA 22102
202-570-0464

Email: william.gould@hklaw.com
ATTORNEY TO BE NOTICED
Designation: Retained

Pending Counts	Disposition
18:1349; 18:981(A)(1)(c); 28:2461(c); 18:982(a)(2)CONSPIRACY TO DEFRAUD THE CITIZENS OF VIRGINIA OF THEIR RIGHT TO HONEST SERVICES BY USE OF INTERSTATE WIRES; FORFEITURE ALLEGATION (1)	24 MONTHS IMPRISONMENT TO BE SERVED CONCURRENT WITH ALL OTHER COUNTS, 2 YEARS SUPERVISED RELEASE TO BE SERVED CONCURRENT WITH ALL OTHER COUNTS, $100 S/A
18:1343; 18:2; 18:981(a)(1)(C); 28:2461(c); 18:982(a)(2); USE OF INTERESTATE WIRE COMMUNICATIONS TO FURTHER SCHEME TO DEFRAUD THE CITIZENS OF VIRGINIA OF THEIR RIGHT TO HONEST SERVICES; AIDING AND ABETTING; FORFEITURE ALLEGATION (2-4)	24 MONTHS IMPRISONMENT TO BE SERVED CONCURRENT WITH ALL OTHER COUNTS, 2 YEARS SUPERVISED RELEASE TO BE SERVED CONCURRENT WITH ALL OTHER COUNTS, $100 S/A
18:1951, 18:981(a)(1)(C); 28:2461(c); 18:982(a)(2); CONSPIRACY TO OBTAIN PROPERTY UNDER COLOR OF OFFICIAL RIGHT; FORFEITURE ALLEGATION (5)	24 MONTHS IMPRISONMENT TO BE SERVED CONCURRENT WITH ALL OTHER COUNTS, 2 YEARS SUPERVISED RELEASE TO BE SERVED CONCURRENT WITH ALL OTHER COUNTS, $100 S/A
18:1951, 18:2; 18:981(a)(1)(C); 28:2461(c), 18:982(a)(2); OBTAINING PROPERTY UNDER COLOR OF OFFICIAL RIGHT; AIDING AND ABETTING; FORFEITURE ALLEGATION (6-11)	24 MONTHS IMPRISONMENT TO BE SERVED CONCURRENT WITH ALL OTHER COUNTS, 2 YEARS SUPERVISED RELEASE TO BE SERVED CONCURRENT WITH ALL OTHER COUNTS, $100 S/A

Highest Offense Level (Opening)

Felony

Terminated Counts	Disposition
18:1014; 18:2; FALSE STATEMENT; AIDING AND ABETTING (12-13)	NOT GUILTY BY JURY

Highest Offense Level (Terminated)

Felony

Complaints	Disposition
None

Assigned to: District Judge James R. Spencer

Defendant (2)

Maureen G. McDonnell
TERMINATED: 02/20/2015

represented by

Heather Hansen Martin
Quinn Emanuel Urquhart & Sullivan LLP
777 6th St NW
11 Floor
Washington, DC 20001
202-756-1950
Fax: 202-756-1951
Email: heathermartin@quinnemanuel.com
LEAD ATTORNEY
ATTORNEY TO BE NOTICED
Designation: Retained

Daniel Rickert Koffmann
Quinn Emanuel Urquhart & Sullivan, LLP (NY-NA)
51 Madison Ave
22nd Floor
New York, NY 10010
NA
212-849-7000
Fax: 212-849-7100
Email: danielkoffmann@quinnemanuel.com
PRO HAC VICE
ATTORNEY TO BE NOTICED

Jaime Brett Wisegarver
Hirschler Fleischer PC
2100 E Cary St
PO Box 500
Richmond, VA 23218-0500
(804) 771-5634
Fax: (804) 644-0957
Email: jwisegarver@hf-law.com
TERMINATED: 07/28/2014
Designation: Retained

Kaiyeu Kevin Chu
Quinn Emanuel Urquhart & Sullivan LLP
777 6th St NW
11 Floor
Washington, DC 20001
202-538-8000
Fax: 202-538-8100
Email: kevinchu@quinnemanuel.com
ATTORNEY TO BE NOTICED
Designation: Retained

Randy Darrell Singer
Singer Legal Group
1209A Laskin Rd
Virginia Beach, VA 23451
(757) 301-9995
Fax: (703) 233-1084
Email: rsinger@singerlegal.net
ATTORNEY TO BE NOTICED

Stephen Michael Hauss
Quinn Emanuel Urquhart & Sullivan LLP (DC-NA)
777 6th Street NW
11th Floor
Washington, DC 20001
NA
(202) 538-8000
Fax: (202) 538-8100
Email:
stephenhauss@quinnemanuel.com
PRO HAC VICE
ATTORNEY TO BE NOTICED

William Anthony Burck
Quinn Emanuel Urquhart & Sullivan LLP (DC-NA)
777 6th Street NW
11th Floor
Washington, DC 20001
NA
(202) 538-8000
Fax: (202) 538-8100
Email:
williamburck@quinnemanuel.com
PRO HAC VICE
ATTORNEY TO BE NOTICED

Pending Counts Disposition

18:1349; 18:981(A)(1)(c); 28:2461(c); 18:982(a)(2)CONSPIRACY TO DEFRAUD THE CITIZENS OF VIRGINIA OF THEIR RIGHT TO HONEST SERVICES BY USE OF INTERSTATE WIRES; FORFEITURE ALLEGATION (1)	12 MONTHS AND 1 DAY TO BE SERVED CONCURRENT WITH ALL OTHER COUNTS, 2 YEARS SUPERVISED RELEASE TO BE SERVED CONCURRENT WITH ALL OTHER COUNTS, $100 S/A ON EACH COUNT
18:1343; 18:2; 18:981(a)(1)(C); 28:2461(c); 18:982(a)(2); USE OF INTERESTATE WIRE COMMUNICATIONS TO FURTHER SCHEME TO DEFRAUD THE CITIZENS OF VIRGINIA OF THEIR RIGHT TO HONEST SERVICES; AIDING AND ABETTING; FORFEITURE ALLEGATION (2-3)	12 MONTHS AND 1 DAY TO BE SERVED CONCURRENT WITH ALL OTHER COUNTS, 2 YEARS SUPERVISED RELEASE TO BE SERVED CONCURRENT WITH ALL OTHER COUNTS, $100 S/A ON EACH COUNT
18:1951; 18:981(a)(1)(C); 28:2461(c); 18:982(a)(2); CONSPIRACY TO OBTAIN PROPERTY UNDER COLOR OF OFFICIAL RIGHT; FORFEITURE ALLEGATION (5)	12 MONTHS AND 1 DAY TO BE SERVED CONCURRENT WITH ALL OTHER COUNTS, 2 YEARS SUPERVISED RELEASE TO BE SERVED CONCURRENT WITH ALL OTHER COUNTS, $100 S/A ON EACH COUNT
18:1951, 18:2; 18:981(a)(1)(C); 28:2461(c); 18:982(a)(2); OBTAINING PROPERTY UNDER COLOR OF OFFICIAL RIGHT; AIDING AND ABETTING; FORFEITURE ALLEGATION (6-8)	12 MONTHS AND 1 DAY TO BE SERVED CONCURRENT WITH ALL OTHER COUNTS, 2 YEARS SUPERVISED RELEASE TO BE SERVED CONCURRENT WITH ALL OTHER COUNTS, $100 S/A ON EACH COUNT
18:1951; 18:2; 18:981(a)(1)(C); 28:2461(c); 18:982(a)(2); OBTAINING PROPERTY UNDER COLOR OF OFFICIAL RIGHT; AIDING AND ABETTING; FORFEITURE ALLEGATION (10)	12 MONTHS AND 1 DAY TO BE SERVED CONCURRENT WITH ALL OTHER COUNTS, 2 YEARS SUPERVISED RELEASE TO BE SERVED CONCURRENT WITH ALL OTHER COUNTS, $100 S/A ON EACH COUNT

Highest Offense Level (Opening)

Felony

Terminated Counts	Disposition
18:1343; 18:2; 18:981(a)(1)(C); 28:2461(c); 18:982(a)(2); USE OF INTERESTATE WIRE

COMMUNICATIONS TO FURTHER SCHEME TO DEFRAUD THE CITIZENS OF VIRGINIA OF THEIR RIGHT TO HONEST SERVICES; AIDING AND ABETTING; FORFEITURE ALLEGATION (4)	NOT GUILTY PURSUANT TO JURY VERDICT
18:1951, 18:2; 18:981(a)(1)(C); 28:2461(c); 18:982(a)(2); OBTAINING PROPERTY UNDER COLOR OF OFFICIAL RIGHT, AIDING AND ABETTING; FORFEITURE ALLEGATION (9)	NOT GUILTY PURSUANT TO JURY VERDICT
18:1951, 18:2; 18:981(a)(1)(C); 28:2461(c); 18:982(a)(2); OBTAINING PROPERTY UNDER COLOR OF OFFICIAL RIGHT, AIDING AND ABETTING; FORFEITURE ALLEGATION (11)	NOT GUILTY PURSUANT TO JURY VERDICT
18:1014; 18:2; FALSE STATEMENT; AIDING AND ABETTING (13)	NOT GUILTY PURSUANT TO JURY VERDICT
18:1512(c)(2); 18:2 OBSTRUCTION OF AN OFFICIAL PROCEEDING; AIDING AND ABETTING (14)	DISMISSED PURSUANT TO ORDER ENTERED 12/1/2014 (DKT #570)

Highest Offense Level (Terminated)

Felony

Complaints	Disposition
None

Movant

Abigail Farris Rogers
TERMINATED: 02/20/2015

represented by Laurin Howard Mills
LeClairRyan PC (Alexandria)
2318 Mill Road
Suite 1100
Alexandria, VA 22314
703-647-5903
Fax: 703-647-5953
Email: laurin.mills@leclairryan.com
LEAD ATTORNEY

ATTORNEY TO BE NOTICED

Movant

National Association of Criminal Defense Lawyers
TERMINATED: 04/01/2014

represented by Timothy Patrick O'Toole
Miller & Chevalier, Chartered
655 15th Street, NW
Suite 900
Washington, DC 20001
202-626-5800
Email: totoole@milchev.com
LEAD ATTORNEY

John DeWitt Cline
Law Office of John D. Cline
235 Montgomery Street
Suite 1070
San Francisco, CA 94104
NA
(415) 322-8319
Fax: (415) 524-8265
Email: cline@johndclinelaw.com
PRO HAC VICE

Movant

Andrew P. Miller
TERMINATED: 04/07/2014

represented by Stephen Charles Piepgrass
Troutman Sanders LLP
Troutman Sanders Bldg
1001 Haxall Point
PO Box 1122
Richmond, VA 23218
(804) 697-1320
Fax: (804) 698-5147
Email:
stephen.piepgrass@troutmansanders.com
LEAD ATTORNEY
Designation: Retained

William Henry Hurd
Troutman Sanders LLP
Troutman Sanders Bldg
1001 Haxall Point
PO Box 1122
Richmond, VA 23219
(804) 697-1335
Designation: Retained

Movant

J. Marshall Coleman TERMINATED: 04/07/2014	represented by	Stephen Charles Piepgrass (See above for address) LEAD ATTORNEY Designation: Retained William Henry Hurd (See above for address) Designation: Retained

Movant

Mary Sue Terry TERMINATED: 04/07/2014	represented by	Stephen Charles Piepgrass (See above for address) LEAD ATTORNEY Designation: Retained William Henry Hurd (See above for address) Designation: Retained

Movant

Stephen D. Rosenthal TERMINATED: 04/07/2014	represented by	Stephen Charles Piepgrass (See above for address) LEAD ATTORNEY Designation: Retained William Henry Hurd (See above for address) Designation: Retained

Movant

Mark L. Earley TERMINATED: 04/07/2014	represented by	Stephen Charles Piepgrass (See above for address) LEAD ATTORNEY Designation: Retained William Henry Hurd (See above for address) Designation: Retained

Movant

Johnny R. Huff TERMINATED: 04/22/2014	represented by	Johnny R. Huff 58222 / 1029720 Riverside Regional Jail P.O. Box 1041 N. Prince George, VA 23860 PRO SE

Movant

Jerri Fulkerson TERMINATED: 07/30/2014	represented by	Dallas Jacob Egging Kaplan Morgan, Lewis & Bockius LLP (DC) 1111 Pennsylvania Ave, NW Washington, DC 20004 202-739-5407 Fax: 202-739-3001 Email: dkaplan@morganlewis.com LEAD ATTORNEY George J. Terwilliger , III Morgan Lewis & Bockius LLP 1111 Pennsylvania Ave NW Washington, DC 20004 NA (202) 739-5988 Fax: (202) 739-3001 Email: gterwilliger@morganlewis.com PRO HAC VICE

Movant

Christopher Young	represented by	Edward Joseph Fuhr Hunton & Williams LLP 951 E Byrd St Riverfront Plaza Richmond, VA 23219 (804) 788-8200 Email: efuhr@hunton.com LEAD ATTORNEY ATTORNEY TO BE NOTICED

Movant

Cailin M. Young TERMINATED: 02/20/2015	represented by	Edward Joseph Fuhr (See above for address) LEAD ATTORNEY ATTORNEY TO BE NOTICED

Movant

Steven Davis Consultant TERMINATED: 09/15/2014	represented by	Steven Davis 5389 Painted Mirage Road Las Vegas, NV 89149 702-655-0273 PRO SE

Intervenor

WP Company LLC TERMINATED: 02/20/2015 doing business as The Washington Post TERMINATED: 02/20/2015 doing business as The Washington Post	represented by	Craig Thomas Merritt Christian & Barton LLP 909 E Main St Suite 1200 Richmond, VA 23219-3095 804-697-4128 Fax: 804-697-6128 Email: cmerritt@cblaw.com LEAD ATTORNEY ATTORNEY TO BE NOTICED Designation: Retained David Brendan Lacy Christian & Barton LLP 909 E Main St Suite 1200 Richmond, VA 23219 (804) 697-4121 Fax: (804) 697-6121 Email: dlacy@cblaw.com ATTORNEY TO BE NOTICED Designation: Retained

Intervenor

BH Media Group Holdings, Inc. Publisher of the Richmond Times-Dispatch TERMINATED: 02/20/2015	represented by	Craig Thomas Merritt (See above for address) LEAD ATTORNEY ATTORNEY TO BE NOTICED Designation: Retained David Brendan Lacy (See above for address) ATTORNEY TO BE NOTICED Designation: Retained

Intervenor

Associated Press The TERMINATED: 02/20/2015	represented by	David Brendan Lacy (See above for address) LEAD ATTORNEY ATTORNEY TO BE NOTICED Designation: Retained Craig Thomas Merritt (See above for address) ATTORNEY TO BE NOTICED Designation: Retained

Plaintiff

USA	represented by	Michael Steven Dry US Attorney's Office 600 E Main St 18th Fl Richmond, VA 23219 (804) 819-5400 Email: michael.s.dry@usdoj.gov LEAD ATTORNEY ATTORNEY TO BE NOTICED Designation: US Attorney David V. Harbach , II United States Attorney Office (Richmond-NA) 600 E Main St Suite 1800 Richmond, VA 23219 NA (804) 819-7412 Email: david.harbach@usdoj.gov ATTORNEY TO BE NOTICED Designation: US Attorney Jessica Diane Aber US Attorney Office (Richmond) 600 E Main St 18th Fl Richmond, VA 23219 804-819-5400 Fax: 804-771-2316 Email: Jessica.D.Aber@usdoj.gov ATTORNEY TO BE NOTICED Designation: US Attorney Richard D. Cooke

United States Attorney's Office
(Richmond)
600 E Main St
Suite 1800
Richmond, VA 23219
804-819-5449
Email: richard.cooke@usdoj.gov
ATTORNEY TO BE NOTICED
Designation: US Attorney

Ryan Scott Faulconer
US Attorney's Office (Alexandria-NA)
2100 Jamieson Avenue
Alexandria, VA 22314
NA
703-299-3700
Email: ryan.faulconer2@usdoj.gov
ATTORNEY TO BE NOTICED
Designation: US Attorney

Date Filed	#	Docket Text
01/21/2014	1	INDICTMENT as to Robert F McDonnell (1) count(s) 1-13, Maureen G. McDonnell (2) count(s) 1-11, and 13-14. (jtho,) (Entered: 01/21/2014)
01/21/2014	3	Summons Issued in case as to Robert F McDonnell Arraignment set for 1/24/2014 at 11:00 AM in Richmond Courtroom 7000 before District Judge James R. Spencer. Initial Appearance/Bond Hearing set for 1/24/2014 at 10:00 AM in Richmond Courtroom 5400 before Magistrate Judge David J. Novak. (cgar) (Entered: 01/21/2014)
01/21/2014	4	Summons Issued in case as to Maureen G. McDonnell Arraignment set for 1/24/2014 at 11:00 AM in Richmond Courtroom 7000 before District Judge James R. Spencer. Initial Appearance/Bond set for 1/24/2014 at 10:00 AM in Richmond Courtroom 5400 before Magistrate Judge David J. Novak. (cgar) (Entered: 01/21/2014)
01/21/2014	6	NOTICE OF ATTORNEY APPEARANCE: William Frederick Gould appearing for Robert F McDonnell John L. Brownlee notice of appearance (Gould, William) (Entered: 01/21/2014)
01/21/2014	7	Motion to appear Pro Hac Vice by Henry W Asbill and Certification of Local Counsel John L. Brownlee (Filing fee $ 75 receipt number 0422-3822075.) by Robert F McDonnell. (Gould, William) (Entered: 01/21/2014)
01/21/2014	8	MOTION and Memorandum in Support for Discovery of Selected Recordings of Communications Between Prosecutors and Members of the Grand Jury by Robert F McDonnell. (Gould, William) Modified text on 1/24/2014 (tdai,). (Entered: 01/21/2014)
01/21/2014	9	MOTION and Memorandum in Support for Release of Brady Materials by Robert F McDonnell. (Exhibits A-C Attached) (Gould, William) (Entered: 01/21/2014)

01/21/2014	10	Motion to appear Pro Hac Vice by James M. Burnham and Certification of Local Counsel John L. Brownlee (Filing fee $ 75 receipt number 0422-3822117.) by Robert F McDonnell. (Gould, William) (Entered: 01/21/2014)
01/22/2014	11	MOTION for Extension Unopposed Motion to Reschedule Arraignment and Initial Appearance by Robert F McDonnell. (Gould, William) (Entered: 01/22/2014)
01/22/2014		Minute Entry for proceedings held before Magistrate Judge David J. Novak: Conference Call as to Robert F McDonnell and Maureen G. McDonnell held on 1/22/2014. (cgar) (Entered: 01/22/2014)
01/22/2014	12	ORDER denying 11 Motion for Extension of Time as to Robert F McDonnell (1). Defendants' initial appearance and arraignment will move forward as originally scheduled on January 24, 2014. Signed by Magistrate Judge David J. Novak on 1/22/2014. (cgar) (Entered: 01/22/2014)
01/22/2014	13	NOTICE OF ATTORNEY APPEARANCE: Heather Hansen Martin appearing for Maureen G. McDonnell (Martin, Heather) (Entered: 01/22/2014)
01/22/2014	14	Motion to appear Pro Hac Vice by William A. Burck and Certification of Local Counsel Heather H. Martin (Filing fee $ 75 receipt number 0422-3823842.) by Maureen G. McDonnell. (Martin, Heather) (Entered: 01/22/2014)
01/22/2014	15	Motion to appear Pro Hac Vice by Stephen M. Hauss and Certification of Local Counsel Heather H. Martin (Filing fee $ 75 receipt number 0422-3823843.) by Maureen G. McDonnell. (Martin, Heather) (Entered: 01/22/2014)
01/23/2014	16	ORDER granting 7 Motion for Pro hac vice. Appointed Henry Winchester Asbill as to Robert F McDonnell (1). Signed by District Judge James R. Spencer on 1/23/14. (tdai,) (Entered: 01/23/2014)
01/23/2014	17	ORDER granting 10 Motion for Pro hac vice. Appointed James Mahoney Burnham as to Robert F McDonnell (1). Signed by District Judge James R. Spencer on 1/23/14. (tdai,) (Entered: 01/23/2014)
01/23/2014	18	ORDER granting 14 Motion for Pro hac vice. Appointed William Anthony Burck as to Maureen G. McDonnell (2). Signed by District Judge James R. Spencer on 1/23/14. (tdai,) (Entered: 01/23/2014)
01/23/2014	19	ORDER granting 15 Motion for Pro hac vice. Appointed Stephen Michael Hauss as to Maureen G. McDonnell (2). Signed by District Judge James R. Spencer on 1/23/14. (tdai,) (Entered: 01/23/2014)
01/23/2014	20	Motion to appear Pro Hac Vice by Charles Michael Carberry and Certification of Local Counsel John Leslie Brownlee (Filing fee $ 75 receipt number 0422-3825789.) by Robert F McDonnell. (Brownlee, John) Modified text on 1/24/2014 (tdai,). (Entered: 01/23/2014)
01/24/2014	21	Minute Entry for proceedings held before Magistrate Judge David J. Novak:Initial Appearance/Bond as to Robert F McDonnell and Maureen G. McDonnell held on 1/24/2014. Matter came on for initial appearances. Defts advised of charges/penalties and rights. Defts ordered released pursuant to Govt request on PR bond and agrees to appear as instructed. Defts instructed not to leave U.S. or have contact with any witnesses or representatives of the government. Court confirmed passports submitted as previously ordered. Court reviewed Local Rule 57 Lead counsel (Dry, Brownlee and Burck) confirm understanding and intent to comply as instructed to Local Rule 57 (Court Reporter Jeffrey Kull, OCR.)(cgar) (Entered: 01/24/2014)

01/24/2014	22	Minute Entry for proceedings held before District Judge James R. Spencer:Arraignment as to Robert F McDonnell (1) Count 1,2-4,5,6-11,12-13 and Maureen G. McDonnell (2) Count 1,2-4,5,6-11,13,14 held on 1/24/2014. Robert F McDonnell entered a plea of not guilty and requested a trial by jury. Maureen G. McDonnell entered a plea of not guilty and requested a trial by jury. Robert F McDonnell's Motion for Continuance of Trial Beyond the Speedy Trial Act Cut-Off Date - GRANTED. Maureen G. McDonnell's Motion for Continuance of Trial Beyond the Speedy Trial Act Cut-Off Date -- GRANTED. Parties to submit draft scheduling order. Jury Trial scheduled to begin July 28, 2014 at 10:00 a.m. Defendants remain on bond. (Court Reporter Jeff Kull, OCR.)(khan,) (Entered: 01/24/2014)
01/24/2014	23	MOTION for Continuance of Trial Beyond the Speedy Trial Act Cut-Off Date by Robert F McDonnell. (khan,) (Entered: 01/24/2014)
01/24/2014		ORAL ORDER as to Robert F McDonnell GRANTING 23 MOTION for Continuance of Trial Beyond the Speedy Trial Act Cut-Off Date filed by Robert F McDonnell by District Judge James R. Spencer on 1/24/14. (khan,) (Entered: 01/24/2014)
01/24/2014	24	MOTION for Continuance of Trial Beyond the Speedy Trial Act Cut-Off Date by Maureen G. McDonnell. (khan,) (Entered: 01/24/2014)
01/24/2014		ORAL ORDER as to Maureen G. McDonnell GRANTING 24 MOTION for Continuance of Trial Beyond the Speedy Trial Act Cut-Off Date filed by Maureen G. McDonnell by District Judge James R. Spencer on 1/24/14. (khan,) (Entered: 01/24/2014)
01/24/2014		Set/Reset Hearings as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell: Jury Trial set for 7/28/2014 at 10:00 AM in Richmond Courtroom 7000 before District Judge James R. Spencer. (khan,) (Entered: 01/24/2014)
01/27/2014	25	MOTION for Discovery of Selected Communications Between Prosecutors and Members of the Grand Jury by Maureen G. McDonnell. (Martin, Heather) (Entered: 01/27/2014)
01/27/2014	26	MOTION for Release of Brady Materials by Maureen G. McDonnell. (Martin, Heather) (Entered: 01/27/2014)
01/27/2014		NOTICE OF CORRECTION as to ECF 9 MOTION and Memorandum in Support for Release of Brady Materials; per counsel's request, Clerk has corrected exhibits A and B which have been redacted to remove personal information; notified filing attorney of proper procedures for future filings. (cgar) Modified on 1/27/2014 (jtho,). (Entered: 01/27/2014)
01/27/2014	27	TRANSCRIPT of Proceedings held on January 24, 2014, Initial Appearance before Judge David J. Novak. Court reporter/transcriber Jeff Kull, Telephone number 804-916-2258. NOTICE RE REDACTION OF TRANSCRIPTS:The parties have thirty(30) calendar days to file with the Court a Notice of Intent to Request Redaction of this transcript. If no such Notice is filed, the transcript will be made remotely electronically available to the public without redaction after 90 calendar days. The policy is located on our website at www.vaed.uscourts.gov Transcript may be viewed at the court public terminal or purchased through the court reporter/transcriber before the deadline for Release of Transcript Restriction. After that date it may be obtained through PACER Redaction Request due 2/26/2014. Redacted Transcript Deadline set for 3/31/2014. Release of Transcript Restriction set for 4/28/2014.(kull, jeff) (Entered: 01/27/2014)

01/27/2014	28	TRANSCRIPT of Proceedings held on January 24, 2014, Arraignment before Judge James R. Spencer. Court reporter/transcriber Jeff Kull, Telephone number 804-916-2258. NOTICE RE REDACTION OF TRANSCRIPTS:The parties have thirty(30) calendar days to file with the Court a Notice of Intent to Request Redaction of this transcript. If no such Notice is filed, the transcript will be made remotely electronically available to the public without redaction after 90 calendar days. The policy is located on our website at www.vaed.uscourts.gov Transcript may be viewed at the court public terminal or purchased through the court reporter/transcriber before the deadline for Release of Transcript Restriction. After that date it may be obtained through PACER Redaction Request due 2/26/2014. Redacted Transcript Deadline set for 3/31/2014. Release of Transcript Restriction set for 4/28/2014.(kull, jeff) (Entered: 01/27/2014)
01/27/2014	30	ORDER granting 20 Motion for Pro hac vice. Appointed Charles Michael Carberry as to Robert F McDonnell (1). Signed by District Judge James R. Spencer on 1/27/14. (tdai,) (Entered: 01/28/2014)
01/28/2014	29	NOTICE OF ATTORNEY APPEARANCE: Timothy James Taylor appearing for Robert F McDonnell (Taylor, Timothy) (Entered: 01/28/2014)
01/28/2014	31	MOTION to Modify Conditions of Release or, Rather, to Clarify Conditions of Release by Robert F McDonnell. (Attachments: # 1 Memorandum in Support, # 2 Proposed Order)(Taylor, Timothy) (Entered: 01/28/2014)
01/28/2014		Notice of Correction re 31 MOTION to Modify Conditions of Release or, Rather, to Clarify Conditions of Release; notified filing attorney to file the Memorandum in Support as a separate document with the filing attorney's correct signature. (jtho,) (Entered: 01/28/2014)
01/28/2014	32	Memorandum in Support by Robert F McDonnell re 31 MOTION to Modify Conditions of Release or, Rather, to Clarify Conditions of Release (Taylor, Timothy) (Entered: 01/28/2014)
01/28/2014	33	MOTION to Modify Conditions of Release or, Rather, to Clarify Conditions of Release by Maureen G. McDonnell. (Martin, Heather) (Entered: 01/28/2014)
01/28/2014	34	RESPONSE to Motion by USA as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell re 31 MOTION to Modify Conditions of Release or, Rather, to Clarify Conditions of Release, 33 MOTION to Modify Conditions of Release or, Rather, to Clarify Conditions of Release (Aber, Jessica) (Entered: 01/28/2014)
01/29/2014	35	Reply by Robert F McDonnell re 31 MOTION to Modify Conditions of Release or, Rather, to Clarify Conditions of Release (Taylor, Timothy) (Entered: 01/29/2014)

01/30/2014	36	ORDER by request of the parties, the Court will hold a hearing on the motions 31 , 33 on Monday, February 3, 2014 at 10:00 a.m. as to Robert F McDonnell and Maureen G. McDonnell. Signed by Magistrate Judge David J. Novak on 1/30/2014. (cgar) (Entered: 01/30/2014)
01/30/2014		Set Hearing re: Motion as to Robert F McDonnell and Maureen G. McDonnell 31 33 MOTION to Modify Conditions of Release or, Rather, to Clarify Conditions of Release. Motions Hearing set for 2/3/2014 at 10:00 AM in Richmond Courtroom 5400 before Magistrate Judge David J. Novak. (cgar) (Entered: 01/30/2014)
01/31/2014	37	Summons Returned Executed on 1/21/14 as to Robert F McDonnell. (tdai,) (Entered: 01/31/2014)
01/31/2014	38	Summons Returned Executed on 1/21/14 as to Maureen G. McDonnell. (tdai,) (Entered: 01/31/2014)
02/03/2014	39	Minute Entry for proceedings held before Magistrate Judge David J. Novak:Motion Hearing as to Robert F McDonnell and Maureen G. McDonnell held on 2/3/2014 re 31 , 33 MOTION to Modify Conditions of Release or, Rather, to Clarify Conditions of Release. Matter came on for motion hearing. Arguments heard. Findings stated from bench. Defts confirm understanding of conditions. Order to issue. Defts continued on PR as detailed by Court. (Tape #FTR.)(cgar) (Entered: 02/03/2014)
02/03/2014	40	ORDER granting in part Defts' motions and modifying conditions of release as to 31 , 33 Motions to Modify Conditions of Release as to Robert F McDonnell (1)and Maureen G. McDonnell (2). SEE ORDER FOR ALL DETAILS. Signed by Magistrate Judge David J. Novak on 2/3/2014. (cgar) (Entered: 02/03/2014)
02/03/2014	41	RESPONSE in Opposition by USA as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell re 8 MOTION for Discovery of Selected Recordings of Communications Between Prosecutors and Members of the Grand Jury , 25 MOTION for Discovery of Selected Communications Between Prosecutors and Members of the Grand Jury (Faulconer, Ryan) (Entered: 02/03/2014)
02/03/2014	42	RESPONSE in Opposition by USA as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell re 26 MOTION for Release of Brady Materials , 9 MOTION for Release of Brady Materials (Faulconer, Ryan) (Entered: 02/03/2014)
02/04/2014	43	TRANSCRIPT of Proceedings held on February 3, 2014, Motion to Modify Order before Judge David J. Novak. Court reporter/transcriber Jeff Kull, Telephone number 804-916-2258. NOTICE RE REDACTION OF TRANSCRIPTS:The parties have thirty(30) calendar days to file with the Court a Notice of Intent to Request Redaction of this transcript. If no such Notice is filed, the transcript will be made remotely electronically available to the public without redaction after 90 calendar days. The policy is located on our website at www.vaed.uscourts.gov Transcript may be viewed at the court public terminal or purchased through the court reporter/transcriber before the deadline for Release of Transcript Restriction. After that date it may be obtained through PACER Redaction Request due 3/6/2014. Redacted Transcript Deadline set for 4/7/2014. Release of Transcript Restriction set for

		5/5/2014.(kull, jeff) (Entered: 02/04/2014)
02/04/2014	44	Consent MOTION for Protective Order by USA as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell. (Attachments: # 1 Proposed Order Proposed Protective Order)(Faulconer, Ryan) (Entered: 02/04/2014)
02/04/2014		Notice of Correction re 44 Consent MOTION for Protective Order. Notified filing attorney to refile a corrected consent motion and proposed order identifying the correct case number. (tdai,) (Entered: 02/04/2014)
02/04/2014	45	Consent MOTION for Protective Order CORRECTED by USA as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell. (Attachments: # 1 Proposed Order Corrected Proposed Order)(Faulconer, Ryan) (Entered: 02/04/2014)
02/06/2014	46	PROTECTIVE ORDER as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell re 45 Consent MOTION for Protective Order CORRECTED filed by USA. It is so ORDERED. Signed by District Judge James R. Spencer on 2/6/14. (tdai,) (Entered: 02/06/2014)
02/06/2014	47	SEE CORRECTED 48 REPLY TO RESPONSE Reply by Robert F McDonnell re 9 MOTION for Release of Brady Materials (Brownlee, John) Modified text on 2/7/2014 (tdai,). (Entered: 02/06/2014)
02/06/2014	48	REPLY TO RESPONSE to by Robert F McDonnell re 9 MOTION for Release of Brady Materials (corrected) (Attachments: # 1 Exhibit A)(Brownlee, John) (Entered: 02/06/2014)
02/06/2014	49	REPLY TO RESPONSE to by Robert F McDonnell re 8 MOTION for Discovery of Selected Recordings of Communications Between Prosecutors and Members of the Grand Jury (Brownlee, John) (Entered: 02/06/2014)
02/13/2014	50	Consent MOTION for Entry of Scheduling Order by USA as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell. (Attachments: # 1 Proposed Order Scheduling Order)(Faulconer, Ryan) (Entered: 02/13/2014)
02/13/2014	51	MOTION FOR THE PRODUCTION OF EVIDENCE AND OTHER RELIEF TO REMEDY THE GOVERNMENT'S INTERFERENCE IN THE DEFENSE'S INVESTIGATION by Robert F McDonnell. (Attachments: # 1 Proposed Order) (Brownlee, John) (Entered: 02/13/2014)
02/13/2014	52	Memorandum in Support by Robert F McDonnell re 51 MOTION FOR THE PRODUCTION OF EVIDENCE AND OTHER RELIEF TO REMEDY THE GOVERNMENT'S INTERFERENCE IN THE DEFENSE'S INVESTIGATION (Attachments: # 1 Exhibit A, # 2 Exhibit B)(Brownlee, John) (Entered: 02/13/2014)
02/15/2014	53	MOTION for Issuance of Subpoenas Duces Tecum by Robert F McDonnell. (Attachments: # 1 Proposed Order)(Brownlee, John) Modified to correct text on 2/21/2014 (tdai,). (Entered: 02/15/2014)
02/15/2014	54	Memorandum in Support by Robert F McDonnell re 53 MOTION for Issuance of Subpoenas (Brownlee, John) (Entered: 02/15/2014)
02/18/2014	55	ORDER re 50 Consent Motion for Entry of Scheduling Order by USA as to Robert F McDonnell (1) and to Maureen G. McDonnell (2). See Order for complete details and deadlines. It is so ORDERED. Signed by District Judge James R. Spencer on 2/18/14. (tdai,) (Entered: 02/18/2014)

02/18/2014	56	Notice of Hearing Date set for 3/18/2014 re 51 MOTION FOR THE PRODUCTION OF EVIDENCE AND OTHER RELIEF TO REMEDY THE GOVERNMENT'S INTERFERENCE IN THE DEFENSE'S INVESTIGATION , 8 MOTION for Discovery of Selected Recordings of Communications Between Prosecutors and Members of the Grand Jury , 9 MOTION for Release of Brady Materials (Brownlee, John) (Entered: 02/18/2014)
02/19/2014	57	Motion to appear Pro Hac Vice by Owen T. Conroy and Certification of Local Counsel Timothy J. Taylor (Filing fee $ 75 receipt number 0422-3856441.) by Robert F McDonnell. (Taylor, Timothy) (Entered: 02/19/2014)
02/19/2014	58	MOTION to Compel Rule 16 Document Production and for Additional Relief by Robert F McDonnell. (Attachments: # 1 Proposed Order)(Brownlee, John) (Entered: 02/19/2014)
02/19/2014	59	Memorandum in Support by Robert F McDonnell re 58 MOTION to Compel Rule 16 Document Production and for Additional Relief (Attachments: # 1 Exhibit 1, # 2 Exhibit 2, # 3 Exhibit 3, # 4 Exhibit 4, # 5 Exhibit 5, # 6 Exhibit 6, # 7 Exhibit 7, # 8 Exhibit 8, # 9 Exhibit 9, # 10 Exhibit 10, # 11 Exhibit 11, # 12 Exhibit 12, # 13 Exhibit 13)(Brownlee, John) (Entered: 02/19/2014)
02/19/2014		Motion Hearing set in case as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell for 3/18/2014 at 10:00 AM in Richmond Courtroom 7000 before District Judge James R. Spencer. (khan,) (Entered: 02/19/2014)
02/19/2014		Motion Hearing as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell set for 5/19/2014 at 10:00 AM in Richmond Courtroom 7000 before District Judge James R. Spencer. (khan,) (Entered: 02/19/2014)
02/19/2014		Motion Hearing set as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell for 7/15/2014 at 10:00 AM in Richmond Courtroom 7000 before District Judge James R. Spencer. (khan,) (Entered: 02/19/2014)
02/19/2014	60	RESPONSE to Motion by USA as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell re 53 MOTION for Issuance of Subpoenas (Harbach, David) (Entered: 02/19/2014)
02/20/2014	61	ORDER this matter is before the Court on Defendant Robert F McDonnell's Urgent Motion to Compel Rule 16 Document Production and for Additional Relief ("Motion") (ECF No. 58). The Court DIRECTS Counsel for the United States to respond to the Motion on or before Monday, February 24, 2014. The Court notes that McDonnell has requested a telephonic or in-person hearing on the Motion. However, this Court does not hold telephonic hearings and, in accordance with Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 78, may rule upon motions without an oral hearing. E.D. Va. Loc. Civ. R. 7(J); see Fed. R. Civ. P 78. It is so ORDERED. Signed by District Judge James R. Spencer on 2/20/14. (tdai,) (Entered: 02/20/2014)
02/20/2014	62	SO-ORDER granting 57 Motion for Owen Thomas Conroy to appear as Pro Hac Vice Attorney as to Robert F McDonnell (1). Signed by District Judge James R. Spencer on 2/20/14. (jtho,) (Entered: 02/20/2014)

02/20/2014	63	Consent MOTION for Entry of Amended Scheduling Order re 55 Order, by USA as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell. (Attachments: # 1 Proposed Order Amended Scheduling Order)(Faulconer, Ryan) Modified text on 2/21/2014 (tdai,). (Entered: 02/20/2014)
02/20/2014		Set Motion as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell 9 MOTION for Release of Brady Materials, 51 MOTION FOR THE PRODUCTION OF EVIDENCE AND OTHER RELIEF TO REMEDY THE GOVERNMENT'S INTERFERENCE IN THE DEFENSE'S INVESTIGATION, 26 MOTION for Release of Brady Materials. Motion Hearing set for 3/18/2014 at 10:00 AM in Richmond Courtroom 7000 before District Judge James R. Spencer. (khan,) (Entered: 02/20/2014)
02/20/2014		Set Motion as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell 8 MOTION for Discovery of Selected Recordings of Communications Between Prosecutors and Members of the Grand Jury, 25 MOTION for Discovery of Selected Communications Between Prosecutors and Members of the Grand Jury Motion Hearing set for 5/19/2014 at 10:00 AM in Richmond Courtroom 7000 before District Judge James R. Spencer. (khan,) (Entered: 02/20/2014)
02/21/2014	64	AMENDED ORDER re 63 Consent Motion for Entry of Amended Scheduling Order as to Robert F McDonnell (1), Maureen G. McDonnell (2). See Order for complete details and deadlines. It is so ORDERED. Signed by District Judge James R. Spencer on 2/21/14. (tdai,) (Entered: 02/21/2014)
02/21/2014	65	NOTICE of Appearance by Laurin H. Mills for Abigail Farris Rogers as to Robert F McDonnell. (tdai,) (Entered: 02/21/2014)
02/21/2014	66	Objection to 53 MOTION for Issuance of Subpoena Duces Tecum by Abigail Farris Rogers as to Robert F McDonnell. (tdai,) (Entered: 02/21/2014)
02/21/2014	67	REPLY TO RESPONSE to by Robert F McDonnell re 53 MOTION for Issuance of Subpoenas (Brownlee, John) (Entered: 02/21/2014)
02/21/2014	68	NOTICE OF ATTORNEY APPEARANCE Richard D. Cooke appearing for USA. (Cooke, Richard) (Entered: 02/21/2014)
02/21/2014	69	RESPONSE in Opposition by USA as to Robert F McDonnell re 51 MOTION FOR THE PRODUCTION OF EVIDENCE AND OTHER RELIEF TO REMEDY THE GOVERNMENT'S INTERFERENCE IN THE DEFENSE'S INVESTIGATION (Cooke, Richard) (Entered: 02/21/2014)
02/21/2014	70	MOTION FOR THE PRODUCTION OF EVIDENCE AND OTHER RELIEF TO REMEDY THE GOVERNMENT'S INTERFERENCE IN THE DEFENSE'S INVESTIGATION by Maureen G. McDonnell. (Martin, Heather) (Entered: 02/21/2014)
02/21/2014	71	MOTION for Issuance of Subpoenas by Maureen G. McDonnell. (Martin, Heather) (Entered: 02/21/2014)
02/21/2014	72	Consent MOTION for Disclosure (Limited) of Tax Return Information and for a Protective Order and Memorandum in Support by USA as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell. (Attachments: # 1 Proposed Order)(Aber, Jessica) (Entered: 02/21/2014)

02/24/2014	73	ORDER granting 53 Motion for Issuance of Rule 17(c) Subpoena Duces Tecum as to Robert F McDonnell (1); granting 71 Motion for Issuance of Rule 17(c) Subpoena Duces Tecum as to Maureen G. McDonnell (2); the Clerk is DIRECTED to issue a subpoena duces tecum requiring Abigail Farris Rogers to produce a computer server currently in possession of Ms. Rogers's IT provider within five (5) days of the date of this Order; defendants are DIRECTED to make the requested server available to the United States for inspection and imaging within seven (7) days of defendants' receipt of the server; the Clerk is DIRECTED to notify John L. Brownlee and Henry w. Asbill, counsel for Defendant Robert F McDonnell, when the subpoena has been prepared. (SEE ORDER FOR DETAILS). Signed by District Judge James R. Spencer on 2/24/14. (jtho,) (Entered: 02/24/2014)
02/24/2014	74	Subpoena Duces Tecum issued to Abigail Farris Rogers, c/o Laurin Mills, Esquire, LeClair Ryan, 2318 Mill Road, Suite 1100, Alexandria, VA 22314 per Order entered on 2/24/14. (Called attorney to arrange for service of subpoena). (jtho,) (Entered: 02/24/2014)
02/24/2014	75	RESPONSE in Opposition by USA as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell re 58 MOTION to Compel Rule 16 Document Production and for Additional Relief (Attachments: # 1 Exhibit A)(Harbach, David) (Entered: 02/24/2014)
02/24/2014	76	REPLY TO RESPONSE to by Robert F McDonnell re 51 MOTION FOR THE PRODUCTION OF EVIDENCE AND OTHER RELIEF TO REMEDY THE GOVERNMENT'S INTERFERENCE IN THE DEFENSE'S INVESTIGATION (Brownlee, John) (Entered: 02/24/2014)
02/25/2014	77	REPLY TO RESPONSE to by Robert F McDonnell re 58 MOTION to Compel Rule 16 Document Production and for Additional Relief (Brownlee, John) (Entered: 02/25/2014)
02/27/2014	78	ORDER granting 72 Consent Motion for Limited Disclosure of Tax information and for a Protective Order as to Robert F McDonnell (1), Maureen G. McDonnell (2). See Order for details. It is so ORDERED. Signed by District Judge James R. Spencer on 2/27/14. (tdai,) (Entered: 02/27/2014)
02/27/2014	79	MOTION for Bill of Particulars by Robert F McDonnell. (Attachments: # 1 Proposed Order)(Brownlee, John) (Entered: 02/27/2014)
02/27/2014	80	Memorandum in Support by Robert F McDonnell re 79 MOTION for Bill of Particulars (Brownlee, John) (Entered: 02/27/2014)
03/04/2014	81	Notice of Hearing Date set for 3/18/2014 re 79 MOTION for Bill of Particulars (Brownlee, John) (Entered: 03/04/2014)
03/05/2014	82	MOTION for Bill of Particulars by Maureen G. McDonnell. (Martin, Heather) (Entered: 03/05/2014)
03/06/2014	83	Motion to appear Pro Hac Vice by Ryan D. Newman and Certification of Local Counsel Timothy J. Taylor (Filing fee $ 75 receipt number 0422-3876688.) by Robert F McDonnell. (Taylor, Timothy) (Entered: 03/06/2014)

03/10/2014	84	RESPONSE in Opposition by USA as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell re 82 MOTION for Bill of Particulars , 79 MOTION for Bill of Particulars (Attachments: # 1 Exhibit A)(Aber, Jessica) (Entered: 03/10/2014)
03/11/2014	85	ORDER granting 83 Motion for Pro hac vice. Appointed Ryan Dean Newman as to Robert F McDonnell (1). Signed by District Judge James R. Spencer on 3/11/14. (tdai,) (Entered: 03/11/2014)
03/13/2014	86	REPLY TO RESPONSE to by Robert F McDonnell re 79 MOTION for Bill of Particulars (Brownlee, John) (Entered: 03/13/2014)
03/13/2014	87	Notice of Hearing Date set for 3/18/2014 re 58 MOTION to Compel Rule 16 Document Production and for Additional Relief (Brownlee, John) (Entered: 03/13/2014)
03/13/2014	88	MOTION for Issuance of Subpoenas to the Food and Drug Administration and to the Securities and Exchange Commission by Robert F McDonnell. (Attachments: # 1 Proposed Order)(Brownlee, John) (Entered: 03/13/2014)
03/13/2014	89	Memorandum in Support by Robert F McDonnell re 88 MOTION for Issuance of Subpoenas to the Food and Drug Administration and to the Securities and Exchange Commission (Attachments: # 1 Exhibit 1, # 2 Exhibit 2, # 3 Exhibit 3, # 4 Exhibit 4, # 5 Exhibit 5)(Brownlee, John) (Entered: 03/13/2014)
03/14/2014	90	ORDER denying 9 Motion for Release of Brady Materials as to Robert F McDonnell (1); denying 26 Motion for Release of Brady Materials as to Maureen G. McDonnell (2); denying 58 Motion to Compel Rule 16 Document Production and for Additional Relief as to Robert F McDonnell (1). It is so ORDERED. Signed by District Judge James R. Spencer on 3/14/14. (tdai,) (Entered: 03/14/2014)
03/14/2014	91	MOTION for Issuance of Subpoenas to the Food and Drug Administration and to the Securities and Exchange Commission by Maureen G. McDonnell. (Martin, Heather) (Entered: 03/14/2014)
03/17/2014	92	NOTICE OF ATTORNEY APPEARANCE: Kaiyeu Kevin Chu appearing for Maureen G. McDonnell (Chu, Kaiyeu) (Entered: 03/17/2014)
03/17/2014	93	MEMORANDUM ORDER that the Court hereby DENIES 79 Motion for Bill of Particulars as to Robert F McDonnell (1) and 82 Motion for Bill of Particulars as to Maureen G. McDonnell (2). (SEE ORDER FOR DETAILS). Signed by District Judge James R. Spencer on 3/17/14. (jtho,) (Entered: 03/17/2014)
03/18/2014	94	ORDER granting in part and denying in part 88 Motion for Issuance of Rule 17(c) Subpoenas Duces Tecum as to Robert F McDonnell (1); granting in part and denying in part 91 Motion for Issuance of Rule 17(c) Subpoenas Duces Tecum as to Maureen G. McDonnell (2). These records are to be returnable to the office of Holland & Knight LLP, 31 West 52nd Street, New York, NY 10019, c/o Scott Mathers, on or before April 1, 2014, at 12:00 PM. The Clerk shall notify defense counsel John L. Brownlee and Henry W Asbill, when the subpoenas are ready. See Order for details. Signed by District Judge James R. Spencer on 3/17/14. (tdai) (Entered: 03/18/2014)
03/18/2014	95	Subpoenas Duces Tecum issued to Food and Drug Administration - Division of

		Dockets Management, 5630 Fishers Lane, Room 1061, Mail Stop HPA-305, Rockville, MD 20852 and to Securities and Exchange Commission, 100 F Street NE, Mail Stop 2736, Washington, DC 20549 per 94 Order entered March 18, 2014 (Called attorney to arrange for service of subpoenas). (tdai,) (Entered: 03/18/2014)
03/18/2014	96	TRANSCRIPT of Proceedings held on March 18, 2014, Motions Hearing before Judge James R. Spencer. Court reporter/transcriber Jeff Kull, Telephone number 804-916-2258. NOTICE RE REDACTION OF TRANSCRIPTS:The parties have thirty(30) calendar days to file with the Court a Notice of Intent to Request Redaction of this transcript. If no such Notice is filed, the transcript will be made remotely electronically available to the public without redaction after 90 calendar days. The policy is located on our website at www.vaed.uscourts.gov Transcript may be viewed at the court public terminal or purchased through the court reporter/transcriber before the deadline for Release of Transcript Restriction. After that date it may be obtained through PACER Redaction Request due 4/17/2014. Redacted Transcript Deadline set for 5/19/2014. Release of Transcript Restriction set for 6/16/2014.(kull, jeff) (Entered: 03/18/2014)
03/18/2014	97	Minute Entry for proceedings held before District Judge James R. Spencer:Motion Hearing as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell held on 3/18/2014 re 51 MOTION FOR THE PRODUCTION OF EVIDENCE AND OTHER RELIEF TO REMEDY THE GOVERNMENT'S INTERFERENCE IN THE DEFENSE'S INVESTIGATION filed by Robert F McDonnell, 70 MOTION FOR THE PRODUCTION OF EVIDENCE AND OTHER RELIEF TO REMEDY THE GOVERNMENT'S INTERFERENCE IN THE DEFENSE'S INVESTIGATION filed by Maureen G. McDonnell. DENIED. (Court Reporter Jeff Kull, OCR.) (khan,) (Entered: 03/19/2014)
03/19/2014	98	MEMORANDUM ORDER denying 51 Motion for the Production of Evidence and Other Relief to Remedy the Governments Interference in the Defenses Investigation ("Motion to Remedy Interference") as to Robert F McDonnell (1); denying 70 Motion for the Production of Evidence and Other Relief to Remedy the Governments Interference in the Defenses Investigation ("Motion to Remedy Interference") as to Maureen G. McDonnell (2). It is so ORDERED. Signed by District Judge James R. Spencer on 3/19/14. (tdai,) (Entered: 03/19/2014)
03/19/2014	99	Consent MOTION For Entry of Discovery Order by USA as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell. (Attachments: # 1 Proposed Order)(Aber, Jessica) (Entered: 03/19/2014)
03/20/2014	100	SO ORDERED re 99 Consent MOTION For Entry of Discovery Order, filed by USA. Signed by District Judge James R. Spencer on 3/20/14. (tdai,) (Entered: 03/20/2014)
03/24/2014	101	NOTICE OF ATTORNEY APPEARANCE: Jonathan Andrew Berry appearing for Robert F McDonnell (Berry, Jonathan) (Entered: 03/24/2014)
03/24/2014	102	Motion to appear Pro Hac Vice by Mary Ellen Powers and Certification of Local Counsel Jonathan A. Berry (Filing fee $ 75 receipt number 0422-3898128.) by Robert F McDonnell. (Berry, Jonathan) (Entered: 03/24/2014)

03/24/2014	103	Motion to appear Pro Hac Vice by Noel J. Francisco and Certification of Local Counsel Jonathan A. Berry (Filing fee $ 75 receipt number 0422-3898134.) by Robert F McDonnell. (Berry, Jonathan) (Entered: 03/24/2014)
03/25/2014	104	Motion to appear Pro Hac Vice by Hilary K. Perkins and Certification of Local Counsel Jonathan A. Berry (Filing fee $ 75 receipt number 0422-3899397.) by Robert F McDonnell. (Berry, Jonathan) (Entered: 03/25/2014)
03/25/2014	105	MOTION to Dismiss Counts 1-11 of the Indictment by Robert F McDonnell. (Attachments: # 1 Proposed Order)(Berry, Jonathan) (Entered: 03/25/2014)
03/25/2014	106	Memorandum in Support by Robert F McDonnell re 105 MOTION to Dismiss Counts 1-11 of the Indictment (Berry, Jonathan) (Entered: 03/25/2014)
03/25/2014	107	MOTION to Strike Prejudicial Surplusage by Robert F McDonnell. (Attachments: # 1 Proposed Order)(Berry, Jonathan) (Entered: 03/25/2014)
03/25/2014	108	Memorandum in Support by Robert F McDonnell re 107 MOTION to Strike Prejudicial Surplusage (Berry, Jonathan) (Entered: 03/25/2014)
03/25/2014	109	MOTION for Omnibus Voir Dire Relief by Robert F McDonnell. (Attachments: # 1 Proposed Order)(Berry, Jonathan) (Entered: 03/25/2014)
03/25/2014	110	Memorandum in Support by Robert F McDonnell re 109 MOTION for Omnibus Voir Dire Relief (Berry, Jonathan) (Entered: 03/25/2014)
03/25/2014	111	MOTION to Dismiss Counts 1-11 of the Indictment by Maureen G. McDonnell. (Martin, Heather) (Entered: 03/25/2014)
03/25/2014	112	MOTION to Strike Prejudicial Surplusage by Maureen G. McDonnell. (Martin, Heather) (Entered: 03/25/2014)
03/25/2014	113	MOTION for Omnibus Voir Dire Relief by Maureen G. McDonnell. (Martin, Heather) (Entered: 03/25/2014)
03/25/2014	114	MOTION to Sever Defendant by Robert F McDonnell. (Attachments: # 1 Proposed Order)(Berry, Jonathan) (Entered: 03/25/2014)
03/25/2014	115	Memorandum in Support by Robert F McDonnell re 114 MOTION to Sever Defendant (Berry, Jonathan) (Entered: 03/25/2014)
03/25/2014	116	MOTION for Leave to File Supporting Declarations Under Seal and for Ex Parte In Camera Review re 114 MOTION to Sever Defendant by Robert F McDonnell. (Attachments: # 1 Proposed Order)(Berry, Jonathan) (Entered: 03/25/2014)
03/25/2014	117	Memorandum in Support by Robert F McDonnell re 116 MOTION for Leave to File Supporting Declarations Under Seal and for Ex Parte In Camera Review re 114 MOTION to Sever Defendant (Berry, Jonathan) (Entered: 03/25/2014)
03/25/2014	118	MOTION to Dismiss by Maureen G. McDonnell. (Attachments: # 1 Proposed Order)(Martin, Heather) (Entered: 03/25/2014)
03/25/2014	119	Memorandum in Support by Maureen G. McDonnell re 118 MOTION to Dismiss (Martin, Heather) (Entered: 03/25/2014)
03/25/2014	120	MOTION to Sever Defendant by Maureen G. McDonnell. (Martin, Heather) (Entered: 03/25/2014)

03/26/2014	121	ORDER granting 102 Motion for Pro hac vice. Appointed Mary Ellen Powers as to Robert F McDonnell (1). Signed by District Judge James R. Spencer on 3/26/14. (tdai,) (Entered: 03/26/2014)
03/26/2014	122	ORDER granting 103 Motion for Pro hac vice. Appointed Noel John Francisco as to Robert F McDonnell (1). Signed by District Judge James R. Spencer on 3/26/14. (tdai,) (Entered: 03/26/2014)
03/27/2014	123	ORDER granting 104 Motion for Pro hac vice. Appointed Hilary Keith Perkins as to Robert F McDonnell (1). Signed by District Judge James R. Spencer on 3/27/14. (tdai,) (Entered: 03/27/2014)
03/28/2014	124	NOTICE of Appearance for Amicus as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell filed by National Association of Criminal Defense Lawyers (O'Toole, Timothy) Modified on 3/28/2014 to correct filers and docket text(kyou,). (Entered: 03/28/2014)
03/28/2014	125	Motion to appear Pro Hac Vice by John D. Cline and Certification of Local Counsel Timothy P O'Toole (Filing fee $ 75 receipt number 0422-3903736.) for Amicus Curiae National Ass'n of Criminal Defense Lawyers (O'Toole, Timothy) (Entered: 03/28/2014)
03/28/2014	126	MOTION for Leave to File Amicus Brief by National Association for Criminal Defense Lawyers as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell. (Attachments: # 1 Proposed Amicus Brief # 2 Proposed Order)(O'Toole, Timothy) Modified on 3/28/2014 to correct filers and docket text(kyou,). (Entered: 03/28/2014)
03/28/2014		Notice of Correction to 125 Motion to appear Pro Hac Vice by John D. Cline and Timothy P O'Toole for Amicus Curiae National Ass'n of Criminal Defense Lawyers, 124 Notice of Attorney Appearance, and 126 MOTION for Leave to File Amicus Brief by National Association for Criminal Defense Lawyers; notified filing attorney that docket has been corrected to reflect proper parties and procedures for future filings. (jtho,) (Entered: 03/28/2014)
04/01/2014	127	ORDER granting 125 Motion for Pro hac vice; Appointed John DeWitt Cline for National Association of Criminal Defense Lawyers. Signed by District Judge James R. Spencer on 4/1/14. (jtho,) (Entered: 04/01/2014)
04/01/2014	128	ORDER denying 126 Motion for Leave to File Amicus Brief by National Association for Criminal Defense Lawyers as to Robert F McDonnell (1), Maureen G. McDonnell (2). It is so ORDERED. Signed by District Judge James R. Spencer on 4/1/14. (tdai,) (Entered: 04/01/2014)
04/01/2014	129	Motion to appear Pro Hac Vice by Dan I. Small and Certification of Local Counsel Timothy J. Taylor (Filing fee $ 75 receipt number 0422-3908911.) by Robert F McDonnell. (Taylor, Timothy) (Entered: 04/01/2014)
04/01/2014	130	Motion to appear Pro Hac Vice by Christopher M. Iaquinto and Certification of Local Counsel Timothy J. Taylor (Filing fee $ 75 receipt number 0422-3908915.) by Robert F McDonnell. (Taylor, Timothy) (Entered: 04/01/2014)
04/02/2014	131	RESPONSE in Opposition by USA as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G.

		McDonnell re 116 MOTION for Leave to File Supporting Declarations Under Seal and for Ex Parte In Camera Review re 114 MOTION to Sever Defendant (Aber, Jessica) (Entered: 04/02/2014)
04/02/2014	132	MOTION for Leave to File Memorandum Amicus Curiae in Support of Defendant's Motion to Dismiss Counts 1-11 of the Indictment by Mark L. Earley, Stephen D. Rosenthal, Mary Sue Terry, J. Marshall Coleman, Andrew P Miller as to Robert F McDonnell. (Attachments: # 1 Exhibit, # 2 Proposed Order)(khan,) (Additional attachment(s) added on 4/3/2014: # 3 Exhibit to memorandum in support) (khan,). (Entered: 04/03/2014)
04/07/2014	133	ORDER granting 129 Motion for Pro hac vice. Appointment of Daniel Ira Small as to Robert F McDonnell (1). Signed by District Judge James R. Spencer on 4/7/14. (tdai,) (Entered: 04/07/2014)
04/07/2014	134	ORDER granting 130 Motion for Pro hac vice. Appointment of Christopher Michael Iaquinto as to Robert F McDonnell (1). Signed by District Judge James R. Spencer on 4/7/14. (tdai,) (Entered: 04/07/2014)
04/07/2014	135	ORDER denying 132 Motion for Leave to File Memorandum Amicus Curiae in Support of Defendant's Motion to Dismiss Counts 1-11 of the Indictment as to Robert F McDonnell (1). It is so ORDERED. Signed by District Judge James R. Spencer on 4/7/14. (tdai,) (Entered: 04/07/2014)
04/07/2014	136	REPLY TO RESPONSE to by Robert F McDonnell re 116 MOTION for Leave to File Supporting Declarations Under Seal and for Ex Parte In Camera Review re 114 MOTION to Sever Defendant (Berry, Jonathan) (Entered: 04/07/2014)
04/17/2014	137	MEMORANDUM ORDER on 116 Motion for Leave to File Declarations Under Seal and for Ex Parte In Camera Review as to Robert F McDonnell (1); for the reasons set forth in the Order, the motion is GRANTED IN PART as to the extent that it requests leave to file the declarations under seal, and DENIED IN PART as to the extent that it requests in camera review of the Declarations... Accordingly, McDonnell may file the Declarations under seal within three (3) days of the date of this Memorandum Order, if he so chooses. Additionally, McDonnell may file the Declarations ex parte under seal only for purposes of preserving the record on appeal; the Court will not review the Declarations if filed ex parte under seal. (SEE ORDER FOR DETAILS). Signed by District Judge James R. Spencer on 4/17/14. (jtho,) (Entered: 04/17/2014)
04/17/2014	138	Notice of Hearing Date set for May 19, 2014 re 114 MOTION to Sever Defendant , 107 MOTION to Strike Prejudicial Surplusage, 109 MOTION for Omnibus Voir Dire Relief , 105 MOTION to Dismiss Counts 1-11 of the Indictment by Robert F McDonnell (Berry, Jonathan) Modified text on 4/18/2014 (tdai,). (Entered: 04/17/2014)
04/17/2014	139	Notice of Hearing Date set for May 19, 2014 re 118 MOTION to Dismiss by Maureen G. McDonnell (Martin, Heather) (Entered: 04/17/2014)
04/21/2014		Set Deadlines re Motions in case as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell 105 MOTION to Dismiss Counts 1-11 of the Indictment, 107 MOTION to Strike Prejudicial Surplusage, 109 MOTION for Omnibus Voir Dire Relief, 114 MOTION to Sever Defendant, 8 MOTION for Discovery of Selected

		Recordings of Communications Between Prosecutors and Members of the Grand Jury, 112 MOTION to Strike Prejudicial Surplusage, 111 MOTION to Dismiss Counts 1-11 of the Indictment, 118 MOTION to Dismiss, 113 MOTION for Omnibus Voir Dire Relief, 120 MOTION to Sever Defendant, 25 MOTION for Discovery of Selected Communications Between Prosecutors and Members of the Grand Jury. Motion Hearing set for 5/19/2014 at 10:00 AM in Richmond Courtroom 7000 before District Judge James R. Spencer. (khan,) (Entered: 04/21/2014)
04/21/2014	140	NOTICE of Non-Filing of Declarations by Robert F McDonnell re 137 Order, (Berry, Jonathan) Modified text on 4/22/2014 (tdai,). (Entered: 04/21/2014)
04/22/2014	141	ORDER This matter is before the Court on a Letter Motion filed by Johnny R. Huff and styled "Friend of the Court Brief." Because Mr. Huff is not a party to this action, the Court CONSTRUES the Letter Motion as a Motion for Leave to File as Amicus Curiae. The Clerk is DIRECTED to file the Letter Motion; however, Huff has cited no authority authorizing the filing, or mandating this Court's consideration, of amicus curiae briefs in a criminal matter. Accordingly, the Motion is DENIED. It is SO ORDERED. Signed by District Judge James R. Spencer on 4/22/14. Copy sent: Yes as directed. (tdai,) (Entered: 04/22/2014)
04/22/2014	142	Letter Motion for Leave to File as Amicus Curiae by Johnny R. Huff as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell. (tdai,) (Entered: 04/22/2014)
04/24/2014	143	RESPONSE in Opposition by USA as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell re 114 MOTION to Sever Defendant , 120 MOTION to Sever Defendant (Aber, Jessica) (Entered: 04/24/2014)
04/24/2014	144	RESPONSE by USA as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell re 109 MOTION for Omnibus Voir Dire Relief , 113 MOTION for Omnibus Voir Dire Relief (Aber, Jessica) (Entered: 04/24/2014)
04/24/2014	145	RESPONSE in Opposition by USA as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell re 107 MOTION to Strike Prejudicial Surplusage, 112 MOTION to Strike Prejudicial Surplusage (Aber, Jessica) (Entered: 04/24/2014)
04/24/2014	146	RESPONSE in Opposition by USA as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell re 111 MOTION to Dismiss Counts 1-11 of the Indictment, 105 MOTION to Dismiss Counts 1-11 of the Indictment (Faulconer, Ryan) (Entered: 04/24/2014)
04/24/2014	147	RESPONSE in Opposition by USA as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell re 118 MOTION to Dismiss (Faulconer, Ryan) (Entered: 04/24/2014)
05/05/2014	148	REPLY TO RESPONSE to by Robert F McDonnell re 105 MOTION to Dismiss Counts 1-11 of the Indictment (Berry, Jonathan) (Entered: 05/05/2014)
05/05/2014	149	REPLY TO RESPONSE to by Robert F McDonnell re 107 MOTION to Strike Prejudicial Surplusage (Berry, Jonathan) (Entered: 05/05/2014)
05/05/2014	150	REPLY TO RESPONSE to by Maureen G. McDonnell re 118 MOTION to Dismiss (Martin, Heather) (Entered: 05/05/2014)
05/05/2014	151	REPLY TO RESPONSE to by Robert F McDonnell re 109 MOTION for Omnibus Voir Dire Relief (Berry, Jonathan) (Entered: 05/05/2014)

05/05/2014	152	REPLY TO RESPONSE to by Robert F McDonnell re 114 MOTION to Sever Defendant (Attachments: # 1 Exhibit A)(Berry, Jonathan) (Entered: 05/05/2014)
05/06/2014	153	MOTION for Issuance of Subpoenas to Pentagon Federal Credit Union by Robert F McDonnell. (Attachments: # 1 Proposed Order)(Brownlee, John) (Entered: 05/06/2014)
05/06/2014	154	Memorandum in Support by Robert F McDonnell re 153 MOTION for Issuance of Subpoenas to Pentagon Federal Credit Union (Brownlee, John) (Entered: 05/06/2014)
05/07/2014	155	MOTION for Issuance of Subpoenas to Jonnie Williams, Sr., Paul Perito, and Star Scientific, Inc., by Robert F McDonnell. (Attachments: # 1 Proposed Order, # 2 Exhibit A - Proposed Subpoena to Jonnie Williams, Sr., # 3 Exhibit B - Proposed Subpoena to Paul Perito, # 4 Exhibit C - Proposed Subpoena to Star Scientific, Inc.)(Brownlee, John) (Entered: 05/07/2014)
05/07/2014	156	Memorandum in Support by Robert F McDonnell re 155 MOTION for Issuance of Subpoenas to Jonnie Williams, Sr., Paul Perito, and Star Scientific, Inc., (Brownlee, John) (Entered: 05/07/2014)
05/08/2014	157	ORDER this matter is before the Court on its own initiative. Defendants' Motion to Sever Joint Trial (ECF Nos. 114 , 120) is currently pending before the Court and a hearing is scheduled for May 19, 2014. In the course of briefing the Motion to Sever, Defendants have requested that the Court delay resolution of the Motion to Sever until fourteen (14) days before trial. That request is DENIED. The Motion to Sever will be resolved in due course, and should either Defendant wish to submit additional materials in support of the Motion to Sever, he or she may do so under seal. It is so ORDERED. Signed by District Judge James R. Spencer on 5/8/14. (tdai,) (Entered: 05/08/2014)
05/08/2014	158	Opposition by USA as to Robert F McDonnell re 155 MOTION for Issuance of Subpoenas to Jonnie Williams, Sr., Paul Perito, and Star Scientific, Inc., (Aber, Jessica) (Entered: 05/08/2014)
05/09/2014	159	ORDER granting 153 Motion for Issuance of Rule 17(c) Subpoenas Duces Tecum as to Robert F McDonnell (1). The Clerk is DIRECTED issue a subpoena duces tecum to Pentagon Federal Credit Union, Custodian of Records, 13220 Fort Street, Omaha, NE 68164. These records are to be returnable to the office of Holland & Knight LLP, c/o Timothy J. Taylor, 1600 Tysons Boulevard, Suite 700, Tyson's Corner, VA 22012, on or before May 23, 2014, at 12:00 PM. Let the Clerk send a copy of this Order to all counsel of record and notify defense counsel, John L. Brownlee and Henry W Asbill, when the subpoena is ready. It is so ORDERED. Signed by District Judge James R. Spencer on 5/9/14. (tdai,) (Entered: 05/09/2014)
05/09/2014	160	Subpoena Duces Tecum issued to Pentagon Federal Credit Union, Custodian of Records, 13220 Fort Street, Omaha, NE 68164 per 159 Order entered May 9, 2014 (Called attorney to arrange for service of subpoena). (tdai,) (Entered: 05/09/2014)
05/12/2014	161	REPLY TO RESPONSE to by Robert F McDonnell re 155 MOTION for Issuance of Subpoenas to Jonnie Williams, Sr., Paul Perito, and Star Scientific, Inc., (Berry, Jonathan) (Entered: 05/12/2014)

05/14/2014	162	NOTICE of Declarations by Robert F McDonnell (Taylor, Timothy) Pursuant to Order dated 4/17/14 (ECF No. 137), documents received and placed in Clerk's Office UNDER SEAL EX PARTE only for purposes of preserving the record on appeal. The Court will not review the Declarations. Modified text on 5/15/2014 (tdai,). (Entered: 05/14/2014)
05/14/2014	163	MOTION for Issuance of Subpoenas to Virginia State Police by Robert F McDonnell. (Attachments: # 1 Proposed Order, # 2 Exhibit Proposed subpoena to Virginia State Police)(Brownlee, John) (Attachment 2 replaced on 5/15/2014) (tdai,). (Entered: 05/14/2014)
05/14/2014	164	MOTION to Seal Memorandum and Exhibit in Support of Robert F McDonnell's Motion for Issuance of Subpoenas to Virginia State Police, by Robert F McDonnell. (Attachments: # 1 Proposed Order)(Brownlee, John) (Entered: 05/14/2014)
05/14/2014	165	Non-Confidential Memorandum in Support by Robert F McDonnell re 164 MOTION to Seal Memorandum and Exhibit in Support of Robert F McDonnell's Motion for Issuance of Subpoenas to Virginia State Police, (Brownlee, John) Modified text on 5/15/2014 (tdai,). (Entered: 05/14/2014)
05/15/2014		Notice of Correction re 163 MOTION for Issuance of Subpoenas to Virginia State Police. The filing user is notified that document 163 Exhibit 2 was incorrectly uploaded as a PDF fillable form and has been removed. The exhibit has been replaced by the Clerk's Office. No further action is required at this time. (tdai,) (Entered: 05/15/2014)
05/15/2014	166	ORDER granting in part and denying in part 155 Motion for Issuance of Subpoenas to Jonnie Williams, Sr., Paul Perito, and Star Scientific, Inc., by Robert F McDonnell (1). The Clerk is DIRECTED to issue subpoenas duces tecum to #1) Star Scientific, Inc., c/o Abbe Lowell, Chadbourne & Parke, 1200 New Hampshire Avenue, NW, Washington, DC 20036; #2) Jonnie Williams, Sr., c/o Richard Cullen, McGuire Woods LLP, One James Center, 901 East Cary Street, Richmond, VA 23219-4030; #3) Paul Perito, c/o Abbe Lowell, Chadbourne & Parke, 1200 New Hampshire Avenue, NW, Washington, DC 20036. These records are to be returnable to Spottswood W Robinson III and Robert Merhige, Jr., Federal Courthouse, ATTN: Clerk's Office, 701 East Broad Street, Third Floor, Richmond, Virginia 23219 on or before May 27, 2014, at 12:00 PM. Let the Clerk send a copy of this Order to all counsel of record and notify defense counsel, John L. Brownlee and Henry W Asbill, when the subpoenas are ready. It is so ORDERED. Signed by District Judge James R. Spencer on 5/15/14. (tdai,) (Entered: 05/15/2014)
05/15/2014	167	Subpoenas Duces Tecum issued to #1) Star Scientific, Inc., c/o Abbe Lowell, Chadbourne & Parke, 1200 New Hampshire Avenue, NW, Washington, DC 20036; #2) Jonnie Williams, Sr., c/o Richard Cullen, McGuire Woods LLP, One James Center, 901 East Cary Street, Richmond, VA 23219-4030; #3) Paul Perito, c/o Abbe Lowell, Chadbourne & Parke, 1200 New Hampshire Avenue, NW, Washington, DC 20036. Issued per 166 Order entered May 15, 2014 (Called attorney to arrange for service of subpoenas).(tdai,) (Entered: 05/15/2014)
05/19/2014	168	MOTION to Seal by Robert F McDonnell. (Attachments: # 1 Proposed Order)

		(Brownlee, John) (Entered: 05/19/2014)
05/19/2014	169	Non-Confidential Memorandum in Support by Robert F McDonnell re 168 MOTION to Seal (Brownlee, John) Modified text on 5/19/2014 (tdai,). (Entered: 05/19/2014)
05/19/2014	170	Subpoenas issued as to Robert F McDonnell (1). Subpoenas received by counsel for Defendant in Clerk's Office. (Attachments: # 1 Cover Letter)(tdai,) (Entered: 05/19/2014)
05/19/2014	171	Minute Entry for proceedings held before District Judge James R. Spencer:Motion Hearing as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell held on 5/19/2014 re 114 MOTION to Sever Defendant filed by Robert F McDonnell, 120 MOTION to Sever Defendant filed by Maureen G. McDonnell, 111 MOTION to Dismiss Counts 1-11 of the Indictment filed by Maureen G. McDonnell, 105 MOTION to Dismiss Counts 1-11 of the Indictment filed by Robert F McDonnell. Arguments heard. Matters taken under advisement. (Court Reporter Jeff Kull, OCR.)(khan,) (Entered: 05/19/2014)
05/19/2014	172	RESPONSE in Opposition by USA as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell re 163 MOTION for Issuance of Subpoenas to Virginia State Police (Aber, Jessica) (Entered: 05/19/2014)
05/20/2014	173	Subpoenas issued as to Robert F McDonnell (1). Subpoenas to be picked up in Clerk's Office. (Attachments: # 1 Cover Letter)(tdai,) (Entered: 05/20/2014)
05/20/2014	174	ORDER denying 118 Motion to Dismiss as to Maureen G. McDonnell (2). For reasons that will be set out more fully in a forthcoming memorandum opinion. See Order for details. Signed by District Judge James R. Spencer on 5/20/14. (tdai,) (Entered: 05/20/2014)
05/20/2014	175	ORDER denying 105 Motion to Dismiss Counts 1-11 of the Indictment as to Robert F McDonnell (1); denying 8 Motion for Discovery of Selected Recordings of Communications Between Prosecutors and Members of the Grand Jury as to Robert F McDonnell (1); denying 25 Motion for Discovery of Selected Communications Between Prosecutors and Members of the Grand Jury as to Maureen G. McDonnell (2); denying 111 Motion to Dismiss Counts 1-11 of the Indictment as to Maureen G. McDonnell (2). See Order for details. Signed by District Judge James R. Spencer on 5/20/14. (tdai,) (Entered: 05/20/2014)
05/20/2014	176	ORDER denying 114 Motion to Sever Joint Trial as to Robert F McDonnell (1); denying 120 Motion to Sever Joint Trial as to Maureen G. McDonnell (2). For reasons that will be set out more fully in a forthcoming memorandum opinion. See Order for details. Signed by District Judge James R. Spencer on 5/20/14. (tdai,) (Entered: 05/20/2014)
05/20/2014	177	ORDER denying 107 Motion to Strike Prejudicial Surplusage as to Robert F McDonnell (1); denying 112 Motion to Strike Prejudicial Surplusage as to Maureen G. McDonnell (2). For reasons that will be set out more fully in a forthcoming memorandum opinion. See Order for details. Signed by District Judge James R. Spencer on 5/20/14. (tdai,) (Entered: 05/20/2014)
05/20/2014	178	MOTION to Seal by Robert F McDonnell. (Attachments: # 1 Proposed Order)

		(Berry, Jonathan) (Entered: 05/20/2014)
05/20/2014	179	Non-Confidential Memorandum in Support by Robert F McDonnell re 178 MOTION to Seal (Berry, Jonathan) Modified text on 5/20/2014 (tdai,). (Entered: 05/20/2014)
05/20/2014	180	ORDER granting in part and denying in part 109 Motion for Omnibus Voir Dire Relief as to Robert F McDonnell (1); granting in part and denying in part 113 Motion for Omnibus Voir Dire Relief as to Maureen G. McDonnell (2). See Order for details. Signed by District Judge James R. Spencer on 5/20/14. (tdai,) (Entered: 05/20/2014)
05/21/2014	181	TRANSCRIPT of Proceedings held on May 19, 2014, Motions Hearing before Judge James R. Spencer. Court reporter/transcriber Jeff Kull, Telephone number 804-916-2258. NOTICE RE REDACTION OF TRANSCRIPTS:The parties have thirty(30) calendar days to file with the Court a Notice of Intent to Request Redaction of this transcript. If no such Notice is filed, the transcript will be made remotely electronically available to the public without redaction after 90 calendar days. The policy is located on our website at www.vaed.uscourts.gov Transcript may be viewed at the court public terminal or purchased through the court reporter/transcriber before the deadline for Release of Transcript Restriction. After that date it may be obtained through PACER Redaction Request due 6/20/2014. Redacted Transcript Deadline set for 7/21/2014. Release of Transcript Restriction set for 8/19/2014.(kull, jeff) (Entered: 05/21/2014)
05/21/2014	182	MOTION for Issuance of Subpoenas to the Virginia State Police by Maureen G. McDonnell. (Martin, Heather) (Entered: 05/21/2014)
05/22/2014	183	MOTION to Seal by Robert F McDonnell. (Attachments: # 1 Proposed Order) (Berry, Jonathan) (Entered: 05/22/2014)
05/22/2014	184	Non-Confidential Memorandum in Support by Robert F McDonnell re 183 MOTION to Seal (Berry, Jonathan) Modified text on 5/26/2014 (tdai,). (Entered: 05/22/2014)
05/23/2014	185	MOTION to Seal by Maureen G. McDonnell. (Attachments: # 1 Proposed Order) (Martin, Heather) (Entered: 05/23/2014)
05/23/2014	186	Non-Confidential Memorandum in Support by Maureen G. McDonnell re 185 MOTION to Seal (Martin, Heather) Modified text on 5/26/2014 (tdai,). (Entered: 05/23/2014)
05/23/2014	187	MOTION to Seal by Maureen G. McDonnell. (Attachments: # 1 Proposed Order) (Martin, Heather) (Entered: 05/23/2014)
05/23/2014	188	Non-Confidential Memorandum in Support by Maureen G. McDonnell re 187 MOTION to Seal (Martin, Heather) Modified text on 5/26/2014 (tdai,). (Entered: 05/23/2014)
05/23/2014		Set Motion hearing in case as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell Motion Hearing set for 7/15/2014 at 09:00 AM in Richmond Courtroom 7000 before District Judge James R. Spencer. (khan,) (Entered: 05/23/2014)
05/27/2014		Subpoena Duces Tecum Documents RECEIVED on CD from Johnnie Williams.

		Sr. as to Robert F McDonnell (1) re 155 Motion for Issuance of Subpoenas, 166 Order. CD placed in brown expandable. (tdai,) (Entered: 05/27/2014)
05/27/2014	189	RESPONSE by USA as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell re 164 MOTION to Seal Memorandum and Exhibit in Support of Robert F McDonnell's Motion for Issuance of Subpoenas to Virginia State Police., 183 MOTION to Seal (Faulconer, Ryan) (Entered: 05/27/2014)
05/28/2014		Subpoenas Duces Tecum Documents RECEIVED from Star Scientific, Inc. and Paul Perito as to Robert F McDonnell (1) re 155 Motion for Issuance of Subpoenas, 166 Order. Documents placed in brown expandable. (tdai,) (Entered: 05/28/2014)
05/28/2014	190	ORDER that this matter is before the Court on its own initiative. Timothy James Taylor of Holland & Knight, LLP is authorized to bring a laptop computer and external compact disc drive to the Clerk's Office in order to view and copy electronic records responsive to a subpoena duces tecum, which was issued to Johnnie Williams, Sr. on May 15, 2014.. Signed by District Judge James R. Spencer on 5/28/14. (khan,) Modified on 5/28/2014 (khan,). (Entered: 05/28/2014)
05/29/2014	191	RESPONSE in Support by USA as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell re 185 MOTION to Seal , 168 MOTION to Seal (Aber, Jessica) (Entered: 05/29/2014)
05/29/2014	192	RESPONSE to Motion by USA as to Robert F McDonnell re 178 MOTION to Seal (Aber, Jessica) (Entered: 05/29/2014)
05/29/2014	193	RESPONSE in Opposition by USA as to Maureen G. McDonnell re 187 MOTION to Seal (Aber, Jessica) (Entered: 05/29/2014)
05/29/2014	194	MEMORANDUM OPINION as to Robert F McDonnell (1). Signed by District Judge James R. Spencer on 5/29/14. (tdai,) (Entered: 05/29/2014)
05/29/2014	195	ORDER denying 164 Motion to Seal as to Robert F McDonnell (1); denying 183 Motion to Seal as to Robert F McDonnell (1). See Order for details. Signed by District Judge James R. Spencer on 5/29/14. (tdai,) (Entered: 05/29/2014)
05/29/2014	196	REPLY TO RESPONSE to by Robert F McDonnell re 168 MOTION to Seal (Berry, Jonathan) (Entered: 05/29/2014)
05/30/2014	197	Memorandum in Support by Robert F McDonnell re 163 MOTION for Issuance of Subpoenas to Virginia State Police (Attachments: # 1 Exhibit)(Berry, Jonathan) (Entered: 05/30/2014)
05/30/2014	198	REPLY TO RESPONSE to by Robert F McDonnell re 163 MOTION for Issuance of Subpoenas to Virginia State Police (Attachments: # 1 Exhibit)(Berry, Jonathan) (Entered: 05/30/2014)
06/02/2014	199	MOTION for Issuance of Subpoenas in Blank by Robert F McDonnell. (Attachments: # 1 Proposed Order)(Berry, Jonathan) (Entered: 06/02/2014)
06/03/2014	200	ORDER granting in part and denying in part 163 Motion for Issuance of Subpoena Duces Tecum as to Robert F McDonnell (1). The Clerk is DIRECTED to issue a subpoena duces tecum to the Virginia State Police, c/o Linda L. Bryant, Deputy Attorney General, Public Safety and Enforcement, Office of the Attorney

		General, 900 East Main Street, Richmond, VA 23219. The requested information should be produced at the office of Holland & Knight c/o Timothy J. Taylor, 1600 Tysons Boulevard, Suite 700, Tysons Corner, VA 22102, on or before Monday, June 16, 2014, at 12:00 p.m. See Order for complete details. Signed by District Judge James R. Spencer on 6/3/14. (tdai,) (Entered: 06/03/2014)
06/04/2014	201	Subpoena Duces Tecum issued to the Virginia State Police, c/o Linda L. Bryant, Deputy Attorney General, Public Safety and Enforcement, Office of the Attorney General, 900 East Main Street, Richmond, VA 23219. Issued pursuant to 200 Order entered June 3, 2014 (Called attorney to arrange for service of subpoena). (tdai,) (Entered: 06/04/2014)
06/04/2014	202	ORDER granting 168 Motion to Seal as to Robert F McDonnell (1); granting 185 Motion to Seal as to Maureen G. McDonnell (2). The Clerk is DIRECTED to file under seal Defendants' respective motions for clarification. See Order for complete details. Signed by District Judge James R. Spencer on 6/4/14. (tdai,) (Entered: 06/04/2014)
06/04/2014	203	MOTION for Clarification by Maureen G. McDonnell (2). (tdai,) Modified on 1/12/2015 - Unsealed per 620 Memorandum Order (tdai,). (Entered: 06/04/2014)
06/04/2014	204	MOTION for Clarification by Robert F McDonnell (1). (tdai,) Modified on 1/12/2015 - Unsealed per 620 Memorandum Order (tdai,). (Entered: 06/04/2014)
06/04/2014	205	Memorandum in Support by Robert F McDonnell (1) re 204 Motion for Clarification. (Attachments: # 1 Exhibit A, # 2 Exhibit B, # 3 Exhibit C, # 4 Exhibit D)(tdai,) Modified on 1/12/2015 - Unsealed per 620 Memorandum Order (tdai,). (Entered: 06/04/2014)
06/04/2014	206	ORDER re 203 Motion for Clarification as to Maureen G. McDonnell (2); 204 Motion for Clarification as to Robert F McDonnell (1). Signed by District Judge James R. Spencer on 6/4/14. Copy mailed: Yes (tdai,) Modified on 1/12/2015 - Unsealed per 620 Memorandum Order (tdai,). (Entered: 06/04/2014)
06/04/2014	207	ORDER granting in part and denying in part 178 Motion to Seal as to Robert F McDonnell (1); granting in part and denying in part 187 Motion to Seal as to Maureen G. McDonnell (2). See Order for complete details. Signed by District Judge James R. Spencer on 6/4/14. (tdai,) (Entered: 06/04/2014)
06/04/2014	208	ORDER granting 199 Motion for Issuance of Subpoenas in Blank as to Robert F McDonnell (1). The Clerk is DIRECTED to issue ten (10) blank subpoenas for trial witness appearances before this Court, to testify on behalf of Robert F McDonnell, on August 18, 2014 and through the end of the trial in this matter or until released. Signed by District Judge James R. Spencer on 6/4/14. (tdai,) (Entered: 06/04/2014)
06/04/2014	209	Subpoenas issued in Blank (10 Subpoenas). Issued pursuant to 208 Order entered June 4, 2014 (Subpoenas mailed by UPS to counsel for service). (tdai,) (Entered: 06/04/2014)
06/04/2014	210	MOTION for Issuance of Subpoenas to Jonnie Williams, Sr., Mary-Shea Sutherland, and Verizon Wireless by Robert F McDonnell. (Attachments: # 1 Proposed Order)(Berry, Jonathan) (Entered: 06/04/2014)

06/04/2014	211	Memorandum in Support by Robert F McDonnell re 210 MOTION for Issuance of Subpoenas to Jonnie Williams, Sr., Mary-Shea Sutherland, and Verizon Wireless (Attachments: # 1 Exhibit)(Berry, Jonathan) (Entered: 06/04/2014)
06/04/2014	212	MOTION for Issuance of Subpoenas to Jonnie Williams, Sr., Mary-Shea Sutherland, and Verizon Wireless by Maureen G. McDonnell. (Martin, Heather) (Entered: 06/04/2014)
06/05/2014	213	ORDER denying as moot 182 Motion for Issuance of Subpoenas to the Virginia State Police as to Maureen G. McDonnell (2). See Orders for details. Signed by District Judge James R. Spencer on 6/5/14. (tdai,) (Entered: 06/05/2014)
06/06/2014	217	ORDER granting in part and denying in part 210 Motion for Issuance of Subpoenas Duces Tecum as to Robert F McDonnell (1); granting in part and denying in part 212 Motion for Issuance of Subpoenas Duces Tecum as to Maureen G. McDonnell (2). See Order for complete details. Signed by District Judge James R. Spencer on 6/4/14. (tdai,) (Entered: 06/06/2014)
06/06/2014	219	Subpoenas Duces Tecum issued to #1) Jonnie Williams, Sr., c/o Richard Cullen, McGuire Woods LLP, One James Center, 901 East Cary Street, Richmond, VA 23219-4030. #2) Mary-Shea Sutherland, c/o Theodore D. Bruns, Blackburn, Conte, Schilling & Click P.C., 300 W Main St., Richmond, VA 23220. #3) Verizon Wireless, c/o Verizon Subpoena, 180 Washington Valley Rd., Bedminster, NJ 07921. Issued pursuant to 217 Order entered June 6, 2014 (Called attorney to arrange for service of subpoena). (tdai,) (Entered: 06/06/2014)
06/12/2014	220	Witness Subpoenas issued for Luz "Juliana" Gomez De Pitts and Paul Perito for 08/18/2014 at 9:00 a.m. (Attachment: # 1 Letter from Counsel for Defendant Robert F McDonnell). (walk,) (Entered: 06/12/2014)
06/16/2014	221	MOTION to Exclude Expert Testimony by USA as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell. (Faulconer, Ryan) (Entered: 06/16/2014)
06/16/2014	222	Memorandum in Support by USA as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell re 221 MOTION to Exclude Expert Testimony (Attachments: # 1 Exhibit A, # 2 Exhibit B)(Faulconer, Ryan) (Entered: 06/16/2014)
06/16/2014	223	ORDER that this matter is before the Court on the Government's 221 MOTION to Exclude Expert Testimony; upon due consideration, the Court GRANTS the Government's request for expedited briefing of the Motion; defendants may file a response on or before June 20, 2014. Signed by District Judge James R. Spencer on 6/16/14. (jtho,) (Entered: 06/16/2014)
06/20/2014	224	Witness Subpoenas issued for Jerri Fulkerson and Celeste Williams for 08/18/2014 at 9:00 a.m. (Attachment: # 1 Letter)(jtho,) (Entered: 06/20/2014)
06/20/2014	225	MOTION to Seal Motion in Limine by USA as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell. (Attachments: # 1 Proposed Order)(Aber, Jessica) (Entered: 06/20/2014)
06/20/2014	226	Memorandum in Support by USA as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell re 225 MOTION to Seal Motion in Limine (Aber, Jessica) (Entered: 06/20/2014)
06/20/2014	227	MOTION in Limine to Exclude Co-Conspirator Acts and Statements Pending

		Prima Facie Showing of Conspiracy Involving Mr. McDonnell by Robert F McDonnell. (Attachments: # 1 Proposed Order)(Berry, Jonathan) (Entered: 06/20/2014)
06/20/2014	228	Memorandum in Support by Robert F McDonnell re 227 MOTION in Limine to Exclude Co-Conspirator Acts and Statements Pending Prima Facie Showing of Conspiracy Involving Mr. McDonnell (Berry, Jonathan) (Entered: 06/20/2014)
06/20/2014	229	MOTION to Exclude Irrelevant and Misleading Evidence of Materiality of False Statements Charged in Counts 12 & 13 by USA as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell. (Faulconer, Ryan) (Entered: 06/20/2014)
06/20/2014	230	Memorandum in Support by USA as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell re 229 MOTION to Exclude Irrelevant and Misleading Evidence of Materiality of False Statements Charged in Counts 12 & 13 (Attachments: # 1 Exhibit A)(Faulconer, Ryan) (Entered: 06/20/2014)
06/20/2014	231	MOTION in Limine to Limit the Number of Character Witnesses by USA as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell. (Aber, Jessica) (Entered: 06/20/2014)
06/20/2014	232	Memorandum in Support by USA as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell re 231 MOTION in Limine to Limit the Number of Character Witnesses (Aber, Jessica) (Entered: 06/20/2014)
06/20/2014	233	MOTION in Limine to Permit Leading Questions by the United States of Witnesses Identified with Defendants by USA as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell. (Aber, Jessica) (Entered: 06/20/2014)
06/20/2014	234	Memorandum in Support by USA as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell re 233 MOTION in Limine to Permit Leading Questions by the United States of Witnesses Identified with Defendants (Aber, Jessica) (Entered: 06/20/2014)
06/20/2014	235	MOTION in Limine to Exclude Evidence Relating to Star Scientific Stock Ownership by Robert F McDonnell. (Attachments: # 1 Proposed Order)(Berry, Jonathan) (Entered: 06/20/2014)
06/20/2014	236	Memorandum in Support by Robert F McDonnell re 235 MOTION in Limine to Exclude Evidence Relating to Star Scientific Stock Ownership (Berry, Jonathan) (Entered: 06/20/2014)
06/20/2014	237	MOTION in Limine to Exclude Evidence Relating to Statements of Economic Interest by Robert F McDonnell. (Attachments: # 1 Proposed Order)(Berry, Jonathan) (Entered: 06/20/2014)
06/20/2014	238	Memorandum in Support by Robert F McDonnell re 237 MOTION in Limine to Exclude Evidence Relating to Statements of Economic Interest (Berry, Jonathan) (Entered: 06/20/2014)
06/20/2014	239	MOTION in Limine to Exclude Mrs. McDonnell's Testimonial Statements by Robert F McDonnell. (Attachments: # 1 Proposed Order)(Berry, Jonathan) (Entered: 06/20/2014)
06/20/2014	240	Memorandum in Support by Robert F McDonnell re 239 MOTION in Limine to

		Exclude Mrs. McDonnell's Testimonial Statements (Berry, Jonathan) (Entered: 06/20/2014)
06/20/2014	241	RESPONSE in Opposition by Robert F McDonnell re 221 MOTION to Exclude Expert Testimony (Attachments: # 1 Exhibit A, # 2 Exhibit B, # 3 Exhibit C, # 4 Exhibit D, # 5 Exhibit E, # 6 Exhibit F, # 7 Exhibit G, # 8 Exhibit H)(Berry, Jonathan) (Attachment 8 replaced on 6/23/2014) (jtho,). (Entered: 06/20/2014)
06/20/2014	242	MOTION in Limine to Exclude Evidence Relating to Star Scientific Stock Ownership by Maureen G. McDonnell. (Martin, Heather) (Entered: 06/20/2014)
06/20/2014	243	MOTION in Limine to Exclude Evidence Relating to Statements of Economic Interest by Maureen G. McDonnell. (Martin, Heather) (Entered: 06/20/2014)
06/23/2014		Notice of Correction to 241 Response in Opposition, Exhibit H; Clerk replaced document with redacted Exhibit H to remove personal information. (jtho,) (Entered: 06/23/2014)
06/24/2014	244	REPLY TO RESPONSE to by USA as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell re 222 Memorandum in Support of Motion, 221 MOTION to Exclude Expert Testimony (Attachments: # 1 Exhibit A)(Faulconer, Ryan) (Entered: 06/24/2014)
06/26/2014	245	Subpoenas issued as to Robert F McDonnell (1). Subpoenas mailed to counsel of record by UPS. (Attachments: # 1 Cover Letter)(tdai,) (Entered: 06/26/2014)
06/26/2014	246	MEMORANDUM OPINION as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell. Signed by District Judge James R. Spencer on 6/26/14. (jtho,) (Entered: 06/26/2014)
06/26/2014	247	ORDER granting in part and denying in part 221 Motion to Exclude Expert Testimony as to Robert F McDonnell (1), Maureen G. McDonnell (2) for the reasons set forth in the Memorandum Opinion. The Court finds that a Daubert hearing is required to determine admissibility of all expert testimony not excluded by this Order; the Parties are DIRECTED to contact the Court within five (5) days of this Order to schedule such hearing. (See Order for Details). Signed by District Judge James R. Spencer on 6/26/14. (jtho,) (Entered: 06/26/2014)
07/01/2014		Set Hearings as to Robert F McDonnell and Maureen G. McDonnell: Daubert Hearing set for 7/15/2014 at 9:00 AM in Richmond Courtroom 7000 before District Judge James R. Spencer, in re: expert witness Peter H. White (rpiz) (Entered: 07/01/2014)
07/01/2014		Set Hearings as to Robert F McDonnell and Maureen G. McDonnell: Daubert Hearing set for 7/10/2014 at 2:30 PM in Richmond Courtroom 7000 before District Judge James R. Spencer, in re: expert witness J. Allen Kosowsky (rpiz) (Entered: 07/01/2014)
07/01/2014		Set Hearings (amended) as to Robert F McDonnell and Maureen G. McDonnell - Daubert Hearing set for 7/10/2014 at 2:30 PM in Richmond Courtroom 7000 before District Judge James R. Spencer in re: expert witness Peter H. White. Daubert Hearing also set for 7/15/2014 at 9:00 AM in Richmond Courtroom 7000 before District Judge James R. Spencer in re: expert witness J. Allen Kosowsky (rpiz) (Entered: 07/01/2014)

07/01/2014	248	MOTION to Seal Memorandum in Opposition to the Government's Motion in Limine by Robert F McDonnell. (Attachments: # 1 Proposed Order)(Berry, Jonathan) (Entered: 07/01/2014)
07/01/2014	249	MOTION to Seal Memorandum in Opposition to the Government's Motion in Limine by Maureen G. McDonnell. (Attachments: # 1 Proposed Order)(Martin, Heather) (Entered: 07/01/2014)
07/01/2014	250	RESPONSE in Opposition by USA as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell re 239 MOTION in Limine to Exclude Mrs. McDonnell's Testimonial Statements (Faulconer, Ryan) (Entered: 07/01/2014)
07/01/2014	251	RESPONSE in Opposition by USA as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell re 227 MOTION in Limine to Exclude Co-Conspirator Acts and Statements Pending Prima Facie Showing of Conspiracy Involving Mr. McDonnell (Faulconer, Ryan) (Entered: 07/01/2014)
07/01/2014	252	RESPONSE in Opposition by USA as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell re 243 MOTION in Limine to Exclude Evidence Relating to Statements of Economic Interest, 237 MOTION in Limine to Exclude Evidence Relating to Statements of Economic Interest (Aber, Jessica) (Entered: 07/01/2014)
07/01/2014	253	RESPONSE in Opposition by Robert F McDonnell re 229 MOTION to Exclude Irrelevant and Misleading Evidence of Materiality of False Statements Charged in Counts 12 & 13 (Berry, Jonathan) (Entered: 07/01/2014)
07/01/2014	254	RESPONSE in Opposition by USA as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell re 242 MOTION in Limine to Exclude Evidence Relating to Star Scientific Stock Ownership, 235 MOTION in Limine to Exclude Evidence Relating to Star Scientific Stock Ownership (Aber, Jessica) (Entered: 07/01/2014)
07/01/2014	255	RESPONSE in Opposition by Robert F McDonnell re 231 MOTION in Limine to Limit the Number of Character Witnesses (Berry, Jonathan) (Entered: 07/01/2014)
07/01/2014	256	RESPONSE in Opposition by Maureen G. McDonnell re 229 MOTION to Exclude Irrelevant and Misleading Evidence of Materiality of False Statements Charged in Counts 12 & 13 (Martin, Heather) (Entered: 07/01/2014)
07/01/2014	257	RESPONSE in Opposition by Maureen G. McDonnell re 231 MOTION in Limine to Limit the Number of Character Witnesses (Martin, Heather) (Entered: 07/01/2014)
07/01/2014	258	RESPONSE in Opposition by Robert F McDonnell re 233 MOTION in Limine to Permit Leading Questions by the United States of Witnesses Identified with Defendants (Berry, Jonathan) (Entered: 07/01/2014)
07/01/2014	259	RESPONSE in Opposition by Maureen G. McDonnell re 233 MOTION in Limine to Permit Leading Questions by the United States of Witnesses Identified with Defendants (Martin, Heather) (Entered: 07/01/2014)
07/02/2014	260	Witness Subpoena issued for Patrick Cox as to Robert F McDonnell for 8/18/14 at 9:00 a.m. Subpoena mailed by UPS to counsel for service. (Attachments: # 1 Cover Letter)(tdai,) (Entered: 07/02/2014)
07/03/2014	261	Witness Subpoenas issued for Terry Kilgore, Marty Kilgore, Jerry Kilgore,

		Patrizio Caturegli, John McKeon as to Robert F McDonnell for 8/18/14 at 9:00 a.m. Subpoena mailed by UPS to counsel for service. (Attachments: # 1 Cover Letter)(tdai,) (Entered: 07/03/2014)
07/07/2014	262	ORDER granting 225 Motion to Seal Motion in Limine by USA as to Robert F McDonnell (1), Maureen G. McDonnell (2). See Order for complete details. Signed by District Judge James R. Spencer on 7/7/14. (tdai,) (Entered: 07/07/2014)
07/07/2014	263	Sealed Motion in Limine by USA as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell. Document sealed pursuant to 262 Order. (tdai,) Modified text on 7/14/2014 (tdai,). (Entered: 07/07/2014)
07/07/2014	264	Sealed Memorandum in Support 263 Sealed Motion filed by USA. Document sealed pursuant to 262 Order. (Attachments: # 1 Exhibit A, # 2 Exhibit B, # 3 Exhibit C, # 4 Exhibit D, # 5 Exhibit E, # 6 Exhibit F)(tdai,) (Entered: 07/07/2014)
07/07/2014	265	MOTION to Seal Reply to Motion in Limine by USA as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell. (Aber, Jessica) (Entered: 07/07/2014)
07/07/2014	266	Memorandum in Support by USA as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell re 265 MOTION to Seal Reply to Motion in Limine (Attachments: # 1 Proposed Order)(Aber, Jessica) (Entered: 07/07/2014)
07/07/2014	267	REPLY TO RESPONSE to by Robert F McDonnell re 239 MOTION in Limine to Exclude Mrs. McDonnell's Testimonial Statements (Berry, Jonathan) (Entered: 07/07/2014)
07/07/2014	268	REPLY TO RESPONSE to by Robert F McDonnell re 227 MOTION in Limine to Exclude Co-Conspirator Acts and Statements Pending Prima Facie Showing of Conspiracy Involving Mr McDonnell (Berry, Jonathan) (Entered: 07/07/2014)
07/07/2014	269	REPLY TO RESPONSE to by Robert F McDonnell re 237 MOTION in Limine to Exclude Evidence Relating to Statements of Economic Interest (Berry, Jonathan) (Entered: 07/07/2014)
07/07/2014	270	REPLY TO RESPONSE to by Robert F McDonnell re 235 MOTION in Limine to Exclude Evidence Relating to Star Scientific Stock Ownership (Berry, Jonathan) (Entered: 07/07/2014)
07/07/2014	271	REPLY TO RESPONSE to by USA as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell re 229 MOTION to Exclude Irrelevant and Misleading Evidence of Materiality of False Statements Charged in Counts 12 & 13 (Faulconer, Ryan) (Entered: 07/07/2014)
07/07/2014	272	Reply by USA as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell re 233 MOTION in Limine to Permit Leading Questions by the United States of Witnesses Identified with Defendants (Aber, Jessica) (Entered: 07/07/2014)
07/07/2014	273	Reply by USA as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell re 231 MOTION in Limine to Limit the Number of Character Witnesses (Aber, Jessica) (Entered: 07/07/2014)
07/09/2014	274	Witness Subpoenas issued for Robert Lockridge, Jr., Robert Merhige, III, W Mark Crowell, Sarah Collie, Stewart Craig, John Lazo, Steven Dekosky, Phillip

		Parrish, James M. Burke, Jeffrey Blank, Marc Stuart Wiley, Amy E. Bridge, Satyanarin Rangarajan, Dorrie K. Fontaine, R. Edward Howell, Sharon A. Krueger, Ronald B. Turner, Thomas C. Skalak, Margaret A. Shupnik as to Robert F McDonnell for 8/18/14 at 9:00 a.m. Subpoenas mailed by UPS to counsel for service. (Attachments: # 1 Cover Letter)(tdai,) (Entered: 07/09/2014)
07/09/2014	275	MOTION for Issuance of Subpoenas in Blank by Robert F McDonnell. (Attachments: # 1 Proposed Order)(Berry, Jonathan) (Entered: 07/09/2014)
07/10/2014	276	NOTICE OF ATTORNEY APPEARANCE: Jaime Brett Wisegarver appearing for Maureen G. McDonnell (khan,) (Entered: 07/10/2014)
07/10/2014	277	Minute Entry for proceedings held before District Judge James R. Spencer:Daubert Hearing as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell held on 7/10/2014. Arguments heard. Matter taken under advisement. (Court Reporter Jeff Kull, OCR.)(khan,) (Entered: 07/10/2014)
07/11/2014	278	TRANSCRIPT of Proceedings held on July 10, 2014, Daubert Hearing Re: Peter H. White before Judge James R. Spencer. Court reporter/transcriber Jeff Kull, Telephone number 804-916-2258. NOTICE RE REDACTION OF TRANSCRIPTS:The parties have thirty(30) calendar days to file with the Court a Notice of Intent to Request Redaction of this transcript. If no such Notice is filed, the transcript will be made remotely electronically available to the public without redaction after 90 calendar days. The policy is located on our website at www.vaed.uscourts.gov Transcript may be viewed at the court public terminal or purchased through the court reporter/transcriber before the deadline for Release of Transcript Restriction. After that date it may be obtained through PACER Redaction Request due 8/11/2014. Redacted Transcript Deadline set for 9/10/2014. Release of Transcript Restriction set for 10/9/2014.(kull, jeff) (Entered: 07/11/2014)
07/11/2014	279	MOTION for the use of courtroom technology by Robert F McDonnell. (Attachments: # 1 Proposed Order)(Berry, Jonathan) (Entered: 07/11/2014)
07/14/2014	280	ORDER granting 248 Motion to Seal Memorandum in Opposition to the Government's Motion in Limine as to Robert F McDonnell (1); granting 249 Motion to Seal Memorandum in Opposition to the Government's Motion in Limine as to Maureen G. McDonnell (2); granting 265 Motion to Seal Reply to Motion in Limine by USA as to Robert F McDonnell (1), Maureen G. McDonnell (2). It is so ORDERED. Signed by District Judge James R. Spencer on 7/14/14. (tdai,) (Entered: 07/14/2014)
07/14/2014	281	Sealed Memorandum in Opposition by Robert F McDonnell (1) to 263 Sealed Motion in Limine, filed by USA. (Attachments: # 1 Exhibit A, # 2 Exhibit B)(tdai,) (Entered: 07/14/2014)
07/14/2014	282	Sealed Memorandum in Opposition by Maureen G. McDonnell (2) to 263 Sealed Motion in Limine, filed by USA. (Attachments: # 1 Exhibit A, # 2 Exhibit B, # 3 Exhibit C, # 4 Exhibit D, # 5 Exhibit E, # 6 Exhibit F, # 7 Exhibit G, # 8 Exhibit H)(tdai,) (Entered: 07/14/2014)
07/14/2014	283	Sealed Reply in Support by USA to 263 Sealed Motion in Limine, filed by USA.

		(tdai,) (Entered: 07/14/2014)
07/14/2014	284	ORDER granting 275 Motion for Issuance of Subpoenas in Blank as to Robert F McDonnell (1). The Clerk is DIRECTED to issue twenty (20) blank subpoenas for trial witness appearances before this Court, to testify on behalf of Robert F McDonnell, on August 18, 2014 and through the end of the trial in this matter or until released. It is so ORDERED. Signed by District Judge James R. Spencer on 7/14/14. (tdai,) (Entered: 07/14/2014)
07/14/2014	285	ORDER granting in part and denying in part 279 Motion for use of courtroom technology as to Robert F McDonnell (1). See Order for details. It is so ORDERED. Signed by District Judge James R. Spencer on 7/14/14. (tdai,) (Entered: 07/14/2014)
07/14/2014	287	Proposed Jury Instructions by Robert F McDonnell (Berry, Jonathan) (Entered: 07/14/2014)
07/14/2014	288	Proposed Jury Instructions by Maureen G. McDonnell (Martin, Heather) (Entered: 07/14/2014)
07/14/2014	289	Proposed Jury Instructions by USA as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell (Faulconer, Ryan) (Entered: 07/14/2014)
07/15/2014	290	Witness Subpoenas issued in Blank (20 Witness Subpoenas) as to Robert F McDonnell for 8/18/14 at 9:00 a.m. Issued pursuant to 284 Order entered July 14, 2014. Subpoenas picked up in Clerk's Office for service. (tdai,) (Entered: 07/15/2014)
07/15/2014	292	Minute Entry for proceedings held before District Judge James R. Spencer:Motion Hearing as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell held on 7/15/2014 re 239 MOTION in Limine to Exclude Mrs. McDonnell's Testimonial Statements filed by Robert F McDonnell, 235 MOTION in Limine to Exclude Evidence Relating to Star Scientific Stock Ownership filed by Robert F McDonnell, 233 MOTION in Limine to Permit Leading Questions by the United States of Witnesses Identified with Defendants filed by USA, 227 MOTION in Limine to Exclude Co-Conspirator Acts and Statements Pending Prima Facie Showing of Conspiracy Involving Mr McDonnell filed by Robert F McDonnell, 229 MOTION to Exclude Irrelevant and Misleading Evidence of Materiality of False Statements Charged in Counts 12 & 13 filed by USA, 231 MOTION in Limine to Limit the Number of Character Witnesses filed by USA, 237 MOTION in Limine to Exclude Evidence Relating to Statements of Economic Interest filed by Robert F McDonnell. Daubert hearing re J. Allen Kosowsky, CPA. Arguments heard on motions and Daubert hearing. All matters taken under advisement. (Court Reporter Jeff Kull, OCR.)(khan,) (Entered: 07/16/2014)
07/16/2014	291	Motion to appear Pro Hac Vice by Elizabeth N. Jochum and Certification of Local Counsel Timothy J. Taylor (Filing fee $ 75 receipt number 0422-4039557.) by Robert F McDonnell. (Taylor, Timothy) (Entered: 07/16/2014)
07/16/2014	293	TRANSCRIPT of Proceedings held on July 15, 2014, Motions and Daubert Hearing - Kosowsky before Judge James R. Spencer. Court reporter/transcriber Jeff Kull, Telephone number 804-916-2258. NOTICE RE REDACTION OF TRANSCRIPTS:The parties have thirty(30) calendar days to file with the Court a Notice of Intent to Request Redaction of this transcript. If no such Notice is filed, the transcript will be made remotely electronically available to the public without redaction after 90 calendar days. The policy is located on our website at www.vaed.uscourts.gov Transcript may be viewed at the court public terminal or purchased through the court reporter/transcriber before the deadline for Release of Transcript Restriction. After that date it may be obtained through PACER Redaction Request due 8/15/2014. Redacted Transcript Deadline set for 9/15/2014. Release of Transcript Restriction set for 10/14/2014.(kull, jeff) (Entered: 07/16/2014)

07/16/2014	294	Sealed Order as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell re 263 Sealed Motion in Limine. Signed by District Judge James R. Spencer on 7/16/14. (tdai,) (Entered: 07/16/2014)
07/16/2014	295	MEMORANDUM OPINION as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell. Signed by District Judge James R. Spencer on 7/16/14. (tdai,) (Entered: 07/16/2014)
07/16/2014	296	ORDER denying 227 Motion in Limine to Exclude Co-Conspirator Acts and Statements Pending Prima Facie Showing of Conspiracy Involving Mr. McDonnell as to Robert F McDonnell (1); granting 229 Motion to Exclude Irrelevant and Misleading Evidence of Materiality of False Statements Charged in Counts 12 & 13 as to Robert F McDonnell (1), Maureen G. McDonnell (2); denying 231 Motion in Limine to Limit the Number of Character Witnesses as to Robert F McDonnell (1), Maureen G. McDonnell (2); denying 233 Motion in Limine to Permit Leading Questions by the United States of Witnesses Identified with Defendants as to Robert F McDonnell (1), Maureen G. McDonnell (2); denying 235 Motion in Limine to Exclude Evidence Relating to Star Scientific Stock Ownership as to Robert F McDonnell (1); denying 237 Motion in Limine to Exclude Evidence Relating to Statements of Economic Interest as to Robert F McDonnell (1); denying 239 Motion in Limine to Exclude Mrs. McDonnell's Testimonial Statement as to Robert F McDonnell (1); denying 242 Motion in Limine to Exclude Evidence Relating to Star Scientific Stock Ownership as to Maureen G. McDonnell (2); denying 243 Motion in Limine to Exclude Evidence Relating to Statements of Economic Interest as to Maureen G. McDonnell (2). Signed by District Judge James R. Spencer on 7/16/14. (tdai,) (Entered: 07/16/2014)
07/16/2014	297	MEMORANDUM ORDER that this matter is before the Court on the Government's Motion to Exclude Expert Testimony 221 ; upon further consideration and after holding Daubert hearings, the Court will exclude the testimony of Peter H. White, Esquire in its entirety and will exclude the testimony of J. Allen Kosowsky, CPA, in part. (See Order for Details). Signed by District Judge James R. Spencer on 7/16/14. (jtho,) (Entered: 07/16/2014)
07/17/2014	298	ORDER granting 291 Motion for Pro hac vice Appointed Elizabeth Newell Jochum for Robert F McDonnell as to Robert F McDonnell (1). Signed by District Judge James R. Spencer on 07/16/2014. (tjoh,) (Entered: 07/17/2014)
07/18/2014		Additional Subpoena Duces Tecum Documents RECEIVED on CD from Johnnie Williams, Sr. as to Robert F McDonnell (1) re 155 Motion for Issuance of Subpoenas, 166 Order. (CD placed in brown expandable in Clerk's Office.) (jtho,)

		(Entered: 07/18/2014)
07/18/2014	299	MOTION to Seal Motion for Issuance of Trial Subpoena to Public Official by Robert F McDonnell. (Attachments: # 1 Proposed Order)(Berry, Jonathan) (Entered: 07/18/2014)
07/18/2014	300	Memorandum in Support by Robert F McDonnell re 299 MOTION to Seal Motion for Issuance of Trial Subpoena to Public Official (Berry, Jonathan) (Entered: 07/18/2014)
07/21/2014	301	STIPULATION by USA and Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell Stipulation 1 (Faulconer, Ryan) (Entered: 07/21/2014)
07/21/2014	302	STIPULATION by USA and Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell Stipulation 2 (Faulconer, Ryan) (Entered: 07/21/2014)
07/22/2014	303	Joint Sealed Motion by USA, Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell as to Robert F McDonnell (1), Maureen G. McDonnell (2). (tdai,) (Entered: 07/22/2014)
07/24/2014	304	Sealed Order as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell re 303 Joint Sealed Motion. Signed by District Judge James R. Spencer on 7/24/14. (tdai,) (Entered: 07/24/2014)
07/24/2014	305	MOTION to Compel Testimony by USA as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell. (Attachments: # 1 Exhibit A (DOJ Authorization), # 2 Proposed Order)(Aber, Jessica) (Entered: 07/24/2014)
07/25/2014	306	Proposed Voir Dire by Robert F McDonnell (Berry, Jonathan) (Entered: 07/25/2014)
07/25/2014	307	MOTION for Issuance of Subpoenas Duces Tecum by Robert F McDonnell. (Attachments: # 1 Proposed Order)(Berry, Jonathan) (Entered: 07/25/2014)
07/25/2014	308	Memorandum in Support by Robert F McDonnell re 307 MOTION for Issuance of Subpoenas Duces Tecum (Berry, Jonathan) (Entered: 07/25/2014)
07/26/2014	309	MOTION for Issuance of Subpoenas Duces Tecum by Maureen G. McDonnell. (Martin, Heather) (Entered: 07/26/2014)
07/28/2014	310	WITNESS LIST by USA as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell (Aber, Jessica) (Entered: 07/28/2014)
07/28/2014	311	EXHIBIT LIST by USA as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell (Aber, Jessica) (Entered: 07/28/2014)
07/28/2014	312	Amended EXHIBIT LIST by USA as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell (Aber, Jessica) (Entered: 07/28/2014)
07/28/2014	313	NOTICE OF ATTORNEY APPEARANCE by Dallas J. Kaplan, Esquire appearing for Non-Party Jerri Fulkerson in the case as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell. (tdai,) (Entered: 07/28/2014)
07/28/2014	314	MOTION to Intervene for the Purpose of Opposing, or in the Alternative to Move to Quash Defendants' Requests for Rule 17(C) Subpoenas by Jerri Fulkerson as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell. (Attachments: # 1 Proposed Opposition of Non-Party Jerri Fulkerson to Defendant Robert F McDonnell's and Defendant Maureen G. McDonnell's Motions for Issuance of Rule 17(C) Subpoena)(tdai,) (Entered: 07/28/2014)

07/28/2014	315	ORDER re 305 Motion to Compel Testimony by USA as to Robert F McDonnell (1), Maureen G. McDonnell (2). Upon the approval of the aforesaid application by the Department of Justice, by the Assistant Attorney General, pursuant to the authority vested in her by 18 U.S.C. § 6003(b) and 28 C.F.R. § 0.175(a); it is hereby ORDERED that, pursuant to 18 U.S.C. §§ 6002 and 6003, JERRI FULKERSON give testimony and provide other information as to all matters about which she may be questioned at trial in United States v. Robert F McDonnell and Maureen G. McDonnell; and IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that, pursuant to 18 U.S.C. §§ 6002 and 6003, no testimony or other information compelled under this Order, or any information directly or indirectly derived from such testimony or other information, may be used against FULKERSON in any criminal case, except a prosecution for perjury, giving a false statement, or otherwise failing to comply with this Order. Signed by District Judge James R. Spencer on 7/28/14. (tdai,) (Entered: 07/28/2014)
07/28/2014	316	First Motion to appear Pro Hac Vice by George J. Terwilliger III and Certification of Local Counsel Dallas J. Kaplan (Filing fee $ 75 receipt number 0422-4054342.) by Jerri Fulkerson as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell. (Kaplan, Dallas) (Entered: 07/28/2014)
07/28/2014	317	SEALING ORDER granting 299 Motion to Seal Motion for Issuance of Trial Subpoena to Public Official as to Robert F McDonnell (1).. Signed by District Judge James R. Spencer on 7/28/14. (tdai,) (Entered: 07/28/2014)
07/28/2014	318	Sealed Unopposed Motion for Issuance of Subpoena, by Robert F McDonnell (1). (tdai,) (Entered: 07/28/2014)
07/28/2014	319	MOTION to Withdraw as Counsel by Jaime Wisegarver. by Maureen G. McDonnell. (khan,) (Entered: 07/28/2014)
07/28/2014	320	Combined Defense WITNESS LIST by Robert F McDonnell as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell (Berry, Jonathan) (Entered: 07/28/2014)
07/28/2014	321	Combined Defense EXHIBIT LIST by Robert F McDonnell as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell (Berry, Jonathan) (Entered: 07/28/2014)
07/28/2014	322	ORDER granting 319 Motion to Withdraw as Attorney. Jaime Brett Wisegarver withdrawn from case as to Maureen G. McDonnell (2). Signed by District Judge James R. Spencer on 7/28/14. (tdai,) (Entered: 07/28/2014)
07/28/2014	323	SEALED ORDER as to Robert F McDonnell (1) re 318 Sealed Unopposed Motion for Issuance of Subpoena. Signed by District Judge James R. Spencer on 7/28/14. (tdai,) (Entered: 07/28/2014)
07/28/2014	324	ORDER granting 316 Motion for Pro hac vice. Appointed George J. Terwilliger, III for Jerri Fulkerson as to Robert F McDonnell (1), Maureen G. McDonnell (2). Signed by District Judge James R. Spencer on 7/28/14. (tdai,) (Entered: 07/28/2014)
07/28/2014	325	MOTION to Exclude Testimony of Robert Skunda and Amy Bridge by Robert F

		McDonnell. (Attachments: # 1 Proposed Order)(Berry, Jonathan) (Entered: 07/28/2014)
07/28/2014	326	Memorandum in Support by Robert F McDonnell re 325 MOTION to Exclude Testimony of Robert Skunda and Amy Bridge (Attachments: # 1 Exhibit A)(Berry, Jonathan) (Entered: 07/28/2014)
07/28/2014		Set/Reset Hearings as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell: Jury Trial set for 7/29/2014 at 10:00 AM in Richmond Courtroom 7000 before District Judge James R. Spencer. (khan,) (Entered: 07/28/2014)
07/28/2014		Minute Entry for proceedings held before District Judge James R. Spencer:Voir Dire held on 7/28/2014 as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell (khan,). (Entered: 07/29/2014)
07/28/2014	331	Minute Entry for proceedings held before District Judge James R. Spencer:Jury Trial as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell held on 7/28/2014. Jury sworn & examined on voir dire. Jury empaneled and sworn to try issue. Case continued to July 29, 2014 at 10:00 a.m. Dfts remain on bond. (Court Reporter Jeff Kull, OCR, Tracy Stroh, Chandler & Halasz.)(khan,) (Entered: 07/29/2014)
07/29/2014	327	NOTICE OF ATTORNEY APPEARANCE by Edward J. Fuhr, Esquire appearing for Non-Parties Christopher Young and Cailin M. Young as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell. (tdai,) (Entered: 07/29/2014)
07/29/2014	328	ORDER that this matter is before the Court sua sponte. Upon due consideration and pursuant to In re U.S. for an Order Pursuant to 18 U.S.C. Section 2703(D), 707 F.3d 283, 290 (4th Cir. 2013) and in re Associated Press, 172 F App'x. 1,3-5 (4th Cir. 2006), the Parties are DIRECTED to provide to the Clerk's Office of the United States District Court for the Eastern District of Virginia, Richmond Division in electronic format all documentary exhibits that have both been admitted into the public record and have been fully published to the jury. The Parties must make these documentary exhibits available to the Clerk's Office by 10:00 a.m. on the day after the exhibits have been fully published to the jury. The Clerk's Office will then make said exhibits accessible to the media. Signed by District Judge James R. Spencer on 7/29/14. (tdai,) (Entered: 07/29/2014)
07/29/2014	329	Sealed Document as to Robert F McDonnell (1) re 323 Sealed Order. (tdai,) (Entered: 07/29/2014)
07/29/2014	330	TRANSCRIPT of Proceedings held on July 28, 2014,Jury Trial Volume I before Judge James R. Spencer. Court reporter/transcriber Jeff Kull, Telephone number 804-916-2258. NOTICE RE REDACTION OF TRANSCRIPTS:The parties have thirty(30) calendar days to file with the Court a Notice of Intent to Request Redaction of this transcript. If no such Notice is filed, the transcript will be made remotely electronically available to the public without redaction after 90 calendar days. The policy is located on our website at www.vaed.uscourts.gov Transcript may be viewed at the court public terminal or purchased through the court reporter/transcriber before the deadline for Release of Transcript Restriction. After that date it may be obtained through PACER Redaction Request due 8/28/2014. Redacted Transcript Deadline set for 9/29/2014. Release of Transcript Restriction set for 10/27/2014.(kull, jeff) (Entered: 07/29/2014)

07/29/2014	332	ORDER that for good cause appearing to the Court, it is ORDERED that the jurors in the above entitled case be kept together in the custody of the United States Marshal, who shall furnish them LUNCH, on Monday, July 28, 2014, submitting to bill to the Clerk of this Court for payment. Signed by District Judge James R. Spencer on 7/29/14. (khan,) (Entered: 07/29/2014)
07/29/2014	333	Minute Entry for proceedings held before District Judge James R. Spencer:Jury Trial as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell held on 7/29/2014. Jury Instructed. Opening Statements made. Govt. adduced evidence. Case continued until 7/30/14 at 9:30 a.m. Dfts remain on bond. (Court Reporter Jeff Kull, OCR, Tracy Stroh, Chandler & Halasz.)(khan,) (Main Document 333 replaced on 9/10/2014) (khan,). (Main Document 333 replaced on 9/10/2014) (khan,). (Entered: 07/29/2014)
07/29/2014		Set/Reset Hearings as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell: Jury Trial set for 7/30/2014 at 09:30 AM in Richmond Courtroom 7000 before District Judge James R. Spencer. (khan,) (Entered: 07/29/2014)
07/30/2014	334	ORDER denying as moot 314 Motion to Intervene for the Purpose of Opposing, or in the Alternative to Move to Quash Defendants' Requests for Rule 17(C) Subpoenas as to Robert F McDonnell (1), Maureen G. McDonnell (2). On July 29, 2014, Defendants reported that their Motions for Issuance of Rule 17(c) Subpoenas (ECF Nos. 307 , 309) are now moot as to Jerri Fulkerson pursuant to an agreement. As such, Jerri Fulkerson currently has no interest in this matter. Accordingly, the Motion will be DENIED AS MOOT. It is so ORDERED. Signed by District Judge James R. Spencer on 7/29/14. (tdai,) (Entered: 07/30/2014)
07/30/2014	335	ORDER re 307 MOTION for Issuance of Subpoenas Duces Tecum filed by Robert F McDonnell (1 309 MOTION for Issuance of Subpoenas Duces Tecum filed by Maureen G. McDonnell (2). As to Star Scientific, Incorporated, the requests are DENIED as too broad and overly burdensome. It is so ORDERED. Signed by District Judge James R. Spencer on 7/30/14. (tdai,) (Entered: 07/30/2014)
07/30/2014	336	Exhibits by USA Admitted into Evidence at Trial on 7/29/14. (tdai,) (Entered: 07/30/2014)
07/30/2014	337	TRANSCRIPT of Proceedings held on July 29, 2014, Jury Trial Volume II before Judge James R. Spencer. Court reporter/transcriber Jeff Kull, Telephone number 804-916-2258. NOTICE RE REDACTION OF TRANSCRIPTS:The parties have thirty(30) calendar days to file with the Court a Notice of Intent to Request Redaction of this transcript. If no such Notice is filed, the transcript will be made remotely electronically available to the public without redaction after 90 calendar days. The policy is located on our website at www.vaed.uscourts.gov Transcript may be viewed at the court public terminal or purchased through the court reporter/transcriber before the deadline for Release of Transcript Restriction. After that date it may be obtained through PACER Redaction Request due 8/29/2014. Redacted Transcript Deadline set for 9/29/2014. Release of Transcript Restriction set for 10/28/2014.(kull, jeff) (Entered: 07/30/2014)
07/30/2014		Set/Reset Hearings as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell: Jury Trial set for 7/31/2014 at 09:30 AM in Richmond Courtroom 7000 before District

		Judge James R. Spencer. (khan,) (Entered: 07/30/2014)
07/30/2014	340	Minute Entry for proceedings held before District Judge James R. Spencer. Day 3 Jury Trial as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell held on 7/30/2014. Govt adduced evidence. Matter continued to July 31, 2014 at 9:30 a.m. Dfts remain on bond. (Court Reporter Jeff Kull, OCR, Tracy Stroh, Chandler & Halasz.)(khan,) (Entered: 07/31/2014)
07/31/2014	338	Exhibits by USA Admitted into Evidence at Trial on 7/30/14. (Attachments: # 1 Exhibits Part 1, # 2 Exhibits Part 2, # 3 Exhibits Part 3) (tdai,) (Entered: 07/31/2014)
07/31/2014	341	ORDER that this matter is before the Court sua sponte. The Court has received requests from the media for the release of questionnaires completed by potential jurors prior to trial in the above referenced matter. The Court has denied said requests. The questionnaires contain private, personal, and confidential information regarding each potential juror. The potential jurors were compelled to provide this information by the Court in its quest to obtain a jury pool from which a fair and impartial jury could be selected. Pursuant to the Court's supervisory power over its own records and files, see Virginia Dep't of State Police v. Washington Post, 386 F.3d 567, 575 (4th Cir. 2004), the Court will protect this information from public dissemination. Access to these questionnaires will be DENIED. Signed by District Judge James R. Spencer on 7/31/14. (tdai,) (Entered: 07/31/2014)
07/31/2014		Set/Reset Hearings as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell: Jury Trial set for 8/1/2014 at 09:30 AM in Richmond Courtroom 7000 before District Judge James R. Spencer. (khan,) (Entered: 07/31/2014)
07/31/2014	344	Minute Entry for proceedings held before District Judge James R. Spencer:Jury Trial as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell held on 7/31/2014. Govt. adduced evidence. Jury Trial continued to 8/1/14 at 9:30 a.m. Dfts remain on bond. (Court Reporter Jeff Kull, OCR, Tracy Stroh, Chandler & Halasz.)(khan,) (Entered: 08/01/2014)
08/01/2014	342	Exhibits by USA Admitted into Evidence at Trial on 7/31/14. (Attachments: # 1 Exhibits Part 1, # 2 Exhibits Part 2) (tdai,) (Entered: 08/01/2014)
08/01/2014	343	Video Exhibits by USA Admitted into Evidence at Trial on 7/31/14. (CD placed in brown expandable file located in Clerk's Office) (Limited CDs are available in Clerk's Office for check out). (tdai,) (Entered: 08/01/2014)
08/01/2014	345	TRANSCRIPT of Proceedings held on July 30, 2014,Jury Trial Volume III before Judge James R. Spencer. Court reporter/transcriber Jeff Kull, Telephone number 804-916-2258. NOTICE RE REDACTION OF TRANSCRIPTS:The parties have thirty(30) calendar days to file with the Court a Notice of Intent to Request Redaction of this transcript. If no such Notice is filed, the transcript will be made remotely electronically available to the public without redaction after 90 calendar days. The policy is located on our website at www.vaed.uscourts.gov Transcript may be viewed at the court public terminal or purchased through the court reporter/transcriber before the deadline for Release of Transcript Restriction. After that date it may be obtained through PACER Redaction Request due 9/2/2014. Redacted

		Transcript Deadline set for 10/1/2014. Release of Transcript Restriction set for 10/30/2014.(kull, jeff) (Entered: 08/01/2014)
08/01/2014	346	TRANSCRIPT of Proceedings held on July 31, 2014, Jury Trial Volume IV before Judge James R. Spencer. Court reporter/transcriber Jeff Kull, Telephone number 804-916-2258. NOTICE RE REDACTION OF TRANSCRIPTS:The parties have thirty(30) calendar days to file with the Court a Notice of Intent to Request Redaction of this transcript. If no such Notice is filed, the transcript will be made remotely electronically available to the public without redaction after 90 calendar days. The policy is located on our website at www.vaed.uscourts.gov Transcript may be viewed at the court public terminal or purchased through the court reporter/transcriber before the deadline for Release of Transcript Restriction. After that date it may be obtained through PACER Redaction Request due 9/2/2014. Redacted Transcript Deadline set for 10/1/2014. Release of Transcript Restriction set for 10/30/2014.(kull, jeff) (Entered: 08/01/2014)
08/01/2014	347	Minute Entry for proceedings held before District Judge James R. Spencer:Jury Trial as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell held on 8/1/2014. Govt. adduced evidence. Jury Trial continued to August 4, 2014 at 9:30 a.m. Dfts remain on bond. (Court Reporter Jeff Kull, OCR, Tracy Stroh, Chandler & Halasz.)(khan,) (Entered: 08/01/2014)
08/01/2014		Set/Reset Hearings as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell: Jury Trial set for 8/4/2014 at 09:30 AM in Richmond Courtroom 7000 before District Judge James R. Spencer. (khan,) (Entered: 08/01/2014)
08/04/2014	348	Exhibits by Maureen G. McDonnell (2) Admitted into Evidence at Trial on 8/1/14. (Attachments: # 1 Exhibits Part 1, # 2 Exhibits Part 2, # 3 Exhibits Part 3, # 4 Exhibits Part 4, # 5 Exhibits Part 5, # 6 Exhibits Part 6, # 7 Exhibits Part 7, # 8 Exhibits Part 8, # 9 Exhibits Part 9, # 10 Exhibits Part 10, # 11 Exhibits Part 11) (tdai,) (Entered: 08/04/2014)
08/04/2014		Set/Reset Hearings as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell: Jury Trial set for 8/5/2014 at 09:30 AM in Richmond Courtroom 7000 before District Judge James R. Spencer. (khan,) (Entered: 08/04/2014)
08/04/2014	349	NOTICE OF ATTORNEY APPEARANCE by Craig T Merritt, Esquire appearing for Non-Party WP Company, LLC in the case as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell. (tdai,) (Entered: 08/05/2014)
08/04/2014	350	NOTICE OF ATTORNEY APPEARANCE by David B. Lacy, Esquire appearing for Non-Party WP Company, LLC in the case as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell. (tdai,) (Entered: 08/05/2014)
08/04/2014	351	MOTION for Leave to Intervene and to Vacate Sealing Order by WP Company LLC as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell. (tdai,) (Entered: 08/05/2014)
08/04/2014	352	Memorandum in Support re 351 MOTION for Leave to Intervene and to Vacate Sealing Order by WP Company LLC as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell. (Attachments: # 1 Exhibit 1)(tdai,) (Entered: 08/05/2014)

08/04/2014	354	ORDER that for good cause appearing to the Court, it is ORDERED that the jurors in the above entitled case be kept together in the custody of the United States Marshal, who shall furnish them LUNCH on August 1, 2014, submitting the bill to the Clerk of this Court for payment.. Signed by District Judge James R. Spencer on 8/4/14. (khan,) (Entered: 08/05/2014)
08/04/2014	356	Minute Entry for proceedings held before District Judge James R. Spencer: Day 6 Jury Trial as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell held on 8/4/2014 Govt adduced evidence. Jury Trial scheduled to resume 8/5/14 at 9:30 a.m. Dfts remain on bond. (Court Reporter Jeff Kull, OCR, Tracy Stroh, Chandler & Halasz.)(khan,) Modified on 8/5/2014 (khan,). (Entered: 08/05/2014)
08/05/2014	353	Exhibits by USA Admitted into Evidence at Trial on 8/4/14. (Attachments: # 1 Exhibits Part 1) (tdai,) (Entered: 08/05/2014)
08/05/2014	355	Exhibits by Robert F McDonnell (1) Admitted into Evidence at Trial on 8/4/14. (Attachments: # 1 Exhibits Part 1) (tdai,) (Entered: 08/05/2014)
08/05/2014	357	TRANSCRIPT of Proceedings held on August 1, 2014, Jury Trial Volume V before Judge James R. Spencer. Court reporter/transcriber Jeff Kull, Telephone number 804-916-2258. NOTICE RE REDACTION OF TRANSCRIPTS:The parties have thirty(30) calendar days to file with the Court a Notice of Intent to Request Redaction of this transcript. If no such Notice is filed, the transcript will be made remotely electronically available to the public without redaction after 90 calendar days. The policy is located on our website at www.vaed.uscourts.gov Transcript may be viewed at the court public terminal or purchased through the court reporter/transcriber before the deadline for Release of Transcript Restriction. After that date it may be obtained through PACER Redaction Request due 9/4/2014. Redacted Transcript Deadline set for 10/6/2014. Release of Transcript Restriction set for 11/3/2014.(kull, jeff) (Entered: 08/05/2014)
08/05/2014	358	TRANSCRIPT of Proceedings held on August 4, 2014,Jury Trial Volume VI before Judge James R. Spencer. Court reporter/transcriber Jeff Kull, Telephone number 804-916-2258. NOTICE RE REDACTION OF TRANSCRIPTS:The parties have thirty(30) calendar days to file with the Court a Notice of Intent to Request Redaction of this transcript. If no such Notice is filed, the transcript will be made remotely electronically available to the public without redaction after 90 calendar days. The policy is located on our website at www.vaed.uscourts.gov Transcript may be viewed at the court public terminal or purchased through the court reporter/transcriber before the deadline for Release of Transcript Restriction. After that date it may be obtained through PACER Redaction Request due 9/4/2014. Redacted Transcript Deadline set for 10/6/2014. Release of Transcript Restriction set for 11/3/2014.(kull, jeff) (Entered: 08/05/2014)
08/05/2014	363	Minute Entry for proceedings held before District Judge James R. Spencer:Day 7 Jury Trial as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell held on 8/5/2014. Govt adduced evidence. Jury Trial continued to 8/6/14 at 9:30 a.m. Dfts remain on bond. (Court Reporter Jeff Kull, OCR, Tracy Stroh, Chandler & Halasz.)(khan,) (Entered: 08/06/2014)
08/06/2014	359	TRANSCRIPT of Proceedings held on August 5, 2014, Jury Trial Volume VII

		before Judge James R. Spencer. Court reporter/transcriber Jeff Kull, Telephone number 804-916-2258. NOTICE RE REDACTION OF TRANSCRIPTS:The parties have thirty(30) calendar days to file with the Court a Notice of Intent to Request Redaction of this transcript. If no such Notice is filed, the transcript will be made remotely electronically available to the public without redaction after 90 calendar days. The policy is located on our website at www.vaed.uscourts.gov Transcript may be viewed at the court public terminal or purchased through the court reporter/transcriber before the deadline for Release of Transcript Restriction. After that date it may be obtained through PACER Redaction Request due 9/5/2014. Redacted Transcript Deadline set for 10/6/2014. Release of Transcript Restriction set for 11/4/2014.(kull, jeff) (Entered: 08/06/2014)
08/06/2014		Set/Reset Hearings as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell: Jury Trial set for 8/6/2014 at 09:30 AM in Richmond Courtroom 7000 before District Judge James R. Spencer. (khan,) (Entered: 08/06/2014)
08/06/2014	360	ORDER re 351 MOTION for Leave to Intervene filed by WP Company LLC. Upon due consideration, the Motion is GRANTED insofar as it requests leave to intervene in this matter. See Co. Doe v. Pub. Citizen, 749 F.3d 246, 262-63 (4th Cir. 2014). A hearing will be held on Friday, August 15, 2014, at 12:15 p.m., in Courtroom 6100, to hear argument on the merits of Intervenor's Motion. It is so ORDERED. Signed by District Judge James R. Spencer on 8/6/14. (tdai,) (Entered: 08/06/2014)
08/06/2014	361	Exhibits by Maureen G. McDonnell (2) Admitted into Evidence at Trial on 8/5/14. (Attachments: # 1 Exhibits Part 1) (tdai,) (Entered: 08/06/2014)
08/06/2014		Set Motion in case as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell 351 MOTION for Leave to Intervene Motion Hearing set for 8/15/2014 at 12:15 PM in Richmond Courtroom 6100 before District Judge James R. Spencer. (khan,) Modified text to correct time on 8/6/2014 (jtho,). (Entered: 08/06/2014)
08/06/2014	362	Exhibits by USA Admitted into Evidence at Trial on 8/5/14. (Attachments: # 1 Exhibits Part 1) (tdai,) (Entered: 08/06/2014)
08/06/2014	364	Exhibits by Robert F McDonnell (1) Admitted into Evidence at Trial on 8/5/14. (Attachments: # 1 Exhibits Part 1, # 2 Exhibits Part 2, # 3 Exhibits Part 3) (tdai,) (Entered: 08/06/2014)
08/06/2014	365	Exhibits by Robert F McDonnell (1) Admitted into Evidence at Trial on 8/5/14. (Attachments: # 1 Exhibits Part 4, # 2 Exhibits Part 5, # 3 Exhibits Part 6) (tdai,) (Entered: 08/06/2014)
08/06/2014	366	Exhibits by Robert F McDonnell (1) Admitted into Evidence at Trial on 8/5/14. (Attachments: # 1 Exhibits Part 7, # 2 Exhibits Part 8) (tdai,) (Entered: 08/06/2014)
08/06/2014	367	NOTICE OF HEARING as to Robert F McDonnell and Maureen G. McDonnell that a hearing will be held on Friday, August 15, 2014 at 12:15 p.m. in Courtroom 6100, to hear oral argument on a Motion to Vacate Sealing Order 351 filed by third-party Intervenor WP Company, LLC. (SEE NOTICE FOR DETAILS). (jtho,) (Entered: 08/06/2014)

08/06/2014		Set/Reset Hearings as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell: Jury Trial set for 8/7/2014 at 09:45 AM in Richmond Courtroom 7000 before District Judge James R. Spencer. (khan,) (Entered: 08/06/2014)
08/06/2014	369	Minute Entry for proceedings held before District Judge James R. Spencer:Jury Trial as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell held on 8/6/2014. Gove adduced evidence. Jury Trial continued to 8/7/14 at 9:45 a.m. Dfts remain on bond. (Court Reporter Jeff Kull, OCR, Tracy Stroh, Chandler & Halasz.)(khan,) (Entered: 08/06/2014)
08/06/2014	370	Motion to appear Pro Hac Vice by Daniel Rickert Koffmann and Certification of Local Counsel Heather H. Martin (Filing fee $ 75 receipt number 0422-4068085.) by Maureen G. McDonnell. (Martin, Heather) (Entered: 08/06/2014)
08/07/2014	371	Exhibits by Robert F McDonnell (1) Admitted into Evidence at Trial on 8/6/14. (Attachments: # 1 Exhibits Part 1) (tdai,) (Entered: 08/07/2014)
08/07/2014	372	Exhibits by Maureen G. McDonnell (2) Admitted into Evidence at Trial on 8/6/14. (Attachments: # 1 Exhibits Part 1, # 2 Exhibits Part 2, # 3 Exhibits Part 3, # 4 Exhibits Part 4, # 5 Exhibits Part 5) (tdai,) (Entered: 08/07/2014)
08/07/2014	373	Exhibits by USA Admitted into Evidence at Trial on 8/6/14. (Attachments: # 1 Exhibits Part 1, # 2 Exhibits Part 2, # 3 Exhibits Part 3) (tdai,) (Entered: 08/07/2014)
08/07/2014	374	Exhibits by USA Admitted into Evidence at Trial on 8/6/14. (Attachments: # 1 Exhibits Part 4, # 2 Exhibits Part 5) (tdai,) (Entered: 08/07/2014)
08/07/2014	375	ORDER granting 370 Motion for Pro hac vice. Appointed Daniel Rickert Koffmann as to Maureen G. McDonnell (2). Signed by District Judge James R. Spencer on 8/7/14. (tdai,) (Entered: 08/07/2014)
08/07/2014	376	TRANSCRIPT of Proceedings held on August 6, 2014,Jury Trial Volume VIII before Judge James R. Spencer. Court reporter/transcriber Jeff Kull, Telephone number 804-916-2258. NOTICE RE REDACTION OF TRANSCRIPTS:The parties have thirty(30) calendar days to file with the Court a Notice of Intent to Request Redaction of this transcript. If no such Notice is filed, the transcript will be made remotely electronically available to the public without redaction after 90 calendar days. The policy is located on our website at www.vaed.uscourts.gov Transcript may be viewed at the court public terminal or purchased through the court reporter/transcriber before the deadline for Release of Transcript Restriction. After that date it may be obtained through PACER Redaction Request due 9/8/2014. Redacted Transcript Deadline set for 10/7/2014. Release of Transcript Restriction set for 11/5/2014.(kull, jeff) (Entered: 08/07/2014)
08/07/2014		Set/Reset Hearings as to Robert F McDonnell and Maureen G. McDonnell: Jury Trial (Day 10) set for 8/8/2014 at 9:45 AM in Richmond Courtroom 7000 before District Judge James R. Spencer (rpiz) (Entered: 08/07/2014)
08/07/2014	378	RESPONSE in Opposition by USA as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell re 325 MOTION to Exclude Testimony of Robert Skunda and Amy Bridge (Cooke, Richard) (Entered: 08/07/2014)
08/07/2014	382	Minute Entry for proceedings held before District Judge James R. Spencer:Day 9

		Jury Trial as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell held on 8/7/2014. Govt. adduced evidence. Jury Trial continued to 8/8/14 at 9:45 a.m. Dfts remain on bond. (Court Reporter Jeff Kull, OCR, Tracy Stroh, Chandler & Halasz.)(khan,) (Entered: 08/08/2014)
08/08/2014	379	TRANSCRIPT of Proceedings held on August 7, 2014,Jury Trial Volume IX before Judge James R. Spencer. Court reporter/transcriber Jeff Kull, Telephone number 804-916-2258. NOTICE RE REDACTION OF TRANSCRIPTS:The parties have thirty(30) calendar days to file with the Court a Notice of Intent to Request Redaction of this transcript. If no such Notice is filed, the transcript will be made remotely electronically available to the public without redaction after 90 calendar days. The policy is located on our website at www.vaed.uscourts.gov Transcript may be viewed at the court public terminal or purchased through the court reporter/transcriber before the deadline for Release of Transcript Restriction. After that date it may be obtained through PACER Redaction Request due 9/8/2014. Redacted Transcript Deadline set for 10/8/2014. Release of Transcript Restriction set for 11/6/2014.(kull, jeff) (Entered: 08/08/2014)
08/08/2014	380	Exhibits by Robert F McDonnell (1) Admitted into Evidence at Trial on 8/7/14. (Attachments: # 1 Exhibits Part 1) (tdai,) (Entered: 08/08/2014)
08/08/2014	381	Exhibits by USA Admitted into Evidence at Trial on 8/7/14. (Attachments: # 1 Exhibits Part 1) (tdai,) (Entered: 08/08/2014)
08/08/2014		Set/Reset Hearings as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell: Jury Trial set for 8/11/2014 at 09:45 AM in Richmond Courtroom 7000 before District Judge James R. Spencer. (khan,) (Entered: 08/08/2014)
08/08/2014	383	Minute Entry for proceedings held before District Judge James R. Spencer:Day 10 Jury Trial as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell held on 8/8/2014. Govt adduced evidence. Jury Trial continued to 8/11/14 at 9:45 a.m. Dfts remain on bond. (Court Reporter Jeff Kull, OCR, Tracy Stroh, Chandler & Halasz.)(khan,) (Entered: 08/08/2014)
08/11/2014	384	TRANSCRIPT of Proceedings held on August 8, 2014,Jury Trial Volume X before Judge James R. Spencer. Court reporter/transcriber Jeff Kull, Telephone number 804-916-2258. NOTICE RE REDACTION OF TRANSCRIPTS:The parties have thirty(30) calendar days to file with the Court a Notice of Intent to Request Redaction of this transcript. If no such Notice is filed, the transcript will be made remotely electronically available to the public without redaction after 90 calendar days. The policy is located on our website at www.vaed.uscourts.gov Transcript may be viewed at the court public terminal or purchased through the court reporter/transcriber before the deadline for Release of Transcript Restriction. After that date it may be obtained through PACER Redaction Request due 9/10/2014. Redacted Transcript Deadline set for 10/14/2014. Release of Transcript Restriction set for 11/10/2014.(kull, jeff) (Entered: 08/11/2014)
08/11/2014	385	Exhibits by Maureen G. McDonnell (2) Admitted into Evidence at Trial on 8/8/14. (Attachments: # 1 Exhibits Part 1, # 2 Exhibits Part 2, # 3 Exhibits Part 3) (tdai,) (Entered: 08/11/2014)
08/11/2014	386	REPLY TO RESPONSE to by Robert F McDonnell re 325 MOTION to Exclude

		Testimony of Robert Skunda and Amy Bridge (Berry, Jonathan) (Entered: 08/11/2014)
08/11/2014	387	Exhibits by USA Admitted into Evidence at Trial on 8/8/14. (Attachments: # 1 Exhibits Part 1) (tdai,) (Entered: 08/11/2014)
08/11/2014		Set/Reset Hearings as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell: Jury Trial set for 8/12/2014 at 09:45 AM in Richmond Courtroom 7000 before District Judge James R. Spencer. (khan,) (Entered: 08/11/2014)
08/11/2014	392	Minute Entry for proceedings held before District Judge James R. Spencer: Day 11 Jury Trial as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell held on 8/11/2014. Govt adduced evidence. Jury Trial continued 8/12/14 at 9:45 a.m. Dfts continued on bond. (Court Reporter Jeff Kull, OCR, Tracy Stroh, Chandler & Halasz.)(khan,) (Entered: 08/12/2014)
08/11/2014	393	Minute Entry for proceedings held before District Judge James R. Spencer:Motion Hearing as to Robert F McDonnell held on 8/11/2014 re 325 MOTION to Exclude Testimony of Robert Skunda and Amy Bridge filed by Robert F McDonnell. The motion as to Skunda is GRANTED and the motion as to Bridges is DENIED. (Court Reporter Jeff Kull, OCR.)(khan,) (Entered: 08/12/2014)
08/12/2014	388	TRANSCRIPT of Proceedings held on August 11, 2014, Jury Trial Volume XI before Judge James R. Spencer. Court reporter/transcriber Jeff Kull, Telephone number 804-916-2258. NOTICE RE REDACTION OF TRANSCRIPTS:The parties have thirty(30) calendar days to file with the Court a Notice of Intent to Request Redaction of this transcript. If no such Notice is filed, the transcript will be made remotely electronically available to the public without redaction after 90 calendar days. The policy is located on our website at www.vaed.uscourts.gov Transcript may be viewed at the court public terminal or purchased through the court reporter/transcriber before the deadline for Release of Transcript Restriction. After that date it may be obtained through PACER Redaction Request due 9/11/2014. Redacted Transcript Deadline set for 10/14/2014. Release of Transcript Restriction set for 11/10/2014.(kull, jeff) (Entered: 08/12/2014)
08/12/2014	389	ORDER that the jurors in the above entitled case be kept together in the custody of the U.S. Marshal, who shall furnish them LUNCH, Friday, August 8, 2014, submitting the bill to the Clerk of this Court for payment. Signed by District Judge James R. Spencer on 8/12/14. (khan,) (Entered: 08/12/2014)
08/12/2014	390	Exhibits by Maureen G. McDonnell (2) Admitted into Evidence at Trial on 8/11/14. (Attachments: # 1 Exhibits Part 1, # 2 Exhibits Part 2) (tdai,) (Entered: 08/12/2014)
08/12/2014	391	Exhibits by USA Admitted into Evidence at Trial on 8/11/14. (Attachments: # 1 Exhibits Part 1) (tdai,) (Entered: 08/12/2014)
08/12/2014	394	Exhibits by Robert F McDonnell (1) Admitted into Evidence at Trial on 8/11/14. (Attachments: # 1 Exhibits Part 1) (tdai,) (Entered: 08/12/2014)
08/12/2014		Set/Reset Hearings as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell: Jury Trial set for 8/13/2014 at 09:45 AM in Richmond Courtroom 7000 before District Judge James R. Spencer. (khan,) (Entered: 08/12/2014)

08/12/2014	395	RESPONSE in Opposition by USA as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell re 351 MOTION for Leave to Intervene and to Vacate Sealing Order (Cooke, Richard) Modified text on 8/13/2014 (tdai,). (Entered: 08/12/2014)
08/12/2014	396	MOTION to Seal Documents Relating to Under-Seal Proceeding by Robert F McDonnell. (Attachments: # 1 Proposed Order)(Berry, Jonathan) (Entered: 08/12/2014)
08/12/2014	397	Memorandum in Support by Robert F McDonnell re 396 MOTION to Seal Documents Relating to Under-Seal Proceeding (Berry, Jonathan) (Entered: 08/12/2014)
08/12/2014	407	Minute Entry for proceedings held before District Judge James R. Spencer:Day 12 Jury Trial as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell held on 8/12/2014. Govt adduced evidence. Jury Trial continued to 8/13/14 at 9:45 a.m.Dfts continued on bond. (Court Reporter Jeff Jull, OCR, Tracy Stroh, Chandler & Halasz.)(khan,) (Entered: 08/14/2014)
08/13/2014	398	TRANSCRIPT of Proceedings held on August 12, 2014, Jury Trial Volume XII before Judge James R. Spencer. Court reporter/transcriber Jeff Kull, Telephone number 804-916-2258. NOTICE RE REDACTION OF TRANSCRIPTS:The parties have thirty(30) calendar days to file with the Court a Notice of Intent to Request Redaction of this transcript. If no such Notice is filed, the transcript will be made remotely electronically available to the public without redaction after 90 calendar days. The policy is located on our website at www.vaed.uscourts.gov Transcript may be viewed at the court public terminal or purchased through the court reporter/transcriber before the deadline for Release of Transcript Restriction. After that date it may be obtained through PACER Redaction Request due 9/12/2014. Redacted Transcript Deadline set for 10/14/2014. Release of Transcript Restriction set for 11/12/2014.(kull, jeff) (Entered: 08/13/2014)
08/13/2014	399	Exhibits by Robert F McDonnell (1) Admitted into Evidence at Trial on 8/12/14. (Attachments: # 1 Exhibits Part 1) (tdai,) (Entered: 08/13/2014)
08/13/2014	400	Exhibits by Maureen G. McDonnell (2) Admitted into Evidence at Trial on 8/12/14. (Attachments: # 1 Exhibits Part 1, # 2 Exhibits Part 2) (tdai,) (Entered: 08/13/2014)
08/13/2014	401	Exhibits by USA Admitted into Evidence at Trial on 8/12/14. (Attachments: # 1 Exhibits Part 1) (tdai,) (Entered: 08/13/2014)
08/13/2014	402	ORDER granting in part and denying in part 325 Motion to Exclude Testimony of Robert Skunda and Amy Bridge as to Robert F McDonnell (1). For the reasons stated from the bench, the Motion is GRANTED IN PART, with respect to the testimony of Robert Skunda, and DENIED IN PART, with respect to the testimony of Amy Bridge. Signed by District Judge James R. Spencer on 8/12/14. (tdai,) (Entered: 08/13/2014)
08/13/2014		Set/Reset Hearings as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell: Jury Trial set for 8/14/2014 at 09:45 AM in Richmond Courtroom 7000 before District Judge James R. Spencer. (khan,) (Entered: 08/13/2014)
08/13/2014	420	Minute Entry for proceedings held before District Judge James R. Spencer:Day 13

		Jury Trial as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell held on 8/13/2014. Govt. adduced evidence. Jury Trial continued to 8/14/14 at 9:45 a.m. Dfts remain on bond. (Court Reporter Jeff Kull, OCR, Tracy Stroh, Chandler & Halasz.)(khan,) (Entered: 08/15/2014)
08/14/2014	403	MOTION to Seal Documents Relating to Under-Seal Proceeding by Maureen G. McDonnell. (Attachments: # 1 Proposed Order)(Martin, Heather) (Entered: 08/14/2014)
08/14/2014	404	Memorandum in Support by Maureen G. McDonnell re 403 MOTION to Seal Documents Relating to Under-Seal Proceeding (Martin, Heather) (Entered: 08/14/2014)
08/14/2014	405	TRANSCRIPT of Proceedings held on August 13, 2014,Jury Trial Volume XIII before Judge James R. Spencer. Court reporter/transcriber Jeff Kull, Telephone number 804-916-2258. NOTICE RE REDACTION OF TRANSCRIPTS:The parties have thirty(30) calendar days to file with the Court a Notice of Intent to Request Redaction of this transcript. If no such Notice is filed, the transcript will be made remotely electronically available to the public without redaction after 90 calendar days. The policy is located on our website at www.vaed.uscourts.gov Transcript may be viewed at the court public terminal or purchased through the court reporter/transcriber before the deadline for Release of Transcript Restriction. After that date it may be obtained through PACER Redaction Request due 9/15/2014. Redacted Transcript Deadline set for 10/14/2014. Release of Transcript Restriction set for 11/12/2014.(kull, jeff) (Entered: 08/14/2014)
08/14/2014	406	Exhibits by USA Admitted into Evidence at Trial on 8/13/14. (Attachments: # 1 Exhibits Part 1, # 2 Exhibits Part 2) (tdai,) (Entered: 08/14/2014)
08/14/2014		Set/Reset Hearings as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell: Jury Trial set for 8/15/2014 at 10:00 AM in Richmond Courtroom 7000 before District Judge James R. Spencer. (khan,) (Entered: 08/14/2014)
08/14/2014	408	First MOTION for Acquittal by Robert F McDonnell. (Attachments: # 1 Proposed Order)(Berry, Jonathan) (Entered: 08/14/2014)
08/14/2014	409	Memorandum in Support by Robert F McDonnell re 408 First MOTION for Acquittal (Berry, Jonathan) (Entered: 08/14/2014)
08/14/2014	421	Minute Entry for proceedings held before District Judge James R. Spencer:Day 14 Jury Trial as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell held on 8/14/2014. Govt adduced evidence. Govt. rested. Jury Trial continued to 8/15/14 at 10:00 a.m. Dfts remain on bond. (Court Reporter Jeff Kull, OCR.)(khan,) (Entered: 08/15/2014)
08/14/2014	424	ORDER that the jurors in the above case be kept together in the custody of the U.S. Marshal, who shall furnish them Lunch on 8/14/14, submitting the bill to the Clerk of this Court for the payment.. Signed by District Judge James R. Spencer on 8/14/14. (khan,) (Entered: 08/18/2014)
08/15/2014	410	First MOTION for Acquittal by Maureen G. McDonnell. (Attachments: # 1 Proposed Order)(Martin, Heather) (Entered: 08/15/2014)
08/15/2014	411	MOTION to Seal Response and Memorandum in Support by USA as to Robert F

		McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell. (Attachments: # 1 Proposed Order)(Aber, Jessica) (Entered: 08/15/2014)
08/15/2014	412	TRANSCRIPT of Proceedings held on August 14, 2014,Jury Trial Volume XIV before Judge James R. Spencer. Court reporter/transcriber Jeff Kull, Telephone number 804-916-2258. NOTICE RE REDACTION OF TRANSCRIPTS:The parties have thirty(30) calendar days to file with the Court a Notice of Intent to Request Redaction of this transcript. If no such Notice is filed, the transcript will be made remotely electronically available to the public without redaction after 90 calendar days. The policy is located on our website at www.vaed.uscourts.gov Transcript may be viewed at the court public terminal or purchased through the court reporter/transcriber before the deadline for Release of Transcript Restriction. After that date it may be obtained through PACER Redaction Request due 9/15/2014. Redacted Transcript Deadline set for 10/15/2014. Release of Transcript Restriction set for 11/13/2014.(kull, jeff) (Entered: 08/15/2014)
08/15/2014	413	Memorandum in Support by Maureen G. McDonnell re 410 First MOTION for Acquittal (Martin, Heather) (Entered: 08/15/2014)
08/15/2014	414	MOTION for Leave to Intervene by BH Media Group Holdings, Inc. as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell. (Attachments: # 1 Cover Letter)(tdai,) (Entered: 08/15/2014)
08/15/2014	415	MOTION to Vacate Sealing Order by BH Media Group Holdings, Inc. as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell. (Attachments: # 1 Cover Letter) (tdai,) (Entered: 08/15/2014)
08/15/2014	416	Exhibits by Robert F McDonnell (1) Admitted into Evidence at Trial on 8/13/14. (Attachments: # 1 Exhibits Part 1, # 2 Exhibits Part 2, # 3 Exhibits Part 3) (tdai,) (Attachments 1, 2, and 3 replaced on 8/21/2014 - CORRECTED REDACTION) (tdai,). (Entered: 08/15/2014)
08/15/2014	417	Exhibits by Maureen G. McDonnell (2) Admitted into Evidence at Trial on 8/14/14. (Attachments: # 1 Exhibits Part 1, # 2 Exhibits Part 2, # 3 Exhibits Part 3) (tdai,) (Entered: 08/15/2014)
08/15/2014	418	Exhibits by USA Admitted into Evidence at Trial on 8/14/14. (Attachments: # 1 Exhibits Part 1, # 2 Exhibits Part 2) (tdai,) (Entered: 08/15/2014)
08/15/2014		Set/Reset Hearings as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell: Jury Trial set for 8/18/2014 at 09:45 AM in Richmond Courtroom 7000 before District Judge James R. Spencer. (khan,) (Entered: 08/15/2014)
08/15/2014	422	Minute Entry for proceedings held before District Judge James R. Spencer:Day 15 Jury Trial as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell held on 8/15/2014. Defendants' Rule 29 Motions - DENIED. Jury Trial continued to 8/18/14 at 9:45 a.m. Dfts remain on bond. (Court Reporter Jeff Kull, OCR, Tracy Stroh, Chandler & Halasz.)(khan,) (Entered: 08/15/2014)
08/15/2014	446	Minute Entry for proceedings held before District Judge James R. Spencer:Motion Hearing as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell held on 8/15/2014 re 351 MOTION for Leave to File filed by WP Company LLC, 415 MOTION to Vacate Sealing Order filed by BH Media Group Holdings, Inc. Times Dispatch's

		Motion for Leave to Intervene GRANTED. Motion to Vacate -- Taken under advisement. (Court Reporter Jeff Kull, OCR.)(khan,) (Entered: 08/22/2014)
08/18/2014	425	TRANSCRIPT of Proceedings held on August 15, 2014, Jury Trial Volume XV before Judge James R. Spencer. Court reporter/transcriber Jeff Kull, Telephone number 804-916-2258. NOTICE RE REDACTION OF TRANSCRIPTS:The parties have thirty(30) calendar days to file with the Court a Notice of Intent to Request Redaction of this transcript. If no such Notice is filed, the transcript will be made remotely electronically available to the public without redaction after 90 calendar days. The policy is located on our website at www.vaed.uscourts.gov Transcript may be viewed at the court public terminal or purchased through the court reporter/transcriber before the deadline for Release of Transcript Restriction. After that date it may be obtained through PACER Redaction Request due 9/17/2014. Redacted Transcript Deadline set for 10/20/2014. Release of Transcript Restriction set for 11/17/2014.(kull, jeff) (Entered: 08/18/2014)
08/18/2014	426	ORDER granting 414 Motion to Intervene by third-party movant BH Media Holdings Inc. as to Robert F McDonnell (1) and Maureen G. McDonnell (2). Signed by District Judge James R. Spencer on 8/18/14. (jtho,) (Entered: 08/18/2014)
08/18/2014		Set/Reset Hearings as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell: Jury Trial set for 8/19/2014 at 09:45 AM in Richmond Courtroom 7000 before District Judge James R. Spencer. (khan,) (Entered: 08/18/2014)
08/18/2014	434	Minute Entry for proceedings held before District Judge James R. Spencer: Day 16Jury Trial as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell held on 8/18/2014. Dft adduced evidence. Jury Trial continued to 8/19/14 at 9:45 a.m. Dfts remain on bond. (Court Reporter Jeff Kull, OCR, Tracy Stroh, Chandler & Halasz.)(khan,) (Entered: 08/20/2014)
08/19/2014	427	ORDER denying 408 First Motion for Acquittal as to Robert F McDonnell (1); denying 410 First Motion for Acquittal as to Maureen G. McDonnell (2). Upon due consideration and for reasons that will be set out more fully in a forthcoming memorandum opinion, the Motions are DENIED. Signed by District Judge James R. Spencer on 8/18/14. (tdai,) (Entered: 08/19/2014)
08/19/2014	428	TRANSCRIPT of Proceedings held on August 18, 2014,Jury Trial Volume XVI before Judge James R. Spencer. Court reporter/transcriber Jeff Kull, Telephone number 804-916-2258. NOTICE RE REDACTION OF TRANSCRIPTS:The parties have thirty(30) calendar days to file with the Court a Notice of Intent to Request Redaction of this transcript. If no such Notice is filed, the transcript will be made remotely electronically available to the public without redaction after 90 calendar days. The policy is located on our website at www.vaed.uscourts.gov Transcript may be viewed at the court public terminal or purchased through the court reporter/transcriber before the deadline for Release of Transcript Restriction. After that date it may be obtained through PACER Redaction Request due 9/18/2014. Redacted Transcript Deadline set for 10/20/2014. Release of Transcript Restriction set for 11/17/2014.(kull, jeff) (Entered: 08/19/2014)
08/19/2014	429	Exhibits by Robert F McDonnell (1) Admitted into Evidence at Trial on 8/18/14.

		(Attachments: # 1 Exhibits Part 1) (tdai,) (Entered: 08/19/2014)
08/19/2014	430	Exhibits by USA Admitted into Evidence at Trial on 8/18/14. (Attachments: # 1 Exhibits Part 1) (tdai,) (Entered: 08/19/2014)
08/19/2014	435	Minute Entry for proceedings held before District Judge James R. Spencer: Day 17Jury Trial as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell held on 8/19/2014 Dft adduced evidence. Jury Trial continued to 8/20/14 at 9:45 a.m. Dfts remain on bond. (Court Reporter Jeff Kull, OCR, Tracy Stroh, Chandler & Halasz.)(khan,) (Entered: 08/20/2014)
08/20/2014	431	TRANSCRIPT of Proceedings held on August 19, 2014, Jury Trial Volume XVII before Judge James R. Spencer. Court reporter/transcriber Jeff Kull, Telephone number 804-916-2258. NOTICE RE REDACTION OF TRANSCRIPTS:The parties have thirty(30) calendar days to file with the Court a Notice of Intent to Request Redaction of this transcript. If no such Notice is filed, the transcript will be made remotely electronically available to the public without redaction after 90 calendar days. The policy is located on our website at www.vaed.uscourts.gov Transcript may be viewed at the court public terminal or purchased through the court reporter/transcriber before the deadline for Release of Transcript Restriction. After that date it may be obtained through PACER Redaction Request due 9/19/2014. Redacted Transcript Deadline set for 10/20/2014. Release of Transcript Restriction set for 11/18/2014.(kull, jeff) (Entered: 08/20/2014)
08/20/2014	432	Exhibits by Robert F McDonnell (1) Admitted into Evidence at Trial on 8/19/14. (Attachments: # 1 Exhibits Part 1, # 2 Exhibits Part 2) (tdai,) (Entered: 08/20/2014)
08/20/2014	433	Exhibits by USA Admitted into Evidence at Trial on 8/19/14. (Attachments: # 1 Exhibits Part 1) (tdai,) (Entered: 08/20/2014)
08/20/2014		Set/Reset Hearings as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell: Jury Trial set for 8/21/2014 at 09:45 AM in Richmond Courtroom 7000 before District Judge James R. Spencer. (khan,) (Entered: 08/20/2014)
08/20/2014	447	Minute Entry for proceedings held before District Judge James R. Spencer: Day 18Jury Trial as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell held on 8/20/2014. Dft adduced evidence. Jury Trial continued to 8/21/14 at 9:45 a.m. Dfts remain on bond. (Court Reporter Jeff Kull, OCR, Tracy Stroh, Chandler & Halasz.)(khan,) (Entered: 08/22/2014)
08/21/2014	436	TRANSCRIPT of Proceedings held on August 20, 2014, Jury Trial Volume XVIII before Judge James R. Spencer. Court reporter/transcriber Jeff Kull, Telephone number 804-916-2258. NOTICE RE REDACTION OF TRANSCRIPTS:The parties have thirty(30) calendar days to file with the Court a Notice of Intent to Request Redaction of this transcript. If no such Notice is filed, the transcript will be made remotely electronically available to the public without redaction after 90 calendar days. The policy is located on our website at www.vaed.uscourts.gov Transcript may be viewed at the court public terminal or purchased through the court reporter/transcriber before the deadline for Release of Transcript Restriction. After that date it may be obtained through PACER Redaction Request due 9/22/2014. Redacted

		Transcript Deadline set for 10/21/2014. Release of Transcript Restriction set for 11/19/2014.(kull, jeff) (Entered: 08/21/2014)
08/21/2014	437	Exhibits by Robert F McDonnell (1) Admitted into Evidence at Trial on 8/20/14. (Attachments: # 1 Exhibits Part 1, # 2 Exhibits Part 2, # 3 Exhibits Part 3, # 4 Exhibits Part 4) (tdai,) (Entered: 08/21/2014)
08/21/2014	438	Exhibits by Maureen G. McDonnell (2) Admitted into Evidence at Trial on 8/20/14. (Attachments: # 1 Exhibits Part 1) (tdai,) (Entered: 08/21/2014)
08/21/2014	439	Exhibits by USA Admitted into Evidence at Trial on 8/20/14. (Attachments: # 1 Exhibits Part 1, # 2 Exhibits Part 2) (tdai,) (Entered: 08/21/2014)
08/21/2014	440	Video Exhibits by Robert F McDonnell (1) Admitted into Evidence at Trial on 8/20/14. (CD placed in brown expandable file located in Clerk's Office). (Limited CDs are available in Clerk's Office for check out). (tdai,) (tdai,). (Entered: 08/21/2014)
08/21/2014		Set/Reset Hearings as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell: Jury Trial set for 8/22/2014 at 09:45 AM in Richmond Courtroom 7000 before District Judge James R. Spencer. (khan,) (Entered: 08/21/2014)
08/21/2014	448	Minute Entry for proceedings held before District Judge James R. Spencer: Day 19Jury Trial as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell held on 8/21/2014. Dft adduced evidence. Jury Trial continued 8/22/14 at 9:45 a.m. Dfts remain on bond. (Court Reporter Jeff Kull, OCR, Tracy Stroh, Chandler & Halasz.)(khan,) (Entered: 08/22/2014)
08/22/2014	441	MOTION to Exclude Certain Defense Exhibits pursuant to Prior Court Order Excluding Irrelevant and Misleading Evidence of Materiality of False Statements Charged in Counts 12 & 13 by USA as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell. (Faulconer, Ryan) (Entered: 08/22/2014)
08/22/2014	442	Memorandum by USA as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell re 441 MOTION to Exclude Certain Defense Exhibits pursuant to Prior Court Order Excluding Irrelevant and Misleading Evidence of Materiality of False Statements Charged in Counts 12 & 13 (Faulconer, Ryan) (Entered: 08/22/2014)
08/22/2014	443	TRANSCRIPT of Proceedings held on August 21, 2014, Jury Trial Volume XIX before Judge James R. Spencer. Court reporter/transcriber Jeff Kull, Telephone number 804-916-2258. NOTICE RE REDACTION OF TRANSCRIPTS:The parties have thirty(30) calendar days to file with the Court a Notice of Intent to Request Redaction of this transcript. If no such Notice is filed, the transcript will be made remotely electronically available to the public without redaction after 90 calendar days. The policy is located on our website at www.vaed.uscourts.gov Transcript may be viewed at the court public terminal or purchased through the court reporter/transcriber before the deadline for Release of Transcript Restriction. After that date it may be obtained through PACER Redaction Request due 9/22/2014. Redacted Transcript Deadline set for 10/22/2014. Release of Transcript Restriction set for 11/20/2014.(kull, jeff) (Entered: 08/22/2014)
08/22/2014	444	RESPONSE in Opposition by Robert F McDonnell re 441 MOTION to Exclude

		Certain Defense Exhibits pursuant to Prior Court Order Excluding Irrelevant and Misleading Evidence of Materiality of False Statements Charged in Counts 12 & 13 (Berry, Jonathan) (Entered: 08/22/2014)
08/22/2014	445	Exhibits by Robert F McDonnell (1) Admitted into Evidence at Trial on 8/21/14. (Attachments: # 1 Exhibits Part 1, # 2 Exhibits Part 2, # 3 Exhibits Part 3, # 4 Exhibits Part 4, # 5 Exhibits Part 5, # 6 Exhibits Part 6, # 7 Exhibits Part 7, # 8 Exhibits Part 8, # 9 Exhibits Part 9) (tdai,) (Entered: 08/22/2014)
08/22/2014		Set/Reset Hearings as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell: Jury Trial set for 8/25/2014 at 09:45 AM in Richmond Courtroom 7000 before District Judge James R. Spencer. (khan,) (Entered: 08/22/2014)
08/22/2014	454	Minute Entry for proceedings held before District Judge James R. Spencer: Day 20Jury Trial as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell held on 8/22/2014. Dfts adduced evidence. Jury Trial continued to 8/25/14 at 9:45 a.m. Dfts remain on bond. (Court Reporter Jeff Kull, OCR, Tracy Stroh, Chandler & Halasz.)(khan,) (Entered: 08/26/2014)
08/24/2014	449	MOTION to Exclude Evidence of Gift Non-Disclosure as Irrelevant and Prejudicial by Robert F McDonnell. (Berry, Jonathan) (Entered: 08/24/2014)
08/24/2014	450	Memorandum in Support by Robert F McDonnell re 449 MOTION to Exclude Evidence of Gift Non-Disclosure as Irrelevant and Prejudicial (Berry, Jonathan) (Entered: 08/24/2014)
08/25/2014	451	TRANSCRIPT of Proceedings held on August 22, 2014, Jury Trial Volume XX before Judge James R. Spencer. Court reporter/transcriber Jeff Kull, Telephone number 804-916-2258. NOTICE RE REDACTION OF TRANSCRIPTS:The parties have thirty(30) calendar days to file with the Court a Notice of Intent to Request Redaction of this transcript. If no such Notice is filed, the transcript will be made remotely electronically available to the public without redaction after 90 calendar days. The policy is located on our website at www.vaed.uscourts.gov Transcript may be viewed at the court public terminal or purchased through the court reporter/transcriber before the deadline for Release of Transcript Restriction. After that date it may be obtained through PACER Redaction Request due 9/24/2014. Redacted Transcript Deadline set for 10/27/2014. Release of Transcript Restriction set for 11/24/2014.(kull, jeff) (Entered: 08/25/2014)
08/25/2014	452	Exhibits by Robert F McDonnell (1) Admitted into Evidence at Trial on 8/22/14. (Attachments: # 1 Exhibits Part 1) (tdai,) (Entered: 08/25/2014)
08/25/2014		Set/Reset Hearings as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell: Jury Trial set for 8/26/2014 at 09:45 AM in Richmond Courtroom 7000 before District Judge James R. Spencer. (khan,) (Entered: 08/25/2014)
08/25/2014	471	Minute Entry for proceedings held before District Judge James R. Spencer: Day 21Jury Trial as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell held on 8/25/2014. Dfts adduced evidence. Jury Trial continued to 8/26/14 at 9:45 a.m. Dfts remain on bond. (Court Reporter Jeff Kull, OCR.)(khan,) (Entered: 08/28/2014)
08/26/2014	453	ORDER that for good cause appearing to the Court, it is ORDERED that the jurors in the above entitled case be kept together in the custody of the U.S. Marshal, who shall furnish them LUNCH on 8/22/14, submitting the bill to the Clerk of this Court for payment.. Signed by District Judge James R. Spencer on 8/26/14. (khan,) (Entered: 08/26/2014)

08/26/2014	455	Exhibits by USA Admitted into Evidence at Trial on 8/25/14. (Attachments: # 1 Exhibits Part 1, # 2 Exhibits Part 2) (tdai,) (Entered: 08/26/2014)
08/26/2014	456	Exhibits by Maureen G. McDonnell (2) Admitted into Evidence at Trial on 8/25/14. (Attachments: # 1 Exhibits Part 1, # 2 Exhibits Part 2, # 3 Exhibits Part 3, # 4 Exhibits Part 4, # 5 Exhibits Part 5, # 6 Exhibits Part 6, # 7 Exhibits Part 7, # 8 Exhibits Part 8, # 9 Exhibits Part 9) (tdai,) (Entered: 08/26/2014)
08/26/2014	457	TRANSCRIPT of Proceedings held on August 25, 2014, Jury Trial Volume XXI before Judge James R. Spencer. Court reporter/transcriber Jeff Kull, Telephone number 804-916-2258. NOTICE RE REDACTION OF TRANSCRIPTS:The parties have thirty(30) calendar days to file with the Court a Notice of Intent to Request Redaction of this transcript. If no such Notice is filed, the transcript will be made remotely electronically available to the public without redaction after 90 calendar days. The policy is located on our website at www.vaed.uscourts.gov Transcript may be viewed at the court public terminal or purchased through the court reporter/transcriber before the deadline for Release of Transcript Restriction. After that date it may be obtained through PACER Redaction Request due 9/25/2014. Redacted Transcript Deadline set for 10/27/2014. Release of Transcript Restriction set for 11/24/2014.(kull, jeff) (Entered: 08/26/2014)
08/26/2014	458	ORDER denying 307 Motion for Issuance of Subpoenas as to Robert F McDonnell (1); denying 309 Motion for Issuance of Subpoenas as to Maureen G. McDonnell (2). As to Jonnie Williams, Sr., the Motions are DENIED as overbroad, overly burdensome, and moot. It is so ORDERED. Signed by District Judge James R. Spencer on 8/26/14. (tdai,) (Entered: 08/26/2014)
08/26/2014		Set/Reset Hearings as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell: Jury Trial set for 8/27/2014 at 09:45 AM in Richmond Courtroom 7000 before District Judge James R. Spencer. (khan,) (Entered: 08/26/2014)
08/26/2014	472	Minute Entry for proceedings held before District Judge James R. Spencer: Day 22Jury Trial as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell held on 8/26/2014. Dfts adduced evidence. Jury Trial continued to 8/27/14 at 9:45 a.m. Dfts remain on bond. (Court Reporter Jeff Kull, OCR.)(khan) (Entered: 08/28/2014)
08/27/2014	459	MOTION to Exclude Government Summary Witness in Rebuttal by Robert F McDonnell. (Attachments: # 1 Proposed Order)(Taylor, Timothy) (Entered: 08/27/2014)
08/27/2014	460	Memorandum in Support by Robert F McDonnell re 459 MOTION to Exclude Government Summary Witness in Rebuttal (Taylor, Timothy) (Entered: 08/27/2014)
08/27/2014	461	TRANSCRIPT of Proceedings held on August 26, 2014, Jury Trial Volume XXII before Judge James R. Spencer. Court reporter/transcriber Jeff Kull, Telephone number 804-916-2258. NOTICE RE REDACTION OF TRANSCRIPTS:The

		parties have thirty(30) calendar days to file with the Court a Notice of Intent to Request Redaction of this transcript. If no such Notice is filed, the transcript will be made remotely electronically available to the public without redaction after 90 calendar days. The policy is located on our website at www.vaed.uscourts.gov Transcript may be viewed at the court public terminal or purchased through the court reporter/transcriber before the deadline for Release of Transcript Restriction. After that date it may be obtained through PACER Redaction Request due 9/26/2014. Redacted Transcript Deadline set for 10/27/2014. Release of Transcript Restriction set for 11/25/2014.(kull, jeff) (Entered: 08/27/2014)
08/27/2014	462	Exhibits by Robert F McDonnell (1) Admitted into Evidence at Trial on 8/26/14. (Attachments: # 1 Exhibits Part 1, # 2 Exhibits Part 2, # 3 Exhibits Part 3, # 4 Exhibits Part 4, # 5 Exhibits Part 5, # 6 Exhibits Part 6, # 7 Exhibits Part 7, # 8 Exhibits Part 8, # 9 Exhibits Part 9, # 10 Exhibits Part 10, # 11 Exhibits Part 11, # 12 Exhibits Part 12) (tdai,) (Entered: 08/27/2014)
08/27/2014	463	Exhibits by USA Admitted into Evidence at Trial on 8/26/14. (Attachments: # 1 Exhibits Part 1) (tdai,) (Entered: 08/27/2014)
08/27/2014	464	Video Exhibits by USA Admitted into Evidence at Trial on 8/26/14. (CD placed in brown expandable file located in Clerk's Office). (Limited CDs are available in Clerk's Office for check out). (tdai,) (Entered: 08/27/2014)
08/27/2014	465	ORDER granting 441 Motion to Exclude Certain Defense Exhibits pursuant to Prior Court Order Excluding Irrelevant and Misleading Evidence of Materiality of False Statements Charged in Counts 12 & 13 by USA as to Robert F McDonnell (1), Maureen G. McDonnell (2). Signed by District Judge James R. Spencer on 8/27/14. (tdai,) (Entered: 08/27/2014)
08/27/2014		Set/Reset Hearings as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell: Jury Trial set for 8/28/2014 at 09:45 AM in Richmond Courtroom 7000 before District Judge James R. Spencer. (khan,) (Entered: 08/27/2014)
08/27/2014	479	Minute Entry for proceedings held before District Judge James R. Spencer: Day 23Jury Trial as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell held on 8/27/2014. M. McDonnell adduced evidence. Dfts rested. Rebuttal evidence adduced. Jury Trial continued 8/28/14 at 9:45 a.m. Dfts remain on bond. (Court Reporter Jeff Kull, OCR, Tracy Stroh, Chandler & Halasz.)(khan,) (khan,). (Entered: 09/02/2014)
08/28/2014	466	TRANSCRIPT of Proceedings held on August 27, 2014, Jury Trial Volume XXIII before Judge James R. Spencer. Court reporter/transcriber Jeff Kull, Telephone number 804-916-2258. NOTICE RE REDACTION OF TRANSCRIPTS:The parties have thirty(30) calendar days to file with the Court a Notice of Intent to Request Redaction of this transcript. If no such Notice is filed, the transcript will be made remotely electronically available to the public without redaction after 90 calendar days. The policy is located on our website at www.vaed.uscourts.gov Transcript may be viewed at the court public terminal or purchased through the court reporter/transcriber before the deadline for Release of Transcript Restriction. After that date it may be obtained through PACER Redaction Request due 9/29/2014. Redacted

		Transcript Deadline set for 10/28/2014. Release of Transcript Restriction set for 11/26/2014.(kull, jeff) (Entered: 08/28/2014)
08/28/2014	467	NOTICE of Offer of Proof Regarding Excluded Defense Exhibits by Robert F McDonnell (Attachments: # 1 Appendix)(Berry, Jonathan) Modified text on 8/29/2014 (tdai,). (Entered: 08/28/2014)
08/28/2014	468	NOTICE of Offer of Proof Regarding Expert Tesiimony by Robert F McDonnell (Berry, Jonathan) Modified text on 8/29/2014 (tdai,). (Entered: 08/28/2014)
08/28/2014	469	Exhibits by USA Admitted into Evidence at Trial on 8/27/14. (Attachments: # 1 Exhibits Part 1, # 2 Exhibits Part 2) (tdai,) (Entered: 08/28/2014)
08/28/2014	470	Exhibits by Maureen G. McDonnell (2) Admitted into Evidence at Trial on 8/27/14. (Attachments: # 1 Exhibits Part 1) (tdai,) (Entered: 08/28/2014)
08/28/2014	473	Proposed Supplemental Jury Instructions by Robert F McDonnell (Berry, Jonathan) Modified to text on 8/29/2014 (tdai,). (Entered: 08/28/2014)
08/28/2014	480	Minute Entry for proceedings held before District Judge James R. Spencer: Day 24Jury Trial as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell held on 8/28/2014. Rebuttal evidence continued. Govt. rested. Jury released to return 8/29/14 at 9:30 a.m. R. McDonnell's Motion for Judgment of Acquittal and all motions renewed and DENIED. M. McDonnell's motions renewed and DENIED. Jury instructions given to the parties for review -- parties to return at 3:00 p.m. for jury instruction conference. Jury trial continued to 8/29/14 at 9:30 a.m. Dfts remain on bond. (Court Reporter Jeff Kull, OCR, Tracy Stroh, Chandler & Halasz.)(khan,) (Entered: 09/02/2014)
08/29/2014	474	Exhibits by USA Admitted into Evidence at Trial on 8/28/14. (Attachments: # 1 Exhibits Part 1) (tdai,) (Entered: 08/29/2014)
08/29/2014	475	TRANSCRIPT of Proceedings held on August 28, 2014, Jury Trial Volume XXIV before Judge James R. Spencer. Court reporter/transcriber Jeff Kull, Telephone number 804-916-2258. NOTICE RE REDACTION OF TRANSCRIPTS:The parties have thirty(30) calendar days to file with the Court a Notice of Intent to Request Redaction of this transcript. If no such Notice is filed, the transcript will be made remotely electronically available to the public without redaction after 90 calendar days. The policy is located on our website at www.vaed.uscourts.gov Transcript may be viewed at the court public terminal or purchased through the court reporter/transcriber before the deadline for Release of Transcript Restriction. After that date it may be obtained through PACER Redaction Request due 9/29/2014. Redacted Transcript Deadline set for 10/29/2014. Release of Transcript Restriction set for 11/28/2014.(kull, jeff) (Entered: 08/29/2014)
08/29/2014	476	MOTION to Withdraw as Attorney for Robert F McDonnell by Timothy J. Taylor. by Robert F McDonnell. (Taylor, Timothy) (Entered: 08/29/2014)
08/29/2014		Set/Reset Hearings as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell: Jury Trial set for 9/2/2014 at 09:30 AM in Richmond Courtroom 7000 before District Judge James R. Spencer. (khan,) (Entered: 08/29/2014)
08/29/2014	481	Minute Entry for proceedings held before District Judge James R. Spencer: Day 25 Jury Trial as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell held on

		8/29/2014. Arguments of counsel heard. Jury Trial continued to 9/2/14 at 9:30 a.m. Dfts remain on bond. (Court Reporter Jeff Kull, OCR, Tracy Stroh, Chandler & Halasz.)(khan,) (Entered: 09/02/2014)
09/02/2014	477	MOTION FOR SUPPLEMENTAL JURY INSTRUCTION REGARDING COUNT 14 by Maureen G. McDonnell. (Attachments: # 1 Proposed Order)(Martin, Heather) (Entered: 09/02/2014)
09/02/2014	478	TRANSCRIPT of Proceedings held on August 29, 2014, Jury Trial Volume XXV before Judge James R. Spencer. Court reporter/transcriber Jeff Kull, Telephone number 804-916-2258. NOTICE RE REDACTION OF TRANSCRIPTS:The parties have thirty(30) calendar days to file with the Court a Notice of Intent to Request Redaction of this transcript. If no such Notice is filed, the transcript will be made remotely electronically available to the public without redaction after 90 calendar days. The policy is located on our website at www.vaed.uscourts.gov Transcript may be viewed at the court public terminal or purchased through the court reporter/transcriber before the deadline for Release of Transcript Restriction. After that date it may be obtained through PACER Redaction Request due 10/2/2014. Redacted Transcript Deadline set for 11/3/2014. Release of Transcript Restriction set for 12/1/2014.(kull, jeff) (Entered: 09/02/2014)
09/02/2014	482	ORDER as to Robert F McDonnell DENYING Defendant's 459 Motion for Exclusion of Government Summary Witness (please see Order for additional information). It is so ORDERED. Signed by District Judge James R. Spencer on 09/02/2014. (walk,) (Entered: 09/02/2014)
09/02/2014	483	MEMORANDUM ORDER as to Robert F McDonnell GRANTING 476 Motion by Timothy J. Taylor, Esquire to Withdraw as Counsel. It is so ORDERED. Signed by District Judge James R. Spencer on 09/02/2014. (walk,) (Entered: 09/02/2014)
09/02/2014	484	ORDER as to Robert F McDonnell DENYING Defendant's 449 Motion to Exclude Evidence of Gift Non-Disclosure as Irrelevant and Prejudicial (please see Order for additional information). It is so ORDERED. Signed by District Judge James R. Spencer on 09/02/2014. (walk,) (Entered: 09/02/2014)
09/02/2014	485	MEMORANDUM ORDER as to Robert F McDonnell and Maureen G. McDonnell GRANTING IN PART 351 and 415 Motions filed by Intervenors WP Company LLC and BH Media Holdings Inc., respectively, to Vacate Sealed Order (please see Memorandum Order for additional information). For the foregoing reasons, the Court finds that the completed questionnaires have been appropriately sealed during the pendency of this prosecution to protect Defendants' Sixth Amendment right to a fair trial. A blank copy of the questionnaire provided to jurors will be made publicly available after they have been appropriately redacted to protect jurors' private, personal, and confidential information. It is so ORDERED. Signed by District Judge James R. Spencer on 09/02/2014. (walk,) (Entered: 09/02/2014)
09/02/2014		Set/Reset Hearings as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell: Jury Trial set for 9/3/2014 at 09:45 AM in Richmond Courtroom 7000 before District Judge James R. Spencer. (khan,) (Entered: 09/02/2014)
09/02/2014	486	Position on Jury Determination of Asset Forfeiture Issues by USA as to Robert F

		McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell Jury Determination of Asset Forfeiture Issues (Aber, Jessica) (Entered: 09/02/2014)
09/02/2014	488	Minute Entry for proceedings held before District Judge James R. Spencer: Day 26Jury Trial as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell held on 9/2/2014. Jury charged by the Court. Dft objections noted. Jury Retired. Jury Trial continued 9/3/14 at 9:45 a.m. Dfts remain on bond. (Court Reporter Jeff Kull, OCR, Tracy Stroh, Chandler & Halasz.)(khan,) (Entered: 09/03/2014)
09/03/2014	487	TRANSCRIPT of Proceedings held on September 2, 2014, Jury Trial Volume XXVI before Judge James R. Spencer. Court reporter/transcriber Jeff Kull, Telephone number 804-916-2258. NOTICE RE REDACTION OF TRANSCRIPTS:The parties have thirty(30) calendar days to file with the Court a Notice of Intent to Request Redaction of this transcript. If no such Notice is filed, the transcript will be made remotely electronically available to the public without redaction after 90 calendar days. The policy is located on our website at www.vaed.uscourts.gov Transcript may be viewed at the court public terminal or purchased through the court reporter/transcriber before the deadline for Release of Transcript Restriction. After that date it may be obtained through PACER Redaction Request due 10/3/2014. Redacted Transcript Deadline set for 11/3/2014. Release of Transcript Restriction set for 12/2/2014.(kull, jeff) (Entered: 09/03/2014)
09/03/2014	489	ORDER that it is ORDERED that the jurors in the above entitled case be kept together in the custody of the US Marshal, who shall furnish them lunch on Friday, August 29, 2014, submitting the bill to the Clerk of this Court for payment.. Signed by District Judge James R. Spencer on 9/3/14. (khan,) (Entered: 09/03/2014)
09/03/2014	490	ORDER that it is ORDERED that the jurors in the above entitled case be kept together in the custody of the US Marshal, who shall furnish them lunch on Tuesday, September 2, 2014, submitting the bill to the Clerk of this Court for payment. Signed by District Judge James R. Spencer on 9/3/14. (khan,) (Entered: 09/03/2014)
09/03/2014	491	ORDER that it is ORDERED that the jurors in the above entitled case be kept together in the custody of the US Marshal, who shall furnish them lunch on Wednesday, September 3, 2014, submitting the bill to the Clerk of this Court for payment. Signed by District Judge James R. Spencer on 9/3/14. (khan,) (Entered: 09/03/2014)
09/03/2014		Set/Reset Hearings as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell: Jury Trial set for 9/4/2014 at 09:45 AM in Richmond Courtroom 7000 before District Judge James R. Spencer. (khan,) (Entered: 09/03/2014)
09/03/2014	493	Minute Entry for proceedings held before District Judge James R. Spencer Day 27Jury Trial as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell held on 9/3/2014. Jury deliberations continued. Jury Trial continued to 9/4/14 at 9:45 a.m. Dft remain on bond. (Court Reporter Jeff Kull, OCR, Tracy Stroh, Chandler & Halasz.)(khan,) (Entered: 09/04/2014)
09/04/2014	492	TRANSCRIPT of Proceedings held on September 3, 2014, Jury Trial Volume

		XXVII before Judge James R. Spencer. Court reporter/transcriber Jeff Kull, Telephone number 804-916-2258. NOTICE RE REDACTION OF TRANSCRIPTS:The parties have thirty(30) calendar days to file with the Court a Notice of Intent to Request Redaction of this transcript. If no such Notice is filed, the transcript will be made remotely electronically available to the public without redaction after 90 calendar days. The policy is located on our website at www.vaed.uscourts.gov Transcript may be viewed at the court public terminal or purchased through the court reporter/transcriber before the deadline for Release of Transcript Restriction. After that date it may be obtained through PACER Redaction Request due 10/6/2014. Redacted Transcript Deadline set for 11/4/2014. Release of Transcript Restriction set for 12/3/2014.(kull, jeff) (Entered: 09/04/2014)
09/04/2014	494	Minute Entry for proceedings held before District Judge James R. Spencer Day 28Jury Trial as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell held on 9/4/2014. Jury deliberations concluded. The Jury returned a verdict of guilty as charged for R. McDonnell as to Counts 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11 and not guilty as charged for R. McDonnell as to Counts 12 and 13. The Jury returned a verdict of guilty as charged for M. McDonnell as to Counts 1, 2, 3, 5, 6, 7, 8, 10, 14 and not guilty as charged for M. McDonnell as to Counts 4, 9, 11, 13. PSR ordered. Sentencing scheduled January 6, 2015 at 10:00 a.m. Exhibits returned to counsel. Dfts remain on bond. (Court Reporter Jeff Kull, OCR, Tracy Stroh, Chandler & Halasz.)(khan,) (Entered: 09/04/2014)
09/04/2014	495	JURY VERDICT as to Robert F McDonnell (1) Guilty on Count 1,2-4,5,6-11 and Maureen G. McDonnell (2) Guilty on Count 1,2-3,5,6-8,10,14 Robert F McDonnell (1) Not Guilty on Count 12-13 and Maureen G. McDonnell (2) Not Guilty on Count 4,9,11,13. (khan,) (Entered: 09/04/2014)
09/04/2014	496	Sentencing Guideline Order as to Robert F McDonnell. Signed by District Judge James R. Spencer on 9/4/14. (khan,) (Entered: 09/04/2014)
09/04/2014	497	Sentencing Guideline Order as to Maureen G. McDonnell. Signed by District Judge James R. Spencer on 9/4/14. (khan,) (Entered: 09/04/2014)
09/04/2014		Set/Reset Hearings as to Robert F McDonnell: Sentencing set for 1/6/2015 at 10:00 AM in Richmond Courtroom 7000 before District Judge James R. Spencer. (khan,) (Entered: 09/04/2014)
09/04/2014		Set/Reset Hearings as to Maureen G. McDonnell: Sentencing set for 1/6/2015 at 10:00 AM in Richmond Courtroom 7000 before District Judge James R. Spencer. (khan,) (Entered: 09/04/2014)
09/04/2014	498	TRANSCRIPT of Proceedings held on September 4, 2014, Jury Trial Volume XXVIII before Judge James R. Spencer. Court reporter/transcriber Jeff Kull, Telephone number 804-916-2258. NOTICE RE REDACTION OF TRANSCRIPTS:The parties have thirty(30) calendar days to file with the Court a Notice of Intent to Request Redaction of this transcript. If no such Notice is filed, the transcript will be made remotely electronically available to the public without redaction after 90 calendar days. The policy is located on our website at www.vaed.uscourts.gov Transcript may be viewed at the court public terminal or purchased through the court reporter/transcriber before the deadline for Release of Transcript Restriction. After that date it may be obtained through PACER Redaction Request due 10/6/2014. Redacted Transcript Deadline set for 11/4/2014. Release of Transcript Restriction set for 12/3/2014.(kull, jeff) (Entered: 09/04/2014)

09/09/2014	501	ORDER that it is ORDERED that the jurors in the above entitled case be kept together in the custody of the US Marshal, who shall furnish lunch on 9/4/14, submitting the bill to the Clerk of this Court for payment.. Signed by District Judge James R. Spencer on 9/9/14. (khan,) (Entered: 09/09/2014)
09/09/2014	504	MOTION for Leave to File as Amicus Curiae by Steven Davis as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell. (Attachments: # 1 Exhibit A, # 2 Exhibit A2, # 3 Exhibit B)(tdai,) (Entered: 09/11/2014)
09/10/2014	502	NOTICE of Consent to Intervenors' Motion to Vacate Sealing Order by Robert F McDonnell re 351 MOTION for Leave to Intervene and to Vacate Sealing Order, 415 MOTION to Vacate Sealing Order (Berry, Jonathan) Modified text on 9/10/2014 (tdai,). (Entered: 09/10/2014)
09/10/2014	503	NOTICE of Consent to Intervenors' Motion to Vacate Sealing Order by Maureen G. McDonnell re 415 MOTION to Vacate Sealing Order, 351 MOTION for Leave to Intervene and to Vacate Sealing Order (Martin, Heather) Modified text on 9/10/2014 (tdai,). (Entered: 09/10/2014)
09/12/2014	547	TRANSCRIPT of Chambers Conference Proceedings held on August 12, 2014, before Judge James R. Spencer. Court reporter/transcriber Jeff Kull, Telephone number 804-916-2258. NOTICE RE REDACTION OF TRANSCRIPTS:The parties have thirty(30) calendar days to file with the Court a Notice of Intent to Request Redaction of this transcript. If no such Notice is filed, the transcript will be made remotely electronically available to the public without redaction after 90 calendar days. The policy is located on our website at www.vaed.uscourts.gov Transcript may be viewed at the court public terminal or purchased through the court reporter/transcriber before the deadline for Release of Transcript Restriction. After that date it may be obtained through PACER Redaction Request due 10/14/2014. Redacted Transcript Deadline set for 11/12/2014. Release of Transcript Restriction set for 12/11/2014. TRANSCRIPT UNSEALED PER ORDER ENTERED 10/30/14 (ECF NO. 546).(tdai,) (Entered: 10/30/2014)
09/15/2014	507	ORDER that for good cause appearing to the Court, it is hereby ORDERED that parking shall be provided for the jurors in the above entitled case beginning July 29, 2014 and continuing through September 4, 2014. The Clerk of this Court shall pay the invoice submitted by the vendor providing parking accommodations.. Signed by District Judge James R. Spencer on 9/15/14. (khan,) (Entered: 09/15/2014)
09/15/2014	508	ORDER denying 504 Motion for Leave to File as Amicus Curiae by Steven Davis as to Robert F McDonnell (1), Maureen G. McDonnell (2). It is so ORDERED.

		Signed by District Judge James R. Spencer on 9/15/14. Copy sent: Yes to Steve Davis and by NEF to counsel of record. (tdai,) (Entered: 09/15/2014)
09/18/2014	509	Third MOTION for Acquittal by Robert F McDonnell. (Attachments: # 1 Proposed Order)(Berry, Jonathan) (Entered: 09/18/2014)
09/18/2014	510	Memorandum in Support by Robert F McDonnell re 509 Third MOTION for Acquittal (Berry, Jonathan) (Entered: 09/18/2014)
09/18/2014	511	MOTION for New Trial by Robert F McDonnell. (Attachments: # 1 Proposed Order)(Berry, Jonathan) (Entered: 09/18/2014)
09/18/2014	512	MOTION to Seal Portion of Memorandum in Support of Motion for New Trial by Robert F McDonnell. (Attachments: # 1 Proposed Order)(Berry, Jonathan) (Entered: 09/18/2014)
09/18/2014	513	Memorandum in Support by Robert F McDonnell re 512 MOTION to Seal Portion of Memorandum in Support of Motion for New Trial (Berry, Jonathan) (Entered: 09/18/2014)
09/18/2014	514	MOTION for Acquittal by Maureen G. McDonnell. (Attachments: # 1 Proposed Order)(Martin, Heather) (Entered: 09/18/2014)
09/18/2014	515	Memorandum in Support by Maureen G. McDonnell re 514 MOTION for Acquittal (Martin, Heather) (Entered: 09/18/2014)
09/18/2014	516	MOTION for New Trial by Maureen G. McDonnell. (Attachments: # 1 Proposed Order)(Martin, Heather) (Entered: 09/18/2014)
09/18/2014	517	Memorandum in Support by Maureen G. McDonnell re 516 MOTION for New Trial (Martin, Heather) (Entered: 09/18/2014)
09/18/2014	518	Memorandum in Support by Robert F McDonnell re 511 MOTION for New Trial (Attachments: # 1 Exhibit A, # 2 Exhibit B, # 3 Exhibit C, # 4 Exhibit D, # 5 Exhibit E)(Berry, Jonathan) (Entered: 09/18/2014)
09/20/2014	519	Consent MOTION for Extension of Time to File Response/Reply to Post-Trial Motions (and Memorandum in Support) by USA as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell. (Attachments: # 1 Proposed Order)(Aber, Jessica) (Entered: 09/20/2014)
09/22/2014	520	ORDER granting 519 Government's Consent Motion for Extension of Time to Respond to Defendants Robert F McDonnell's and Maureen G. McDonnell's post-trial motions (ECF Nos. 509 , 511 , 512 , 514 , and 516) no later than October 14, 2014. Signed by District Judge James R. Spencer on 9/22/14. (jtho,) (Entered: 09/22/2014)
09/22/2014	521	Letter dated September 20, 2014 addressed to the Honorable James R. Spencer received via facsimile from Steve Davis. (Original of (duplicate) letter received by mail on 9/25/14). (jtho,) Modified to update docket text as original letter received on 9/25/2014 (jtho,). (Entered: 09/23/2014)
09/25/2014	522	RESPONSE in Opposition by WP Company LLC as to Robert F McDonnell re 512 MOTION to Seal Portion of Memorandum in Support of Motion for New Trial (Merritt, Craig) (Entered: 09/25/2014)

09/26/2014	523	REPLY TO RESPONSE to by Robert F McDonnell re 512 MOTION to Seal Portion of Memorandum in Support of Motion for New Trial (Brownlee, John) (Entered: 09/26/2014)
10/08/2014	524	Consent MOTION for Extension of Time to File Response/Reply in Support of Post-Trial Motions by Robert F McDonnell. (Attachments: # 1 Proposed Order) (Berry, Jonathan) (Entered: 10/08/2014)
10/08/2014	525	Consent MOTION for Extension of Time to File Response/Reply in Support of Post-Trial Motions by Maureen G. McDonnell. (Attachments: # 1 Proposed Order)(Martin, Heather) (Entered: 10/08/2014)
10/10/2014	526	ORDER granting 524 Motion for Extension of Time to File Response/Reply as to Robert F McDonnell (1); granting 525 Motion for Extension of Time to File Response/Reply as to Maureen G. McDonnell (2). Defendants' replies in support of their post-trial motions (ECF Nos. 509 , 511 , 512 , 514 , and 516) must be filed no later than October 24, 2014. It is so ORDERED. Signed by District Judge James R. Spencer on 10/10/14. (tdai,) (Entered: 10/10/2014)
10/10/2014	527	MOTION to Continue Sentencing and Memorandum in Support by Maureen G. McDonnell. (Attachments: # 1 Proposed Order, # 2 Exhibit A)(Martin, Heather) Modified text on 10/15/2014 (tdai,). (Entered: 10/10/2014)
10/14/2014	528	MOTION to Seal by USA as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell. (Attachments: # 1 Proposed Order)(Aber, Jessica) (Entered: 10/14/2014)
10/14/2014	529	Memorandum in Support by USA as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell re 528 MOTION to Seal (Aber, Jessica) (Entered: 10/14/2014)
10/14/2014	530	RESPONSE in Opposition by USA as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell re 511 MOTION for New Trial (REDACTED) (Aber, Jessica) Main document replaced on 10/15/2014 (tdai,). (Entered: 10/14/2014)
10/14/2014	531	RESPONSE by USA as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell re 512 MOTION to Seal Portion of Memorandum in Support of Motion for New Trial (Faulconer, Ryan) (Entered: 10/14/2014)
10/14/2014	532	RESPONSE in Opposition by USA as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell re 509 Third MOTION for Acquittal (Faulconer, Ryan) (Entered: 10/14/2014)
10/14/2014	533	RESPONSE in Opposition by USA as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell re 514 MOTION for Acquittal (Faulconer, Ryan) (Entered: 10/14/2014)
10/14/2014	534	RESPONSE in Opposition by USA as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell re 516 MOTION for New Trial (Faulconer, Ryan) (Entered: 10/14/2014)
10/16/2014	535	ORDER granting 527 Motion to Continue as to Maureen G. McDonnell (2). Defendant's sentencing hearing is currently scheduled for January 6, 2015, at 10:00 AM. Defendant requests that sentencing be continued to a date after February 16, 2015. The Government does not take a position on the Motion. Upon due consideration, the Motion is hereby GRANTED. Counsel are DIRECTED to contact the Court within seven (7) days of the date this Order is entered to schedule a new sentencing date convenient to the parties and the Court. It is so ORDERED. Signed by District Judge James R. Spencer on 10/16/14. (tdai,) (Entered: 10/16/2014)

10/16/2014		Sentencing 1/6/15 CONTINUED as to Maureen G. McDonnell. (khan,) (Entered: 10/16/2014)
10/18/2014	536	NOTICE by USA as to Robert F McDonnell re 530 Response in Opposition (Dry, Michael) (Entered: 10/18/2014)
10/23/2014		Set/Reset Hearings as to Maureen G. McDonnell: Sentencing set for 2/20/2015 at 09:00 AM in Richmond Courtroom 7000 before District Judge James R. Spencer. (khan,) (Entered: 10/23/2014)
10/23/2014	537	MOTION to Seal Appendices to Motion #44 and to Seal Motion #45 in Full by Robert F McDonnell. (Attachments: # 1 Proposed Order)(Berry, Jonathan) (Entered: 10/23/2014)
10/23/2014	538	Memorandum in Support by Robert F McDonnell re 537 MOTION to Seal Appendices to Motion #44 and to Seal Motion #45 in Full (Berry, Jonathan) (Entered: 10/23/2014)
10/23/2014	539	MOTION to Supplement the Record on Appeal by Robert F McDonnell. (Attachments: # 1 Proposed Order, # 2 Appendix 1, # 3 Appendix 2, # 4 Appendix 3)(Berry, Jonathan) (Entered: 10/23/2014)
10/24/2014	540	REPLY TO RESPONSE to by Robert F McDonnell re 509 Third MOTION for Acquittal (Berry, Jonathan) (Entered: 10/24/2014)
10/24/2014	541	REPLY TO RESPONSE to by Robert F McDonnell re 511 MOTION for New Trial (Berry, Jonathan) (Entered: 10/24/2014)
10/24/2014	542	MOTION to Seal Portion of Reply in Support of Motion for New Trial by Robert F McDonnell. (Attachments: # 1 Proposed Order)(Berry, Jonathan) (Entered: 10/24/2014)
10/24/2014	543	Memorandum in Support by Robert F McDonnell re 542 MOTION to Seal Portion of Reply in Support of Motion for New Trial (Berry, Jonathan) (Entered: 10/24/2014)
10/24/2014	544	REPLY TO RESPONSE to by Maureen G. McDonnell re 514 MOTION for Acquittal (Martin, Heather) (Entered: 10/24/2014)
10/24/2014	545	REPLY TO RESPONSE to by Maureen G. McDonnell re 516 MOTION for New Trial (Martin, Heather) (Entered: 10/24/2014)
10/30/2014	546	ORDER denying 512 Motion to Seal Portion of Memorandum in Support of Motion for New Trial as to Robert F McDonnell (1); granting in part and denying in part 528 Motion to Seal as to Robert F McDonnell (1), Maureen G. McDonnell (2); denying 542 Motion to Seal Portion of Reply in Support of Motion for New Trial as to Robert F McDonnell (1). The parties are hereby directed to file the unredacted versions of their respective documents. Furthermore, the Clerk is DIRECTED to UNSEAL the transcript from the chambers conference held on August 12, 2014 (ECF No. 506). See Order for complete details. It is so

		ORDERED. Signed by District Judge James R. Spencer on 10/29/14. SEE UNSEALED TRANSCRIPT (ECF NO. 547). (tdai,) (Entered: 10/30/2014)
10/30/2014	548	Memorandum in Support by Robert F McDonnell re 511 MOTION for New Trial (Unredacted) (Attachments: # 1 Exhibit A, # 2 Exhibit B, # 3 Exhibit C, # 4 Exhibit D, # 5 Exhibit E)(Berry, Jonathan) (Entered: 10/30/2014)
10/30/2014	549	REPLY TO RESPONSE to by Robert F McDonnell re 511 MOTION for New Trial (Unredacted) (Attachments: # 1 Exhibit A, # 2 Exhibit B)(Berry, Jonathan) (Entered: 10/30/2014)
10/30/2014	550	MOTION to Seal Motion # 29 by Maureen G. McDonnell. (Attachments: # 1 Proposed Order)(Martin, Heather) Modified text on 1/8/2015 (tdai,). (Entered: 10/30/2014)
10/30/2014	551	Memorandum in Support by Maureen G. McDonnell re 550 MOTION to Seal Motion # 29 (Martin, Heather) Modified text on 1/8/2015 (tdai,). (Entered: 10/30/2014)
10/30/2014	552	MOTION to Supplement the Record on Appeal by Maureen G. McDonnell. (Attachments: # 1 Proposed Order)(Martin, Heather) (Entered: 10/30/2014)
10/30/2014	553	RESPONSE in Opposition by USA as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell re 511 MOTION for New Trial (Partially Unredacted) (Faulconer, Ryan) (Entered: 10/30/2014)
11/03/2014	554	Motion to Unseal for Limited Purpose with Memorandum in Support by USA as to Robert F McDonnell (1), Maureen G. McDonnell(2). (Attachments: # 1 Proposed Order)(tdai,) Modified text on 11/3/2014 (tdai,). Modified on 1/12/2015 - Unsealed per 620 Memorandum Order (tdai,). (Entered: 11/03/2014)
11/03/2014	555	MOTION to Seal Response to Defendants' Motions to Supplement the Record (Doc. Nos. 539, 552) and Memorandum in Support by USA as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell. (Attachments: # 1 Proposed Order)(Aber, Jessica) Modified text on 11/4/2014 (tdai,). (Entered: 11/03/2014)
11/04/2014	556	MOTION to Seal Response Brief to Defendants' Motions to Unseal Portions of the Record (see related Doc. Nos. 537 and 550) by USA as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell. (Attachments: # 1 Proposed Order)(Aber, Jessica) (Entered: 11/04/2014)
11/06/2014	557	MOTION to Seal Reply in Support of Motion to Supplement the Record by Robert F McDonnell. (Attachments: # 1 Proposed Order)(Berry, Jonathan) (Entered: 11/06/2014)
11/06/2014	558	Memorandum in Support by Robert F McDonnell re 557 MOTION to Seal Reply in Support of Motion to Supplement the Record (Berry, Jonathan) (Entered: 11/06/2014)
11/07/2014	559	MOTION to Seal Reply in Support of Motion to Unseal by Robert F McDonnell. (Attachments: # 1 Proposed Order)(Berry, Jonathan) (Entered: 11/07/2014)
11/07/2014	560	Memorandum in Support by Robert F McDonnell re 559 MOTION to Seal Reply in Support of Motion to Unseal (Berry, Jonathan) (Entered: 11/07/2014)

11/10/2014	561	ORDER as to Robert F McDonnell (1), Maureen G. McDonnell (2) re 554 Motion to Unseal for Limited Purpose with Memorandum in Support. It is so ORDERED. Signed by District Judge James R. Spencer on 11/10/14. (tdai,) Modified on 1/12/2015 - Unsealed per 620 Memorandum Order (tdai,). (Entered: 11/10/2014)
11/18/2014	562	MOTION to Seal Statement Relevant to Motion to Unseal by Robert F McDonnell. (Attachments: # 1 Proposed Order)(Berry, Jonathan) (Entered: 11/18/2014)
11/18/2014	563	Memorandum in Support by Robert F McDonnell re 562 MOTION to Seal Statement Relevant to Motion to Unseal (Berry, Jonathan) (Entered: 11/18/2014)
11/26/2014	564	MOTION to Withdraw as Attorney by Robert F McDonnell. (Attachments: # 1 Proposed Order)(Berry, Jonathan) (Entered: 11/26/2014)
12/01/2014	565	MEMORANDUM OPINION as to Maureen G. McDonnell (2). Signed by District Judge James R. Spencer on 12/1/14. (tdai,) (Entered: 12/01/2014)
12/01/2014	566	ORDER denying 516 Motion for New Trial as to Maureen G. McDonnell (2). Signed by District Judge James R. Spencer on 12/1/14. (tdai,) (Entered: 12/01/2014)
12/01/2014	567	MEMORANDUM OPINION as to Robert F McDonnell (1). Signed by District Judge James R. Spencer on 12/1/14. (tdai,) (Entered: 12/01/2014)
12/01/2014	568	ORDER denying 511 Motion for New Trial as to Robert F McDonnell (1). Signed by District Judge James R. Spencer on 12/1/14. (tdai,) (Entered: 12/01/2014)
12/01/2014	569	MEMORANDUM OPINION as to Maureen G. McDonnell (2). Signed by District Judge James R. Spencer on 12/1/14. (tdai,) (Entered: 12/01/2014)
12/01/2014	570	ORDER granting in part and denying in part 514 Motion for Acquittal as to Maureen G. McDonnell (2). Signed by District Judge James R. Spencer on 12/1/14. (tdai,) (Entered: 12/01/2014)
12/01/2014	571	MEMORANDUM OPINION as to Robert F McDonnell (1). Signed by District Judge James R. Spencer on 12/1/14. (tdai,) (Entered: 12/01/2014)
12/01/2014	572	ORDER denying 509 Third Motion for Acquittal as to Robert F McDonnell (1). Signed by District Judge James R. Spencer on 12/1/14. (tdai,) (Entered: 12/01/2014)
12/01/2014	573	ORDER granting 564 Motion to Withdraw as Attorney. Ryan Dean Newman withdrawn from case as to Robert F McDonnell (1). Signed by District Judge James R. Spencer on 12/1/14. (tdai,) (Entered: 12/01/2014)
12/02/2014	574	PRESENTENCE INVESTIGATION REPORT (Disclosed Presentence Investigation Report) (SEALED - government and defense counsel) as to Robert F McDonnell. Objections to PSI due 12/16/14. (drumheller, dorothy) (Entered: 12/02/2014)
12/08/2014	575	Letter from William A. Burck to Honorable James R. Spencer as to Maureen G. McDonnell (2). (Martin, Heather) Modified to correct docket on 12/8/2014 (tdai,). (Entered: 12/08/2014)

12/08/2014	576	MOTION for Leave to File Excess Pages for Sentencing Memorandum by Robert F McDonnell. (Attachments: # 1 Proposed Order)(Berry, Jonathan) (Entered: 12/08/2014)
12/08/2014	577	RESPONSE in Opposition by USA as to Robert F McDonnell re 576 MOTION for Leave to File Excess Pages for Sentencing Memorandum (Aber, Jessica) (Entered: 12/08/2014)
12/09/2014	578	NOTICE OF ATTORNEY APPEARANCE: Thomas Brady Shuttleworth, II appearing for Robert F McDonnell.(Shuttleworth, Thomas) Modified to correct text on 12/9/2014 (tdai,). (Entered: 12/09/2014)
12/09/2014	579	REPLY TO RESPONSE to by Robert F McDonnell re 576 MOTION for Leave to File Excess Pages for Sentencing Memorandum (Berry, Jonathan) (Entered: 12/09/2014)
12/10/2014	580	ORDER granting 576 Motion for Leave to File Excess Pages for Sentencing Memorandum as to Robert F McDonnell (1). Signed by District Judge James R. Spencer on 12/10/14. (tdai,) Modified text on 12/10/2014 (tdai,). (Entered: 12/10/2014)
12/23/2014	581	PRESENTENCE INVESTIGATION REPORT (Sentencing Presentence Investigation Report) (SEALED - government and defense counsel) INCLUDES ADDENDUM as to Robert F McDonnell. (drumheller, dorothy) (Entered: 12/23/2014)
12/23/2014	582	Position on Sentencing by Robert F McDonnell (Berry, Jonathan) (Entered: 12/23/2014)
12/23/2014	584	NOTICE of Submission of Appendix 1 of 7 by Robert F McDonnell re 582 Position on Sentencing (Attachments: # 1 Appendix 1-A, # 2 Appendix 1-B, # 3 Appendix 1-C)(Berry, Jonathan) (Entered: 12/23/2014)
12/23/2014	585	NOTICE of Submission of Appendix 2 of 7 by Robert F McDonnell re 582 Position on Sentencing (Attachments: # 1 Appendix 2-A, # 2 Appendix 2-B, # 3 Appendix 2-C)(Berry, Jonathan) (Entered: 12/23/2014)
12/23/2014	586	NOTICE of Submission of Appendix 3 of 7 by Robert F McDonnell re 582 Position on Sentencing (Attachments: # 1 Appendix 3-A, # 2 Appendix 3-B, # 3 Appendix 3-C)(Berry, Jonathan) (Entered: 12/23/2014)
12/23/2014	587	NOTICE of Submission of Appendix 4 of 7 by Robert F McDonnell re 582 Position on Sentencing (Attachments: # 1 Appendix 4)(Berry, Jonathan) (Entered: 12/23/2014)
12/23/2014	588	NOTICE of Submission of Appendix 5 of 7 by Robert F McDonnell re 582 Position on Sentencing (Attachments: # 1 Appendix 5)(Berry, Jonathan) (Entered: 12/23/2014)
12/23/2014	589	NOTICE of Submission of Appendix 6 of 7 by Robert F McDonnell re 582 Position on Sentencing (Attachments: # 1 Appendix 6-A, # 2 Appendix 6-B) (Berry, Jonathan) (Entered: 12/23/2014)
12/23/2014	590	NOTICE of Submission of Appendix 7 of 7 by Robert F McDonnell re 582 Position on Sentencing (Attachments: # 1 Appendix 7)(Berry, Jonathan) (Entered:

		12/23/2014)
12/23/2014	591	Position on Sentencing by USA as to Robert F McDonnell (Faulconer, Ryan) (Entered: 12/23/2014)
12/23/2014	592	OBJECTION TO PRESENTENCE INVESTIGATION REPORT by Robert F McDonnell as to Robert F McDonnell (Berry, Jonathan) (Entered: 12/23/2014)
12/30/2014	593	MOTION to Unseal Document (omnibus motion concerning outstanding sealing issues) by WP Company LLC as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell. (Merritt, Craig) (Entered: 12/30/2014)
12/30/2014	594	Memorandum in Support by WP Company LLC as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell re 593 MOTION to Unseal Document (omnibus motion concerning outstanding sealing issues) (Merritt, Craig) (Entered: 12/30/2014)
12/30/2014	595	Opposition by Robert F McDonnell re 591 Position on Sentencing (Berry, Jonathan) (Entered: 12/30/2014)
12/30/2014	596	RESPONSE by USA as to Robert F McDonnell re 582 Position on Sentencing (Faulconer, Ryan) (Entered: 12/30/2014)
12/30/2014	597	RESPONSE by USA as to Robert F McDonnell re 592 Objection to Presentence Investigation Report (Attachments: # 1 Exhibit Attachment 1)(Faulconer, Ryan) (Entered: 12/30/2014)
12/31/2014	598	MOTION for Leave to Intervene and to Join Omnibus Motion Concerning Outstanding Sealing Issues by Associated Press as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell. (Attachments: # 1 Cover Letter)(tdai,) (Entered: 12/31/2014)
01/02/2015	599	Reply by Robert F McDonnell re 582 Position on Sentencing (Attachments: # 1 Exhibit A, # 2 Exhibit B)(Berry, Jonathan) (Entered: 01/02/2015)
01/02/2015	600	REPLY TO RESPONSE to by USA as to Robert F McDonnell re 595 Opposition (Faulconer, Ryan) (Entered: 01/02/2015)
01/05/2015	601	MOTION for Bond Pending Appeal by Robert F McDonnell. (Attachments: # 1 Proposed Order)(Berry, Jonathan) (Entered: 01/05/2015)
01/05/2015	602	Memorandum in Support by Robert F McDonnell re 601 MOTION for Bond Pending Appeal (Attachments: # 1 Exhibit A, # 2 Exhibit B, # 3 Exhibit C, # 4 Exhibit D)(Berry, Jonathan) (Entered: 01/05/2015)
01/05/2015	603	NOTICE of Filing Supplemental Appendix by Robert F McDonnell re 582 Position on Sentencing (Attachments: # 1 Appendix)(Berry, Jonathan) (Entered: 01/05/2015)
01/06/2015	605	Minute Entry for proceedings held before District Judge James R. Spencer:Sentencing held on 1/6/2015 for Robert F McDonnell (1), Count(s) 1, 2-4, 5, 6-11, 24 MONTHS IMPRISONMENT EACH COUNT TO BE SERVED CONCURRENTLY WITH ALL OTHER COUNTS, 2 YEARS SUPERVISED RELEASE EACH COUNT TO BE SERVED CONCURRENTLY WITH ALL OTHER COUNTS, $100 S/A, Count(s) 12-13, NOT GUILTY BY JURY Dft remains on bond. Dft to self-report 2/9/15 by 10:00 a.m. (Court Reporter Jeff Kull, OCR, Tracy Stroh, Chandler & Halasz.)(khan,) (Entered: 01/07/2015)

01/06/2015	624	JUDGMENT as to Robert F McDonnell (1), Count(s) 1, 2-4, 5, 6-11, 24 MONTHS IMPRISONMENT TO BE SERVED CONCURRENT WITH ALL OTHER COUNTS, 2 YEARS SUPERVISED RELEASE TO BE SERVED CONCURRENT WITH ALL OTHER COUNTS, $100 S/A, Count(s) 12-13, NOT GUILTY BY JURY Signed by District Judge James R. Spencer on 1/6/14. (khan,) (Entered: 01/13/2015)
01/06/2015	625	Sealed Statement of Reasons as to Robert F McDonnell. Signed by District Judge James R. Spencer on 1/6/15. (khan,) (Entered: 01/13/2015)
01/07/2015	604	TRANSCRIPT of Proceedings held on January 6, 2015, Sentencing Proceedings before Judge James R. Spencer. Court reporter/transcriber Jeff Kull, Telephone number 804-916-2258. re: 629 NOTICE RE REDACTION OF TRANSCRIPTS:The parties have thirty(30) calendar days to file with the Court a Notice of Intent to Request Redaction of this transcript. If no such Notice is filed, the transcript will be made remotely electronically available to the public without redaction after 90 calendar days. The policy is located on our website at www.vaed.uscourts.gov Transcript may be viewed at the court public terminal or purchased through the court reporter/transcriber before the deadline for Release of Transcript Restriction. After that date it may be obtained through PACER Redaction Request due 2/6/2015. Redacted Transcript Deadline set for 3/9/2015. Release of Transcript Restriction set for 4/7/2015.(kull, jeff) Modified on 2/6/2015 (tjoh,). (Entered: 01/07/2015)
01/08/2015	606	ORDER granting 598 Motion for Leave to Intervene and to Join Omnibus Motion Concerning Outstanding Sealing Issues as to Robert F McDonnell (1), Maureen G. McDonnell (2). Signed by District Judge James R. Spencer on 1/8/15. (tdai,) (Entered: 01/08/2015)
01/08/2015	607	MEMORANDUM ORDER granting in part and denying in part 537 Motion to Seal Appendices to Motion #44 and to Seal Motion #45 in Full as to Robert F McDonnell (1); denying 557 Motion to Seal to Seal Reply in Support of Motion to Supplement the Record as to Robert F McDonnell (1); granting in part and denying in part 559 Motion to Seal Reply in Support of Motion to Unseal as to Robert F McDonnell (1); granting in part and denying in part 562 Motion to Seal Statement Relevant to Motion to Unseal as to Robert F McDonnell (1); granting in part and denying in part 550 Motion to Seal to Seal Motion # 29 as to Maureen G. McDonnell (2); denying 555 Motion to Seal Response to Defendants' Motions to Supplement the Record (Doc. Nos. 539, 552) and Memorandum in Support as to Robert F McDonnell (1), Maureen G. McDonnell (2); granting in part and denying in part 556 Motion to Seal Response Brief to Defendants' Motions to Unseal Portions of the Record (see related Doc. Nos. 537 and 550) as to Robert F McDonnell (1), Maureen G. McDonnell (2). Further, the parties are DIRECTED to publicly file their respective pleadings related to any of the aforementioned Motions to Seal. SEE ORDER FOR COMPLETE DETAILS. Signed by District Judge James R. Spencer on 1/8/15. (tdai,) (Entered: 01/08/2015)
01/08/2015	608	ORDER denying 539 Motion to Supplement the Record on Appeal as to Robert F McDonnell (1); denying 552 Motion to Supplement the Record on Appeal as to Maureen G. McDonnell (2). Signed by District Judge James R. Spencer on 1/8/15.

		(tdai,) (Entered: 01/08/2015)
01/09/2015	609	PRESENTENCE INVESTIGATION REPORT (Final Presentence Investigation Report) (SEALED - government and defense counsel) CORRECTED AND FINAL VERSION as to Robert F McDonnell. (smith, lisa) (Entered: 01/09/2015)
01/09/2015	610	RESPONSE in Opposition by USA as to Robert F McDonnell re 601 MOTION for Bond Pending Appeal (Aber, Jessica) (Entered: 01/09/2015)
01/09/2015	611	MOTION to Unseal Certain Sealed Portions of the Record (Redacted) by Robert F McDonnell. (Attachments: # 1 Proposed Order, # 2 Exhibits A-F)(Berry, Jonathan) Modified text on 1/12/2015 (tdai,). (Entered: 01/09/2015)
01/09/2015	612	Memorandum in Support (Redacted) by Robert F McDonnell re 611 MOTION to Unseal Certain Sealed Portions of the Record (Redacted) (Berry, Jonathan) Modified text on 1/12/2015 (tdai,). (Entered: 01/09/2015)
01/09/2015	613	REPLY TO RESPONSE (Redacted) by Robert F McDonnell to re 611 MOTION to Unseal Certain Sealed Portions of the Record (Redacted) (Berry, Jonathan) Modified text on 1/12/2015 (tdai,). (Entered: 01/09/2015)
01/09/2015	614	NOTICE of Mr McDonnell's Statement Respecting "Opposition to Unsealing" by Robert F McDonnell re 611 MOTION to Unseal Certain Sealed Portions of the Record (Redacted) (Berry, Jonathan) Modified text on 1/12/2015 (tdai,). (Entered: 01/09/2015)
01/09/2015	615	NOTICE of Filing Appendices to Motion # 44 to Supplement the Record on Appeal by Robert F McDonnell re 539 MOTION to Supplement the Record on Appeal (Attachments: # 1 Appendices 4-12, # 2 Appendices 13-29, # 3 Appendices 30-35)(Berry, Jonathan) (Entered: 01/09/2015)
01/09/2015	616	REPLY TO RESPONSE to by Robert F McDonnell re 539 MOTION to Supplement the Record on Appeal (Attachments: # 1 Exhibit A)(Berry, Jonathan) (Entered: 01/09/2015)
01/09/2015	617	RESPONSE in Opposition (Redacted) by USA as to Robert F McDonnell re 611 MOTION to Unseal Certain Sealed Portions of the Record (Redacted) (Aber, Jessica) Modified text on 1/12/2015 (tdai,). (Entered: 01/09/2015)
01/09/2015	618	RESPONSE in Opposition by USA as to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell re 552 MOTION to Supplement the Record on Appeal , 539 MOTION to Supplement the Record on Appeal (Aber, Jessica) (Entered: 01/09/2015)
01/09/2015	619	MOTION to Unseal Certain Sealed Portions of the Record (Redacted) by Maureen G. McDonnell. (Attachments: # 1 Proposed Order)(Martin, Heather) Modified text on 1/12/2015 (tdai,). (Entered: 01/09/2015)
01/12/2015	620	MEMORANDUM ORDER granting in part and denying in part 611 Motion to Unseal Document as to Robert F McDonnell (1); granting in part and denying in part 619 Motion to Unseal Document as to Maureen G. McDonnell (2). SEE ORDER FOR COMPLETE DETAILS. The Clerk is DIRECTED to UNSEAL the miscellaneous civil case, In re Grand Jury Subpoenas, 3:14-ms-67, as well as all pleadings and corresponding exhibits, opinions and orders filed in criminal case no. 3:14-CR-12, which are related to this matter. (ECF Nos. 203 , 204 , 205 , 206 , 554 , and 561). Signed by District Judge James R. Spencer on 1/12/15. (tdai,) (Entered: 01/12/2015)

01/12/2015	621	ORDER denying as moot 593 Motion to Unseal Document (omnibus motion concerning outstanding sealing issues) as to Robert F McDonnell (1), Maureen G. McDonnell (2). SEE ORDER FOR COMPLETE DETAILS. Signed by District Judge James R. Spencer on 1/12/15. (tdai,) (Entered: 01/12/2015)
01/12/2015	622	REPLY TO RESPONSE to by Robert F McDonnell re 601 MOTION for Bond Pending Appeal (Attachments: # 1 Exhibit A)(Berry, Jonathan) (Entered: 01/12/2015)
01/13/2015	623	MEMORANDUM ORDER denying 601 Motion for Release Pending Appeal as to Robert F McDonnell (1). SEE ORDER FOR COMPLETE DETAILS. Signed by District Judge James R. Spencer on 1/13/15. (tdai,) (Entered: 01/13/2015)
01/13/2015	626	NOTICE of Filing Unsealed Exhibits to Motion # 45 to Unseal by Robert F McDonnell re 611 MOTION to Unseal Certain Sealed Portions of the Record (Redacted) (Attachments: # 1 Exhibits A & B)(Berry, Jonathan) (Entered: 01/13/2015)
01/13/2015	627	AMENDED JUDGMENT (ONLY CHANGE: corrected offense end date on Count 10) as to Robert F McDonnell (1), Count(s) 1, 2-4, 5, 6-11, 24 MONTHS IMPRISONMENT TO BE SERVED CONCURRENT WITH ALL OTHER COUNTS, 2 YEARS SUPERVISED RELEASE TO BE SERVED CONCURRENT WITH ALL OTHER COUNTS, $100 S/A; Count(s) 12-13, NOT GUILTY BY JURY Signed by District Judge James R. Spencer on 1/13/2015. (khan,) (Entered: 01/13/2015)
01/13/2015	628	AMENDED Sealed Statement of Reasons as to Robert F McDonnell. Signed by District Judge James R. Spencer on 1/13/2015. (khan,) (Entered: 01/13/2015)
01/13/2015	629	NOTICE OF APPEAL by Robert F McDonnell Filing fee $505, receipt number 0422-4268456. (Berry, Jonathan) (Entered: 01/13/2015)
01/13/2015	630	Transmission of Notice of Appeal to 4CCA as to Robert F McDonnell to US Court of Appeals re 629 Notice of Appeal - Final Judgment (All case opening forms, plus the transcript guidelines, may be obtained from the Fourth Circuit's website at www.ca4.uscourts.gov) (lbre,) (Entered: 01/13/2015)
01/13/2015		USCA Case Number 15-4019, Case Manager C.Poulsen, for 629 Notice of Appeal - Final Judgment filed by Robert F McDonnell. (lbre,) (Entered: 01/14/2015)
01/16/2015	631	PRESENTENCE INVESTIGATION REPORT (Disclosed Presentence Investigation Report) (SEALED - government and defense counsel) INCLUDES 2 ATTACHMENTS as to Maureen G. McDonnell. Objections to PSI due 01/30/15. (Attachments: # 1 Letter Events, # 2 Letter Letters)(drumheller, dorothy) (Entered: 01/16/2015)
01/20/2015	632	ORDER that this matter is before the court sua sponte. The questionnaires as completed by the jury venire in the above-styled case have been properly readacted pursuant to this Court's Order on September 2, 2014 (ECF No. 485). Any person interested in obtaining a copy of such questionnaires may contact Lantagne Legal Printing at 804-644-0477 or 1-800-847-0477. The cost for a paper copy is $400 and the cost for a CD-Rom is $200. Additional shipping charges will also apply. Signed by District Judge James R. Spencer on 1/20/15. (khan,) (Entered: 01/20/2015)

01/26/2015	633	ORDER of USCA as to Robert F McDonnell re 629 Notice of Appeal - Final Judgment Upon consideration of the submissions relative to appellant's motion for release pending appeal pursuant to 18 U.S.C. § 3143(b), the court grants appellant's motion and releases appellant on his own recognizance pending appeal, subject to the same conditions imposed by the district court for release pending trial. (See Order for details.) (lbre,) (Entered: 01/26/2015)
01/30/2015	634	NOTICE OF ATTORNEY APPEARANCE: Randy Darrell Singer appearing for Maureen G. McDonnell (Singer, Randy) (Entered: 01/30/2015)
02/06/2015	635	PRESENTENCE INVESTIGATION REPORT (Sentencing Presentence Investigation Report) (SEALED - government and defense counsel) as to Maureen G. McDonnell. (Attachments: # 1 Supplement LETTERS OF SUPPORT, # 2 Supplement LETTERS OF SUPPORT, # 3 Supplement SUPPORTING DOCUMENTS)(smith, lisa) (Entered: 02/06/2015)
02/06/2015	637	SENTENCING MEMORANDUM by Maureen G. McDonnell (Martin, Heather) (Entered: 02/06/2015)
02/06/2015	638	MOTION for Bond Pending Appeal by Maureen G. McDonnell. (Attachments: # 1 Proposed Order)(Martin, Heather) (Entered: 02/06/2015)
02/06/2015	639	Position on Sentencing by USA as to Maureen G. McDonnell (Faulconer, Ryan) (Entered: 02/06/2015)
02/13/2015	640	NOTICE Regarding Additional Sentencing Pleadings by USA as to Maureen G. McDonnell (Aber, Jessica) (Entered: 02/13/2015)
02/20/2015	641	Minute Entry for proceedings held before District Judge James R. Spencer:Sentencing held on 2/20/2015 for Maureen G. McDonnell (2), Count(s) 1, 10, 2-3, 5, 6-8, 12 MONTHS AND 1 DAY TO BE SERVED CONCURRENT WITH ALL OTHER COUNTS, 2 YEARS SUPERVISED RELEASE TO BE SERVED CONCURRENT WITH ALL OTHER COUNTS, $100 S/A ON EACH COUNT; Count(s) 11, 13, 4, 9, NOT GUILTY PURSUANT TO JURY VERDICT; Count(s) 14, DISMISSED PURSUANT TO ORDER ENTERED 12/1/2014 (DKT #570). Dft remains on bond pending appeal. (Court Reporter Jeff Kull, OCR.)(khan,) (Entered: 02/23/2015)
02/20/2015	645	JUDGMENT as to Maureen G. McDonnell (2), Count(s) 1, 10, 2-3, 5, 6-8, 12 MONTHS AND 1 DAY TO BE SERVED CONCURRENT WITH ALL OTHER COUNTS, 2 YEARS SUPERVISED RELEASE TO BE SERVED CONCURRENT WITH ALL OTHER COUNTS, $100 S/A ON EACH COUNT, Count(s) 11, 13, 4, 9, NOT GUILTY PURSUANT TO JURY VERDICT; Count(s) 14, DISMISSED PURSUANT TO ORDER ENTERED 12/1/2014 (DKT #570). Dft remains on bond pending appeal. Signed by District Judge James R. Spencer on 2/20/15. (khan,) (Entered: 02/25/2015)
02/20/2015	646	Sealed Statement of Reasons as to Maureen G. McDonnell. Signed by District Judge James R. Spencer on 2/20/15. (khan,) (Entered: 02/25/2015)

02/24/2015	642	Letters addressed to District Judge James R. Spencer re: Robert F McDonnell. (jtho,) (Entered: 02/24/2015)
02/24/2015	643	Letters (Part 1) addressed to District Judge James R. Spencer re: Maureen McDonnell. (jtho,) (Entered: 02/24/2015)
02/24/2015	644	Letters (Part 2) addressed to District Judge James R. Spencer re: Maureen McDonnell. (jtho,) (Entered: 02/24/2015)

PACER Service Center

Transaction Receipt

02/27/2015 09:03:40

PACER Login:	jd8706:4160396:3923676	Client Code:	814118-600001
Description:	Docket Report	Search Criteria:	3:14-cr-00012-JRS
Billable Pages:	30	Cost:	3.00

IN THE UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
FOR THE EASTERN DISTRICT OF VIRGINIA

Richmond Division

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA

v.

ROBERT F. MCDONNELL
(Counts 1–13)

and

MAUREEN G. MCDONNELL,
(Counts 1–11, 13–14)

Defendants.

No. 3:14cr 12

Count 1: 18 U.S.C. § 1349
(Conspiracy to Commit Honest-Services Wire Fraud)

Counts 2–4: 18 U.S.C. § 1343
(Honest-Services Wire Fraud)

Count 5: 18 U.S.C. § 1951
(Conspiracy to Obtain Property under Color of Official Right)

Counts 6–11: 18 U.S.C. § 1951
(Obtaining Property under Color of Official Right)

Counts 12–13: 18 U.S.C. § 1014
(False Statements)

Count 14: 18 U.S.C. § 1512(c)(2)
(Obstruction of Official Proceeding)

Forfeiture Notice

January 2014 Term - at Richmond, Virginia

INDICTMENT

THE GRAND JURY CHARGES THAT:

At all times relevant to this Indictment, unless otherwise stated:

GENERAL ALLEGATIONS

A. The Defendants

1. Defendant ROBERT F MCDONNELL was the Governor of the Commonwealth of Virginia. He previously served as a member of the Virginia House of Delegates and as the Attorney General of Virginia. ROBERT MCDONNELL was sworn in as the 71st Governor of Virginia in January 2010.

2. Defendant MAUREEN G. MCDONNELL was the wife of ROBERT MCDONNELL and served as the First Lady of Virginia.

B. Relevant Individuals and Entities

3. MoBo Real Estate Partners, LLC ("MoBo") was a Virginia limited liability company engaged in the business of owning and renting vacation homes in Virginia Beach, Virginia. ROBERT MCDONNELL was one of two members of, and had a 50% personal financial interest in, MoBo.

4. Star Scientific, Inc. ("Star Scientific") was a Delaware corporation with its principal executive offices located in Glen Allen, Virginia. Star Scientific was a publicly traded company on the NASDAQ Global Market under the ticker symbol "STSI." Star Scientific was involved in and its activities affected interstate commerce.

5. JW was the Chief Executive Officer of Star Scientific.

C. The Governor and the Governor's Office

6. The Governor and the Office of the Governor of the Commonwealth of Virginia ("OGV") performed a wide range of official actions. Those actions included, among other things, appointing directors and key administrators of state departments, agencies, and boards; authorizing expenditures of certain grant funds; proposing a budget and overseeing the expenditure of state funds; conducting meetings and hosting events for the purposes of fostering Virginia business and economic development; directing other government officials to conduct such meetings and events; speaking at events in and outside Virginia about Virginia businesses and economic development; coordinating with state boards, commissions, and institutions, including universities, about uses of state labor and funding resources; and otherwise setting priorities and direction for the Commonwealth of Virginia.

7. Throughout his campaign for Governor, ROBERT MCDONNELL made it clear that one of his highest priorities as Governor would be acting to promote the matter and cause of economic development for businesses and industries in Virginia, e.g. his campaign slogan was "Bob's for Jobs." Throughout his tenure as Governor, ROBERT MCDONNELL customarily performed official actions to promote the matter and cause of economic development of Virginia businesses and industries, and he touted his efforts and activities in support of the same.

D. Background of Star Scientific's Dietary Supplement Products

8. Star Scientific described itself as a "technology-oriented company with a mission to promote maintenance of a healthy metabolism and lifestyle." Beginning in or about 2007, the company focused on utilizing certain alkaloids in the tobacco plant, namely anatabine, to address issues related to the desire to smoke. Star Scientific subsequently began evaluating anatabine's potential for treating chronic inflammation that the company believed might be associated with disorders such as thyroiditis, diabetes, arthritis, Alzheimer's disease, and multiple sclerosis.

9. Star Scientific, through a wholly owned subsidiary, engaged in the development, manufacture, marketing, and sale of two anatabine-based dietary supplements: CigRx®, a tobacco alternative; and Anatabloc®, for anti-inflammatory support.

10. The types of claims that Star Scientific could make under applicable federal law regarding its dietary supplements CigRx® and Anatabloc® differed substantially from those allowed for drug manufacturers. While drug manufacturers could claim that their products would diagnose, cure, mitigate, treat, or prevent a disease, dietary supplement manufacturers such as Star Scientific were legally prohibited from making such claims. These legal limitations made it more challenging for Star Scientific to gain widespread consumer acceptance of the potential health benefits for its dietary supplement products.

11. To overcome the difficulties in gaining consumer acceptance for its products, Star Scientific sought to legitimize the potential health benefits of its dietary supplements by encouraging scientific studies of anatabine, which was an active ingredient in CigRx® and Anatabloc®. Star Scientific would then present the results of those studies to physicians in the hope that the physicians would recommend Star Scientific's dietary supplements to their patients.

12. Another of Star Scientific's goals was to have scientific studies of human use of anatabine, including in clinical trials, that would allow the company to develop drugs for the treatment of diseases such as thyroiditis, diabetes, arthritis, Alzheimer's disease, and multiple sclerosis.

E. Background of the Defendants' Relationship with JW

13. In or about March 2009, as a result of requests from ROBERT MCDONNELL's staff to JW, ROBERT MCDONNELL began using a jet aircraft owned by JW during his campaign for Governor of Virginia. Prior to this time, ROBERT MCDONNELL and JW had never met, and they had no personal or professional relationship.

14. On or about November 3, 2009, ROBERT MCDONNELL was elected Governor of Virginia. While ROBERT MCDONNELL and JW had met briefly during the campaign as a result of ROBERT MCDONNELL's use of JW's aircraft, they had no personal relationship and were merely professional acquaintances at the time that ROBERT MCDONNELL became Governor-Elect.

15. In or about December 2009, ROBERT MCDONNELL attended a political event at the Four Seasons Hotel in New York City. As a result of a request by JW to one of ROBERT MCDONNELL's staff, JW met with ROBERT MCDONNELL and MAUREEN MCDONNELL at the Four Seasons Hotel. During the meeting, MAUREEN MCDONNELL asked for assistance in finding a designer dress for her husband's upcoming inauguration as Governor, and JW agreed to help. MAUREEN MCDONNELL subsequently informed JE, one of ROBERT MCDONNELL's senior staff members, that JW had agreed to purchase a designer dress by Oscar de la Renta for MAUREEN MCDONNELL for the inauguration. JE expressed concerns regarding the prospect of JW purchasing MAUREEN MCDONNELL's inaugural dress and ultimately informed her that JW's purchase of a designer dress for the inauguration would be inappropriate and should not be done. As a result, MAUREEN MCDONNELL became upset with JE.

16. On or about December 21, 2009, MAUREEN MCDONNELL sent an email to JE, stating:

> I need to talk to you about Inaugural clothing budget. I need answers and Bob is screaming about the thousands I'm charging up in credit card debt. We are broke, have an unconscionable amount in credit card debt already, and this Inaugural is killing us!! I need answers and I need help, and I need to get this done.

MAUREEN MCDONNELL subsequently told JW that she could not accept the dress at that time but that she would take a "rain check" from him.

17. On or about October 3, 2010, JW agreed to let ROBERT MCDONNELL use JW's aircraft to fly from Richmond, Virginia, to Sacramento, California, for a political event. JW met ROBERT MCDONNNELL in Sacramento, California, and accompanied him on the return flights to Richmond. JW used the trip as an opportunity to discuss Star Scientific's products directly with ROBERT MCDONNELL. During the return flights, JW informed

ROBERT MCDONNELL of the significant potential health benefits of anatabine and the need for scientific studies of these potential health benefits. JW told ROBERT MCDONNELL that Star Scientific needed the assistance of the Virginia government, and ROBERT MCDONNELL told JW that he would put JW in contact with the Virginia Secretary of Health and Human Resources (the "Virginia Secretary of Health").

18. On or about October 12, 2010, an OGV staff member emailed the Virginia Secretary of Health and attached a copy of a press release that had been forwarded by JW's assistant. The press release announced the beginning of clinical trials of anatabine (also referred to as "RCP-006," a compound whose active ingredient is anatabine) for the treatment of Alzheimer's disease. In the email, the OGV staff member stated, "[T]he Governor would like you to review the attached. I am sending the original note up to you today."

19. On or about November 4, 2010, JW met with the Virginia Secretary of Health to discuss Star Scientific's products. The meeting had been previously arranged by an OGV staff member. During the meeting, JW discussed the potential health benefits of Star Scientific's products. The Virginia Secretary of Health was skeptical regarding JW's claims because Star Scientific's products had not been scientifically proven to be effective. JW requested that the Virginia Secretary of Health visit the Roskamp Institute, a Florida-based research group that had financial ties to Star Scientific and had begun scientific studies of anatabine. The Virginia Secretary of Health ultimately rejected JW's invitation to visit the Roskamp Institute.

20. On or about February 3, 2011, Star Scientific invited doctors and health professionals to a seminar dinner at the Jefferson Hotel in Richmond, Virginia, for its CigRx® product. The dinner was part of Star Scientific's marketing strategy of gaining consumer acceptance by convincing doctors and health professionals to recommend CigRx® to their patients. On the day of the dinner, JW contacted one of the OGV staff members and requested that ROBERT MCDONNELL come to the CigRx® event and address the attendees. That evening, both ROBERT MCDONNELL and MAUREEN MCDONNELL came to the event at the Jefferson Hotel. ROBERT MCDONNELL made brief remarks in support of Star Scientific to the doctors and health professionals in attendance. Star Scientific subsequently received the OGV's approval to put pictures of ROBERT MCDONNELL speaking at the CigRx® event on the company's Facebook and Twitter social media sites.

21. As of in or about 2009 and continuing through 2012, MoBo's two Virginia Beach properties required capital infusions of up to $60,000 annually to meet mortgage payments and other expenses. MoBo relied on loans, including those from family and friends, to make up the difference. MoBo explored the possibility of selling the two properties without success as their values were declining. MoBo also began to explore refinancing the heavily leveraged properties.

F. The Scheme

22. As set forth in greater detail below, from in or about April 2011 through in or about March 2013, the defendants participated in a scheme to use ROBERT MCDONNELL's official position as the Governor of Virginia to enrich the defendants and their family members by soliciting and obtaining payments, loans, gifts, and other things of value from JW and Star Scientific in exchange for ROBERT MCDONNELL and the OGV performing official actions on an as-needed basis, as opportunities arose, to legitimize, promote, and obtain research studies for Star Scientific's products, including Anatabloc®. And as also detailed below, the defendants took steps throughout that time to conceal the scheme.

23. On or about April 11, 2011, MAUREEN MCDONNELL contacted JW and requested that he take her shopping in New York City for the designer dress by Oscar de la Renta. MAUREEN MCDONNELL explained that she and ROBERT MCDONNELL were attending a political event at the Union League Club in New York City on April 13, 2011, and that she would ensure that JW was seated next to ROBERT MCDONNELL at the event. JW agreed to pay for the shopping trip.

24. On or about April 13, 2011, JW accompanied MAUREEN MCDONNELL to several luxury stores in New York City, including Oscar de la Renta, Louis Vuitton, and Bergdorf Goodman. MAUREEN MCDONNELL informed JW that she needed dresses and accessories for her daughter's upcoming wedding and for her and ROBERT MCDONNELL's upcoming anniversary party. JW paid for the entire luxury shopping trip for MAUREEN MCDONNELL and spent approximately $10,999 at Oscar de la Renta, approximately $5,685 at Louis Vuitton, and approximately $2,604 at Bergdorf Goodman. As promised by MAUREEN MCDONNELL, JW was seated next to ROBERT MCDONNELL at the Union League Club event later that evening.

25. On or about April 29, 2011, JW and his wife attended a private dinner at the Governor's Mansion with ROBERT MCDONNELL and MAUREEN MCDONNELL. During the dinner, JW and his wife discussed Star Scientific's products with the defendants. During the dinner, JW and his wife met CM, one of the defendants' daughters. JW and his wife had not previously met CM, who they learned was getting married in June 2011.

26. On or about May 2, 2011, JW had a private meeting with MAUREEN MCDONNELL at the Governor's Mansion. During the meeting, MAUREEN MCDONNELL informed JW that she and ROBERT MCDONNELL were having severe financial difficulties.

MAUREEN MCDONNELL asked JW for a $50,000 loan. MAUREEN MCDONNELL also told JW that she could help Star Scientific but that she needed JW's financial assistance.

27. MAUREEN MCDONNELL also informed JW that she and ROBERT MCDONNELL did not know how they were going to pay for their daughter's upcoming wedding expenses, and she asked for JW's assistance. JW asked how much money was needed, and MAUREEN MCDONNELL responded that $15,000 was needed to pay the remaining catering costs.

28. Before agreeing to provide the requested financial assistance to the defendants, JW spoke directly with ROBERT MCDONNELL about the $50,000 loan. In that conversation, ROBERT MCDONNELL explained the defendants' financial difficulties. ROBERT MCDONNELL informed JW that the rental income from the defendants' rental properties in Virginia Beach was not covering the bills from those properties. JW agreed to provide the $50,000 loan with a two-year term at 5% interest. JW also informed ROBERT MCDONNELL that loan paperwork was not necessary.

29. On or about May 9, 2011, an OGV staff member sent an email to the Virginia Secretary of Health stating:

> The Governor said that he sent you some material on the RosKamp Institute (http://www.rfdn.org/) and that you were going to get back to him regarding your thoughts on the organization. Have you had a chance to look at that yet? If so, could you let me know your thoughts? We are currently evaluating having the Governor go down to Florida to speak to this group and wanted to get your feedback prior to moving forward on this.

The Virginia Secretary of Health sent a response email stating "[h]e mentioned this to me on Thursday so I have not gotten to it yet. How soon do you need to make a decision?" The OGV staff member responded via email that "[t]he person inviting the Governor is a good friend so I would like to be as responsive as possible."

30. On or about May 9, 2011, an OGV staff member sent an email to JW's assistant stating:

> I spoke with the Governor regarding flying down to speak to the RosKamp institute on June 1st. Unfortunately, after checking with his daughter (she is getting married that Saturday) he doesn't believe he will be able to attend due to some Dad commitments that day. I'm so sorry this won't work out! What else can we do to fix this?

31. On or about May 17, 2011, MAUREEN MCDONNELL entered a calendar event on her electronic calendar for her attendance at the June 1, 2011, Star Scientific event at the Roskamp Institute in Florida.

32. On or about May 23, 2011, JW instructed his assistant to write two checks: (a) a $50,000 check (No. 1001) made payable to MAUREEN MCDONNELL; and (b) a $15,000 check (No. 1002) made payable in blank with a memo annotation of "wedding gift." On or about May 23, 2011, JW also visited MAUREEN MCDONNELL at the Governor's Mansion and gave her the two checks.

33. On or about May 25, 2011, MAUREEN MCDONNELL deposited the $50,000 check (No. 1001) into her personal bank account (No. xxxx4417) at Wells Fargo Bank (d/b/a Wachovia Bank). Prior to that deposit, MAUREEN MCDONNELL's personal bank account had an available balance of approximately $4,798.

34. Between on or about May 25, 2011, and on or about May 31, 2011, MAUREEN MCDONNELL made the following payments from her Wells Fargo Bank (d/b/a Wachovia Bank) account (No. xxxx4417): (a) a $10,638.83 payment to Pentagon Federal Credit Union ("PenFed") for a credit card held solely in the name of ROBERT MCDONNELL; (b) a $9,900 payment to Bank of America for a credit card held jointly in both defendants' names; and (c) a $1,500 payment to MoBo.

35. On or about May 26, 2011, the catering company for CM's wedding cashed the $15,000 check referenced above (No. 1002). On or about December 29, 2010, ROBERT MCDONNELL had signed the contract with the catering company for CM's wedding and had made two payments totaling $7,948.50 in December 2010 and January 2011 as deposits on that contract. On or about June 13, 2011, after CM's wedding, the catering company refunded $5,266.50 via check to MAUREEN MCDONNELL. MAUREEN MCDONNELL caused the refund check to be deposited into her Wells Fargo Bank (d/b/a Wachovia Bank) account (No. xxxx4417) on or about June 21, 2011.

36. On or about May 28, 2011, ROBERT MCDONNELL sent an email to JW stating "Thanks so much for all your help with my family. Your very generous gift to [CM] was most appreciated as well as the golf round tomorrow for the boys. Maureen is excited about the trip to fla to learn more about the products and to see [JW's wife]. Have a restful weekend with your family. Thanks."

37. On or about May 29, 2011, ROBERT MCDONNELL, his two sons, and his future son-in-law played golf at Kinloch Golf Club ("Kinloch"), an exclusive private golf course in Manakin-Sabot, Virginia. JW was a member at Kinloch and had agreed to pay for ROBERT MCDONNELL and his family's golf outing there even though JW would not be playing with them. During the round of golf, ROBERT MCDONNELL and his family charged approximately $2,380 to JW's Kinloch member account, including approximately $1,200 in greens fees, $500 in caddie fees, $410 in merchandise at the pro shop, and $270 in food and beverages.

38. On or about June 1, 2011, MAUREEN MCDONNELL opened a brokerage account at Brokerage Firm A.

39. On or about June 1, 2011, MAUREEN MCDONNELL purchased 6,000 shares of Star Scientific stock in her newly opened Brokerage Firm A account. To pay for the purchase, MAUREEN MCDONNELL wrote a check from her Wells Fargo Bank (d/b/a Wachovia Bank) account (No. xxxx4417) for approximately $31,079.

40. On or about June 1, 2011, MAUREEN MCDONNELL and her Chief of Staff, a Virginia government employee, traveled on JW's private aircraft to Star Scientific's event at the Roskamp Institute in Sarasota, Florida. MAUREEN MCDONNELL spoke at the event, which was heavily attended by Star Scientific's investors, and announced that she was offering the Governor's Mansion for the location of Star Scientific's official product launch of Anatabloc®

41. On or about June 16, 2011, JW's assistant emailed an attached letter dated that same day to MAUREEN MCDONNELL's Chief of Staff. The letter was from JW, addressed to ROBERT MCDONNELL, and stated, in part:

> The particular intent of this letter is to provide the Commonwealth of Virginia with a technology platform to lower healthcare costs.
>
> ...
>
> I am suggesting that you use the attached protocol to initiate the 'Virginia Study' of Anatabloc at the Medical College of Virginia and the University of Virginia School of Medicine, with an emphasis on endocrinology, cardiology, osteoarthritis and gastroenterology.
>
> ...
>
> This landmark study will provide the data for an evaluation of the economic impact of Anatabloc in healthcare, and if we are right then I believe that the results of the Virginia study will have a major impact on reducing healthcare costs for Virginia.

MAUREEN MCDONNELL's Chief of Staff subsequently forwarded the letter by email to MAUREEN MCDONNELL.

42. In or about early July 2011, Star Scientific began exploring possible funding sources for scientific studies at Virginia research universities of Anatabloc's® potential health benefits. In particular, Star Scientific was interested in obtaining grant funding from the Virginia

Tobacco Indemnification and Community Revitalization Commission ("Tobacco Commission"), which provides grants for the promotion of economic growth and development in tobacco-dependent communities using proceeds of the national tobacco settlement. It was important to Star Scientific that these studies not be funded by the company for two primary reasons: (a) the studies would be very expensive and would strain Star Scientific's finances, and (b) having third-party funding would enhance the perceived legitimacy of the results of the studies in the scientific community.

43. The Tobacco Commission would not provide grants to for-profit entities. Therefore, Star Scientific developed a plan to encourage Virginia state research universities (e.g. the University of Virginia ("UVa") and Virginia Commonwealth University ("VCU," formerly Medical College of Virginia ("MCV"))) to apply to the Tobacco Commission for grants to perform scientific research of anatabine, the main active ingredient in the company's products.

44. In or about early July 2011, to effectuate its plan, Star Scientific began reaching out to scientific researchers at Virginia state universities. In addition to informing these researchers about the preliminary scientific results that indicated that anatabine might have health benefits for the treatment of various medical conditions, Star Scientific informed the Virginia state researchers that ROBERT MCDONNELL and MAUREEN MCDONNELL supported the research of the company's products and that the Tobacco Commission was a potential source of grant funding for the research.

45. On or about July 23, 2011, Star Scientific held a symposium at Gibson Island, Maryland, to discuss potential scientific studies of anatabine. The company invited researchers from UVa and VCU to attend the symposium to learn more about these studies and potential research funding from the Tobacco Commission. In addition, MAUREEN MCDONNELL's

Chief of Staff was invited to attend. The state researchers and MAUREEN MCDONNELL's Chief of Staff traveled together to and from the all-day symposium on JW's private aircraft.

46. From on or about July 28, 2011, through on or about July 31, 2011, ROBERT MCDONNELL, MAUREEN MCDONNELL, and their family members enjoyed a private vacation at JW's multimillion-dollar vacation home on Smith Mountain Lake in Virginia. MAUREEN MCDONNELL had previously called JW to ask whether JW's Ferrari would be at the house for ROBERT MCDONNELL's use. JW arranged to have a Star Scientific employee transport the Ferrari from Richmond to his Smith Mountain Lake house so that the defendants could use the Ferrari during their vacation. In addition, JW rented a boat specifically for the defendants' use during the vacation.

47. On or about July 31, 2011, at approximately 7:47 p.m., MAUREEN MCDONNELL sent an email to JW that contained no text but had an attached picture of ROBERT MCDONNELL driving JW's Ferrari.

48. On or about July 31, 2011, at approximately 11:29 p.m., ROBERT MCDONNELL sent an email to the Virginia Secretary of Health stating that ROBERT MCDONNELL "would like to have [one of the Secretary of Health's Deputies] attend a short briefing at the mansion about 10am with first lady on the Star Scientific anatablock [sic] trials planned in va at vcu and uva."

49. On or about August 1, 2011, as a result of ROBERT MCDONNELL's email to the Virginia Secretary of Health the night before, MAUREEN MCDONNELL, JW, and a senior policy advisor to the Virginia Secretary of Health met at the Governor's Mansion. JW informed the policy advisor that research scientists at UVa and MCV were interested in doing clinical trials of the potential health benefits of Anatabloc® for autoimmune diseases. JW explained that the research scientists at the Virginia universities would get small planning grants to develop test protocols so that large grant proposals could be submitted to the Tobacco Commission. In MAUREEN MCDONNELL's presence, JW told the policy advisor that he anticipated Tobacco Commission funding for these studies and that he had discussed this with ROBERT MCDONNELL. In addition, JW discussed the idea of having Virginia government employees use Anatabloc® as a control group for research studies.

50. On or about August 1, 2011, MAUREEN MCDONNELL also met privately with JW. During the meeting, MAUREEN MCDONNELL noticed JW's watch and asked what brand it was. JW informed her that it was a Rolex. She informed JW that she would like to get one for ROBERT MCDONNELL because he would like a Rolex. JW expressed concern regarding whether ROBERT MCDONNELL would actually wear such a luxury watch given his role as a senior government official. MAUREEN MCDONNELL told JW that she wanted JW to buy a Rolex for ROBERT MCDONNELL. JW subsequently bought a Rolex for ROBERT MCDONNELL. When JW contacted MAUREEN MCDONNELL to ask her what she wanted engraved on the watch, MAUREEN MCDONNELL instructed JW to have "71st Governor of Virginia" engraved on the back of the Rolex.

51. On or about August 1, 2011, MAUREEN MCDONNELL entered a calendar event on her electronic calendar for her attendance on August 30, 2011, for a "Lunch w/ VA researchers."

52. On or about August 1, 2011, the senior policy advisor from the Virginia Secretary of Health's office who had met with JW and MAUREEN MCDONNELL earlier that day sent an email to JW. In the email, the policy advisor stated that "it is necessary for us to make policy recommendations and decisions off of sound data" and that she was "grateful that [JW was] making strides to validate the incredible anecdotes and stories that result from your work." The policy advisor concluded the email by stating that she would "continue to work alongside of the First Lady as we identify how best to move forward."

53. On or about August 2, 2011, MAUREEN MCDONNELL ordered Brokerage Firm A to purchase an additional 522 shares of Star Scientific stock for her account.

54. On or about August 4, 2011, MAUREEN MCDONNELL sent an email to ROBERT MCDONNELL, forwarding a quote from a stock market analyst who covered Star Scientific's stock. In the forwarded quote, the stock market analyst stated that "[a]s an economist, however, I am utterly certain that Anatabloc is going to shake our political system to its very roots. This is because even tiny changes to the actuarial tables will have enormous budgetary impacts." MAUREEN MCDONNELL annotated the importance of the email as "high."

55. On or about August 5, 2011, MAUREEN MCDONNELL sent an email to the above-referenced stock market analyst. In her email – which was in response to the analyst forwarding a favorable article about Star Scientific's Anatabloc® – MAUREEN MCDONNELL asked, "Would it be possible for you to send this as an attachment like you did in the first email so I would be able to print out a clean copy for my husband?"

56. On or about August 5, 2011, one of the defendants' sons and his friend played golf at Kinloch. Even though JW was not playing with them, they played as JW's guests and charged approximately $618 to JW's Kinloch member account, including approximately $300 in greens fees, $100 in caddie fees, and $214 in merchandise at the pro shop.

57. On or about August 11, 2011, the defendants' two sons and a friend played golf at Kinloch. Even though JW was not playing with them, they played as JW's guests and charged approximately $1,309 to JW's Kinloch member account, including approximately $900 in greens fees, $300 in caddie fees, and $109 in food and beverages.

58. On or about August 12, 2011, MAUREEN MCDONNELL's Chief of Staff asked an OGV staff member to put a lunch that MAUREEN MCDONNELL was hosting for a number of researchers and doctors on August 30, 2011, on ROBERT MCDONNELL's schedule for that day.

59. On or about August 13, 2011, ROBERT MCDONNELL and one of his sons played golf at Kinloch. Even though JW was not playing with them, they played as JW's guests and charged approximately $869 to JW's Kinloch member account, including approximately $600 in greens fees, $200 in caddie fees, $53 in merchandise at the pro shop, and $16 in food and beverages.

60. On or about August 30, 2011, the defendants hosted an event for the launch of Star Scientific's Anatabloc® product at the Governor's Mansion. JW had previously coordinated the list of invitees for the event with MAUREEN MCDONNELL and her staff. The invitees included some of the same UVa and VCU research scientists whom Star Scientific was attempting to convince to perform clinical trials of Anatabloc®. Prior to the event, MAUREEN MCDONNELL and JW placed samples of Anatabloc® at each table setting. On the day of the event, Star Scientific issued a press release stating, in pertinent part:

> Star Scientific, Inc. (NASDAQ: CIGX) has announced that the company is pleased to initiate the launch today of Anatabloc™, a dietary supplement that is designed to support the immune system in maintaining healthy levels of inflammation.
>
> **...
>
> A group of Richmond area physicians and healthcare providers are gathering at the Virginia Governor's mansion today to learn more about the state of the research of Anatabloc™. The lead researchers who have overseen pre-clinical studies will discuss the results of testing with this group. They will be joined by researchers from the University of Virginia Medical School and the VCU Medical > Center who also are interested in studying further potentials for Anatabloc™. [Star Scientific's affiliate] has solicited research proposals from these institutions, and expects to issue planning grants for the preparation of full research proposals.

ROBERT MCDONNELL attended the Star Scientific event at the Governor's Mansion and spoke favorably to the attendees regarding further study of anatabine. During the event, JW presented $25,000 checks to UVa and VCU research scientists as planning grants to encourage UVa and VCU to prepare full research proposals for scientific studies of anatabine.

61. On or about September 9, 2011, a broker at Brokerage Firm A wrote a letter to MAUREEN MCDONNELL outlining a prior conversation between the two. In that conversation, MAUREEN MCDONNELL had requested information from the broker regarding ways to avoid the Star Scientific shares held in her Brokerage Firm A account remaining in her name. She had informed the broker that she wanted the shares out of her name by the end of the year in order to avoid certain annual reporting requirements. Among the options that MAUREEN MCDONNELL had mentioned were gifting the shares to her children or setting up a blind trust. The broker wrote the September 9, 2011, letter to MAUREEN MCDONNELL because he was uncomfortable with MAUREEN MCDONNELL's request that he assist her in financial transactions designed to avoid annual reporting requirements. In the letter, the broker stated:

> The 6,522 shares you purchased of Star Scientific, Inc. are currently titled in your name alone. My understanding is that you would like to gift a portion of these shares to each of the children, either now or at some point in the future, and possibly end up with zero shares in your name.
>
> ...
>
> I don't have the answers about how to avoid shares remaining in your name, without transferring them to another entity. You had mentioned the use of a blind trust. If you have an attorney draft the trust, we can open and operate this type of account. However, the blind trust is a discretionary account that we would manage, and you essentially would have no direction in the purchase or sale of securities. As such, rather than owning shares of Star Scientific, you most likely would end up with a portfolio of well-known large dividend paying companies > and bonds. I think this would defeat the purpose, at least for your intent of this Star Scientific investment.

62. On or about October 18, 2011, Star Scientific held a dinner at the Westin Hotel in Richmond, Virginia, for local area doctors and health care professionals to learn more about Anatabloc®. MAUREEN MCDONNELL was the featured guest of the dinner and spoke favorably regarding Star Scientific and its products.

63. On or about October 22, 2011, Star Scientific held a dinner at the Warwick Hills Golf & Country Club in Grand Blanc, Michigan, for local area doctors and health care professionals to learn more about Anatabloc® MAUREEN MCDONNELL was the featured guest of the dinner and spoke favorably regarding Star Scientific and its products. MAUREEN MCDONNELL flew to and from the event on JW's private jet. During the flights, MAUREEN MCDONNELL, JW, and a research scientist who consulted for Star Scientific discussed the potential health benefits of Anatabloc® and the need for clinical studies. The next day, the research scientist sent MAUREEN MCDONNELL an email summarizing the discussions on board JW's aircraft. In the email, the research scientist wrote about the lack of data regarding the number of people who suffer from autoimmune and chronic inflammatory conditions. He stated that "it would be of value to perform a study of Virginia government employees . to determine the prevalences [sic] of autoimmune and inflammatory conditions." The research scientist further stated, "Next, to tie in [JW's] anti-inflammatory product, one could add a follow-up data assessment . . . to assess whether the inflammatory markers screened for at the initial visit have been decreased in employees who have taken anatabine."

64. On or about October 24, 2011, MAUREEN MCDONNELL sent a response email to the research scientist stating "[t]hanks for your email and I printed your [sic] it out and shared it with my husband. He said he'd like to talk to some people to look into it and discern what the best approach for Virginia would be."

65. During the fall of 2011, Star Scientific was trying to effectuate its plans for the studies at UVa and VCU by encouraging those state research universities to make grant funding applications to the Tobacco Commission for the scientific study of anatabine. As part of that effort, on or about November 29, 2011, executives at Star Scientific had a conference call with senior UVa administrators, who were Virginia government employees. The Star Scientific executives requested that UVa take the lead role among the Virginia research universities in making the grant applications to the Tobacco Commission and overseeing the use of any grant funding. The UVa administrators expressed interest but did not agree to Star Scientific's requests during the call.

66. Under Virginia law, certain state officials and employees – including the Governor and members of his staff – are required to annually file a standardized disclosure statement of their personal economic interests on or before January 15 each year. The disclosure statement is commonly referred to as the Statement of Economic Interest ("SOEI"), and it is legally required to be filed and maintained as a public record for five years. The SOEI requires a state official to: (a) disclose personal liabilities held by the state official or that official's immediate family members of more than $10,000 to any one creditor, and to state the principal business or occupation for each of those creditors; (b) disclose securities held by the state official or that official's immediate family members valued in excess of $10,000 in a company, and to list the name of the company and the type of security; and (c) disclose gifts or entertainment valued in excess of $50 received by the state official from any business or individual (other than a relative or close personal friend), and to list the name of the business or individual and the approximate value of the gift or entertainment. Pursuant to Virginia law, the state official must swear or affirm that the information provided on the SOEI is full, true, and correct to the best of that official's knowledge.

67. On or about December 20, 2011, MAUREEN MCDONNELL sold 6,522 shares of Star Scientific stock held in her Brokerage Firm A account, leaving her with no shares held in her name at year-end. MAUREEN MCDONNELL made it clear to the Brokerage Firm A broker overseeing the account that the sale of the Star Scientific stock had to occur before year-end in order to avoid annual reporting requirements.

68. On or about December 25, 2011, MAUREEN MCDONNELL gave ROBERT MCDONNELL the Rolex watch – inscribed on the back with "71st Governor of Virginia" – that JW had purchased pursuant to MAUREEN MCDONNELL's instructions.

69. On or about January 7, 2012, ROBERT MCDONNELL and his two sons played golf at Kinloch. Even though JW was not playing with them, they played as JW's guests and charged approximately $1,424 to JW's Kinloch member account, including approximately $990 in greens fees, $200 in caddie fees, $53 in merchandise at the pro shop, and $181 in food and beverages.

70. On or about January 15, 2012, ROBERT MCDONNELL filed his SOEI. On the SOEI, ROBERT MCDONNELL stated that neither he nor any member of his immediate family owned securities valued in excess of $10,000 invested in any one business. On the personal liability section of the SOEI, ROBERT MCDONNELL stated that the personal liabilities of his immediate family members to individual creditors were in an amount between $10,001 and $50,000 and that the principal business or occupation of the creditor was "Medical Services." On the gift section of the SOEI, the only gift from JW that ROBERT MCDONNELL disclosed was listed as "Lodging and entertainment" in the amount of $2,268, which was the amount JW paid for the boat rental for the defendants' use during their private family vacation at JW's multimillion-dollar home on Smith Mountain Lake in July 2011.

71. On or about January 20, 2012, MAUREEN MCDONNELL used all of the sale proceeds in her Brokerage Firm A brokerage account from the December 20, 2011, sale of Star Scientific stock to purchase 6,672 shares of Star Scientific stock.

72. On or about January 25, 2012, ROBERT MCDONNELL received an email from MU, who was ROBERT MCDONNELL's brother-in-law and was assisting in the day-to-day operations of MoBo's beach rental properties. In the email, MU stated, "For MoBo, I talked with [MAUREEN MCDONNELL] last week and she had me talk to the guy who is helping us. He said he was going to call me the next day to get an address so he could send the first check. I did not hear from him and I left [MAUREEN MCDONNELL] a message yesterday. We'll need to get that in the next week so we can keep up-to-date."

73. On or about January 27, 2012, ROBERT MCDONNELL sent an email to MAUREEN MCDONNELL that forwarded MU's email and stated, "Maureen who are we talking about that is helping us and talking to [MU]?? [JW]?" That same day, MAUREEN MCDONNELL sent a response email to ROBERT MCDONNELL stating "Just got home. I'll talk w u upstairs."

74. In or about January 2012, the Virginia Secretary of Health and his staff were planning a reception for healthcare leaders that would occur at the Governor's Mansion on February 29, 2012. The Secretary of Health and his staff put together an invitation list of those individuals whom the Secretary wanted to recognize as leaders in healthcare policy in Virginia. The list did not include JW, Star Scientific executives, or researchers affiliated with Star

Scientific. MAUREEN MCDONNELL informed JW about the reception and allowed JW to invite dozens of individuals, including Star Scientific executives, researchers affiliated with Star Scientific, and doctors whom Star Scientific was trying to convince to recommend Anatabloc® to their patients. For example, on or about February 4, 2012, MAUREEN MCDONNELL emailed JW and a marketing representative for a Star Scientific affiliate and wrote:

> We appreciate the list of Docs that you sent, but wanted you to know that you didn't have to limit them to this area; It's a reception for Healthcare Leaders from all over the state of Virginia, so please expand on your list. I checked our number of invites, and if [JW] has any more than these 39 docs, send them along because we have room to invite more.

75. Because the healthcare leaders reception was to occur at the Governor's Mansion, the Secretary of Health's staff coordinated the invitation list with an OGV staff member who oversaw Mansion events. On or about February 8, 2012, the OGV staff member sent an email to a Secretary of Health staff member informing her that the defendants had reviewed the invitation list and that ROBERT MCDONNELL wanted to make sure that the "Head officers at VCU/MCV, UVA, EVMS, [and the] Massey Cancer Center" were included on the list.

76. On or about February 9, 2012, MAUREEN MCDONNELL sent an email to ROBERT MCDONNELL, with a courtesy copy to the personal email account of JE, who served on ROBERT MCDONNELL's staff as Counselor and Senior Policy Advisor to the Governor. The subject line of the email was "FW: Anatabine clinical studies – UVA, VCU, JHU." In the email, MAUREEN MCDONNELL stated, "Here's the info from JW. He has calls in to VCU & UVA & no one will return his calls." The email forwarded an earlier email from a Star Scientific employee to JW, which described the November 29, 2011, call between senior Star Scientific executives and senior UVa officials regarding UVa's role in submitting a grant application to the Tobacco Commission for research funding of Anatabloc®. MAUREEN MCDONNELL's email to ROBERT MCDONNELL also forwarded two attachments. One of the attachments was an internal Star Scientific memorandum that set forth Star Scientific's talking points for its November 29, 2011, call with senior UVa officials, including a talking point that ROBERT MCDONNELL had expressed his support for a grant application to the Tobacco Commission for Anatabloc® research.

77. On or about February 9, 2012, JE sent a response email to MAUREEN MCDONNELL's email from earlier that day. JE stated, "Thanks, sorry for the delayed response, it has been very busy with session. Lets [sic] talk next week when you return."

78. On or about February 10, 2012, MAUREEN MCDONNELL sent a response email to JE's email, stating:

> Pls call [JW] today get him to fill u in on where this is at. Gov wants to know why nothing has developed w studies after [JW] gave $200,000. I'm just trying to talk w [JW.] Gov wants to get this going w VCU MCV. Pls let us know what u find out after we return. [JW's] cell is 804-[xxx-xxxx]. Thanks, -mm

79. On or about February 16, 2012, at 11:56 p.m., ROBERT MCDONNELL sent an email to JW, stating "[JW]. Know u have been slammed. Do u want me to call your lawyer on the certificates and the documents. Thanks for all your help. Gov." This email was in reference to a plan to have JW transfer shares of Star Scientific stock that JW owned to a Brokerage Firm A account for the defendants' use to fund MoBo.

80. On or about February 17, 2012, at 12:02 a.m., ROBERT MCDONNELL sent an email to JE stating "Pls see me about anatabloc issues at VCU and UVA. Thx." Within minutes, JE sent a response email to ROBERT MCDONNELL stating "will do. We need to be careful with this issue."

81. On or about February 22, 2012, MAUREEN MCDONNELL sent a text message to ROBERT MCDONNELL, stating "[JW] txted me 2say he needs our brokers name and phone number to transfer shares this week."

82. On or about February 23, 2012, ROBERT MCDONNELL and MAUREEN MCDONNELL had a conference call with a Brokerage Firm A broker. During the call, the defendants informed the broker that they owned Star Scientific shares that were being held by Star Scientific and that the defendants wanted to transfer the shares into a Brokerage Firm A account. The defendants further stated that they planned on using the shares as collateral for a margin loan that would ultimately be utilized for MoBo. The defendants gave the broker JW's contact information and asked the broker to call JW in order to coordinate the transfer of the Star Scientific stock to the Brokerage Firm A account.

83. On or about February 29, 2012, ROBERT MCDONNELL had a private meeting with JW to discuss potential ways that JW could transfer 50,000 shares of Star Scientific stock that JW owned to a brokerage account controlled by the defendants. ROBERT MCDONNELL and JW discussed whether such a transfer would be reportable by either ROBERT MCDONNELL or JW and their mutual interest in making sure that it was not.

84. On or about February 29, 2012, the defendants attended the reception at the Governor's Mansion for healthcare leaders in Virginia. Senior Star Scientific executives (including JW), researchers affiliated with Star Scientific, and medical professionals whom Star Scientific was attempting to impress (including from Virginia research universities) also attended the reception.

85. On or about February 29, 2012, immediately following the healthcare leaders reception at the Governor's Mansion, the defendants, JW, and a scientific researcher affiliated with Star Scientific attended a small dinner at the La Grotta restaurant in Richmond, Virginia. JW paid for the dinner, which cost approximately $1,423.

86. Because of concerns about disclosures that would be necessary if JW transferred 50,000 shares of Star Scientific stock to the defendants, JW and ROBERT MCDONNELL agreed that JW would simply transfer $50,000 to MoBo as a loan to the defendants. The loan was not documented and included a 2% interest rate and a three-year term. On or about March 6, 2012, JW instructed his assistant to write a check for $50,000 made payable to MoBo. To make it more difficult for anyone to discern that JW was transferring money to the defendants, JW instructed his assistant that the check should not reference the defendants. When JW's assistant mistakenly put MAUREEN MCDONNELL's name in the memo line of the $50,000 check, JW instructed his assistant to void that check and write a new check without MAUREEN MCDONNELL's name, which the assistant did.

87. On or about March 12, 2012, ROBERT MCDONNELL sent a text message to JW stating "Do you have time tomorrow to talk with me on business matters. Governor. What time are you available."

88. On or about March 21, 2012, ROBERT MCDONNELL met with the Virginia Secretary of Administration to discuss the Virginia state employee health plan and ways to reduce healthcare costs in Virginia. During the meeting, ROBERT MCDONNELL pulled some Anatabloc® out of his pocket and told the Secretary of Administration and one of her staff members that Anatabloc® had beneficial health effects, that he personally took Anatabloc®, and that it was working well for him. ROBERT MCDONNELL asked the Secretary of Administration and her staff member to reach out to the "Anatabloc people" and meet with them to discuss Anatabloc®.

89. On or about May 18, 2012, ROBERT MCDONNELL sent a text message to JW stating "Per voicemail would like to see if you could extend another 20K loan for this year. Call if possible and I'll ask [MU] to send instructions." JW sent a response text message to ROBERT MCDONNELL stating "Done, tell me who to make it out to and address. Will FedEx."

90. On or about Tuesday, May 22, 2012, per JW's instructions, JW's assistant wire-transferred $20,000 to MoBo's bank account.

91. On or about May 25, 2012, JW sent a text message to ROBERT MCDONNELL stating "MoBo was done Tuesday. Golf game improving. Hope to play w you and Phil homestead. Star doing great." ROBERT MCDONNELL sent a response text message to JW stating "Thanks so much for the help. See you in a few weeks."

92. On or about June 13, 2012, ROBERT MCDONNELL sent an email to JW stating "Stock looking good. Well done. Gov."

93. On or about July 3, 2012, ROBERT MCDONNELL sent a text message to JW stating "Good announcements lately. Stock looks good. Hope all is well. You and [JW's wife] enjoy the 4th of July. Gov."

94. From on or about August 31, 2012, through on or about September 3, 2012, ROBERT MCDONNELL and MAUREEN MCDONNELL vacationed as JW's guests at the Chatham Bars Inn, a luxury resort and spa in Cape Cod, Massachusetts. JW, a research scientist affiliated with Star Scientific, one of ROBERT MCDONNELL's political advisors, and their wives accompanied the defendants o vacation. JW paid for the vast majority of the costs of the trip, including flying the defendan o Cape Cod aboard JW's jet, private cottages at the resort, golf at the resort course, expensive dinners, and the charter of a sailing yacht.

95. From in or about November 2012 through in or about March 2013, the defendants obtained yard work and other miscellaneous home repairs at their personal residence from one of JW's brothers. Those services included the installation of a hot tub cover that JW purchased for the defendants and work to re-stain the defendants' deck at their personal residence.

96. On or about December 21, 2012, MAUREEN MCDONNELL called a Brokerage Firm A broker to discuss the 6,672 shares of Star Scientific stock held in her brokerage account. MAUREEN MCDONNELL informed the broker that she wanted individual brokerage accounts opened for each of the defendants' five children and that she wanted to transfer shares of Star Scientific stock into the children's accounts. MAUREEN MCDONNELL further informed the broker that these transfers had to occur before year-end in order to avoid reporting requirements related to the ownership of Star Scientific stock.

97. On or about December 26, 2012, MAUREEN MCDONNELL sent a letter to the Brokerage Firm A broker instructing him to transfer 1,000 shares of Star Scientific stock from her brokerage account to each of the defendants' five children's newly opened brokerage accounts. The Brokerage Firm A broker followed MAUREEN MCDONNELL's instructions and transferred a total of 5,000 Star Scientific shares from her account to the children's accounts. Although the transfers occurred on January 2, 2013, the transfers were made effective as of December 31, 2012, which resulted in MAUREEN MCDONNELL holding 1,672 shares of Star Scientific stock – valued at approximately $4,480 – as of year-end.

98. On or about January 15, 2013, ROBERT MCDONNELL filed his SOEI. On the standardized disclosure form, ROBERT MCDONNELL stated that neither he nor any member of his immediate family owned securities valued in excess of $10,000 invested in any one business. On the personal liability section of the SOEI, ROBERT MCDONNELL stated that the personal liabilities of his immediate family members to individual creditors were in an amount between $10,001 and $50,000 and that the principal business or occupation of the creditor was "Health Care." On the gift section of the SOEI, the only gifts associated with JW that ROBERT MCDONNELL disclosed were expenses related to the defendants' luxury vacation at Chatham Bars Inn.

99. On or about January 21, 2013, MAUREEN MCDONNELL called JW's assistant to request that JW provide roundtrip airline tickets for two of the defendants' daughters to travel to a bachelorette party for one of the daughters in Savannah, Georgia. After getting JW's approval, JW's assistant made the travel arrangements for the defendants' daughters and obtained the tickets.

100. On or about January 24, 2013, MAUREEN MCDONNELL sent a text message to JW, stating:

> [JW]! Would you like to stay at our Beach house in Sandbridge for some of the time you're in Virginia? Pick the best days and take the time with your family on the Ocean. Or You can have a Star Scientific retreat there and have your team come down and join you for a meeting. If one of the weekends works out with his legislative schedule, I'll bring Bob down and then you'd have some private time to talk somewhere he's comfortable. Let me know what you think. Mm

101. On or about February 10, 2013, ROBERT MCDONNELL sent an email to the defendants' five children and courtesy-copied MAUREEN MCDONNELL. In the email, ROBERT MCDONNELL stated in relevant part, "Kids. Asking for help. need to rent the beach houses at Sandbridge more. Willing to give your friends a discount for the times it's tougher to rent." The next day, MAUREEN MCDONNELL forwarded ROBERT MCDONNELL's email to JW

G. The Defendants' Efforts to Conceal the Scheme

102. On or about October 3, 2012, as part of required paperwork for a loan on one of the MoBo Virginia Beach properties through TowneBank, ROBERT MCDONNELL caused TowneBank to receive a personal financial statement that listed total liabilities of $2,075,000 and listed no other loans payable. The financial statement did not list any of the loans from JW

103. On or about February 1, 2013, ROBERT MCDONNELL and MAUREEN MCDONNELL caused a signed Uniform Residential Loan Application to be transmitted to PenFed as part of an effort to refinance four loans, including loans on the two MoBo Virginia Beach properties. The Uniform Residential Loan Application listed total liabilities of $2,837,226 and listed no loans from or liabilities to JW. It also did not list any Star Scientific securities held by the defendants as assets.

104. On or about February 15, 2013, MAUREEN MCDONNELL was interviewed by law enforcement officers regarding the $50,000 and $15,000 checks from JW in May 2011. Although MAUREEN MCDONNELL stated that the $50,000 check was a personal loan from JW and that she had asked JW for the loan to help with the defendants' expenses and cash flow, she falsely claimed that there was a loan agreement that she had signed and that she was making periodic payments on the $50,000 loan. MAUREEN MCDONNELL described JW throughout the interview as a friend and falsely claimed that ROBERT MCDONNELL had met JW "many years ago." She further falsely claimed that ROBERT MCDONNELL first met JW when they both worked together at American Hospital Supply following ROBERT MCDONNELL's discharge from the United States Army.

105. On or about February 18, 2013 – three days after MAUREEN MCDONNELL was interviewed by law enforcement – ROBERT MCDONNELL sent a five-page fax to a loan officer at PenFed. On the first-page coversheet, ROBERT MCDONNELL wrote, "I reviewed the general loan application again this weekend and made some updates concerning information that was incomplete." The remaining four pages of the fax included handwritten changes by ROBERT MCDONNELL to the Uniform Residential Loan Application that had been originally signed by both defendants and sent to PenFed on or about February 1, 2013. The original loan application submitted by the defendants to PenFed did not include any reference to liabilities resulting from the $120,000 in loans from JW. ROBERT MCDONNELL's handwritten changes on or about February 18, 2013 listed $50,000 of liabilities to JW and $70,000 of liabilities to Starwood Trust, which was the entity through which JW had funded the loans to the defendants. ROBERT MCDONNELL further stated in his handwritten changes that payments due on the loans were zero and that the loans were unsecured. ROBERT MCDONNELL's handwritten changes on February 18, 2013, also listed 1,672 shares of Star Scientific stock with a value of $3,143 in the assets portion of the loan application.

106. In or about March 2013, MAUREEN MCDONNELL met with JW's brother at the defendants' residence and told JW's brother that she had been interviewed by law enforcement. At that meeting, MAUREEN MCDONNELL – for the first time – asked JW's brother to send her a bill for the work JW's brother had performed for the defendants since approximately November 2012. Thereafter, on or about March 4, 2013, JW's brother sent an email to MAUREEN MCDONNELL stating "Find attached a list of expenditures for your residence."

107. In or about March 2013, after telling JW's brother that she had been interviewed by law enforcement, MAUREEN MCDONNELL also gave JW's brother a box and letter. MAUREEN MCDONNELL asked JW's brother to give it to JW for her, and JW's brother caused it to be delivered to JW's house. The box included some of the clothing JW had purchased for MAUREEN MCDONNELL in April 2011, and it included a handwritten note from MAUREEN MCDONNELL to JW and his wife stating:

> I can't begin to thank you how special you made me feel on [CM's] wedding day and on our 35th Wedding Anniversary Day all dressed up in the beautiful outfits you adorned me in on both momentous occasions. I'm so happy we've been able to share so many significant milestones in our lives with you both! I truly hope your daughter will now be able to enjoy these lovely outfits and show them off on many grand occasions. If not, I'm sure there are many exemplary charitable organizations like we talked about who would welcome the opportunity to auction them for a wonderful cause having been worn only once by the First Lady of Virginia to her daughter's Wedding at the Executive Mansion and celebrating her 35th Wedding Anniversary with the Governor. Actually, if that happens I think I'll be there to bid on them myself! Please know that we cherish our friendship with you and look forward to many more wonderful memories together ahead! XOXO! Maureen McDonnell

COUNT ONE

(Conspiracy to Defraud the Citizens of Virginia of Their Right to Honest Services by Use of Interstate Wires)

108. The allegations set forth in paragraphs 1 through 107 are repeated and realleged as if set forth fully herein.

109. From in or about April 2011 through in or about March 2013, in the Eastern District of Virginia and elsewhere, defendants

ROBERT F. MCDONNELL and
MAUREEN G. MCDONNELL

did knowingly and intentionally conspire with each other and with others, both known and unknown to the grand jury, to commit wire fraud, that is: having devised and intending to devise a scheme and artifice to defraud the citizens of Virginia of their right to the honest services of the Governor of Virginia through bribery, to transmit and cause to be transmitted by means of wire communication in interstate commerce writings, signs, signals, pictures, and sounds for the purpose of executing such scheme and artifice, in violation of Title 18, United States Code, Section 1343.

PURPOSE

110. A purpose of the conspiracy was for the defendants to secretly use ROBERT MCDONNELL's official position as Governor of Virginia to enrich the defendants and their family members by soliciting and accepting payments, loans, gifts, and other things of value from JW and Star Scientific in exchange for ROBERT F. MCDONNELL and the OGV performing official actions on an as-needed basis, as opportunities arose, to legitimize, promote, and obtain research studies for Star Scientific's products.

MANNER AND MEANS

111. The manner and means by which the defendants would and did carry out the conspiracy included, but were not limited to, the following:

a. the defendants soliciting and obtaining, both directly and indirectly, for themselves and their family members financial payments, loans, gifts, and other things of value from JW and Star Scientific;

b. the defendants taking steps to conceal from the citizens of Virginia the things of value received from JW and Star Scientific in order to hide the nature and scope of their dealings with JW, including by routing things of value through family members and corporate entities controlled by the Governor in an effort to avoid annual disclosure requirements on the Governor's SOEIs;

c. ROBERT MCDONNELL and the OGV providing favorable official action on behalf of JW and Star Scientific as opportunities arose, including the official actions set forth below in (i)–(v);

    i. arranging meetings for JW with Virginia government officials, who were subordinates of the Governor, to discuss and promote Anatabloc®;

    ii. hosting, and the defendants attending, events at the Governor's Mansion designed to encourage Virginia university researchers to initiate studies of anatabine and to promote Star Scientific's products to doctors for referral to their patients;

iii. contacting other government officials in the OGV as part of an effort to encourage Virginia state research universities to initiate studies of anatabine;

iv. promoting Star Scientific's products and facilitating its relationships with Virginia government officials by allowing JW to invite individuals important to Star Scientific's business to exclusive events at the Governor's Mansion; and

v. recommending that senior government officials in the OGV meet with Star Scientific executives to discuss ways that the company's products could lower healthcare costs.

(All in violation of Title 18, United States Code, Section 1349)

COUNTS TWO THROUGH FOUR

(Use of Interstate Wire Communications to Further Scheme to Defraud the Citizens of Virginia of Their Right to Honest Services)

112. The allegations set forth in paragraphs 1 through 107 and 110 through 111 are repeated and realleged as if set forth fully herein.

113. On or about the respective dates shown below, each such date constituting a separate count of this Indictment, within the Eastern District of Virginia and elsewhere, defendants and others known and unknown to the grand jury, knowingly and intentionally, having devised and intending to devise a scheme and artifice to defraud the citizens of Virginia of their right to the honest services of the Governor of Virginia through bribery, for the purposes of executing such scheme and artifice, transmitted and caused to be transmitted by means of wire communication in interstate commerce writings, signs, signals, pictures, and sounds, that is the following:

ROBERT F. MCDONNELL and
MAUREEN G. MCDONNELL

Count	Date	Description
2	5/26/2011	Wire communication from BB&T Bank in the Eastern District of Virginia to a location outside the Commonwealth of Virginia to cause the transfer of funds from $15,000 check from JW via Starwood Trust to wedding catering company account with BB&T Bank
3	3/12/2012	Wire communication from TowneBank in the Eastern District of Virginia to a location outside the Commonwealth of Virginia to cause transfer of funds from $50,000 check from JW via Starwood Trust to MoBo account with TowneBank
4	5/22/2012	Wire communication from the Eastern District of Virginia to a BB&T Bank location outside the Commonwealth of Virginia to cause the transfer of $20,000 from JW via Starwood Trust to MoBo account with TowneBank

(All in violation of Title 18, United States Code, Sections 1343 and 2.)

COUNT FIVE

(Conspiracy to Obtain Property under Color of Official Right)

114. The allegations set forth in paragraphs 1 through 107 and 110 through 111 are repeated and realleged as if set forth fully herein.

115. From in or about April 2011 through in or about March 2013, in the Eastern District of Virginia and elsewhere, defendants

ROBERT F. MCDONNELL and
MAUREEN G. MCDONNELL

did knowingly and intentionally conspire with each other and with others, both known and unknown to the grand jury, to obstruct, delay, and affect in any way and degree commerce, and the movement of articles and commodities in commerce, by extortion, as those terms are defined in Title 18, United States Code, Section 1951, that is to obtain property, not due ROBERT MCDONNELL or his office and to which ROBERT MCDONNELL was not entitled, from JW and Star Scientific, with their consent, under color of official right.

(All in violation of Title 18, United States Code, Section 1951.)

COUNTS SIX THROUGH ELEVEN

(Obtaining Property under Color of Official Right)

116. The allegations set forth in paragraphs 1 through 107 and 110 through 111 are repeated and realleged as if set forth fully herein.

117. On or about the respective dates shown below, each such date constituting a separate count of this Indictment, within the Eastern District of Virginia and elsewhere, defendants and others known and unknown to the grand jury, knowingly and intentionally attempted to, did, and caused each other and others to obstruct, delay, and affect in any way and degree commerce, and the movement of articles and commodities in commerce, by extortion, as those terms are defined in Title 18, United States Code, Section 1951, that is the defendants attempted to obtain, did obtain, and caused each other and others to obtain the property listed below, not due ROBERT MCDONNELL or his office and to which ROBERT MCDONNELL was not entitled, from JW and Star Scientific, with their consent, under color of official right:

ROBERT F. MCDONNELL and
MAUREEN G. MCDONNELL

Count	Date	Description
6	5/23/2011	$50,000 check from Starwood Trust
7	5/23/2011	$15,000 check from Starwood Trust
8	5/29/2011	$2,380 in greens fees, caddie fees, merchandise, and dining expenses at Kinloch Golf Club
9	1/7/2012	$1,424 in greens fees, caddie fees, merchandise, and dining expenses at Kinloch Golf Club
10	3/6/2012	$50,000 check from Starwood Trust
11	5/22/2012	$20,000 wire transfer from Starwood Trust

(All in violation of Title 18, United States Code, Sections 1951 and 2.)

COUNT TWELVE

(False Statement)

118. The allegations set forth in paragraphs 1 through 107 are repeated and realleged as if set forth fully herein.

119. On or about October 3, 2012, within the Eastern District of Virginia and elsewhere, defendant knowingly made a false statement and report for the purpose of influencing the action of TowneBank, the accounts of which were insured by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, upon an application, commitment, and loan, and any change and extension of any of the same, by renewal, deferment of action, and otherwise, in that on ROBERT MCDONNELL's personal financial statement submitted to TowneBank, he stated that his liabilities totaled $2,075,000, when in truth and in fact, as the defendant well knew, ROBERT MCDONNELL owed at least $50,000 to JW that was not reflected on his personal financial statement and was not included in the total liabilities listed.

ROBERT F. MCDONNELL

(All in violation of Title 18, United States Code, Sections 1014 and 2.)

COUNT THIRTEEN

(False Statement)

120. The allegations set forth in paragraphs 1 through 107 are repeated and realleged as if set forth fully herein.

121. On or about February 1, 2013, within the Eastern District of Virginia and elsewhere, defendants knowingly made a false statement and report for the purpose of influencing the action of PenFed, a federal credit union, upon an application, commitment, and loan, and any change and extension of any of the same, by renewal, deferment of action, and otherwise, in that on the joint Uniform Residential Loan Application submitted to PenFed, the defendants listed total liabilities of $2,837,226 and listed no loans from or liabilities to JW, when in truth and in fact, as the defendants well knew, the defendants had received at least $120,000 in loans from JW that were not reflected on their joint Uniform Residential Loan Application and were not included in the total liabilities listed.

ROBERT F. MCDONNELL and
MAUREEN G. MCDONNELL

(All in violation of Title 18, United States Code, Sections 1014 and 2.)

COUNT FOURTEEN

(Obstruction of an Official Proceeding)

122. The allegations set forth in paragraphs 1 through 107 are repeated and realleged as if set forth fully herein.

123. In or about March 2013, within the Eastern District of Virginia and elsewhere, defendant attempted to and did corruptly obstruct, influence, and impede an official proceeding of the Grand Jury, that is, MAUREEN MCDONNELL wrote and caused to be delivered a handwritten note to JW in which she falsely attempted to make it appear that she and JW had previously discussed and agreed that the defendant would return certain designer luxury goods rather than keep them permanently.

MAUREEN G. MCDONNELL

(All in violation of Title 18, United States Code, Sections 1512(c)(2) and 2.)

FORFEITURE NOTICE

Pursuant to Federal Rule of Criminal Procedure 32.2(a), the defendants are notified that upon conviction of the offenses alleged in Counts 1–11 of this Indictment, they shall forfeit any property, real or personal, which they obtained directly or indirectly and which constitutes or is derived from proceeds traceable to the offenses of conviction. Property subject to forfeiture includes but is not limited to the following:

The sum of not less than $140,805.46;
Black Rebecca Minkoff shoes;
Black Louis Vuitton shoes;
White Louis Vuitton shoes;
Cream Louis Vuitton purse;
Cream Louis Vuitton wallet;
Silver Rolex Watch engraved with "71st Governor of Virginia";
Yellow Peter Som dress;
Blue Armani jacket and two matching dresses;
Two Gold Oscar de la Renta dresses;
Black Louis Vuitton rain coat;
Gold Oscar de le Renta sweater;
One pair of Amelia Rose earrings;
One Gear sweatshirt;
Two pairs of Foot Joy golf shoes;
One button-down Ralph Lauren shirt;
One white Peter Millar golf shirt;
One baby blue striped Peter Millar golf shirt;
One royal blue Peter Millar golf shirt;
One aqua Fairway Greene Tech golf shirt;
One white striped Ralph Lauren golf shirt;
One Ping University of Virginia golf bag;
One Ping Kinloch golf bag;
One Sun Mountain Notre Dame golf bag;
Two sets of golf clubs;
One Heather Mackenzie water color and frame;
Two iPhones; and 30 boxes of Anatabloc®.

If property subject to forfeiture is not available, the United States will seek an order forfeiting substitute assets in accordance with Title 21, United States Code, Section 853(p).

(In accordance with Title 18, United States Code, Section 981(a)(1)(C); Title 28, United States Code, Section 2461(c); and Title 18, United States Code, Section 982(a)(2).)

A TRUE BILL

DANA J. BOENTE
Acting United States Attorney

By: ____________________
Michael S. Dry
Jessica D. Aber
Ryan S. Faulconer
Assistant United States Attorneys

JACK SMITH
Chief, Public Integrity Section
Criminal Division
U.S. Department of Justice

By: ____________________
David V Harbach, II
Deputy Chief

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
FOR THE EASTERN DISTRICT OF VIRGINIA
RICHMOND DIVISION

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,	)
	)
V	)	CRIMINAL NO. 3:14-CR-00012
	)
ROBERT F. MCDONNELL	)	JUDGE JAMES R. SPENCER
MAUREEN G. MCDONNELL	)

MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT OF DEFENDANT ROBERT F. MCDONNELL'S MOTION # 5 – MOTION FOR THE PRODUCTION OF EVIDENCE AND OTHER RELIEF TO REMEDY THE GOVERNMENT'S INTERFERENCE IN THE DEFENSE'S INVESTIGATION

TABLE OF CONTENTS

Page

TABLE OF AUTHORITIES ii

INTRODUCTION 1

ARGUMENT 3

I. The Government's Intervention In An Unrelated Civil Suit For The Sole Purpose Of Suppressing Favorable Evidence Violates The Fifth And Sixth Amendments 3

- A. The Fifth And Sixth Amendments Guarantee The Accused Basic Access To Evidence 5
- B. The Fifth And Sixth Amendments Forbid Prosecutors From Impeding A Criminal Defendant's Independent Investigation 6
- C. The Government's Interference In Independent And Unrelated Civil Litigation Is Unconstitutional 8
  - 1. The Constitution forbids prosecutors from impeding a criminal defendant's investigation 8
  - 2. The Government's arguments in requesting a stay further illustrate the constitutional problem 10
  - 3. The Government's authorities are inapposite 11
    - (a) Decisions granting defense requests for a stay to preserve the accused's Fifth Amendment rights are inapposite here 12
    - (b) Decisions granting a stay to preserve the secrecy of ongoing grand jury proceedings are inapposite here 13
    - (c) Decisions granting a stay to prevent criminal defendants from personally utilizing the tools of civil discovery are both inapposite and mistaken 15

II. There Are At Least Two Different Forms Of Relief This Court Can Grant To Remedy The Government's Unconstitutional Conduct 18

- A. The Court Should Order The Government To Disclose Forthwith Everything In Its Possession, Custody, Or Control Related To Jonnie Williams, Other Star Scientific Witnesses, And The Company Itself 19
- B. The Court Should Enjoin The Government From Blocking The Development And Revelation Of Potentially Exculpatory Evidence 21

CONCLUSION 21

TABLE OF AUTHORITIES

Page

CONSTITUTIONAL PROVISIONS

U.S. Const. amend. V .... passim

U.S. Const. amend VI .... passim

CASES

Arizona v. Youngblood,
488 U.S. 51 (1988) 5

Bank of Nova Scotia v. United States,
487 U.S. 250 (1988) 20

Bd. of Governors of Fed. Reserve Sys. v. Pharaon, 140 F.R.D. 634 (S.D.N.Y 1991) 14

Berger v. United States,
295 U.S. 78 (1935) 1

Brady v. Maryland,
373 U.S. 83 (1963) 4, 5, 9, 10

Bridgeport Harbour Place I, LLC v. Ganim,
269 F Supp. 2d 6 (D. Conn. 2002) 12, 13, 15

Brock v. Tolkow,
109 F.R.D. 116 (E.D.N.Y 1985) 13

California v. Trombetta,
467 U.S. 479 (1984) 7

Campbell v. Eastland,
307 F.2d 478 (5th Cir. 1962) 15, 16

Chambers v. Mississippi,
410 U.S. 284 (1973) 6

Creative Consumer Concepts, Inc. v. Kreisler,
563 F.3d 1070 (10th Cir. 2009) 12

Douglas Oil Co. v. Petrol Stops Nw.,
441 U.S. 211 (1979) 14

Grand Jury Proceedings (Williams) v. United States,
995 F.2d 1013 (11th Cir. 1993) 13

Gregory v. United States,
369 F.2d 185 (D.C. Cir. 1966) .... passim

In re United States,
878 F.2d 153 (5th Cir. 1989) 20

Jencks v. United States,
353 U.S. 657 (1957) 3

Kines v. Butterworth,
669 F.2d 6 (1st Cir. 1981) 7

Kyles v. Whitley,
514 U.S. 419 (1995) 1, 4

McNabb v. United States,
318 U.S. 332 (1943) 20

R.J.F Fabrics, Inc. v. United States,
651 F Supp. 1437 (Ct. Int'l Trade 1986) 14, 15

Raphael v. Aetna Cas. & Sur. Co.,
744 F Supp. 71 (S.D.N.Y 1990) 14, 15

Roviaro v. United States,
353 U.S. 53 (1957) 5

SEC v. Chakrapani,
Nos. 09 Civ. 325 (RJS), 09 Civ. 1043 (RJS), , 2010 WL 2605819
(S.D.N.Y June 29, 2010) 17, 18

SEC v. Chestman,
861 F.2d 49 (2d Cir. 1988) 13, 15

SEC v. Downe,
No. 92 Civ 4092, 1993 WL 22126 (S.D.N.Y Jan. 26, 1993) 13, 15

SEC v. Dresser Indus., Inc.,
628 F.2d 1368 (D.C. Cir. 1980) 12

SEC v. Jenkins,
No. CV-09-1510, 2011 WL 221696 (D. Ariz. Jan. 21, 2011) 18

SEC v. Oakford Corp.,
181 F.R.D. 269 (S.D.N.Y 1998) 18

United States v. Moussaoui,
382 F.3d 453 (4th Cir. 2004) 5, 6

United States v. Nixon,
418 U.S. 683 (1974) 5

United States v. Olsen,
737 F.3d 625 (9th Cir. 2013) 4

United States v. One 1964 Cadillac Coupe DeVille,
41 F.R.D. 352 (S.D.N.Y 1966) 15, 16

United States v. Payner,
447 U.S. 727 (1980) 20

United States v. Rhynes,
218 F.3d 310 (4th Cir. 2000) 8

United States v. Slough,
669 F. Supp. 2d 51 (D.D.C. 2009) 8

United States v. Valenzuela-Bernal,
458 U.S. 858 (1982) 5

Washington v. Texas,
388 U.S. 14 (1967) 6

RULES

Fed. R. Crim. P. 2 20

Fed. R. Crim. P. 16 .... 7, 9, 20

OTHER AUTHORITIES

Rosalind S. Helderman, Star Scientific Tells Investors It Does Not Expect To Face Criminal Prosecution, Wash. Post (Aug. 9, 2013), available at http://tinyurl.com/mapno3y 9

INTRODUCTION

"A criminal trial, like its civil counterpart, is a quest for truth." Gregory v. United States, 369 F.2d 185, 188 (D.C. Cir. 1966). In that search for truth, the guilt or innocence of a criminally accused is supposed to be assessed on the basis of all admissible and relevant evidence. The purpose of a trial is to supply that evidence to neutral and independent fact-finders, who then weigh it and decide whether or not the Government has proved its case beyond a reasonable doubt.

Federal prosecutors have a strong systemic interest in both sides having possession of all relevant evidence before trial. As the Supreme Court has long explained, the "United States Attorney is the representative not of an ordinary party to a controversy, but of a sovereignty whose obligation to govern impartially is as compelling as its obligation to govern at all; and whose interest, therefore, in a criminal prosecution is not that it shall win a case, but that justice shall be done." Berger v. United States, 295 U.S. 78, 88 (1935). Justice is not done—but rather is thwarted—when prosecutors hinder the potential discovery of evidence relevant to pending criminal charges. After all, "the criminal trial, as distinct from the prosecutor's private deliberations," is "the chosen forum for ascertaining the truth about criminal accusations." Kyles v. Whitley, 514 U.S. 419, 440 (1995).

Here, the Government has taken affirmative steps to impede the defense's ability to gather evidence from third parties and investigate the Government's allegations. On January 28, 2014—without notifying defense counsel or (as far as we know) this Court—the prosecutors in this proceeding intervened in a civil suit filed by private Star Scientific shareholders (who have no connection to the accused) against the Government's star witness (Jonnie Williams) and Star Scientific. The Government then requested a stay of discovery in that civil dispute pending resolution of this criminal case.[1] See In re Star Scientific, Inc. Sec. Litig., No. 3:13-cv-183, Dkt. 79 (E.D. VA. Jan. 28, 2014) ("Stay Motion") (Ex. A). That civil suit alleges that Mr. Williams and his company committed securities fraud by, among other things, making "materially false and misleading statements regarding the Company's business, operational and compliance policies." Id. at Dkt. 1 (E.D. Va. Mar. 25, 2013). As the Government's stay request itself illustrates, discovery in that suit is (1) likely to unearth evidence that impeaches Mr. Williams's credibility as a witness; (2) may uncover additional misdeeds by Mr. Williams and his colleagues; and (3) may even reveal evidence that directly contradicts statements by Mr. Williams to the Government in the course of this proceeding. Both the Government and the defense should therefore want the discovery in that litigation to run its course, with the potential ancillary benefit of uncovering evidence that sheds light on whether the Government's allegations against the McDonnells are true. But instead, the Government's attorneys have intervened in that dispute for the express purpose of preventing relevant information from being revealed.

The Government's intervention in third-party civil litigation in order to prevent the disclosure of potentially-exculpatory evidence violated—and continues to violate—Mr. McDonnell's Fifth Amendment right to due process and his Sixth Amendment right to present a defense. Tellingly, none of the many cases cited by the Government in support of its stay request involved prosecutorial interference in third-party litigation; and none therefore endorsed the Government's supposed interest in suppressing a "means by which the defense could obtain evidence." Gregory, 369 F.2d at 189. Particularly in a case like this one—where the Government conducted a wide-ranging investigation and holds most of the evidentiary cards—the Constitution forbids the prosecutors from attempting to foreclose any potential "means" through which Mr. McDonnell might be able to obtain exculpatory evidence.

---

[1] The day after the Government filed its Motion—which it portrayed as unopposed and routine—that District Court granted its request by entering the Government's proposed Order. In re Star Scientific, Inc. Sec. Litig., No. 3:13-cv-183, Dkt. 81 (E.D. Va. Jan. 28, 2014). Given the innocuous manner in which the Government presented its filing, and the Government's failure to provide advance notice to the defense, that court could not have known about the extraordinary nature of the Government's request. The District Judge's decision to enter the Government's proposed Order in that proceeding was therefore entirely understandable and does not need to be disturbed in order to grant Mr. McDonnell's request for relief in this proceeding.

To remedy this constitutional violation, the defense submits that the following relief is appropriate. The Court should: (1) order the Government to provide immediate discovery of everything in the Government's possession, custody, or control related to Jonnie Williams and his past and present misconduct, including all agency investigations into Star Scientific and Mr. Williams; (2) order the Government to cease interfering in third-party litigation and to withdraw its request for a stay in In re Star Scientific, Inc. Securities Litigation, No. 3:13-cv-183; and (3) award any other relief the Court deems proper.

ARGUMENT

I. The Government's Intervention In An Unrelated Civil Suit For The Sole Purpose Of Suppressing Favorable Evidence Violates The Fifth And Sixth Amendments.

"[S]ince the Government which prosecutes an accused also has the duty to see that justice is done, it is unconscionable to allow it to undertake prosecution and then invoke its governmental privileges to deprive the accused of anything which might be material to his defense." Jencks v. United States, 353 U.S. 657, 671 (1957) (quotation omitted). This principle is as old as the Republic. See, e.g., United States v. Burr, 25 F Cas. 187, 192 (C.C.D. Va. 1807) (No. 14,694) ("[I]t is a very serious thing, if such letter should contain any information material to the defence, to withhold from the accused the power of making use of it.").

The Government's recent intervention in a civil suit against Jonnie Williams and Star Scientific violates Mr. McDonnell's basic constitutional right to defend himself; a right that includes the right to investigate and repudiate the Government's allegations. The only interest the Government has articulated in blocking discovery in that unrelated civil suit is its supposed interest in preventing the revelation of "information about key witnesses and documents to which the criminal defendants are not entitled." Stay Motion at 3. But that interest—the "interest" in artificially constraining the evidence available at trial—is not legitimate. Nor is it sufficient to justify the Government's attempt "to interfere with the preparation of the defense" by suppressing a "means by which the defense could obtain evidence." Gregory, 369 F.2d at 188-89.

Concluding otherwise would substantially expand the Government's power to unilaterally decide what evidence the defense, the judge, and the jury get to hear. That would be a dangerous expansion, not least because any rule that enables prosecutors to constrain a defendant's ability to investigate would undermine the defendant's ability to determine whether the prosecution is complying with its discovery obligations under Brady, Giglio, Kyles, and the like. Given that "[d]ue to the nature of a Brady violation, it's highly unlikely wrongdoing will ever come to light in the first place," United States v. Olsen, 737 F.3d 625, 630 (9th Cir. 2013) (Kozinski, C.J., dissenting from the denial of rehearing en banc), such a rule would set a dangerous precedent. It would, moreover, fly in the face of the many cases holding that the accused are constitutionally entitled to gather evidence and defend themselves.

In short, the Government's affirmative efforts to limit the flow of information to Mr. McDonnell violate his fundamental constitutional rights.

A. The Fifth And Sixth Amendments Guarantee The Accused Basic Access To Evidence.

As the Supreme Court has explained, "[t]he right to the production of all evidence at a criminal trial has constitutional dimensions." United States v. Nixon, 418 U.S. 683, 711 (1974). The Sixth Amendment guarantees the right to confront witnesses and the right to compulsory process, and the Fifth Amendment guarantees due process of law. "It is the manifest duty of the courts to vindicate those guarantees, and to accomplish that it is essential that all relevant and admissible evidence be produced." Id. One familiar aspect of the accused's right to obtain evidence is the requirement of Brady v. Maryland that the prosecution turn over evidence favorable to the accused upon request. 373 U.S. 83, 87 (1963). The right goes much further, however. The Supreme Court has noted, for instance, that the government may be sanctioned for depriving the accused of material, favorable evidence even where it does so in the course of discharging its obligation to enforce the immigration laws, United States v. Valenzuela-Bernal, 458 U.S. 858, 872-75 (1982), or asserting an otherwise valid privilege to conceal the identity of confidential informants, Roviaro v. United States, 353 U.S. 53, 60-61 (1957).

The Fourth Circuit has even held that an accused's "'constitutionally guaranteed access to evidence,'" United States v. Moussaoui, 382 F.3d 453, 474 (4th Cir. 2004) (quoting Arizona v. Youngblood, 488 U.S. 51, 55 (1988)), is powerful enough to counter the Government's assertion of a national security privilege in the context of prosecuting a member of the 9/11 conspiracy There, in the face of the Government's claim that being compelled to produce enemy combatant witnesses for pretrial deposition would compromise the United States' counterterrorism efforts, the court held that the government could properly be sanctioned for withholding material evidence from the accused. Id. at 476. The Moussaoui court explained that "[t]he need to develop all relevant facts in the adversary system is both fundamental and comprehensive" and that "[t]he ends of criminal justice would be defeated if judgments were to be founded on a partial or speculative presentation of the facts." Id. at 471. Therefore, the court held, "[t]he very integrity of the judicial system and public confidence in the system depend on full disclosure of all the facts, within the framework of the rules of evidence." Id.

To be sure, as the Fourth Circuit noted in Moussaoui, some constraints on an accused's use of information—such as the rules of evidence—do not necessarily run afoul of an accused's Fifth and Sixth Amendment rights to gather evidence and present a defense. But even those basic limitations have to be sufficiently justified to overcome the core constitutional values at stake. See, e.g., Chambers v. Mississippi, 410 U.S. 284, 294-303 (1973) (finding a constitutional violation where state court's application of common law "voucher" rule in combination with hearsay rule prevented the accused from presenting key exculpatory evidence); Washington v. Texas, 388 U.S. 14, 19-23 (1967) (holding that a State's evidentiary rule disqualifying accomplice testimony on behalf of the accused violates the Sixth Amendment).

B. The Fifth And Sixth Amendments Forbid Prosecutors From Impeding A Criminal Defendant's Independent Investigation.

At a minimum, therefore, the Constitution forbids prosecutors from interfering with a criminal defendant's ability to gather evidence for no reason other than preventing such evidence from coming to light. That is why courts have held in numerous contexts that prosecutors run afoul of the Constitution when they interfere in the accused's investigation or otherwise frustrate efforts to adequately prepare and present a defense. The Supreme Court has explained, for instance, that "the Federal Government might transgress constitutional limitations if it delayed an indictment for so long that the defendant's ability to mount an effective defense was impaired." California v. Trombetta, 467 U.S. 479, 486 (1984). Courts will also compel prosecutors to grant immunity to witnesses upon a showing that prosecutors are selectively withholding immunity from those witnesses who seek to provide testimony favorable to a criminal defendant. See, e.g., United States v. Abbas, 74 F.3d 506, 512 (4th Cir. 1996).

Perhaps the clearest application of this principle is the well-established constitutional prohibition of prosecutorial efforts to impede defense access to witnesses. As the D.C. Circuit long-ago explained, "we know of nothing in the law which gives the prosecutor the right to interfere with the preparation of the defense by effectively denying defense counsel access to the witnesses except in his presence." Gregory, 369 F.2d at 188. Twentieth-century criminal law has tended "in the direction of discovery of the facts before trial and elimination of surprise at trial," particularly in imposing "the requirement that the prosecution not frustrate the defense in the preparation of its case." Id. In Gregory, therefore, the prosecutors' discouragement of witnesses from talking with the defense "was unquestionably a suppression of the means by which the defense could obtain evidence" and was tantamount to affirmatively suppressing evidence. Id. at 189. The prosecutors' conduct had therefore "denied appellant a fair trial." Id.

In the years since Gregory, "[t]he equal right of the prosecution and the defense in criminal proceedings to interview witnesses before trial" has been "clearly recognized by the courts." Kines v. Butterworth, 669 F.2d 6, 9 (1st Cir. 1981). Numerous cases extol this bedrock rule. See, e.g., United States v. Gonzales, 164 F.3d 1285, 1292 (10th Cir. 1999) ("Although the defense had no right to interview the witness under [Fed. R. Crim. P.] Rule 16 it had a right to be free from prosecution interference with a witness' freedom of choice about whether to talk to the defense."); United States v. Cook, 608 F.2d 1175, 1180 (9th Cir. 1979) (en banc) ("As a general rule, a witness belongs neither to the government nor to the defense. Both sides have the right to interview witnesses before trial."); United States v. Goldfarb, No. CR-07-260-PHX-DGC, 2008 WL 4531694, at *2 (D. Ariz. Oct. 9, 2008) ("The prosecutor may not discourage[] cooperating defendants from candidly discussing the litigation with co-defendants or their counsel."). As one court summed it up, "prosecutors may not refuse to disclose the location of a witness"; "instruct a witness not to speak to defense counsel"; "or take other actions that would effectively deny the defendant in a criminal proceeding access to a witness." United States v. Slough, 669 F Supp. 2d 51, 56 (D.D.C. 2009) (citations omitted). Indeed, as Magistrate Judge Novak recently put it: "[W]itnesses have the right to either be interviewed or not be interviewed by either side There is no restriction[] whatsoever." United States v. McDonnell, No. 3:14-cr-12, Dkt. 43 at 22:23-23:2 (E.D. Va. Feb. 3, 2014). The accused have the right to properly prepare for their defense, which "demands that an attorney interview and prepare witnesses before they testify." United States v. Rhynes, 218 F.3d 310, 319 (4th Cir. 2000) (en banc).

The basic constitutional principle is thus clear: The Fifth Amendment right to due process and the Sixth Amendment right to present a defense together forbid prosecutors from thwarting a criminally accused's efforts to gather facts that tend to demonstrate his innocence. Here, the Government's effort to prevent third-party civil discovery for the sole purpose of denying the McDonnells access to exculpatory evidence violates this fundamental rule.

C. The Government's Interference In Independent And Unrelated Civil Litigation Is Unconstitutional.

1. The Constitution forbids prosecutors from impeding a criminal defendant's investigation.

The constitutional prohibition against prosecutors suppressing "means by which the defense could obtain evidence," Gregory, 369 F.2d at 189, forbids the Government's conduct here. Just as prosecutors are not permitted to discourage witnesses from talking to defense counsel, they are not permitted to take different steps geared toward the same objective—i.e., ones that impede a defense investigation by cutting off a "means by which the defense could obtain evidence." Id. Even though defendants cannot force witnesses to share information with them prior to trial, the Constitution recognizes that it is unfair and improper for prosecutors to affirmatively discourage those witnesses from cooperating with defense counsel. The Constitution thus does not permit prosecutors to scare witnesses into silence, unfairly manipulate prosecutorial power to grant immunity, engage in improper strategic timing of indictments, or, like here, interfere in third-party civil suits for the purpose of protecting the Government's key witness and his Star colleagues by restricting the development and release of exculpatory evidence.

The practical effect of the Government's conduct highlights the constitutional problem. By declining to further investigate Mr. Williams and Star Scientific, the Government has avoided coming into possession, custody, or control of additional exculpatory evidence that resides in the files of Star Scientific and Mr. Williams (which would trigger Rule 16 and Brady), and by intervening in In re Star Scientific and blocking discovery it has also prevented the potential disclosure of that evidence to neutral third parties (civil plaintiffs) who might have been willing to share it with the defense. The effect of this maneuvering has been to confine a great deal of exculpatory evidence to the files or minds of entities and individuals the Government does not control but whom the Government can confidently expect will refuse to share that information with defense counsel (since Star Scientific does not expect to be prosecuted itself).[2] The Government has thus attempted to ensure that this evidence will remain hidden during this proceeding. That is no different than if prosecutors refused to interview key exculpatory witnesses (avoiding Brady) while threatening to charge those witnesses with obstruction if they cooperate with defense counsel (preventing the defense from interviewing them). Both actions contravene the Constitution because both "unquestionably" constitute "a suppression of the means by which the defense could obtain evidence." Gregory, 369 F.2d at 189.

---

[2] See, e.g., Rosalind S. Helderman, Star Scientific Tells Investors It Does Not Expect To Face Criminal Prosecution, Wash. Post (Aug. 9, 2013), available at http://tinyurl.com/mapno3y.

2. The Government's arguments in requesting a stay further illustrate the constitutional problem.

In requesting a stay in In re Star Scientific, the Government made a number of supporting arguments which either confirm the unconstitutionality of its conduct or are inapposite. The Government's chief contention in its Stay Motion was that the "civil discovery process, if allowed to continue, will reveal information about key witnesses and documents to which the criminal defendants are not entitled," and that "[d]isclosure of such information would compromise the public's right to a fair trial in the criminal action." Stay Motion at 3 (emphases added). That argument betrays a fundamental misunderstanding of what a "fair trial" requires. Nothing in the Constitution, federal statutes, the Federal Rules, or the United States Attorney's Manual suggest that ensuring a "fair trial" requires (or allows) prosecutors to thwart defense efforts to gather exculpatory evidence. That is because there is no "information" to which "criminal defendants are not entitled"; there are only certain tools of discovery that the Criminal Rules decline to provide. Mechanisms for obtaining evidence are obviously not the same thing as evidence itself. The law imposes no limitations on the non-privileged evidence that the criminally accused are entitled to possess and (if it is admissible) use at trial. The Government's apparent belief that the criminally accused are entitled to only whatever evidence their prosecutors decide to give them vividly illustrates the Government's improper understanding of the prosecutor's role.

The Government's second argument supporting its stay request was that the independent shareholder suit would, if permitted to proceed, "enable the criminal defendants to use the civil discovery to circumvent the limitations on criminal discovery and thus prejudice the government's criminal prosecution." Id. But that argument makes no sense where, as here, the criminally accused are not parties to or affiliated with the civil action. Neither Mr. McDonnell nor Mrs. McDonnell could "use" the tools of civil discovery because neither of them is involved in the civil suit. Mr. McDonnell's defense counsel could simply ask the civil plaintiffs' counsel to voluntarily share information they obtain in discovery that impeaches or undermines Mr. Williams, just as Mr. McDonnell's defense counsel could contact Mr. Williams's old business partners to ask questions about his past. In either circumstance, the McDonnells are merely utilizing different "means by which the defense could obtain evidence," Gregory, 369 F.2d at 189, and in either circumstance, the Government has no right to interfere. The possibility that a third-party civil suit might incidentally lead to exculpatory evidence being transferred from a hostile third party (Star Scientific) to a neutral one (civil plaintiffs and their counsel) could not possibly unfairly "circumvent the limitations on criminal discovery and thus prejudice the government's criminal prosecution." Stay Motion at 3. Indeed, if such evidence exists, the Government should favor—not resist—its disclosure.

3. The Government's authorities are inapposite.

Perhaps unsurprisingly, given the novelty of the Government's actions, none of the cases it cited in requesting a stay actually endorse what the Government requested—a suspension of discovery in third-party civil litigation because that discovery might reveal evidence which would exonerate a criminally accused in an unconnected criminal proceeding. The Government's Stay Motion glosses over the distinctions, but its authorities fall into three camps, all of which are fundamentally different from this case: (1) decisions granting stays at the request of a criminal defendant who is also a civil litigant on the ground that the civil discovery will interfere with the accused's right against self-incrimination in his criminal proceeding; (2) decisions granting stays in order to preserve the secrecy of an ongoing grand jury investigation that involves people who are parties to the civil suit; and (3) decisions granting stays in order to prevent a criminal defendant who is also a civil litigant from personally using the tools of civil discovery to build his criminal case. None of those decisions endorse or support the Government's conduct here.

(a) Decisions granting defense requests for a stay to preserve the accused's Fifth Amendment rights are inapposite here.

Many of the Government's authorities arose in the facially distinguishable context of criminal defendants seeking to stay civil discovery against themselves on the ground that it could interfere with their Fifth Amendment right against self-incrimination: "Courts often grant motions to stay on the grounds that the Fifth Amendment privileges of certain parties are implicated." Bridgeport Harbour Place I, LLC v. Ganim, 269 F. Supp. 2d 6, 9 (D. Conn. 2002); see also, e.g., Creative Consumer Concepts, Inc. v. Kreisler, 563 F.3d 1070, 1081 (10th Cir. 2009) (defendant claimed that the denial of a civil stay pending the criminal proceeding "prevented her from testifying in the civil case"); SEC v. Dresser Indus., Inc., 628 F.2d 1368, 1375-76 (D.C. Cir. 1980) ("Other than where there is specific evidence of agency bad faith or malicious governmental tactics, the strongest case for deferring civil proceedings until after completion of criminal proceedings is where a party under indictment for a serious offense is required to defend a civil or administrative action involving the same matter." (emphasis added)); Bridgeport Harbour Place I, 269 F Supp. 2d at 9 ("If the defendants assert that privilege in the civil proceeding, they could possibly be defaulted in the case and become subject to civil liability."); Brock v. Tolkow, 109 F.R.D. 116, 120 (E.D.N.Y 1985) ("If the defendants are served with interrogatories in the civil case, they must decide whether to respond or to assert their rights under the fifth amendment."); Twenty First Century Corp. v. LaBianca, 801 F Supp. 1007, 1009 (E.D.N.Y 1992) ("Since he has not yet been sentenced, Redzinski intends to assert his fifth amendment right against self-incrimination with respect to the averments against him in this case.").

These cases are obviously inapposite. The Constitution does not constrain a criminal defendant's ability to postpone civil discovery (or any other defense-side investigation). Nor does this case involve issues concerning the right against self-incrimination. The McDonnells are not parties to the civil suit and are not the ones seeking to stay civil discovery

(b) Decisions granting a stay to preserve the secrecy of ongoing grand jury proceedings are inapposite here.

Many of the Government's other cases arose in the much-different context of ongoing criminal and grand jury investigations. See, e.g., Grand Jury Proceedings (Williams) v. United States, 995 F.2d 1013, 1018 n.11 (11th Cir. 1993) (explaining in dicta that the stay "procedure prevents civil litigants from engaging in strategic litigation to delay criminal investigations by blocking relevant evidence" (emphasis added)); SEC v. Chestman, 861 F.2d 49, 49 (2d Cir. 1988) (explaining that the Government sought "a stay of discovery in that case pending completion of a criminal investigation concerning the same underlying facts" (emphasis added)); SEC v. Downe, No. 92 Civ. 4092, 1993 WL 22126, at *12 (S.D.N.Y Jan. 26, 1993) ("[T]he United States Attorney contends that the Grand Jury investigation would be irreparably harmed if such testimony and document production with respect to defendant Downe were permitted to proceed at this time.").[3]

In the context of an ongoing grand jury investigation, secrecy and confidentiality are important government interests. Such investigations often involve confidential informants who must be protected, the Government's need to play defendants and witnesses off each other to aid its investigation, and other forms of appropriate law-enforcement conduct, as well as the interest in grand jury secrecy. Because the "proper functioning of our grand jury system depends upon the secrecy of grand jury proceedings," Douglas Oil Co. v. Petrol Stops Nw., 441 U.S. 211, 218 (1979), it makes sense that courts have recognized a governmental interest in staying civil discovery pending an ongoing grand jury investigation.

That interest vanishes, however, once the grand jury investigation has concluded (as it has here) and the time comes for a public trial. The purpose of trial is to present all available, non-privileged, relevant evidence to a jury so it can determine whether a crime was committed. The Government should not, and the public certainly does not, have an interest in suppressing relevant evidence during that process or in convicting a criminal defendant on the basis of an incomplete factual record. See also, e.g., United States v. Gieger Transfer Serv., Inc., 174 F.R.D. 382, 385 (S.D. Miss. 1997) (analyzing many of the authorities cited here and explaining that stays are particularly unwarranted once a "criminal case is well past the investigative stage and is being prepared for trial").

---

[3] See also, e.g., Raphael v. Aetna Cas. & Sur. Co., 744 F Supp. 71, 74 (S.D.N.Y 1990) ("The Government argues that enforcement of the subpoenas would compromise an ongoing criminal investigation of a major interstate automobile theft ring operating out of New York."); Bd. of Governors of Fed. Reserve Sys. v. Pharaon, 140 F.R.D. 634, 636 (S.D.N.Y 1991) ("The District Attorney has stressed that a major goal of the stay is the preservation of the confidentiality of the Grand Jury proceedings concerning Pharaon and BCCI."); R.J.F Fabrics, Inc. v. United States, 651 F Supp. 1437, 1438-39 (Ct. Int'l Trade 1986) ("Defendant fears that the criminal prosecution against this plaintiff as well as the larger investigation into the problem of transshipment will be compromised [absent a stay]."); Souza v. Schiltgen, No. C-95-3997 MHP, 1996 WL 241824, at *1 (N.D. Cal. May 6, 1996) ("Defendant seeks a stay of these civil proceedings pending resolution of the criminal investigation."). Some of these decisions from the grand jury context included language extending beyond grand jury investigations and are thus addressed in the next section too.

(c) Decisions granting a stay to prevent criminal defendants from personally utilizing the tools of civil discovery are both inapposite and mistaken.

The Government's other authorities involved criminal defendants who were themselves parties in the civil action and who themselves sought to use the tools of civil discovery to supplement the tools of criminal discovery. See Chestman, 861 F.2d at 49 (refusing to reverse a stay in a mandamus posture where the criminal defendant might use the tools of civil discovery "to circumvent the more limited scope of discovery in the criminal matter"); United States v. Mellon Bank, N.A., 545 F.2d 869, 873 (3d Cir. 1976) (noting, in a mandamus posture, "the possibility that [the criminal defendant] might improperly exploit civil discovery"); Campbell v. Eastland, 307 F.2d 478, 487 (5th Cir. 1962) ("litigant should not be allowed to make use of the liberal discovery procedures applicable to a civil suit as a dodge to avoid the restrictions on criminal discovery").[4] Moreover, several of these cases (including Campbell, the leading case) involved criminal defendants who had filed suit against the Government concerning the same facts that underlay their criminal cases. Mellon Bank, 545 F.2d at 870 ("In September of 1974, [the criminal defendant] initiated a suit in the Tax Court to contest the jeopardy assessment."); Campbell, 307 F.2d at 483 ("It is a fair inference from the record that the filing of the suit for a refund, or at least the filing of the motion for discovery, was a tactical maneuver to enable the taxpayer to gain advance information on the criminal case."). This final group of decisions is both irrelevant and unpersuasive in the context of this case.

---

[4] See also Bridgeport Harbour Place I, 269 F. Supp. 2d at 10 ("If the stay is not granted, Ganim would be able to depose "); Twenty First Century, 801 F. Supp. at 1010 (noting the civil discovery could permit the use of tools, such as depositions, that the criminal rules withhold); Downe, 1993 WL 22126, at *12 ("[T]he defendants in this case will be able to obtain testimony and documents through civil discovery, which could not be obtained at this time in a criminal proceeding."); Raphael, 744 F. Supp. at 75 ("[C]ourts will not permit the defendant to circumvent the restrictions placed upon criminal discovery by attempting to compel disclosure in the civil case."); R.J.F. Fabrics, 651 F. Supp. at 1440 (discussing the interest in confining criminal litigants to the criminal rules).

In at least one of its citations, the Government utilized a quotation that represented the parties' views as though they were the views of the Court. Compare United States v. One 1964

Foremost, these decisions are irrelevant because none turned on or discussed the constitutional constraints on a prosecutor's conduct. In each of these cases—particularly those involving criminal defendants who filed civil suits contesting the facts underlying their criminal prosecutions—the issue was what legal tools of discovery a criminal defendant is entitled to use. Some courts decided (incorrectly, as explained below) that criminal defendants are confined to the tools available in the criminal rules. As the leading such decision explained, "[j]udicial discretion and procedural flexibility should be utilized to harmonize the conflicting rules and to prevent the rules and policies applicable to one suit from doing violence to those pertaining to the other." Campbell, 307 F.2d at 487. The point of these decisions was thus not that criminal

---

(continued...)

Cadillac Coupe DeVille, 41 F.R.D. 352, 353 (S.D.N.Y 1966) ("The parties apparently agree that where both civil and criminal proceedings arise out of the same or related transactions the government is ordinarily entitled to a stay of all discovery in the civil action until disposition of the criminal matter." (emphasis added)), with Stay Motion at 5 ("United States v. One 1964 Cadillac Coupe DeVille, 41 F.R.D. 352, 353 (S.D.N.Y 1966) ('where both civil and criminal proceedings arise out of the same or related transactions the government is ordinarily entitled to a stay of all discovery in the civil case until disposition of the criminal matter')."). In any event, that Court likewise relied on the interest in preventing criminal litigants from personally using "the liberal civil discovery procedures" available in civil litigation. 1964 Cadillac, 41 F.R.D. at 354.

defendants have no right to discovery (i.e., information); the point was that they have no right to themselves use the tools of civil discovery (i.e., the right to depose government officials, propound interrogatories, etc.).

Here, by contrast, the Government is not seeking to limit the defense to the legal toolbox contained in the criminal rules. The Government is, rather, seeking to limit the defense's ability to use one of the tools that the criminal rules permit—asking third parties for voluntary assistance—by interfering in unrelated civil litigation to prevent the disclosure of exculpatory evidence. And that conduct falls squarely within the constitutional prohibition against prosecutors suppressing a "means by which the defense could obtain evidence." Gregory, 369 F.2d at 189. None of the Government's authorities contradict this rule. Just as the Constitution would forbid the prosecutors from ordering the plaintiffs in the civil suit to ignore calls from the defense, or would forbid the prosecutors from telling witnesses to not talk to the defense, it forbids the Government from interfering in unrelated civil litigation for the sole purpose of making it more difficult for the defense to gather exculpatory evidence.

Finally, and perhaps more importantly, to the extent that these cases are marginally relevant—despite the fact that the McDonnells have no connection to the civil action—they are not persuasive where, as here, the Government's sole interest in staying civil discovery is its desire to secure a litigation advantage by limiting the evidence available for Mr. McDonnell's criminal trial. As Judge Richard Sullivan on the Southern District of New York recently explained: "The Court reiterates that it is unaware of any legal requirement entitling the government to preserve its cooperators from examination before trial. What the government deems to be a right is, in fact, a litigator's preference to avoid cross-examination and related impeachment of prized witnesses." SEC v. Chakrapani, Nos. 09 Civ. 325 (RJS), 09 Civ. 1043 (RJS), 2010 WL 2605819, at *11 (S.D.N.Y June 29, 2010) (Ex. B). As Judge Sullivan recognized, "one would expect his testimony to be the same whether first given at a criminal trial or at a civil one," such that "there is little to justify the government's jealous protection of its cooperating witness." Id. Other decisions are in accord. See, e.g., SEC v. Jenkins, No. CV-09-1510, 2011 WL 221696, at *1 (D. Ariz. Jan. 21, 2011) ("[T]here is no cognizable harm to the government in providing such discovery beyond its desire to maintain a tactical advantage." (citing a prior decision)); SEC v. Saad, 229 F.R.D. 90, 92 (S.D.N.Y 2005) ("[The Government's] argument thus reduces to the near-frivolous position that, in some wholly speculative way, it would be prejudiced by having the SEC give these notes to the defendants a month or two sooner than they would otherwise receive them."); SEC v. Oakford Corp., 181 F.R.D. 269, 273 (S.D.N.Y 1998) ("[T]here is no cognizable harm to the government in providing such discovery beyond its desire to maintain a tactical advantage."); see also, e.g., United States v. Fin. Indus. Regulatory Auth. ("FINRA"), 607 F Supp. 2d 391, 394 (E.D.N.Y 2009) (explaining that the possibility of "criminal defendants having more information than they would otherwise be entitled to at this stage under the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure" is an "insufficient" basis to justify staying an arbitration).

Secrecy disserves the search for truth and thwarts Mr. McDonnell's constitutional right to defend himself. The Government's "jealous protection of its cooperating witness," Chakrapani, 2010 WL 2605819, at *11, is thus unconstitutional. It should be remedied by this Court.

II. There Are At Least Two Different Forms Of Relief This Court Can Grant To Remedy The Government's Unconstitutional Conduct.

Because the Government's constitutional violation is a novel one, there is no established remedy to cure it. Had the McDonnells been parties to the civil suit, they could have opposed the stay in that context and had their rights protected in that proceeding. But because the Government filed their request to stay discovery without notifying the accused or (it appears) this Court—and because the Government represented their unusual request as being unopposed, unremarkable, and routine—the accused have had no prior opportunity to assert their Fifth and Sixth Amendment rights. Given the circumstances, there are at least two forms of relief that this Court has the power to provide. We ask the Court to: (1) order the Government to provide discovery of everything in the Government's possession, custody, or control related to Jonnie Williams and his past and present misconduct, including all materials gathered by other federal agencies in the course of investigating Mr. Williams and Star Scientific; and (2) order the Government to withdraw all stay requests it has lodged and enjoin the Government from taking additional steps to impede the defendants' ability to investigate the charges. Both of these forms of relief are justified by the extraordinary measures the Government has undertaken to prevent the disclosure of relevant, exculpatory evidence in this proceeding.

A. The Court Should Order The Government To Disclose Forthwith Everything In Its Possession, Custody, Or Control Related To Jonnie Williams, Other Star Scientific Witnesses, And The Company Itself.

"[T]he courts have long recognized that trial judges must be able to control their own proceedings to ensure the fair administration of justice within the confines of the law." United States v. Carrigan, 804 F.2d 599, 603 (10th Cir. 1986). "The courts have wielded this authority substantively, that is, to provide a remedy for the violation of a recognized right of a criminal defendant." United States v. HSBC Bank USA, No. 12-CR-763., 2013 WL 3306161, at *4 (E.D.N.Y July 1, 2013). In Carrigan, for example, the Tenth Circuit held that ordering witnesses to submit to depositions by defense counsel was an appropriate remedy for governmental efforts to discourage those witnesses from speaking with defense counsel. See 804

F.2d at 604 ("[W]e cannot find the order entered here as a sanction for the government's interference with a defendant's access to potential prosecution witnesses to be wholly beyond the district court's jurisdiction.").[5] In short, as the Ninth Circuit has explained, "nothing in Rule 16 expressly prohibits the district court from ordering additional pretrial discovery or disclosures that will also further the objectives set forth in Rule 2." United States v. Grace, 526 F.3d 499, 511 (9th Cir. 2008) (en banc).

Here, the Government has taken affirmative steps to prevent the disclosure of exculpatory evidence concerning Mr. Williams and to limit Mr. McDonnell's ability to investigate the evidentiary basis of the Government's allegations. That conduct is improper and unconstitutional. The most appropriate way to remedy it—a remedy which falls well within this Court's supervisory power over the administration of justice—would be for the Court to order that the Government promptly produce all evidence in its possession, custody, or control that relates to Jonnie Williams and his past, including all materials gathered by other federal agencies (the SEC and FDA, in particular) in the course of investigating Mr. Williams and Star Scientific. Other courts facing discovery violations by the Government have ordered similarly broad discovery as a remedial cure. For example, in United States v. Monteiro, No. 03-10329-PBS, 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 39121 (D. Mass. Oct. 31, 2005), the Government failed to comply with various court orders and discovery obligations. The court explained that "a sanction is necessary and appropriate for a violation of the local rules and orders of the magistrate judge" and therefore ordered the Government to "disclose all materials in its files related to the Fernandes shooting." Id. at *16; see also, e.g., Carrigan, 804 F.2d at 604-05 (approving of witness depositions as a remedy for prosecutors discouraging witnesses from cooperating with defense counsel). This Court should issue a similar Order here. Doing so would at least ameliorate the Government's unconstitutional "frustrat[ion of] the defense in the preparation of its case," Gregory, 369 F.2d at 188, and would therefore constitute an appropriate remedy.

---

[5] See also, e.g. United States v. Hasting, 461 U.S. 499, 505 (1983) (recognizing the "implement[ation of] a remedy for violation of recognized rights" as one of the proper uses of the supervisory power); United States v. Payner, 447 U.S. 727, 741 n.7 (1980) ("The supervisory power permits federal courts to supervise 'the administration of criminal justice' among the parties before the bar."); McNabb v. United States, 318 U.S. 332, 340 (1943) (endorsing the use of this authority to fashion "civilized standards of procedure and evidence" applicable to federal criminal proceedings); Bank of Nova Scotia v. United States, 487 U.S. 250, 264 (1988) (Scalia, J., concurring) ("[E]very United States court has an inherent supervisory authority over the proceedings conducted before it "); Gonzales, 164 F.3d at 1293 (endorsing a variety of possible discovery orders to sanction prosecutors' interference with defense access to a witness); In re United States, 878 F.2d 153, 157 (5th Cir. 1989) ("[I]n certain limited instances the district court in a criminal case may order discovery not provided for by statute of the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure.") (citation omitted).

B. The Court Should Enjoin The Government From Blocking The Development And Revelation Of Potentially Exculpatory Evidence.

In addition, the Court should exercise its supervisory authority over the administration of justice and order the Government's attorneys to withdraw all stay requests they have lodged in other civil proceedings, recant all requests for stays (including in In re Star Scientific), and enjoin the Government's attorneys from any further efforts to suppress exculpatory evidence. While this Court lacks jurisdiction to issue orders concerning discovery in third-party civil cases, it does have jurisdiction over the conduct of the Government's attorneys in this case. Given the circumstances, it would be appropriate for this Court to order the Government to withdraw its request and cease from making such a request again in any other forum.

CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons, the accused asks this Court to remedy the Government's unconstitutional interference in Mr. McDonnell's right to prepare and present a defense. Two possible remedies are (1) ordering the Government to provide immediate discovery of everything in the Government's possession, custody, or control related to Jonnie Williams and his past and present misconduct, including all agency investigations into Star Scientific and Mr. Williams; and (2) ordering the Government to cease interfering in third-party litigation and to withdraw all requests for a stay that it has made. The Court likewise should award any other relief it deems proper.

The defense respectfully requests a hearing on this Motion.

Dated: February 13, 2014

Respectfully submitted,

/s/ John L. Brownlee

John L. Brownlee (VSB No. 37358)
Timothy J. Taylor (VSB No. 84529)
Holland & Knight LLP
800 17th Street, N.W., Suite 1100
Washington, DC 20006
Telephone: (202) 828-1854
Facsimile: (202) 955-5564
Email: john.brownlee@hklaw.com

Henry W. Asbill (pro hac vice)
James M. Burnham (pro hac vice)
Jones Day
51 Louisiana Avenue, N.W.
Washington, DC 20001
Telephone: (202) 879-3939
Facsimile: (202) 626-1700
Email: hasbill@jonesday.com

Counsel for Robert F. McDonnell

CERTIFICATE OF SERVICE

I hereby certify that on this 13th day of February, 2014, I electronically filed the foregoing motion and the accompanying memorandum with the Clerk of Court using the CM/ECF system, which will send a notification of such filing (NEF) to the following:

Michael S. Dry
David V Harbach II
Jessica D. Aber
Ryan S. Faulconer
United States Attorney's Office
600 E. Main Street, Suite 1800
Richmond, Virginia 23219-2447
Phone: (804) 819-5400
Facsimile: (804) 771-2316
Email: michael.s.dry@usdoj.gov

Dated: February 13, 2014

Respectfully submitted,

/s/ John L. Brownlee

John L. Brownlee (VSB No. 37358)
Holland & Knight LLP
800 17th Street, N.W., Suite 1100
Washington, DC 20006
Telephone: (202) 828-1854
Facsimile: (202) 955-5564
Email: john.brownlee@hklaw.com

Counsel for Robert F McDonnell

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
FOR THE EASTERN DISTRICT OF VIRGINIA
RICHMOND DIVISION

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,	)
	)
V.	)	CRIMINAL NO. 3:14-CR-00012
	)
ROBERT F. MCDONNELL	)	JUDGE JAMES R. SPENCER
MAUREEN G. MCDONNELL	)

DEFENDANT ROBERT F. MCDONNELL'S MOTION # 8 – MOTION FOR BILL OF PARTICULARS

MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT

TABLE OF CONTENTS

Page

TABLE OF AUTHORITIES ii

INTRODUCTION 1

ARGUMENT 1

I. A Bill Of Particulars Is Required When The Indictment Fails To Allege Information Necessary To Prepare A Defense And Avoid Unfair Surprise 3

II. Mr. McDonnell Is Entitled To A Bill Of Particulars Because The Indictment Omits Critical Information Necessary To Prepare His Defense And Avoid Unfair Surprise 6

- A. The Indictment Fails To Specify The Substance And Extent Of The Official Acts Alleged By The Government 6
- B. The Indictment Fails To Identify Mr. McDonnell's Alleged Co-Conspirators 8

III. The Sheer Size Of The Government's Document Production Further Warrants A Bill Of Particulars 10

CONCLUSION 12

TABLE OF AUTHORITIES

Page(s)

CASES

Dillen v. Wainwright,
449 F.2d 331 (5th Cir. 1971) 4

Fontana v. United States,
262 F. 283 (8th Cir. 1919) 5

United States v. Addonizio,
451 F.2d 49 (3d Cir. 1971) 4

United States v. Aispuro,
No. CR 08-2936 JB, 2010 BL 59827 (D.N.M. Mar. 16, 2010) 11

United States v. Allen,
289 F. Supp. 2d 230 (N.D.N.Y. 2003) 5, 8

United States v. Am. Waste Fibers Co.,
809 F.2d 1044 (4th Cir. 1987) 3

United States v. Anderson,
254 F. Supp. 177 (W.D. Ark. 1966) 5

United States v. Anderson,
481 F.2d 685 (4th Cir. 1973) 4

United States v. Automated Med. Labs., Inc.,
770 F.2d 399 (4th Cir. 1985) 1, 4

United States v. Barrentine,
591 F.2d 1069 (5th Cir. 1979) 9

United States v. Barrera,
950 F. Supp. 2d 461 (E.D.N.Y. 2013) 10

United States v. Bin Laden,
92 F. Supp. 2d 225 (S.D.N.Y. 2000) 11

United States v. Bortnovsky,
820 F.2d 572 (2d Cir. 1987) 10

United States v. Espy,
989 F. Supp. 17 (D.D.C. 1997) 7

United States v. Fletcher,
74 F.3d 49 (4th Cir. 1996) 4

United States v. Holman,
490 F Supp. 755 (E.D. Pa. 1980) 9

United States v. Jaskiewicz,
278 F Supp. 525 (E.D. Pa. 1968) 4

United States v. Jefferson,
674 F.3d 332 (4th Cir. 2012) 2

United States v. Lonzo,
793 F Supp. 57 (N.D.N.Y 1992) 8

United States v. Mahaffy,
446 F Supp. 2d 115 (E.D.N.Y 2006) 10, 11

United States v. Manetti,
323 F Supp. 683 (D. Del. 1971) 5

United States v. Nachamie,
91 F Supp. 2d 565 (S.D.N.Y 2000) 9, 11

United States v. Previti,
644 F.2d 318 (4th Cir. 1981) 4

United States v. Ramirez,
609 F.3d 495 (2d Cir. 2010) 10

United States v. Sampson,
448 F Supp. 2d 692 (E.D. Va. 2006) 1

United States v. Smith,
16 F.R.D. 372 (W.D. Mo. 1954) 5

United States v. Taylor,
No. 3:04-CR-227, 2005 BL 34430 (E.D. Va. Sept. 21, 2005) 5

United States v. Thevis,
474 F Supp. 117 (N.D. Ga. 1979), aff'd, 665 F.2d 616 (5th Cir. 1982) 4

United States v. Trie,
21 F Supp. 2d 7 (D.D.C. 1998) 12

United States v. Williams,
113 F.R.D. 177 (M.D. Fla. 1986) 8

RULES

Fed. R. Crim. P 7(f) 3, 4

Fed. R. Crim. P 16(a)(1)(C) 11

OTHER AUTHORITIES

1 Charles Alan Wright et al., Federal Practice and Procedure § 130 (4th ed. 2013) 5

Fed. R. Crim. P 7 advisory committee's notes (1966 amend.) 4

INTRODUCTION

While the Indictment in this proceeding is unnecessarily detailed in some respects, it fails to provide the information necessary for Mr. McDonnell to prepare his defense and avoid unfair surprise on two key issues. "The purpose of a bill of particulars 'is to fairly apprise the defendant of the charges against him so that he may adequately prepare a defense and avoid surprise at trial.'" United States v. Sampson, 448 F. Supp. 2d 692, 696 (E.D. Va. 2006) (Spencer, J.) (quoting United States v. Automated Med. Labs., Inc., 770 F.2d 399, 405 (4th Cir. 1985)). Here, the Indictment fails to articulate with precision what "official actions" Mr. McDonnell supposedly performed or promised to perform on behalf of Mr. Williams and also declines to specify at all who (other than the accused) was allegedly involved in the charged conspiracy. These fundamental deficiencies are particularly acute here, given the Government's failure to provide prompt and complete discovery or to direct the defense to those documents in its five-million page production that it believes substantiate the elements of the charged offenses. A bill of particulars is therefore necessary.[1]

ARGUMENT

The defense requests particulars on two very important points. First, the indictment fails to articulate with any specificity the substance and extent of the official acts that Mr. McDonnell allegedly performed or promised to perform for the benefit of Mr. Williams or Star. This information goes to the heart of Mr. McDonnell's defense. If the Government is unable to allege—or prove—that Mr. McDonnell performed or promised to perform any action which qualifies as an "official action," then its corruption charges fail as a matter of law. The

---

[1] On February 21, 2014, the defense sent a letter to counsel for the Government requesting that it provide the particulars underlying some of its allegations. On February 25, 2014, the Government declined to provide the requested details, thus necessitating this filing.

Government's vagueness on this critical issue—especially when considered in conjunction with its extreme detail on others—is a transparent attempt to circumvent the legal question at the heart of this case and thus prevent this Court from decisively ruling on the merits of that question before trial. Hence, the Indictment contains boilerplate and vague allegations that fail to explain anything about what the Government thinks happened; for example, that Mr. McDonnell performed or promised to perform "on an as-needed basis, as opportunities arose,"[2] unspecified official actions "to legitimize, promote, and obtain research studies for Star Scientific's products, including Anatabloc®," (Indictment ¶ 22, see also id. ¶ 110), or that he vaguely "spoke favorably to the attendees [at a Mansion event] regarding further study of anatabine" (id. ¶ 60).

The Indictment also alludes to the existence of other official acts that are not alleged in the Indictment. Specifically, the Indictment states that the means by which the McDonnells carried out the alleged conspiracy "included, but were not limited to, providing favorable official action on behalf of JW and Star Scientific as opportunities arose, including" such actions as (1) "arranging meetings," (2) "hosting, and the defendants attending, events at the Governor's Mansion," (3) "contacting other government officials" in the Governor's office, (4) "promoting Star Scientific's products and facilitating its relationships with Virginia government officials," and (5) "recommending that senior government officials" meet with Star representatives. (Id. ¶ 111(c) (emphasis added).) The Court should require the Government to specify any other official acts that Mr. McDonnell allegedly performed or promised to perform.

Second, the Indictment alleges that the McDonnells "conspire[d] with each other and with others, both known and unknown to the grand jury" to commit honest services fraud and extortion under color of official right, yet the Indictment does not identify who the other co-conspirators are. (Id. ¶¶ 109, 115.) The identities of these individuals are critical to Mr. McDonnell's ability to prepare his defense and avoid unfair surprise, and should be provided to the defense under seal.[3] Without knowing who he is alleged to have conspired with, it is impossible for Mr. McDonnell to understand the conspiracy allegations—particularly the conspiracy's supposed objectives, aims, and acts in furtherance—in order to defend against the Government's charges. Nor can Mr. McDonnell properly disprove a conspiratorial agreement—or determine what acts or statements might have furthered this supposed conspiracy—when he does not even know the identities of his supposed co-conspirators.

---

[2] This boilerplate "allegation" is lifted nearly verbatim from the district court's statement of law in United States v. Jefferson. See 674 F.3d 332, 358 (4th Cir. 2012) ("performing official acts on an as-needed basis, so that [when]ever the opportunity presented itself, he would take specific action on the payor's behalf").

Knowing who these people are is especially important in this case because many critical witnesses—including almost everyone who worked for the McDonnells while Mr. McDonnell was the Governor of Virginia—are represented by counsel and have been reluctant to speak with the defense, possibly because they are afraid of likewise facing federal charges. Requiring the Government to clarify which people it actually believes were involved in the alleged conspiracy would dissipate that cloud of concern. And that would, in turn, ensure that witnesses do not refuse to cooperate with the defense out of unfounded concern that such cooperation could result in the Government investigating them too.

I. A Bill Of Particulars Is Required When The Indictment Fails To Allege Information Necessary To Prepare A Defense And Avoid Unfair Surprise.

This Court has broad discretion under Federal Rule of Criminal Procedure 7(f) to order the Government to provide a bill of particulars. See Fed. R. Crim. P 7(f). A bill of particulars "serves to supply the evidentiary details needed to prepare a defense." United States v. Am.

---

[3] To protect the identities of these individuals, the defense requests that their names not be disclosed publicly.

Waste Fibers Co., 809 F.2d 1044, 1047 (4th Cir. 1987); see also United States v. Anderson, 481 F.2d 685, 690 (4th Cir. 1973) (stating that the function of a bill of particulars is "to supply 'any essential detail which may have been omitted from the indictment'" (quoting Dillen v. Wainwright, 449 F.2d 331, 332 (5th Cir. 1971)). "Although an indictment should allege facts sufficient to put the defendant on notice of the charges against him so that he may prepare his defense, a bill of particulars or discovery often may be used if sufficient facts are not alleged." United States v. Previti, 644 F.2d 318, 319 (4th Cir. 1981). A bill of particulars thus "amplifies the indictment by providing missing or additional information so that the defendant can effectively prepare for trial." United States v. Fletcher, 74 F.3d 49, 53 (4th Cir. 1996). Its purpose "is to fairly apprise the defendant of the charges against him so that he may adequately prepare a defense and avoid surprise at trial." United States v. Automated Med. Labs., Inc., 770 F.2d 399, 405 (4th Cir. 1985).

Since the 1966 amendments to Rule 7(f) eliminated "the requirement of a showing of cause," the rule has evolved "to encourage a more liberal attitude by the courts toward bills of particulars." Fed. R. Crim. P. 7 advisory committee's notes (1966 amend.). This liberalization has led to a "desirable decline in the 'sporting theory' of criminal justice," whereby the prosecution endeavors to gain tactical advantage by withholding as much information as possible until trial. United States v. Addonizio, 451 F.2d 49, 64 (3d Cir. 1971) (quoting United States v. Jaskiewicz, 278 F. Supp. 525, 529 (E.D. Pa. 1968)). Given the more relaxed standard for granting a bill of particulars, defendants should "be given the benefit of the doubt in gray areas." United States v. Thevis, 474 F. Supp. 117, 124 (N.D. Ga. 1979), aff'd, 665 F.2d 616 (5th Cir. 1982). Where there is doubt, it "must be resolved in favor of disclosure and the conflicting concerns must yield to paramount public interest in affording the accused a reasonable foundation for mounting a defense." United States v. Manetti, 323 F Supp. 683, 696 (D. Del. 1971).

It is no "'answer to a motion for a bill of particulars for the government to say: The defendant knows what he did, and, therefore, has all the information necessary.'" United States v. Anderson, 254 F Supp. 177, 181 (W.D. Ark. 1966) (quoting United States v. Smith, 16 F.R.D. 372, 375 (W.D. Mo. 1954)). Such an "argument could be valid only if the defendant [were] presumed to be guilty" since "only if he is presumed guilty could he know the facts and details of the crime." Id. In our justice system, however, the accused "is presumed to be innocent," which means "it must be assumed 'that he is ignorant of the facts on which the pleader founds his charges.'" Id. (quoting Fontana v. United States, 262 F 283, 286 (8th Cir. 1919)); see generally 1 Charles Alan Wright et al., Federal Practice and Procedure § 130 (4th ed. 2013) (same).

The dangers of denying a defendant sufficient information to prepare a defense and avoid unfair surprise are particularly serious in this case, given the Government's discovery difficulties and refusal to provide other immediate discovery. Just as the Government's willingness to provide early and comprehensive discovery could weigh against the need for a bill of particulars, the Government's failure to produce timely document production—and its resistance to providing any other prompt discovery—should weigh in favor of a bill of particulars where the indictment is vague. See United States v. Taylor, No. 3:04-CR-227, 2005 BL 34430, at *4 (E.D. Va. Sept. 21, 2005) (Spencer, J.) (noting that the "Court may determine whether the information requested has been provided by other means" such as "pretrial discovery" or "voluntary disclosure"); United States v. Allen, 289 F Supp. 2d 230, 237 (N.D.N.Y 2003) ("In determining whether a bill of particulars is warranted, the court should consider the complexity of the offense, the clarity of the indictment, and the degree of discovery otherwise available to the defendants.").

II. Mr. McDonnell Is Entitled To A Bill Of Particulars Because The Indictment Omits Critical Information Necessary To Prepare His Defense And Avoid Unfair Surprise.

A. The Indictment Fails To Specify The Substance And Extent Of The Official Acts Alleged By The Government.

The Indictment's chief allegation is that the McDonnells participated in a scheme to obtain gifts and loans from Mr. Williams and Star in exchange for Mr. McDonnell performing "official actions" for their benefit. (Indictment ¶ 22.) But instead of identifying with any sort of precision and clarity the official acts that Mr. McDonnell allegedly performed or promised to perform, the Government employed vague language that obscures what the Government claims Mr. McDonnell actually did. For instance, the Indictment alleges that Mr. McDonnell performed or promised to perform "on an as-needed basis, as opportunities arose," official actions to "legitimize" and "promote" Star products. (Id.; see also id. ¶ 111(c)(i) (arranged meetings "to discuss and promote Anatabloc®"); id. ¶ 111(c)(ii) (attended and hosted events "designed to encourage" research studies and "to promote" Star products); id. ¶ 111(c)(iii) (contacted other officials "as part of an effort to encourage" research studies); id. ¶ 111(c)(iv) ("promot[ed]" Star's products and "facilitat[ed] its relationships with Virginia government officials").) This boilerplate is entirely uninformative on its face. Yet even when the Government tries to give it factual content, the best it can do is vaguely assert that Mr. McDonnell "spoke favorably to the attendees [at a Governor's Mansion event] regarding further study of anatabine." (Id. ¶ 60; see also id. ¶ 20 (alleging "brief remarks in support of Star Scientific").) The Government almost certainly deployed such loose language in order to plead around the stubborn reality that Mr. McDonnell neither promised nor performed any legally cognizable official act at any time. As the defense will explain in its forthcoming motion to dismiss, an action is not "official" unless it is undertaken to carry out or influence a governmental decision or action. Merely speaking "favorably" about a donor (whatever that means) does not suffice. The Government's use of vague language to obscure what conduct it actually alleges was criminal is thus preventing Mr. McDonnell from mounting an effective defense.

Not only are the Government's allegations concerning official acts hopelessly unclear, the Indictment also suggests that its allegations of official acts are non-comprehensive, i.e., the Government has apparently declined to allege all of the official acts that Mr. McDonnell performed or promised to perform. In particular, the Indictment states that the alleged official acts "included, but were not limited to," such actions as (1) "arranging meetings with JW and Virginia government officials"; (2) "hosting, and the defendants attending, events at the Governor's Mansion"; (3) "contacting other government officials in the OGV"; (4) "promoting Star Scientific's products and facilitating its relationships with Virginia government officials"; and (5) "recommending that senior government officials in the OGV meet with Star Scientific executives." (Indictment ¶ 111(c) (emphasis added).) To the extent that there are other alleged official acts that the Government intends to prove but has omitted from the Indictment, it should specify those acts in a bill of particulars.

As one court explained, "the basis of the government's allegations that the defendant solicited and received things of value" in exchange for "official acts" is "necessary to avoid unfair surprise at trial and is needed for the defendant to prepare a defense." United States v. Espy, 989 F Supp. 17, 34 (D.D.C. 1997). It is no surprise, therefore, that the Espy court "grant[ed] the defendant's motion for a bill of particulars [that sought] from the government the conduct, date, place and substance of each official act referred in the indictment." Id. This Court should likewise demand that the Government provide the conduct, date, place, and substance of all the official acts it intends to prove at trial.

B. The Indictment Fails To Identify Mr. McDonnell's Alleged Co-Conspirators.

The Indictment charges two conspiracy counts, and in both the Government alleges that the McDonnells conspired "with each other and with others, both known and unknown to the grand jury." (Indictment ¶¶ 109, 115.) Mr. McDonnell cannot effectively prepare his defense and avoid unfair surprise at trial if he does not know who the Government believes his co-conspirators were. The Court should therefore order the Government to provide that information.

Withholding this information will frustrate Mr. McDonnell's ability to prepare for trial by leaving him in the dark regarding the true nature and scope of the Government's conspiracy allegations. If Mr. McDonnell does not know who his alleged co-conspirators are, then it is impossible for him to know precisely what conduct the Government is alleging was criminal. Given the inherent legal vagueness in the charged crimes—and, as outlined above, the Government's intentional factual vagueness about what, precisely, Mr. McDonnell did to consummate those supposed crimes—it is critical that Mr. McDonnell know who else the Government thinks was involved. That is, no doubt, why courts routinely order the Government to disclose the identities of unindicted co-conspirators. See, e.g., Allen, 289 F Supp. 2d at 238 (directing the Government to "disclose the identities of all persons the government claims to have been co-conspirators during the course of the alleged conspiracy, regardless of whether they have been indicted"); United States v. Lonzo, 793 F Supp. 57, 60 (N.D.N.Y 1992) (granting "the request that the Government disclose the names of unindicted co-conspirators"); United States v. Williams, 113 F.R.D. 177, 178 (M.D. Fla. 1986) (noting that "it appears to be the common practice among courts in this circuit to grant [motions for a bill of particulars] insofar as they request a list of unindicted co-conspirators, at least when that information is not otherwise known to the defendant(s)"); United States v. Holman, 490 F Supp. 755, 762 (E.D. Pa. 1980) (directing the Government to disclose "the names of all co-conspirators or participants in the alleged offenses known to the Government"); United States v. Barrentine, 591 F.2d 1069, 1077 (5th Cir. 1979) (explaining that "[i]t is not uncommon for the trial judge to require the government to disclose [the] names [of unindicted co-conspirators] when information is necessary in a defendant's preparation for trial").

Several unique aspects of this case further favor confidential disclosure of the identities of every person the Government believes was involved in the alleged conspiracy. Foremost, the Government's factual allegations in this case involve conduct by every member of the McDonnells' immediate family and many of their former staff members. That factual breadth has caused many of the people who witnessed the events underlying the Indictment—most of whom are represented by counsel—to be concerned that the Government might investigate them for federal crimes too, particularly if they meet or talk with defense counsel. Requiring the Government to identify everyone whom it actually believes was involved in the alleged conspiracy (and thus, by implication, to identify those not involved in the alleged conspiracy) would eliminate these witnesses' unfounded concern and would therefore assist Mr. McDonnell in investigating the Government's allegations. That is particularly true where, as here, the Indictment is vague about the scope and nature of the conspiracy itself and (as addressed further below) the Government's document production is massive: "[I]f the discovery has been voluminous, identification of known unindicted co-conspirators will help a defendant focus his investigation and prepare for trial." United States v. Nachamie, 91 F Supp. 2d 565, 573 (S.D.N.Y 2000).

Finally, and perhaps most importantly, disclosing the identities of alleged co-conspirators would not prejudice the Government or (so long as disclosure is confidential) the alleged co-conspirators themselves. Unlike in many criminal cases, the confidential disclosure of alleged co-conspirators will not put anyone in danger or otherwise subvert legitimate law enforcement interests. As one court recently explained, "there is a common thread running through cases where courts have granted disclosure: the identities of unindicted co-conspirators have been disclosed primarily in cases in which violence was not alleged." United States v. Barrera, 950 F Supp. 2d 461, 477 (E.D.N.Y 2013) (citation omitted). So too here.

In short, Mr. McDonnell has a right to know whom the Government believes he conspired with and his counsel need to know the scope of the alleged conspiracy in order to properly defend against the Government's allegations. The Court should therefore order the Government to provide this information.

III. The Sheer Size Of The Government's Document Production Further Warrants A Bill Of Particulars.

"Perhaps the most frequent case in which particulars are warranted is where discovery is overwhelmingly extensive and the government fails to designate which documents it intends to introduce and which documents are merely relevant to the defense." United States v. Mahaffy, 446 F Supp. 2d 115, 119 (E.D.N.Y 2006) (emphasis omitted). That makes sense, of course, since the criminally accused should not have to spend months (or years) combing through millions of documents in order to understand the charges against them. As many courts have explained, the Government does "not fulfill its obligation merely by providing mountains of documents to defense counsel who were left unguided " United States v. Bortnovsky, 820 F.2d 572, 575 (2d Cir. 1987); see also, e.g., United States v. Ramirez, 609 F.3d 495, 503 (2d Cir. 2010) (noting that the "district court made clear that it ordered a bill of particulars because so much discovery was produced to the defendants, not too little"); United States v. Aispuro, No. CR 08-2936 JB, 2010 BL 59827, at *7 (D.N.M. Mar. 16, 2010) ("The Court also finds persuasive the Defendants' argument that, in a complex case with voluminous unorganized discovery, a bill of particulars is particularly necessary to avoid surprise at trial."); Mahaffy, 446 F Supp. 2d at 120 ("[A] large volume of discovery warrants a bill of particulars if it obfuscates the allegedly unlawful conduct and unfairly inhibits the defendant's preparation for trial."); United States v. Bin Laden, 92 F Supp. 2d 225, 234 (S.D.N.Y 2000) ("[S]ometimes, the large volume of material disclosed is precisely what necessitates a bill of particulars.").

In the alternative, of course, the Court could simply order the Government to cure the vagueness in its Indictment by identifying those documents within the five million pages it has produced that it believes actually substantiate the elements of the charged offenses. Only a small subset of this massive production is likely to be relevant at trial—a subset that the Government has surely already identified—and it would be easy for the Government to direct the defense to those key documents now. The Government is not entitled, however, to both refuse a bill of particulars and decline to do anything more than simply produce five million documents to the defense. After all, "[i]t is no solution to rely solely on the quantity of information disclosed by the government; sometimes, the large volume of material disclosed is precisely what necessitates a bill of particulars." Bin Laden, 92 F Supp. 2d at 234 (citing cases); see also, e.g., Nachamie, 91 F Supp. 2d at 572 ("Because the Government has declined to identify which of the documents provided to the defense pursuant to Rule 16(a)(1)(C) it intends to use in its case-in-chief at trial, it must, instead, respond to an appropriate bill of particulars."). For that reason too, a bill of particulars concerning the two critical issues addressed above is warranted.

CONCLUSION

"A defendant faced with [criminal] charges should not have to waste precious pre-trial preparation time guessing [about what conduct] he has to defend against when the government knows precisely the [conduct] on which it intends to rely and can easily provide the information." United States v. Trie, 21 F Supp. 2d 7, 21 (D.D.C. 1998). Here, there is no conceivable prejudice to the Government from disclosing the requested information. The only reason the Government could possibly have for stonewalling on the true nature of its allegations is concern about its ability to prove its case, such that it is seeking to—yet again—undermine Mr. McDonnell's ability to properly prepare his defense. But maximizing the tactical advantage that comes with unfairly surprising a litigation opponent is not a legitimate prosecutorial interest; indeed, it is precisely what bills of particulars exist to prevent. Accordingly, the Court should grant Mr. McDonnell's motion for a bill of particulars and order the disclosure of the information requested therein.

The defense requests a hearing on this Motion.

Dated: February 27, 2014

Respectfully submitted,

/s/ John L. Brownlee

John L. Brownlee (VSB No. 37358)
Timothy J. Taylor (VSB No. 84529)
Holland & Knight LLP
800 17th Street, N.W., Suite 1100
Washington, DC 20006
Telephone: (202) 828-1854
Facsimile: (202) 955-5564
Email: john.brownlee@hklaw.com

Henry W Asbill (pro hac vice)
Owen T Conroy (pro hac vice)
James M. Burnham (pro hac vice)
Jones Day
51 Louisiana Avenue, N.W.
Washington, DC 20001
Telephone: (202) 879-3939
Facsimile: (202) 626-1700
Email: hasbill@jonesday.com

Counsel for Governor Robert F McDonnell

CERTIFICATE OF SERVICE

I, John L. Brownlee, am a member of the Bar of this Court. I hereby certify that on this 27th day of February, 2014, I caused the foregoing to be electronically filed with the Clerk of Court using the CM/ECF system, causing it to be served on all registered users.

Dated: February 27, 2014

Respectfully submitted,

/s/ John L. Brownlee

John L. Brownlee (VSB No. 37358)
Holland & Knight LLP
800 17th Street, N.W., Suite 1100
Washington, DC 20006
Telephone: (202) 828-1854
Facsimile: (202) 955-5564
Email: john.brownlee@hklaw.com

Counsel for Governor Robert F McDonnell

IN THE UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT FOR THE
EASTERN DISTRICT OF VIRGINIA
Richmond Division

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA)
)
v.)
) No. 3:14cr12-JRS
ROBERT F MCDONNELL and)
MAUREEN G. MCDONNELL,)
)
Defendants.)

RESPONSE OF THE UNITED STATES IN OPPOSITION TO DEFENDANTS' MOTIONS FOR BILL OF PARTICULARS

The United States of America, by undersigned counsel, hereby responds in opposition to defendant Robert F McDonnell's and defendant Maureen G. McDonnell's Motions for Bill of Particulars. See Doc. Nos. 79, 82.[1] The Court should deny both motions because the detailed Indictment in this case, standing alone, fairly apprises the defendants of the charges, allows them to prepare their defenses fully, and enables them to avoid undue surprise at trial. A bill of particulars is further unnecessary given the extensive and easily searchable discovery already provided to the defendants. Rather, the defendants' motions, as confirmed by the proposed "alternative" relief essentially seeking production of the Government's exhibit list, Def. Mem. at 11, are a thinly veiled "attempt to compel [the] prosecution to disclose all of its evidence and perhaps its legal theory of the case in advance of trial," United States v. Taylor, No. 3:04cr227, 2005 WL 2298170, at *4 (E.D. Va. Sept. 21, 2005) (Spencer, J.). But such disclosure "is not required by Fed. R. Crim. P. 7(f)," id., and the defendants' motions should be denied.

---

[1] Mrs. McDonnell's motion, Doc No. 82, adopts Mr. McDonnell's motion, Doc. No. 79, and memorandum in support, Doc No. 80 ("Def. Mem."), and requests additional relief addressed below. See Doc. No. 82, at 1–2.

I. Applicable Law

Under Federal Rule of Criminal Procedure 7(f), a court "may direct the government to file a bill of particulars." But a defendant "has no unconditional right to such a bill." United States v. Bales, 813 F.2d 1289, 1294 (4th Cir. 1987). Further, "controlling authority makes clear that the decision to grant or deny a motion for a bill of particulars is within the sound discretion of the trial court." United States v. Cuong Gia Le, 310 F Supp. 2d 763, 781 (E.D. Va. 2004) (citing Wong Tai v. United States, 273 U.S. 77, 82 (1927); United States v. Anderson, 481 F.2d 685, 690 (4th Cir. 1973)). Moreover, a district court's denial of a defendant's motion for a bill of particulars is reviewed on appeal under an abuse-of-discretion standard. United States v. MacDougall, 790 F.2d 1135, 1153 (4th Cir. 1986). And "[w]hen each count of an indictment contains the official citation of the statute under which the defendant is charged the denial of a motion for a bill of particulars is not an abuse of discretion." Taylor, 2005 WL 2298170, at *3.

In addition, "it is well-settled that a bill of particulars is intended 'to fairly apprise the defendant of the charges against him so that he may adequately prepare a defense and avoid surprise at trial' and must 'not be used to provide a detailed disclosure of the government's evidence in advance of trial.'" Cuong Gia Le, 310 F Supp. 2d at 781 (quoting United States v. Automated Medical Labs., Inc. 770 F.2d 399, 405 (4th Cir. 1985)). In other words, as this Court has previously held, "[a]cquisition of evidentiary detail is not the function of a bill of particulars." Taylor, 2005 WL 2298170, at 3. Rather, "[i]f the defendant has been given adequate notice of the charges against him and can fully prepare for trial with reasonably diligent efforts, the Government cannot be required [through a bill of particulars] to disclose additional details about its case." Id. (citation omitted).

II. Discussion

The defendants' motions for a bill of particulars should be denied because the detailed Indictment, as well as the extensive and readily searchable discovery produced in this case, more than adequately provides detailed notice of the charges against them, allows them to prepare for trial, and makes any risk of surprise at trial almost non-existent.

A. The Indictment, Standing Alone, Makes a Bill of Particulars Unnecessary

The 43-page Indictment in this case sets forth in detail the defendants' scheme to use Mr. McDonnell's former official position as the Governor of Virginia to enrich the defendants and their family members by soliciting and obtaining payments, loans, gifts, and other things of value from JW and Star Scientific in exchange for Mr. McDonnell and his former office performing official actions on an as-needed basis, as opportunities arose, to legitimize, promote, and obtain research studies for Star Scientific's products, including Anatabloc® See Indictment ¶¶ 22–101. To further define the official actions taken to "legitimize, promote, and obtain research for Star Scientific's products," the Indictment explicitly sets forth the scope and five specific examples of the types of official actions to be provided and provided during the scheme, including:

> (i) arranging meetings for JW with Virginia government officials, who were subordinates of the Governor, to discuss and promote Anatabloc®; (ii) hosting, and the defendants attending, events at the Governor's Mansion designed to encourage Virginia university researchers to initiate studies of anatabine and to promote Star Scientific's products to doctors for referral to their patients; (iii) contacting other government officials in the OGV [the Office of the Governor of Virginia] as part of an effort to encourage Virginia state research universities to initiate studies of anatabine; (iv) promoting Star Scientific's products and facilitating its relationships with Virginia government officials by allowing JW to invite individuals important to Star Scientific's business to exclusive events at the Governor's Mansion; and (v) recommending that senior government officials in the OGV meet with Star Scientific executives to discuss ways that the company's products could lower healthcare costs.

Indictment ¶111(c). Nothing more is required to allow the defendants to adequately prepare their defense and avoid surprise at trial, and the defendants' characterization of paragraph 111 of the Indictment as mere "boilerplate [that] is entirely uninformative on its face," Def. Mem. at 6, is wrong.

Although the Indictment's description of official acts is sufficient in and of itself to allow the defendants to prepare for trial and avoid surprise, the Indictment also provides significant evidentiary detail regarding certain of the official actions requested, contemplated, and performed. See, e.g., Indictment ¶¶ 29–30, 41, 48–49, 51, 60, 63–65, 74–80, 84, 88. This evidentiary detail will undoubtedly assist the defendants in preparing for trial, and the defendants are not entitled to more.

The defendants' demand for the "conduct, date, place, and substance of all the official act[ion]s [the Government] intends to prove at trial," Def. Mem. at 8, is analogous to a request in a bill of particulars for all overt acts in a charged conspiracy. But as one court explained,

> The defendants also request the 'whens[,]' 'wheres[,]' and 'with whoms' of acts and participation in the charged conspiracy. Pretrial motions for such information are routinely denied. Furthermore, disclosure of all the overt acts in furtherance of the conspiracy is not properly the function of a bill of particulars. Defendants' requests for particulars in these categories must be denied.

United States v. Jimenez, 824 F Supp. 351, 363 (S.D.N.Y 1993) (collecting cases) (internal citations omitted). Thus, courts have long recognized that such requests are nothing more than discovery fishing expeditions that should be summarily rejected. United States v. Giese, 597 F.2d 1170, 1181 (9th Cir. 1979) ("Appellant's request for the 'when, where, and how' of every act in furtherance of the conspiracy was equivalent to a request for complete discovery of the government's evidence, which is not a purpose of the bill of particulars."). Indeed, this Court has previously taken the same view. Taylor, 2005 WL 2298170, at *4 (denying bill of particulars motion for all overt acts because it "would force the Government to disclose the manner in which it will prove the charges or preview its evidence or legal theory" and because "there is no requirement that the Government allege the particulars regarding [a] [d]efendant's involvement with the conspiracy, including the 'whens,' 'wheres,' and 'with whoms' of acts and participation in the charged conspiracy" (internal quotations omitted)).

The defendants cite to only one case, United States v. Espy, 989 F. Supp. 17, 34 (D.D.C. 1997), for the proposition that they are entitled to a bill of particulars detailing the official actions performed or to be performed in this case. Def. Mem. at 7. But Espy is readily distinguishable. In Espy, the former Secretary of Agriculture of the United States was charged, in relevant part, with gratuities crimes based on his receipt of things of value from certain companies and individuals. 989 F. Supp. at 21. Espy complained that the indictment was insufficient to permit him to prepare his defense and requested that the Government be ordered to particularly identify the official acts that he performed on behalf of the companies and individuals who had provided the things of value. Id. at 34. The court agreed and ordered the Government to provide the requested bill of particulars. Id. But even a cursory review of the indictment in Espy clearly distinguishes that case from this one. See Espy, No. 1:97cr335 (D.D.C. Aug. 27, 1997), Doc. No. 1 (Indictment) (copy attached as Exh. A).[2] While the Espy indictment detailed the payors and the things of value that the defendant received, it was completely silent regarding even the type or category of contemplated official acts. Instead, the Espy indictment merely recited the statutory charging language "for or because of official acts performed and to be performed by defendant ESPY." Id. at ¶ 20. Nowhere did it describe in even generic terms, much less with the specificity detailed in the present Indictment, any types of actions that the defendant performed or that were even contemplated. In fact, the indictment failed even to provide information regarding the relationship between the payors and the defendant's public office other than the naked allegation that the payors were seeking "official action" and the companies were regulated by the USDA. Id. at ¶ 8. Simply put, the Indictment in this case is a far cry from the one in Espy, and that opinion has no application here.

---

[2] Also available at <http://govinfo.library.unt.edu/oic/SMALTZ/indict/espym.htm> (last accessed Mar. 6, 2014).

Moreover, the defendants are not entitled to a detailed description of the "conduct, date, place, and substance of all the official act[ion]s [the Government] intends to prove at trial" because the Government is not required to prove that any official acts were actually performed. See United States v. Joseph, 510 F Supp. 1001, 1005 (E.D. Pa. 1981). Although the Indictment alleges, and at trial the Government will prove, that Mr. McDonnell used his office and took official actions in fulfillment of the corrupt bargain, we need not even do so since "fulfillment of the quid pro quo is not an element of the offense." Evans, 504 U.S. 255, 268 (1992); see also United States v. Brewster, 408 U.S. 501, 526 (1972) ("There is no need [in order to satisfy quid pro quo requirement in 18 U.S.C. § 201] for the Government to show that [defendant public official] fulfilled the alleged illegal bargain; acceptance of the bribe is the violation of the statute, not performance of the illegal promise."). In Joseph, the defendant was a county court clerk who was charged with soliciting and accepting cash from a bail bondsman in consideration for favorable recommendations and exercise of discretion in his official decisions. 510 F Supp. at 1002. The defendant moved for a bill of particulars for specification of the official decisions tainted by his illicit relationship with the bail bondsman. Id. at 1005. The indictment did "not allege the manner in which the bribes influenced [the] defendant's official conduct" or the location where the official acts occurred. Id. The court denied the defendant's bill of particulars motion because "the government need not allege the official acts and decisions which the receipt of the money actually influenced, for the gravamen of the offense is the solicitation or acceptance of the bribe, not the delivery of its quid pro quo." Id. (internal quotation omitted). Since the Government has no obligation to prove any official action at trial, and, in any event, has more than sufficiently described the quid pro quo agreement here, this Court should similarly reject these defendants' demand for an exhaustive and detailed list of every official action performed or contemplated.[3]

B. The Defendants Do Not Need the Government to Identify Their Co-conspirators to Enable Them to Prepare for Trial

The defendants are also not entitled to a bill of particulars disclosing the identities of their co-conspirators. Whether the Government must furnish the names of co-conspirators to a defendant lies within a trial court's discretion. United States v. Jackson, 757 F.2d 1486, 1491 (4th Cir. 1985); see also United States v. Crayton, 357 F.3d 560, 568 (6th Cir. 2004); United States v. Torres, 901 F.2d 205, 233–34 (2d Cir. 1990). While the defendants correctly note that some courts have ordered such disclosures, Def. Mem. at 8–9, such disclosures are far from "routine[]," as they contend, id. at 8. See, e.g. United States v. Coffey, 361 F Supp. 2d 102, 122 (E.D.N.Y 2005) ("Courts have been highly reluctant to require a bill of particulars when defendants have asked for specific identities of co-conspirators or others allegedly involved." (emphasis added)). First, he cites only cases outside of the Fourth Circuit for this proposition. Moreover, for every court that requires disclosure of co-conspirators, there are numerous others that reject disclosure. See, e.g., United States v. Foggo, No. 1:08cr79, 2008 WL 2777009, at *11 (E.D. Va. July 14, 2008) ("'[T]he Government is not required to furnish the name[s] of all other co-conspirators in a bill of particulars.'" (quoting Crayton, 357 F.3d at 568)); United States v. Frye, No. 5:01cr30058, 2002 WL 385574, at *1 (W.D. Va. Feb. 20, 2002) ("[T]he government is not required to reveal the names of unindicted co-conspirators or to disclose the identities of other persons present when the offenses took place.").

---

[3] Similarly, Mrs. McDonnell is not entitled to her additional request that the Government "specify any official acts that [she] allegedly performed or promised to perform in exchange for gifts or loans." Doc. No. 82, at 2. In this respect, as set forth above, the Indictment provides more than sufficient detail regarding the nature and type of official actions promised and performed as part of the alleged quid pro quo in this case, as well as examples of those specific official actions, regardless of whether those official actions were performed or promised directly by Mr. McDonnell or by any other individual acting on behalf of the OGV

Where, as here, an indictment "is valid, contains the elements of the offense, and gives notice to the defendant of the charges against him, it is not essential that a conspirator know all other conspirators." United States v. Rey, 923 F.2d 1217, 1222 (6th Cir. 1991). This is due, in no small part, to the fact that the Government "would not necessarily need to present this information to the jury in order to secure [a d]efendant's conviction[.]" United States v. Hooks, No. 1:07cr213, 2008 WL 907445, at *3 (W.D. Mich. Apr. 1, 2008). A defendant may be indicted and convicted despite the names of his or her co-conspirators remaining unknown, as long as the Government presents evidence to establish an agreement between two or more persons. Rey, 923 F.2d at 1222.

Somewhat curiously, the defendants argue that they are entitled to a bill of particulars regarding the identities of their co-conspirators because potential witnesses may be reluctant to talk to their counsel for fear that they may be investigated by the Government should they choose to do so. Def. Mem. at 9. The defendant understandably fails to cite any legal authority for the proposition that a bill of particulars is the appropriate mechanism to encourage potential witnesses to speak with defense counsel—that is because no such legal authority exists. To the extent that the defendants suspect that potential witnesses are concerned they will be investigated by the Government simply because they choose to meet with defense counsel, the Government confirms that any such concern is incorrect. This public confirmation should assist the defendant in disabusing any potential witness of his or her mistaken belief to the contrary.

C. The Discovery Provided by the Government Further Obviates Any Need for a Bill of Particulars.

Given the discovery to date and the ongoing discovery that will be provided by the Government in advance of trial, the defendants' argument that a bill of particulars for further details regarding the official actions and the identities of co-conspirators is necessary to avoid surprise at trial must fail. Again, as this Court has observed, "[i]n determining whether to grant a bill of particulars, this Court may determine whether the information requested has been provided by other means, such as pretrial discovery, voluntary disclosure by the government, or the indictment itself." Taylor, 2005 WL 2298170, at *4. In determining the risk of unfair surprise, the court may consider not only the discovery provided thus far, but also the discovery that will be provided by the Government prior to trial. See United States v. Tsoa, No. 1.13cr137, 2013 WL 3242700, at *4 (E.D. Va. June 25, 2013) ("To begin, the Government represents in its opposition that [the] [d]efendant is receiving additional information about the alleged offenses, through ongoing formal discovery, and indeed there has been voluminous discovery produced thus far."); see also Cuong Gia Le, 310 F Supp. 2d at 781–82 (denying bill of particulars due, in part, to government's representations regarding ongoing discovery). And "[a] defendant is not entitled 'to an unnecessary bill of particulars, where the underlying objectives of a Fed. R. Crim. P 7 motion are fully satisfied by informal and formal discovery.'" Tsoa, 2013 WL 3242700, at *4 (quoting Taylor 2005 WL 2298170, at *4).

The Government has already produced virtually all of the documentary evidence currently in its possession that is related to this case. Specifically, the Government has produced, at considerable expense, nearly all information produced by third parties in this case, and in related investigations, in an electronically searchable format compatible with the database of the defendants' choosing. This allows the defendants to search (by custodian, date, date range, keywords, Boolean terms, etc.), review, and tag documents. To further assist the defense's review of the produced records, the Government provided a log sorted by the custodian that produced the records and a separate log sorted by the "FBI Tracking #." These logs further described the database folder that identified data as belonging to one of seven general custodian categories. This discovery contains all of the documentary evidence that the Government anticipates, at this time, introducing into evidence at trial, including: all of the documents referenced in the Indictment; written communications (including emails, text messages, and correspondence) between and among the defendants, JW, Virginia government employees, Star Scientific employees, and others discernible from the face of the Indictment; videotapes and pictures of the defendants at Star Scientific events; videotapes and pictures depicting the things of value received by the defendants; Governor's Mansion logs; relevant toll records; etc.[4] The fact that the Government has produced the discovery in this case in a searchable database strongly supports its position that a bill of particulars is unnecessary. See, e.g., United States v. Watts, No. 04-20223B, 2007 WL 1231669, at *3 (W.D. Tenn. Apr. 25, 2007) (rejecting defendant's motion for a bill of particulars and declining "to order the Government to provide [the] [d]efendants with a roadmap through all of the documents it has produced especially in light of the fact that the Government has been cooperative in discovery and produced the documents in a searchable format").

---

[4] The Government provided its production of these materials in electronically searchable format on February 24, 2014—one month from arraignment and more than five months before trial. A summary and further description of that production is provided in greater detail in the Government's Response in Opposition to Mr. McDonnell's pending Motion to Compel. See Doc. No 75, at 6–7. Thus, as of that date, the defendants had all of these materials in a format that allowed them to search electronically, review, and tag in the database of their choosing. On March 10, 2014, the Government sent an "image overlay" production to the defendants, which complemented the February 24 production by providing bates-stamped images for those documents that were not previously bates-stamped by the producing third parties. Although this image overlay was not necessary for the defendants' review of the materials, it does ensure the parties' ability to use common bates-stamp numbering for exhibits at trial. Insofar as Mr. McDonnell's separate motion to compel seeks judicial enforcement of the Government's projected timeline for productions, those deadlines have been met.

The Government has also produced to the defendants copies of all of the subpoenas issued by the Government during its investigation with the subpoena attachments, as well as a letter providing a good-faith summary of all telephonic and written correspondence with third-parties' counsel regarding narrowing of subpoenas and use of search terms. This information can be used in conjunction with the logs identifying the custodians to determine what categories of evidence custodians produced--and to a large extent, the information that was of greatest importance and interest to the Government. In addition, the Government has already provided defense counsel with a list of all of the potential witnesses in the Government's case-in-chief that the Government has currently identified, which should significantly assist the defendants' review of the database given its searchability.[5] And the Government has informed defense counsel that it will produce all of the memoranda of interviews (e.g. FBI-302s) and grand jury testimony "well before trial." Doc. No. 75, Gov. Resp. to Def. Robert F McDonnell's Mot. to Compel, at 11 n.6. Consequently, the defendants will have all of the documentary evidence, all of the memoranda of interviews, and all of the grand jury testimony well before trial. There is thus almost no chance of unfair surprise at trial. As such, the defendants have no need for a bill of particulars as to the official actions alleged or the identities of co-conspirators, and their demand for that information is merely a demand for early discovery of the Government's evidence and theory of the case.

---

[5] Tellingly, the actions of defense counsel have made clear from the outset of this case that they have more than a sufficient understanding of the evidence and allegations to equip them to prepare their defense. For example, on January 30, 2014—before a protective order was entered to govern discovery and thus before the Government had produced documentary evidence to the defendants—counsel for Mr. McDonnell sent the Government a letter identifying 121 individuals that he believed to have information relevant to the case. See Doc. No. 59, Exh. 1, at 1–20. Although the Government does not agree with Mr. McDonnell's asserted relevancy of all of those individuals, it is notable that his list included approximately 70 individuals that the Government would not specifically identify on a prospective witness list until a week later.

The defendants also claim a bill of particulars is warranted because of the "sheer size" of the Government's production. Def. Mem. at 10. But a review of the cases they cite (Def. Mem. at 10–11) exposes how misplaced that argument is here, where such a detailed Indictment has been returned. In United States v. Bortnovsky, the court unsurprisingly held that a bill of particulars was necessary when the indictment was silent on essential details of the offense; the Government provided "mountains of documents" (apparently in paper as opposed to in a searchable database), and "in [an] attempt to proceed furtively" refused to identify which of the burglaries or false statements formed the basis of the charges; and one of the defendant's attorneys had only four days to prepare for trial. 820 F.2d 572, 574–75 (2d Cir. 1987). The defendants cite United States v. Ramirez, 609 F.3d 495 (2d Cir. 2010), but the indictment in the case underlying Ramirez charged over twenty defendants with participation in a narcotics conspiracy spanning seven years using the bare statutory language, with no elaboration at all. See Superseding Indictment, United States v. Luna, et al., No. 3:05CR58 (SRU), Doc. No. 419 (available on PACER); United States v. Luna, 2006 WL 1688028, at *1 (D. Conn. May 9, 2006). In United States v. Aispuro, the Government had produced "voluminous unorganized" (and apparently not electronically searchable) discovery, but there, the apparently one-sentence indictment—which charged eight defendants in a wide-ranging drug conspiracy—merely tracked the statutory charging language, did not contain any facts whatsoever, and contained no manner and means section describing the conspiracy. No. 08cr2936, 2010 WL 1404196, at *1, 4–6 (D.N.M. Mar. 16, 2010). The court in United States v. Mahaffy, in fact, rejected the argument that a bill of particulars was appropriate due to the "volume of documents" produced, in part because the court found that "the [i]ndictment fairly specifie[d] the allegedly unlawful conduct, and the Government ha[d] not dissembled by means of its discovery." 446 F Supp. 2d 115, 119–120 (E.D.N.Y 2006). As for defendants' citation of the court's observation in United States v. Bin Laden, 92 F Supp. 2d 225, 234 (S.D.N.Y 2000), that "sometimes, the large volume of material disclosed is precisely what necessitates a bill of particulars," the circumstances and holding of that case make it plain that this case is not one of those times. See id. at 227, 232–244 (granting in part but denying in large part motions for bill of particulars where defendants were subject to restrictive pretrial confinement and where indictment charged 15 named defendants with 267 discrete criminal offenses, charged certain defendants with 229 counts of murder, alleged overt acts in 12 different countries, and charged crimes covering a period of nearly ten years).

In short, this is not a case where the Government has put forth a bare-bones Indictment and sought refuge in the volume of discovery it has produced to avoid providing a bill of particulars. As discussed above, the Indictment here is more than adequate to enable the McDonnells to prepare their defense, and their argument based on the "sheer size" of discovery is but a misguided segue to their "alternative" relief.

This request for "alternative" relief, Def. Mem. at 11, confirms that the defendants' motions for a bill of particulars are, in fact, merely a demand "to provide a detailed disclosure of the government's evidence in advance of trial," Cuong Gia Le, 310 F Supp. 2d at 781 (internal quotation omitted). Specifically, the defendants ask this Court to order the Government to identify the documents it believes are "likely to be relevant at trial," Def. Mem., at 11, which is the functional equivalent of a demand for the Government's exhibit list—almost five months before trial.[6] The defendants are not entitled to the immediate production of the Government's exhibit list pursuant to Rule 16, nor are they entitled to it based on the volume of discovery in this case. Indeed, the defense demanded on the one hand that the Government produce "every shred of evidence in its possession," Doc No. 9, Def. Mem. in Supp. Def. Robert F McDonnell's Mot. Seeking Immediate Discovery, at 2, and now complains on the other hand about the Government's production of voluminous discovery as a basis for the defendant's request that this Court order the Government to produce the functional equivalent of its exhibit list almost five months before trial. The Court should reject the defendants' requested "alternative" relief.

III. Conclusion

The 43-page Indictment in this case is more than sufficient, in and of itself, to fairly apprise the defendants of the charges, allow them to prepare their defense fully, and enable them to avoid undue surprise at trial. The extensive and easily searchable discovery already provided to the defendants, as well as the fact that the defendants will receive all of the Government's memoranda of witness interviews well in advance of trial, also obviates the need for a bill of particulars. The "alternative" relief that the defendants seek confirms that their motions for a bill of particulars are actually discovery demands seeking the evidentiary detail of the Government's case. Such is not the purpose of Federal Rule of Criminal Procedure 7(f). The defendants' motions for a bill of particulars should be denied.

---

[6] This is of a piece with Mr. McDonnell's repeated demands to the Government for immediate turnover of our exhibit list. On January 30, 2014, nine days after the Indictment was returned, defense counsel sent a 20-page discovery demand letter requesting that the Government "produce any index or working exhibit list of items you intend to use at trial" pursuant to Fed. R. Crim. P 16(a)(1)(E)(i) and (ii). Doc. No. 59, Exh. 1, at 3. The Government sent a response letter on February 4, 2014, stating that the defendant's request for an exhibit list was beyond the scope of Rule 16 and quoted United States v. Prince, 618 F.3d 551, 562 (6th Cir. 2010), for the unremarkable proposition that "Rule 16 does not entitle a defendant to pretrial disclosure of the government's exhibit list." Doc No. 59, Exh. 3, at 2. Apparently in disagreement, defense counsel sent another letter on February 24, 2014, "reassert[ing] [their] request that the Government produce any index or exhibit list of items it intends to use at trial" pursuant to Rule 16. Ltr. from Henry W Asbill, at 4 (copy will be provided upon request). The defendants are not entitled to the immediate production of the Government's exhibit list pursuant to Rule 16, nor are they entitled to it based on the volume of discovery in this case.

Respectfully submitted,

DANA J. BOENTE
Acting United States Attorney

By: /s/
Michael S. Dry
Jessica D. Aber
Ryan S. Faulconer
Counsel for the United States
U.S. Attorney's Office
600 E. Main Street, Suite 1800
Richmond, Va. 23219
Phone: 804-819-5400
Fax: 804-771-2316

JACK SMITH
Chief, Public Integrity Section
Criminal Division
U.S. Department of Justice

By: /s/
David V Harbach, II
Counsel for the United States
U.S. Department of Justice
Criminal Division
Public Integrity Section
1400 New York Ave., N.W., Ste 12100
Washington, D.C. 20005
Phone: 202-514-1412
Fax: 202-514-3003

CERTIFICATE OF SERVICE

I hereby certify that on March 10, 2014, a true and correct copy of the foregoing was delivered to all counsel of record via the Court's Electronic Filing System.

By: /s/
Jessica D. Aber
Virginia Bar No. 72680
Assistant United States Attorney
United States Attorney's Office
600 East Main Street, Suite 1800
Richmond, Virginia 23219
Phone: (804) 819-5400
Fax: (804) 771-2316
Email: jessica.d.aber@usdoj.gov

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
FOR THE EASTERN DISTRICT OF VIRGINIA
RICHMOND DIVISION

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,	)
	)
v.	)	CRIMINAL NO. 3:14-CR-00012
	)
ROBERT F. MCDONNELL MAUREEN G. MCDONNELL	)	JUDGE JAMES R. SPENCER
	)

REPLY OF DEFENDANT ROBERT F. MCDONNELL TO THE GOVERNMENT'S OPPOSITION TO MOTION # 8 – MOTION FOR BILL OF PARTICULARS

TABLE OF CONTENTS

Page

TABLE OF AUTHORITIES ii

INTRODUCTION 1

ARGUMENT 2

I. Mr. McDonnell's Limited Request For Particulars Is Necessary To Prepare His Defense And Avoid Unfair Surprise 2

  A. The Government Should Specify The Substance Of Each Official Act That Mr. McDonnell Allegedly Performed Or Promised To Perform 2

  B. The Government Should Disclose The Identities Of Unindicted Co-Conspirators 8

II. The Inadequacy Of The Indictment Cannot Be Cured By Overwhelming Mr. McDonnell With Millions Of Documents 10

CONCLUSION 12

TABLE OF AUTHORITIES

Page(s)

CASES

Evans v. United States,
504 U.S. 255 (1992) 7, 8

United States v. Aispuro,
No. CR 08-2936 JP, 2010 BL 59827 (D.N.M. Mar. 16, 2010) 12

United States v. Anderson,
254 F Supp. 177 (W.D. Ark. 1966) 9

United States v. Barrera,
950 F Supp. 2d 461 (E.D.N.Y 2013) 8

United States v. Bortnovsky,
820 F.2d 572 (2d Cir. 1987) 12

United States v. Espy,
989 F Supp. 17 (D.D.C. 1997) 3, 4, 5, 6, 7

United States v. Joseph,
510 F Supp. 1001 (E.D. Pa. 1981) 7

United States v. Loftus,
992 F.2d 793 (8th Cir. 1993) 3

United States v. Mahaffy,
446 F Supp. 2d 115 (E.D.N.Y 2006) 11

United States v. Nachamie,
91 F Supp. 2d 565 (S.D.N.Y 2000) 11

United States v. Rey,
923 F.2d 1217 (9th Cir. 1991) 9

United States v. Sampson,
448 F Supp. 2d 692 (E.D. Va. 2006) 2, 7, 8

United States v. Stern,
No. 03 CR. 81 (MBM), 2003 WL 22743897 (S.D.N.Y Nov. 20, 2003) 6

United States v. Sun-Diamond Growers of Cal.,
526 U.S. 398 (1999) 3

United States v. Trie,
21 F Supp. 2d 7 (D.D.C. 1998) 7

United States v. Vasquez-Ruiz, 136 F Supp. 2d 941 (N.D. Ill. 2001) 11

INTRODUCTION

There is no question that this case features a "detailed Indictment." (Gov't Br. at 1.) The problem, however, is that while the Indictment is detailed in certain respects, it grows noticeably more vague when it comes to an allegation essential to stating a complete public corruption offense—that Mr. McDonnell promised to perform or did perform an "official act" on behalf of Mr. Williams or Star Scientific, Inc. ("Star"). The Indictment's detail on all other fronts—far from exonerating this deficiency—simply underscores the appropriateness of additional specificity on this critical point and highlights the Government's apparent inability to provide that necessary detail without exposing the lack of a legal basis for its charges. The Government's artfully vague pleading does not "fairly apprise" Mr. McDonnell of the charges against him. It is therefore deficient. The narrow set of particulars the defense has requested is necessary to cure that deficiency

The same is true for the Government's refusal to tell Mr. McDonnell who it thinks participated in the alleged conspiracy. The Government opposes the production of this critical information, but never explains the reason for its opposition. Unlike many criminal cases, this one lacks any plausible concerns about the safety or security of unindicted co-conspirators. And moreover, the alleged conspiracy in this case is far different from the conspiracies that federal prosecutions typically feature—i.e., conspiracies in which the underlying criminal statute is clear (e.g., drug distribution) and the number of co-conspirators is many (e.g., an international drug cartel), such that identifying those co-conspirators would shed little light on the underlying criminal charges. Here, by contrast, the underlying criminal corruption statutes the Government has invoked are unquestionably vague and the defense does not know what specifically about Mr. McDonnell's conduct the Government actually believes was criminal. Knowing who else the Government believes was participating in the McDonnells' supposed scheme is therefore essential to "fairly apprise" Mr. McDonnell of the charges against him because that knowledge would provide critical insight into the nature, scope, and aims of the conspiracy. United States v. Sampson, 448 F Supp. 2d 692, 696 (E.D. Va. 2006) (citation omitted).

The defense asks only that the Government (1) explain what promised or actual conduct it believes was "official" (and thus illegal), and (2) identify the individual members of the alleged conspiracy. These modest requests are hardly the "demand to provide a detailed disclosure of the government's evidence in advance of trial" that the Government dramatically claims. (Gov't Br. at 13 (citation omitted).) And despite opposing disclosure, the Government never provides any reason for withholding these basic details other than its reflexive protestation that revealing any information—no matter how limited—will somehow unveil its entire legal strategy. The Government's inability to articulate any compelling prejudice confirms, of course, that no good reason exists.

Mr. McDonnell needs this information to prepare his defense and avoid unfair surprise. The Government has no legitimate basis for withholding it. The Court should thus grant Mr. McDonnell's motion for a bill of particulars.

ARGUMENT

I. Mr. McDonnell's Limited Request For Particulars Is Necessary To Prepare His Defense And Avoid Unfair Surprise.

A. The Government Should Specify The Substance Of Each Official Act That Mr. McDonnell Allegedly Performed Or Promised To Perform.

1. To "fairly apprise" Mr. McDonnell of the charges against him, see United States v. Sampson, 448 F Supp. 2d 692, 696 (E.D. Va. 2006) (citation omitted), the Government must identify each official act that Mr. McDonnell allegedly performed or promised to perform as well as the substance of those acts—i.e., the features of the acts that make them "official" for purposes of criminal liability under the federal bribery laws. Not every action a public official takes is an official act. The Supreme Court has made clear that actions equivalent to "receiving sports teams at the White House, visiting [a] high school, and speaking to farmers about USDA policy"—which "are assuredly 'official acts' in some sense"—are not official acts under the federal bribery laws. United States v. Sun-Diamond Growers of Cal., 526 U.S. 398, 407 (1999). The same is true when a public official merely arranges a meeting for a constituent with another official. See United States v. Loftus, 992 F.2d 793, 796 (8th Cir. 1993) (no Hobbs Act liability where an official "promised only to introduce the [constituent] to influential persons" but "did not promise to use his official position to influence those persons"). An action is not "official" unless it is undertaken to exercise governmental power or to influence others in exercising such power.

If the Government does not disclose the essential details of the official acts it alleges, then neither the defendant nor the court can determine whether the Government has alleged an actual federal crime. Not only would this prevent the accused from understanding the charges against him, it would make it impossible for Mr. McDonnell to prepare an effective defense and avoid unfair surprise. It would also—if left unremedied—free the Government to always allege facts at a high level generality, plead around a critical element of the charged offense, and then leave the defendant to guess blindly at the countless possible permutations of what the Government believes will satisfy that critical element of the crime. The need to avoid that obvious unfairness is, of course, precisely why the Espy court directed the Government to specify "the conduct, date, place and substance of each official act referred in the indictment." United States v. Espy, 989 F Supp. 17, 34 (D.D.C. 1997) (emphasis added).

2. The Government attempts to distinguish Espy, but that effort fails. First of all, the Government's claim that the Espy indictment "was completely silent regarding even the type or category of contemplated official acts" is false. (Gov't Br. at 5.) The Espy indictment alleged, for instance, that then-Secretary of Agriculture Mike Espy accepted gratuities "from corporations and individuals seeking official action by, doing or seeking to do business with, and conducting activities regulated by the USDA." (Indictment ¶ 7, United States v. Espy, No. 97-0335 (D.D.C. Aug. 27, 1997) (Gov't Br. Ex. A).) That allegation thus conveyed that these corporations and individuals sought favorable treatment at least with respect to contract awards—a straightforward "official" act under federal law. Here, by contrast, the Government never articulates—not once in 43 pages of an otherwise "detailed Indictment" (Gov't Br. at 1)—precisely what governmental action or actions it thinks Mr. McDonnell was trying to achieve or influence in the course of his supposed scheme.

The Indictment does make vague accusations that Mr. McDonnell promised or performed official acts to "legitimize, promote, and obtain research studies" for Star products. (See Indictment ¶ 22.) In its general description of the alleged official acts, for example, the Indictment alleges that Mr. McDonnell arranged meetings "to discuss and promote Anatabloc®," attended and hosted events at the Mansion "designed to encourage" research studies and "to promote" Star products, contacted other officials "as part of an effort to encourage" research studies, and "facilitat[ed] [Star's] relationships with Virginia government officials." (See id. ¶ 111(c).) The Government claims that the Indictment provides "significant evidentiary detail" to support these allegations (see Gov't Br. at 4), but that supposed "detail" sheds no more light on why the Government believes that Mr. McDonnell's alleged conduct constituted "official" action than the Indictment's broad characterizations of that conduct. For instance, the Indictment alleges that Mr. McDonnell "sent an email to the Virginia Secretary of Health" stating that he "'would like to have [one of the Secretary of Health's Deputies] attend a short briefing at the mansion about 10am with first lady on the Star Scientific anatablock [sic] trials planned in va at vcu and uva.'" (Indictment ¶ 48.) This allegation says nothing about how this interaction involved Mr. McDonnell "promoting" or "legitimizing" Star's products, nor does it describe how, if at all, Mr. McDonnell sought to influence the Secretary (his direct subordinate) to take any particular governmental action on behalf of Mr. Williams or Star.

Similarly, the Indictment alleges that Mr. McDonnell "hosted" an event at the Governor's Mansion "for the launch of Star Scientific's Anatabloc® product" and that he "spoke favorably to the attendees regarding further study of anatabine." (Id. ¶ 60.) But again, these allegations do not explain, much less describe, how Mr. McDonnell influenced or attempted to influence any particular governmental action. The same is true for the Government's allegations that Mr. McDonnell sent a ten-word email to his Chief Counsel saying "'Pls see me about anatabloc issues at VCU and UVA'" (id. ¶ 80), that he attended a health care leaders reception at which Star representatives and Virginia university researchers were present (id. ¶ 84), and that he asked a member of his cabinet to "reach out to the 'Anatabloc people' and meet with them to discuss Anatabloc®'" (id. ¶ 88). Not one of these allegations (or any other allegation in the Indictment) supplies any factual basis for concluding that Mr. McDonnell attempted to exercise the sovereign power of Virginia's government on behalf of Mr. Williams or Star, nor do they supply any factual basis to conclude that Mr. McDonnell asked or pressured anyone else to do so.

In any event, whether the Government's indictment against Mr. McDonnell is more or less detailed than the Espy indictment is irrelevant. What is most significant about the Espy decision is the relief that it ordered. The court did not order the Government to simply identify the general type or category of official acts. Rather, the court ordered the Government to specify the "conduct, date, place and substance of each official act referred in the indictment." Espy, 989 F Supp. at 34 (emphasis added). We request that this Court do the same.

3. The Government also seeks to evade Espy by claiming that the relief granted there—which is all that Mr. McDonnell seeks here—is akin to requesting particulars enumerating every overt act taken in furtherance of a conspiracy. (See Gov't Br. at 4-5.) But that is the wrong analogy. Overt acts in furtherance of conspiracies are nothing like the "official" act that supplies an essential element to any bribery charge. The "overt act" concept is well-established, has a clear legal meaning, and is easily comprehended from simple allegations or discovery. An "official" act, by contrast, is a legal concept that turns on fine-grained distinctions not easily discernible from vague allegations like those that the Government has offered here. Since it is difficult to ascertain the Government's legal understanding of "official" act, it is critical that the Government explain the "conduct, date, place and substance of each official act referred in the indictment," Espy, 989 F Supp. at 34 (emphasis added), and that it intends to prove at trial. Otherwise, the Government could unfairly surprise the defense at trial by suddenly claiming that innocuous conduct that the Government did not initially allege as an "official act" is "official" after all. See, e.g., United States v. Stern, No. 03 CR. 81 (MBM), 2003 WL 22743897, at *4 (S.D.N.Y Nov. 20, 2003) ("[The accused] should not be forced to speculate that the government may have some other wrongful act in mind that it intends to spring upon him at trial, and possibly to make him the victim of unfair surprise.").

4. The far better analogy, moreover, is to requests for particulars in cases alleging fraud. Just like bribery, liability for fraud often turns on nuanced legal and factual distinctions. If the Government does not apprise the accused of the exact nature of its alleged fraud, then the accused cannot understand the charges against him and thus cannot adequately prepare a defense. That is why "[i]n the case of fraud and perjury, it is critical that the government identify in the indictment the dates of the fraudulent conduct, the specific fraudulent documents, and the fraudulent statements within the documents," Sampson, 448 F Supp. at 696; in other words, the fraud-charges equivalent to the "conduct, date, place and substance of each official act." Espy, 989 F Supp. at 34. As this Court explained in Sampson, particulars are necessary in a fraud case "to inform the Defendant of the specific allegations" whenever the indictment "fail[s] to state which specific documents were fraudulent, and what was allegedly fraudulent about the documents at issue." 448 F Supp. at 696. So too here. To adequately apprise the accused of its bribery charges, the Government must specify the alleged official acts and articulate what made those acts official. See also, e.g., United States v. Trie, 21 F Supp. 2d 7, 21-22 (D.D.C. 1998) (explaining in the false statements context that "[t]he government must provide information as to exactly what the false statements are, what about them is false, who made them, and how Mr. Trie caused them to be made" (citing cases)).

5. Finally, the Government ultimately retreats into the extreme position that it does not have to apprise Mr. McDonnell of any official acts at all. (See Gov't Br. at 6-7.) Citing United States v. Joseph, 510 F Supp. 1001 (E.D. Pa. 1981)—a three-decades-old decision that is irreconcilable with Espy—the Government contends that it need not plead the substance of any official acts because it "is not required to prove that any official acts were actually performed." (Gov't Br. at 6.) This argument is mistaken. To be sure, an official act need not be performed to constitute an offense, see Evans v. United States, 504 U.S. 255, 268 (1992), but an official act still has to be promised. Otherwise, the Government could bring bribery charges on the basis of no more than accepting a lawful gift or a permissible campaign contribution. And because an official act—whether promised or performed—is an essential element of a federal corruption charge, the Government must allege that fact with the same level of specificity as any other essential element of a charged crime. See, e.g., id. (holding that "the offense is completed at the time when the public official receives a payment in return for his agreement to perform specific official acts" (emphasis added)).

The Government's view—that it can charge public officials with corruption without even bothering to tell them what official acts it believes those officials took or promised—would enable the Government to file bribery charges that specify no more than "Official X corruptly promised to take official actions on Citizen Y's behalf in exchange for a $250 campaign donation." That would certainly make it easier for the Government to indict public officials, but it would fly in the face of the accused's established right to be "fairly apprise[d] of the charges against him so that he may adequately prepare a defense and avoid surprise at trial." Sampson, 448 F Supp. 2d at 696 (citation omitted).

* * *

The Court should therefore order the Government to disclose the substance of each promised or performed official act that the Government intends to prove, as requested in Mr. McDonnell's motion for a bill of particulars.

B. The Government Should Disclose The Identities Of Unindicted Co-Conspirators.

The Court should also order the Government to confidentially disclose the identities of the unindicted co-conspirators referenced in the Indictment. It is telling that the Government does not contend that disclosure would prejudice it (or anyone else). That is significant because disclosure of unindicted co-conspirators is typically ordered in cases where—like this one—there is no threat of danger to those alleged co-conspirators. See United States v. Barrera, 950 F

Supp. 2d 461, 477 (E.D.N.Y 2013).

The Government resists that commonsense practice, but its only rationale is its claim that "'it is not essential that a conspirator know all other conspirators.'" (Gov't Br. at 8 (quoting United States v. Rey, 923 F.2d 1217, 1222 (6th Cir. 1991)).) That is because, the Government reasons, the "defendant may be indicted and convicted despite the names of his or her co-conspirators remaining unknown." (Id.) But that ignores the reality that disclosure of unindicted co-conspirators—just like disclosure of other allegations that are not strictly essential to a conviction—is frequently ordered when it is necessary for the defendant to adequately prepare a defense and avoid unfair surprise. (See R. McDonnell Br. at 8-9 (citing cases).)[1]

Disclosure might be unnecessary in a case where the underlying crime is clear, or where the conspiracy is massive, such that identifying individual conspirators sheds no light on the Government's factual allegations. But the conspiracy alleged here is small and intimate—indeed, its only unnamed member may be Mr. Williams—and turns upon underlying criminal statutes that are indisputably broad. Knowing who the Government believes participated in the alleged conspiracy is therefore critical to understanding the Government's conspiracy charge (in particular its scope, manner, and aims) and the Government's corruption charges generally.

At bottom, it is a bedrock principle of criminal justice that the accused "is presumed to be innocent" and is thus "ignorant of the facts on which the [Government] founds his charges." United States v. Anderson, 254 F Supp. 177, 181 (W.D. Ark. 1966) (emphasis added) (citation omitted). Because Mr. McDonnell is presumed innocent and thus ignorant of the facts, he does not know what the Government believes he did or who the Government believes he did it with.

---

[1] Perhaps because it cannot overcome their reasoning, the Government dismisses these cases on the ground that they come from "outside of the Fourth Circuit." (Gov't Br. at 7) That is no answer to their persuasiveness, of course. It is also an ill-placed criticism given that the Government relies on non-Fourth Circuit cases throughout its Opposition.

Given that presumed ignorance—and the absence of any countervailing governmental interests—the Court should order the Government to confidentially identify the alleged unindicted co-conspirators.[2]

II. The Inadequacy Of The Indictment Cannot Be Cured By Overwhelming Mr. McDonnell With Millions Of Documents.

The Government cannot overcome the deficiencies in its Indictment by flooding Mr. McDonnell with five million pages of (late-produced) documents, however "easily searchable" the Government believes that avalanche of information to be. (Gov't Br. at 1.) Mr. McDonnell is not asking the Government to divulge every nook and cranny of its case. He is simply asking the Government to articulate the substance of each official act that it believes he promised or performed with a level of detail similar to its other allegations and to confidentially disclose the identities of his alleged co-conspirators. Inundating Mr. McDonnell with documents will not aid his understanding of the Government's official act allegations or make clear who the Government believes his co-conspirators were in the alleged ill-defined crime. For example, no amount of discovery will reveal what precisely the Government means when it alleges that Mr. McDonnell "legitimized" and "promoted" Star's products. These terms potentially encompass a broad range of innocuous actions that Mr. McDonnell and his staff took. Without further factual explanation of the Government's allegations, Mr. McDonnell will be left guessing about which actions fall within the Government's vague description of official acts and which do not. The production of millions of raw documents will not cure that fundamental defect in the Indictment.

---

[2] The Government brushes aside the defense's argument that withholding the identities of the alleged co-conspirators will impede Mr. McDonnell's ability to prepare an adequate defense because the Government's broad accusations may have caused potential witnesses to avoid speaking with defense counsel out of concern that the Government thinks they are unindicted co-conspirators. (See Gov't Br. at 8-9.) The Government claims to remove this problem by assuring potential witnesses that they will not be investigated "simply because they choose to meet with defense counsel." (Id. at 8.) But that plainly misses the point. The concern is not that witnesses will be investigated simply for meeting with defense counsel; rather, the concern is that they will be investigated at all. So long as witnesses fear that they are potential unindicted co-conspirators and thus subject to possible criminal liability, those witnesses have every incentive not to speak about the matter at all with defense counsel. Disclosing the identities of the unindicted co-conspirators would eliminate that potential concern—at least for those not in the line of fire.

Regardless, Mr. McDonnell should not have to spend months flipping through millions of documents or crafting elaborate Boolean searches to unearth the relevant documents. While discovery can certainly obviate the need for a bill of particulars in some cases, it does not do so where, as here, that discovery would fill a warehouse in its physical form. "[W]here discovery is overwhelmingly extensive and the government fails to designate which documents it intends to introduce and which documents are merely relevant to the defense," the Government has an obligation to provide the particulars necessary to understand the inadequate allegations in the Indictment. United States v. Mahaffy, 446 F Supp. 2d 115, 119 (E.D.N.Y 2006) (emphasis omitted); see also, e.g., United States v. Vasquez-Ruiz, 136 F Supp. 2d 941, 943 (N.D. Ill. 2001) ("The defense should not be left to its own devices and a sifting of the voluminous materials that have been provided in order to divine the particulars of these critical allegations, which have not yet been disclosed."); R. McDonnell Br. at 10-11 (citing cases).

The Government attempts to distinguish the many cases noting that voluminous discovery cannot cure the need for particulars by claiming that those cases involved (1) indictments that were insufficiently detailed or (2) litigation that was more complex and wide-ranging than Mr. McDonnell's case. (See Gov't Br. at 12-13.) The first point is no response at all, of course, because the Indictment here is likewise insufficiently detailed. As for the second point, it is simply untrue that those cases were materially more extensive in terms of their complexity and the volume of discovery. See, e.g., United States v. Nachamie, 91 F Supp. 2d 565, 573 (S.D.N.Y 2000) (case involved eight defendants, an unknown number of unindicted co-conspirators, a three-year conspiracy, and more than 200,000 pages); United States v. Bortnovsky, 820 F.2d 572, 573, 575 (2d Cir. 1987) (case involved three defendants, a 12-count indictment, and "mountains of documents"); United States v. Aispuro, No. CR 08-2936 JP, 2010 BL 59827, at *1, *7 (D.N.M. Mar. 16, 2010) (case involved eight defendants, a six-month drug conspiracy, and approximately 16,000 pages of documents, albeit "unorganized"). This case involves two defendants, an unknown number of unindicted co-conspirators, a 14-count indictment alleging complex and ill-defined corruption charges, and approximately five million pages of documents. It is clearly analogous to the many cases in which courts have granted a bill of particulars notwithstanding the extensive discovery the Government produced.[3]

CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons, the Court should grant Mr. McDonnell's motion for a limited bill of particulars and order the disclosure of the information requested therein, or in the alternative, order the Government to identify the relevant documents within its five-million-page production that will provide sufficient detail both to understand the Government's official act allegations and to identify all unindicted co-conspirators.

---

[3] The Government claims that the defense has "more than a sufficient understanding of the evidence and allegations" in this case, and cites as proof of that assertion that defense counsel identified 121 individuals with information relevant to the case and that 70 of those individuals were later identified by the Government as prospective witnesses. (See Gov't Br. at 11 n.5.) But this only shows that the defense knows who worked in the Governor's Office, cabinet positions, and the like—all of whom are potential witnesses—and has some idea of who the Government summoned to the grand jury. It does not somehow prove that the defense understands the Government's vague allegations, nor does it show that the defense knows who the alleged unindicted co-conspirators are. Indeed, if the defense fully understood the Government's allegations, its potential witness list would have been much smaller. The existence of well over 100 potential witnesses does, however, confirm the need for particulars that will enable the defense to focus on the evidence that actually matters as it prepares for the looming trial.

Dated: March 13, 2014

Respectfully submitted,

/s/ John L. Brownlee

John L. Brownlee (VSB No. 37358)
Timothy J. Taylor (VSB No. 84529)
Holland & Knight LLP
800 17th Street, N.W., Suite 1100
Washington, DC 20006
Telephone: (202) 828-1854
Facsimile: (202) 955-5564
Email: john.brownlee@hklaw.com

Henry W. Asbill (pro hac vice)
Ryan D. Newman (pro hac vice)
James M. Burnham (pro hac vice)
Jones Day
51 Louisiana Avenue, N.W.
Washington, DC 20001
Telephone: (202) 879-3939
Facsimile: (202) 626-1700
Email: hasbill@jonesday.com

Counsel for Governor Robert F McDonnell

CERTIFICATE OF SERVICE

I, John L. Brownlee, am a member of the Bar of this Court. I hereby certify that on this 13th day of March, 2014, I caused the foregoing to be electronically filed with the Clerk of Court using the CM/ECF system, causing it to be served on all registered users.

Dated: March 13, 2014

Respectfully submitted,

/s/ John L. Brownlee

John L. Brownlee (VSB No. 37358)
Holland & Knight LLP
800 17th Street, N.W., Suite 1100
Washington, DC 20006
Telephone: (202) 828-1854
Facsimile: (202) 955-5564
Email: john.brownlee@hklaw.com

Counsel for Governor Robert F McDonnell

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
EASTERN DISTRICT OF VIRGINIA
RICHMOND DIVISION

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,

v.

ROBERT F. MCDONNELL,

and

MAUREEN G. MCDONNELL,

Defendants.

Action No. 3:14-CR-12

MEMORANDUM ORDER

THIS MATTER is before the Court on a Motion for Bill of Particulars ("Motion") (ECF Nos. 79, 82) filed by Defendants. After examining the record and memoranda filed by the parties, the Court finds that the facts and law are abundantly clear from the pleadings and sufficient to allow the Court to exercise its discretion. As such, oral argument would not aid in the decisional process and is unnecessary.

Pursuant to Federal Rule of Criminal Procedure 7(f), a court may direct the Government to file a bill of particulars. Fed. R. Crim. P. 7(f). However, defendants have "no unconditional right to such a bill." United States v. Dulin, 410 F.2d 363, 364 (4th Cir. 1969) (citing United States v. Seeger, 303 F.2d 478 (2d Cir. 1962). The decision to grant or deny a motion for a bill of particulars is within the sound discretion of the trial court. United States v. Anderson, 481 F.2d 685, 690 (4th Cir. 1973).

When the indictment fails to provide the defendant adequate information, a bill of particulars may be used to "enable a defendant to obtain sufficient information on the nature of the charge against him so that he may prepare for trial, minimize the danger of surprise at trial, and plead his acquittal or conviction in bar of another prosecution for the same offense."

United States v. Schembari, 484 F.2d 931, 934-935 (4th Cir. 1973) (citing Dulin, 410 F.2d at 364). However, a bill of particulars "is not to be used to provide detailed disclosure of the government's evidence in advance of trial." United States v. Automated Med. Labs., Inc., 770 F.2d 399, 405 (4th Cir. 1985) (citing Anderson, 481 F.2d at 690).

Defendants request a bill of particulars that would require the Government to provide a detailed disclosure of every "official action" Defendants are accused of having performed or promised, including the time, place, and manner of each action, the individuals to whom such actions were directed, and even content of various communications at issue, among other things. (Def.'s Mot. Bill Particulars 1-2.) Defendants additionally request that the Government reveal the identity of any alleged, but unindicted, co-conspirators under seal. In support of their Motion, Defendants assert that the Indictment is insufficiently detailed to allow them to prepare a defense and avoid unfair surprise at trial. The Government opposes the Motion.

The Court finds that the Indictment is sufficiently detailed to provide Defendants with notice of the charges against them, as well as to enable Defendants to effectively prepare their defense and avoid unfair surprise at trial. Further, a bill of particulars is unwarranted in light of Defendants' broad discovery demand for disclosure of "every shred of evidence" in the Government's possession, (Def.'s Mem. Supp. Brady Mot. 2.), which the Government represents it has or will soon provide in a searchable format. See United States v. Esquivel, 755 F. Supp. 434, 436 (D.D.C. 1990) (citation omitted) ("[If] the information requested is otherwise available, then no bill of particulars is required.").

Accordingly, the Court hereby DENIES the Motion. Let the Clerk send a copy of this Order to all counsel of record.

It is SO ORDERED.

/s/
James R. Spencer
United States District Judge

ENTERED this 17th day of March 2014.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
EASTERN DISTRICT OF VIRGINIA
RICHMOND DIVISION

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,

v.

ROBERT F. MCDONNELL,

and

MAUREEN G. MCDONNELL,

Defendants.

Action No. 3:14-CR-12

MEMORANDUM ORDER

THIS MATTER is before the Court on a Motion for the Production of Evidence and Other Relief to Remedy the Government's Interference in the Defense's Investigation ("Motion to Remedy Interference") (ECF Nos. 51, 70) filed by Defendants. Shortly after Defendants were indicted, the Government intervened in at least two related civil lawsuits pending in the Eastern District of Virginia and requested that discovery in those lawsuits be stayed until the conclusion of this prosecution. See In re Star Scientific, Inc. Securities Litig., No. 3:13-cv-183-JAG-DJN (E.D. Va. 2013), ECF Nos. 76, 78; In re Star Scientific, Inc. Derivative Litig., No. 1:13-cv-550-AJT-JFA (E.D. Va. 2013), ECF Nos. 32, 35. The Government's requests were granted.

Defendants concede that their constitutional rights are not implicated by the fact that courts of competent jurisdiction considered and ultimately granted the Government's requests to stay discovery in related civil cases. Rather, Defendants argue that the Government's submission of such requests violated their constitutional right of access to evidence, as protected by the Fifth and Sixth Amendments. But Defendants have cited to no authority that recognizes a constitutional violation for the Government's request to stay discovery in a related civil case.

Defendants argue unpersuasively that the Government's requests for civil stays are analogous to requests for witnesses to refuse cooperation with the defense. Witness interference has long been recognized as potentially resulting in constitutionally unfair criminal trials. See Kines v. Butterworth, 669 F.2d 6, 9 (1st Cir. 1981) (collecting cases). However, Defendants have not shown that the Government has interfered with any witness's decision to cooperate with the defense or to provide Defendants with information or evidence. The civil stays simply do not address, much less prohibit, any witness from independently deciding whether to cooperate with the defense.

For the foregoing reasons and those stated from the bench, the Court DENIES the Motion to Remedy Interference. Let the Clerk send a copy of this Order to all counsel of record.

It is SO ORDERED.

/s/
James R. Spencer
United States District Judge

ENTERED this 19th day of March 2014.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
EASTERN DISTRICT OF VIRGINIA
RICHMOND DIVISION

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA

v.

ROBERT F. MCDONNELL,

and

MAUREEN G. MCDONNELL,

Defendants.

Action No. 3:14-cr-12

ORDER

Upon the motion of the Government, by and through its counsel, and with the consent of the defendants, Robert F McDonnell and Maureen G. McDonnell, by and through counsel, it is hereby,

I. Discovery and Inspection

ORDERED pursuant to Fed. R. Crim. P. 16(a), that:

1. The Government shall disclose to the defendants and make available for inspection, copying, or photographing: any relevant written or recorded statements made by the defendants, or copies thereof, within the possession, custody, or control of the Government, the existence of which is known, or by the exercise of due diligence may become known, to the attorney for the Government; that portion of any written record containing the substance of any relevant oral statement made by the defendants whether before or after arrest in response to interrogation by any person then known to the defendants to be a Government agent; recorded testimony of the defendants before a grand jury which relates to the offense charged; and the substance of any other relevant oral statement made by the defendants whether before or after arrest in response to interrogation by any person then known by the defendants to be a Government agent if the Government intends to use that statement at trial.

2. The Government shall furnish to the defendants such copy of their prior criminal records, if any, as are within the possession, custody, or control of the Government, the existence of which is known, or by the exercise of due diligence may become known, to the attorney for the Government.

3. The Government shall permit the defendants to inspect and copy or photograph books, papers, documents, data, photographs, tangible objects, buildings or places, or copies or portions thereof, which are within the possession, custody or control of the Government, and which are material to the preparation of their defense or are intended for use by the Government as evidence in chief at the trial, or were obtained from or belong to the defendants.

4. The Government shall permit the defendants to inspect and copy or photograph any results or reports of physical or mental examinations, and of scientific tests or experiments, or copies thereof, which are within the possession, custody, or control of the Government, the existence of which is known, or by the exercise of due diligence may become known to the attorney for the Government, and which are material to the preparation of the defense or are intended for use by the Government as evidence in chief at the trial.

It is further ORDERED pursuant to Fed. R. Crim. P. 16(b), that upon Government compliance with the foregoing,

5. The defendants shall permit the Government to inspect and copy or photograph books, papers, documents, data, photographs, tangible objects, or copies or portions thereof, which the defendants intend to use in their cases-in-chief at trial.

6. The defendants shall permit the Government to inspect and copy or photograph any results or reports of physical or mental examination and of scientific test or experiments made in connection with the particular case, or copies thereof, within the possession or control of the defendants, which the defendants intend use in their cases-in-chief at trial or which were prepared by a witness whom the defendants intend to call at the trial when the results or reports relate to their testimony.

It is further ORDERED that the Government and the defendants shall simultaneously disclose to each other a written summary of testimony that each party intends to use under Rules 702, 703, or 705, Federal Rules of Evidence, during its case-in-chief at trial. This summary shall describe the witnesses' opinions, the bases and reasons therefor, and the witnesses' qualifications. This summary shall be disclosed no later than 60 calendar days before trial. In the event, however, that the Government or defendants identify an expert to counter the anticipated testimony of an expert identified by the other party, such summary shall be disclosed no later than 30 days before trial. In an appropriate case, and for good cause shown, either party may move the Court for an Order requesting earlier or later disclosure of expert witness notice and summaries.

II. Federal Rule of Evidence 404(b)

It is further ORDERED that, no later than 60 calendar days before trial, the Government shall provide notice to the defendants, in accordance with Fed. R. Evid. 404(b), of the general nature of any evidence of other crimes, wrongs, or acts of defendants which it intends to introduce at trial, except that, upon motion of the Government and for good cause shown, the court may excuse such pretrial notice.

III. Brady Material

It is further ORDERED that the Government shall comply with its obligations to produce exculpatory material as required by Brady v. Maryland, 373 U.S. 83 (1963) and United States v. Agurs, 427 U.S. 97 (1976).

IV. Jencks/Giglio Materials

It is further ORDERED that, no later than 45 calendar days before trial, the Government shall produce to the defendants the Jencks Act and Giglio v. United States, 405 U.S. 150 (1972), materials for the witnesses who will testify in the Government's case-in-chief.

V. Interview Reports and Grand Jury Transcripts

It is further ORDERED that, no later than 45 calendar days before trial, the Government shall produce to the defendants all witness interview reports and grand jury witness transcripts in the Government's possession, custody, and control as of that date. Production of those witness interview reports and grand jury witness transcripts no later than 45 calendar days before trial shall satisfy the Government's obligations with respect to the timing of disclosure of such reports and transcripts to the extent any such reports and transcripts are discoverable pursuant to the Government's obligations under Brady, Giglio, the Jencks Act, and Rule 16.

Counsel for the defendants may disclose the contents of said interview reports and grand jury transcripts to their clients, but may not provide their clients with said documents or reproductions thereof.

At the request of the Government and consistent with the ethical responsibilities of defense counsel, all such interview reports and grand jury transcripts, as well as reproductions thereof, shall be returned to the United States Attorney's Office forthwith at the conclusion of the litigation of the case.

It is further ORDERED pursuant to Fed. R. Crim. P. 26.2, that no later than 30 calendar days prior to trial, the defendants, by and through their counsel, shall produce to the Government the statements of any witness, other than the defendants, who will testify on behalf of the defendants during their cases-in-chief.

VI. Subsequent Disclosures

It is further ORDERED that if, prior to or during trial, a party discovers additional evidence or material which is subject to discovery or inspection under this Order, that party shall promptly notify the other party or that party's attorney or the Court of the existence of the additional evidence or material.

VII. Notice of Alibi

It is further ORDERED pursuant to Fed. R. Crim. P. 12.1 that, no later than 20 calendar days before trial, the defendants, by and through counsel, shall comply with Rule 12.1(a) if the defendants intends to offer a defense of alibi, and further that the defendants and the Government shall comply with Rules 12.1(b) and (c) within the time period set out in those rules, except upon motion of the parties and for good cause shown.

VIII. Stipulations

It is further ORDERED that the parties shall file proposed stipulations with the Court no later than 5 business days before trial. Additional stipulations may be submitted thereafter by the parties upon approval by the Court.

IX. Certificates pursuant to Federal Rule of Evidence 902

It is further ORDERED that the parties shall produce to each other any certifications created pursuant to Fed. R. Evid. 902(11) and (12) no later than 21 calendar days before trial.

Let the Clerk send a copy of this Order to all counsel of record.

IT IS SO ORDERED.

SO ORDERED

/s/
James R. Spencer
United States District Judge

ENTERED this 20th day of March 2014.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
FOR THE EASTERN DISTRICT OF VIRGINIA
RICHMOND DIVISION

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,	)
	)
v.	)	CRIMINAL NO. 3:14-CR-00012
	)
ROBERT F. MCDONNELL	)	JUDGE JAMES R. SPENCER
MAUREEN G. MCDONNELL	)

MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT OF DEFENDANT ROBERT F. MCDONNELL'S MOTION # 10 — MOTION TO DISMISS COUNTS 1-11 OF THE INDICTMENT

TABLE OF AUTHORITIES ii

INTRODUCTION 1

ARGUMENT 5

- I. The Indictment Fails To State A Claim For Honest Services Fraud, Extortion Under Color Of Official Right, Or Conspiracy 7
  - A. The Government Must Allege That Gifts Or Loans Were Accepted In Exchange For An "Official Act" 7
    - 1. An "Official Act" Is An Act That Exercises Governmental Power 8
    - 2. The Term "Official Act" Should Be Construed Narrowly 13
    - 3. The Government's Apparent Belief That Everything A Public Official Does In His Official Capacity Constitutes An "Official Act" Is Wrong 16
    - 4. The Government's Interpretation Of "Official Act" Would Criminalize The Routine Activities Of All Public Officials 17
  - B. The Government Has Not Alleged That Mr. McDonnell Performed Or Promised To Perform Any "Official Act" 19
    - 1. The Indictment Does Not Allege That Mr. McDonnell Promised Any Specific Future "Official Acts" 19
    - 2. None Of The Specific Actions Alleged By The Government Constitutes An "Official Act" 20
      - (a) Arranging Or Recommending Meetings With Other Government Officials 20
      - (b) Hosting And Attending Events At The Mansion 22
      - (c) "Contacting Other Government Officials In OGV" 24
    - 3. The Government's Broad Characterizations Of Mr. McDonnell's Conduct Do Not Cure This Deficiency 25
- II. If "Official Act" Means What The Government Claims, Then The Honest Services Statute And Hobbs Act Are Unconstitutionally Vague 28
- III. The Constitution Forbids Federal Prosecution Of State Officials For Non-Corrupt Conduct That Is Legal Under State Law 29

CONCLUSION 30

TABLE OF AUTHORITIES

Page

UNITED STATES CONSTITUTION

U.S. Const. amend. X 29

U.S. Const. article IV, § 4 30

CASES

Buckley v. Valeo,
424 U.S. 1 (1976) 2

Citizens United v. Fed. Election Comm'n,
558 U.S. 310 (2010) .... passim

Cleveland v. United States,
531 U.S. 12 (2000) 16

Evans v. United States,
504 U.S. 255 (1992) 2, 8, 19, 20

FERC v. Mississippi,
456 U.S. 742 (1982) 6, 29

Gregory v. Ashcroft,
501 U.S. 452 (1991) 7

Jones v. United States,
529 U.S. 848 (2000) 15

McNally v. United States,
483 U.S. 350 (1987) 8, 10, 30

Rewis v. United States,
401 U.S. 808 (1971) 15

Skilling v. United States,
130 S. Ct. 2896 (2010) 6, 8, 16, 28, 29

Staples v. United States,
511 U.S. 600 (1994) 14

United States v. Bass,
404 U.S. 336 (1971) 15, 16

United States v. Biaggi,
853 F.2d 89 (2d Cir. 1988) 12

United States v. Birdsall,
233 U.S. 223 (1914) 11

United States v. Brandon,
298 F.3d 307 (4th Cir. 2002) 5

United States v. Carson,
464 F.2d 424 (2d Cir. 1972) 3, 5, 9, 12

United States v. Engle,
676 F.3d 405 (4th Cir. 2012) 5

United States v. Enmons,
410 U.S. 396 (1973) 16

United States v. Hairston,
46 F.3d 361 (4th Cir. 1995) 3

United States v. Jefferson,
674 F.3d 332 (4th Cir. 2012) 2, 10, 11, 17, 27

United States v. Jennings,
160 F.3d 1006 (4th Cir. 1998) 8

United States v. Loftus,
992 F.2d 793 (8th Cir. 1993) 22

United States v. Lopez,
514 U.S. 549 (1995) 30

United States v. Mandel,
591 F.2d 1347 (4th Cir. 1979) 9

United States v. Muntain,
610 F.2d 964 (D.C. Cir. 1979) 27

United States v. Rabbitt,
583 F.2d 1014 (8th Cir. 1978) 10

United States v. Ring,
706 F.3d 460 (D.C. Cir. 2013) 11, 12, 25

United States v. Sun-Diamond Growers of Cal., 526 U.S. 398 (1999) .... passim

United States v. Urciuoli,
513 F.3d 290 (1st Cir. 2008) 9, 10, 23, 24

Valdes v. United States,
475 F.3d 1319 (D.C. Cir. 2007) .... passim

Ventimiglia v. United States,
242 F.2d 620 (4th Cir. 1957) 28

STATUTES & RULES

18 U.S.C. § 201 8

18 U.S.C. § 201(a)(3)... .... 7, 13

18 U.S.C. § 666 .... 8, 30

18 U.S.C. § 1346 .... 8, 10

18 U.S.C. § 1951 3

18 U.S.C. § 1951(a)(2) 7

Va. Code. § 2.2-3103(8) 3, 15

Va. Code § 2.2-3103(9) 15

Fed. R. Crim. P 7(c)(1) 5

Fed. R. Crim. P 12 5

OTHER AUTHORITIES

Ashley Alman & Ryan Grim, Obama Fundraiser in Philadelphia Sets Million-Dollar Goal, Huffington Post (Nov. 14, 2013, 10:34 AM), available at http://tinyurl.com/memqogw 4

Associated Press, George Lopez Seeks Latino Vote for Obama in Nevada, N.Y Daily News (Aug. 4, 2008), available at http://tinyurl.com/p624yyl 18

Criminal Resource Manual § 2404 8

Laura Vozzella, In Va., $100,000 Will Get You a Sit-Down with 'Policy Experts,' Governor's New PAC Says, Wash. Post, available at http://tinyurl.com/lyctot8. 4

Maria Elena Fernandez, President Obama Shills for Comedian George Lopez, L.A. Times (June 19, 2009), available at http://tinyurl.com/knve3f 18

Matthew Larotunda, Obama Inauguration's Big Donor Packages Previewed, ABC News (Dec. 8, 2012, 4:14 PM), available at http://goo.gl/97XaY1 27

Norman Leahy & Paul Goldman, McAuliffe Just Gave the McDonnell Defense a Hand, Wash. Post (Mar. 18, 2014), available at http://tinyurl.com/qgc6rjz. 4

Peter Nicholas, Administration Officials Double As Obama Campaign Speakers, L.A. Times (Nov. 16, 2011), available at http://tinyurl.com/odqo7q4 .... 17, 18

INTRODUCTION

Federal law does not prohibit state officials from accepting gifts from political patrons or friends. To the contrary, a state official violates federal law only if he accepts something of value in exchange for performing or promising to perform an "official act." Here, the Government's Indictment alleges five "official acts" in support of its claim that Mr. McDonnell corrupted the office of Governor of Virginia. See Indictment ¶ 111(c). But even if the Government's allegations were true (which they are not), none of these actions—which involve arranging or suggesting meetings with government officials or attending or hosting events—are "official acts." The Indictment does not allege that Mr. McDonnell ever exercised governmental power on Star's behalf, that he promised or sought to influence any other government official to exercise such power, or that Star was the beneficiary of any official action taken by his Administration. This Court should decline the Government's invitation to make new law by substantially expanding the well-worn Hobbs Act and wire fraud statute and should instead dismiss the corruption charges in the Indictment.

The Supreme Court has long recognized the fundamental difference between public officials (1) exercising their official powers differently to favor donors, i.e., making different official decisions on government policy, and (2) providing access that facilitates donor input to government officials but does not, without more, alter any official decisions on government policy. Because "[i]ngratiation and access   are not corruption," Citizens United v. Fed. Election Comm'n, 558 U.S. 310, 360 (2010), only the former sorts of actions are "official" and thus illegal when offered in exchange for benefits. Actions such as "receiving [] sports teams at the White House, visiting [a] high school, and speaking to [] farmers about USDA policy" are not "official acts" under the bribery laws because they do not involve the exercise of governmental power. United States v. Sun-Diamond Growers of Cal., 526 U.S. 398, 407 (1999).

Or as the Fourth Circuit recently explained, "the bribery statute does not encompass every action taken in one's official capacity"; rather, those actions "must yet adhere to the definition confining an official act to a pending 'question, matter, cause, suit, proceeding or controversy,'" i.e., they must be actions that exercise governmental power (or push another official to), such as awarding state contracts or voting for legislation. United States v. Jefferson, 674 F.3d 332, 356 (4th Cir. 2012) (citation omitted); see also Evans v. United States, 504 U.S. 255, 268 n.20 (1992) (adopting the "common-law" distinction "between payments for private services and payments for public services").

The criminal bribery provisions the Government invokes are limited to "the most blatant and specific attempts of those with money to influence governmental action." Buckley v. Valeo, 424 U.S. 1, 28 (1976). Because giving benefactors "influence over or access to elected officials does not mean that these officials are corrupt," Citizens United, 558 U.S. at 3597, the bribery laws do not criminalize merely providing access or meetings. Regulating that conduct—i.e., conduct that does not abuse the sovereign power of government, even if it may appear unseemly or undermine the public trust—is the province of campaign finance laws, ethics regulations, and gift laws. See, e.g., id. at 357 (explaining that "restrictions on direct contributions are preventative"). Here, since Mr. McDonnell was a state official, he was governed by the ethics laws of the Commonwealth of Virginia, which allow state officials to accept unlimited private gifts, subject to limited disclosure requirements (which the Indictment does not allege Mr. McDonnell violated). Virginia has, moreover, made it express in the state code that public officials "shall not be subject to criminal law penalties" even when an official accepts "a gift from a person who has interests that may be substantially affected by the performance of the officer's official duties under circumstances where the timing and nature of the gift would cause a reasonable person to question the officer's impartiality in the matter affecting the donor." Va. Code. § 2.2-3103(8). The federal government may feel that Virginia's gift laws are too lax, but that does not entitle it to convert the federal bribery prohibitions into a comprehensive code of ethics for state officials.

The distinction between providing access and exercising government power is not, moreover, some artificial or legalistic line that would shield corrupt conduct which falls within the spirit, if not the letter, of the bribery laws. To the contrary, the criminal bribery statutes—and the stiff penalties they impose—seek to prevent actual misuse of official power: "It is the corruption of official positions through misuse of influence in governmental decision-making which the bribery statutes make criminal." United States v. Carson, 464 F.2d 424, 434 (2d Cir. 1972) (emphasis added). That purpose does not extend to criminalizing actions that are "assuredly 'official acts' in some sense," Sun-Diamond, 526 U.S. at 407, but which do not misuse the sovereign power of government. That is why the Supreme Court has admonished that in "an area where precisely targeted prohibitions"—in the form of finely tuned campaign finance laws and ethics regulations—"are commonplace," a bribery statute "that can linguistically be interpreted to be either a meat axe or a scalpel should reasonably be taken to be the latter." Sun-Diamond, 526 U.S. at 412. The courts "ought not expand [the bribery] piece of the regulatory puzzle so dramatically as to make many other pieces misfits." Id.

If the bribery statutes are not restricted to actual corruption, then federal prosecutors will wield enormous, unwarranted power over the political process. Because a bribery "quid" can be either a campaign donation or, as alleged here, a personal benefit,[1] an over-broad construction of the bribery "quo"—i.e., what federal law prohibits politicians from doing in exchange for those donations—risks criminalizing routine political practices. If arranging or suggesting meetings with public officials, inviting a benefactor to an event at the Mansion (or allowing a benefactor to invite others to an event), or making favorable statements about a benefactor constitute criminal bribery, then virtually every political fundraiser would be a federal felony.[2] Indeed, highlighting the breadth of the Government's construction, it would seem to criminalize the current fundraising solicitation of Mr. McDonnell's successor, Governor Terry McAuliffe: "For $100,000, you can have a private dinner with Virginia Gov. Terry McAuliffe and the first lady, participate in a roundtable discussion with the governor and sit down every month with 'policy experts.'"[3] This program provides donors with "special access to McAuliffe and the governor's policy advisers,"[4] which is indistinguishable from most of what is alleged here. Neither that solicitation nor Mr. McDonnell's alleged conduct violate federal criminal law.

---

[1] The law merely requires that a quid pro quo be established. See, e.g., United States v. Hairston, 46 F.3d 361, 372 (4th Cir. 1995) (explaining that the same "rationale[s]" apply "to campaign contributions [as] to other prosecutions for violation of § 1951"). Indeed, many

In short, despite alleging that virtually everything Mr. McDonnell did vis-à-vis Star was an "official act," see Indictment ¶ 111(c), the Government's allegations never cross the line between "[i]ngratiation and access"—i.e., "not corruption," Citizens United, 558 U.S. at 360—and the "misuse of influence in governmental decision-making which the bribery statutes make political corruption prosecutions—such as that of former Illinois Governor Rod Blagojevich—arise from the solicitation or acceptance of otherwise-legal campaign donations.

---

[2] See, e.g., Ashley Alman & Ryan Grim, Obama Fundraiser in Philadelphia Sets Million-Dollar Goal, Huffington Post (Nov. 14, 2013, 10:34 AM) ("Attendees of Thursday's event who contribute $32,400 are entitled to a VIP Chair's reception, photo opportunity, dinner Q&A session with the president, and guest."), available at http://tinyurl.com/memqogw.

[3] Laura Vozzella, In Va., $100,000 Will Get You a Sit-Down with 'Policy Experts,' Governor s New PAC Says, Wash. Post, available at http://tinyurl.com/lyctot8.

[4] Norman Leahy & Paul Goldman, McAuliffe Just Gave the McDonnell Defense a Hand, Wash. Post (Mar. 18, 2014), available at http://tinyurl.com/qgc6rjz.

criminal." Carson, 464 F.2d at 434. The defense is aware of no instance of the Government successfully prosecuting a public official on the basis of access-oriented acts like those alleged here. The Court should therefore dismiss Counts 1-11.

ARGUMENT

Under Federal Rule of Criminal Procedure 7(c)(1), the Indictment must contain a "statement of the essential facts constituting the offense charged." It does not suffice to "simply parrot[] the language of the statute in the indictment." United States v. Brandon, 298 F.3d 307, 310 (4th Cir. 2002). "When the words of a statute are used to describe the offense generally, they must be accompanied with such a statement of the facts and circumstances as will inform the accused of the specific offence, coming under the general description, with which he is charged." Id. (citation omitted)). And if the alleged facts are insufficient to charge an offense as a matter of law, then the indictment must be dismissed. See, e.g., United States v. Engle, 676 F.3d 405, 415 (4th Cir. 2012) ("A district court may dismiss an indictment under Rule 12 where there is an infirmity of law in the prosecution ") (citation omitted).

Here, the Government's allegations against Governor McDonnell fail to establish that he committed honest services fraud or extortion or, by extension, conspiracy to commit the same. This is clear for three reasons. First, and most importantly, the Indictment fails to allege that Mr. McDonnell promised to perform, or did perform, any "official act." The Government never claims that Mr. McDonnell or anyone on his staff exercised official governmental power on behalf of Star or Williams. Nor does it contend that he improperly influenced any other official to exercise governmental power on behalf of Star or Williams. The Government instead alleges that Mr. McDonnell, his wife, and Jonnie Williams agreed to a scheme in which Mr. McDonnell would take steps to "legitimize" and "promote" Star and its products. Indictment ¶ 22. But neither of these broad terms suggests any specific action or promise to exercise the power of the Virginia Government—i.e., to take official acts as opposed to any acts an official takes—and thus neither crosses the line between mere "[i]ingratiation and access," Citizens United, 558 U.S. at 360, and actual misuse of government power.

Second, if the statutes the Government invokes apply as broadly as the Indictment suggests, then they are unconstitutionally vague. A law is unconstitutionally vague if it fails to "define the criminal offense [1] with sufficient definiteness that ordinary people can understand what conduct is prohibited and [2] in a manner that does not encourage arbitrary and discriminatory enforcement." Skilling v. United States, 130 S. Ct. 2896, 2927-28 (2010) (citation omitted). The Government's interpretation of "official act" produces both of these constitutional evils. It fails to provide fair warning by expanding "official acts" beyond actions that exercise government power into the wholly indefinite category of actions that are merely "'official acts' in some sense." Sun-Diamond, 526 U.S. at 407. Moreover, by expanding the legal definition of "official act" to include virtually everything a public official does vis-à-vis a benefactor, the Government's theory would make all elected officials potential prosecutorial targets. Arbitrary enforcement would be inevitable. If these statutes mean what the Government says they mean, then they are unconstitutional. See Skilling, 130 S. Ct. at 2927-28.

Third, the Government's prosecution of Mr. McDonnell violates basic principles of federalism. "[H]aving the power to make decisions and to set policy is what gives the State its sovereign nature." FERC v. Mississippi, 456 U.S. 742, 761 (1982). The Constitution forbids the federal government from interfering in a state official's political activity when that activity neither implicates federal interests nor constitutes "corruption." Citizens United, 558 U.S. at 360. "It is obviously essential to the independence of the States, and to their peace and tranquility, that their power to prescribe the qualifications of their own officers should be exclusive, and free from external interference, except so far as plainly provided by the Constitution of the United States." Gregory v. Ashcroft, 501 U.S. 452, 460 (1991) (citation omitted). The Government's unprecedented and far-reaching construction of the federal bribery laws violates these basic constitutional principles and for that reason is unconstitutional.

I. The Indictment Fails To State A Claim For Honest Services Fraud, Extortion Under Color Of Official Right, Or Conspiracy.

To state a claim for honest services fraud or Hobbs Act extortion, the Government must allege facts establishing that Governor McDonnell accepted gifts or loans in exchange for promising to perform an "official act." But the Government never alleges that Mr. McDonnell exercised, promised to exercise, or improperly sought to influence another official to exercise governmental power on behalf of Williams or Star. The Government has therefore failed to state a claim under these provisions. And because the Government's allegations cannot support those charges, its derivative conspiracy charges fail too.

A. The Government Must Allege That Gifts Or Loans Were Accepted In Exchange For An "Official Act."

The Government does not dispute that obtaining bribery convictions will require it to demonstrate that—at a minimum—Mr. McDonnell promised or performed an "official act" in exchange for personal benefits. See, e.g., Gov't's Opp'n to Deft's Mot. for Discovery of Selected Recordings of Grand Jury Commen's (Feb. 3, 2014), Dkt. 41, at 8 (acknowledging that "the actions" must "be 'official'" (citing 18 U.S.C. § 201(a)(3)). Nor could it. As the Fourth Circuit has explained, even though the Hobbs Act does not itself use the term "official act,"[5] the Government must prove that the targeted official "obtained a payment to which he was not entitled, knowing that the payment was made in return for official acts." Evans, 504 U.S. at 268 (emphasis added).[6] Likewise, the Supreme Court held in Skilling that to obtain a conviction for honest services fraud, the Government must prove that the official engaged in a "bribery [or] kickback scheme[]," 130 S. Ct. at 2907, 2933-34 (citing § 201 and § 666), the "gravamen" of which "is a payment made to corruptly influence or reward an official act (or omission)," United States v. Jennings, 160 F.3d 1006, 1020 (4th Cir. 1998).[7] The Government's case fails because it cannot allege (or prove) that Mr. McDonnell took or promised to take official acts on behalf of Williams or Star.

---

[5] The Hobbs Act defines "extortion" as "the obtaining of property from another, with his consent, induced by wrongful use of actual or threatened force, violence, or fear, or under color of official right." 18 U.S.C. § 1951(a)(2).

1. An "Official Act" Is An Act That Exercises Governmental Power.

Not everything a public official does is an "official" act. If it were, then public officials could not have substantive interactions with their political benefactors. For example, all public officials who accept political donations in exchange for a photograph or some of their time would be federal felons. That is not the law.

The Supreme Court has made this plain by carefully distinguishing between actions that "are assuredly 'official acts' in some sense"—such as "receiving [ ] sports teams at the White House, visiting [a] high school, and speaking to [ ] farmers about USDA policy"—and the narrower category of "official acts" that fall within the bribery laws. Sun-Diamond, 526 U.S. at 407. To be "official," an act must cross the line from merely providing "access," Citizens United, 558 U.S. at 360, into actually altering the actions of the government itself—that is, the allegedly unlawful action must involve the exercise of governmental power. This limitation makes sense, since "[i]t is the corruption of official positions through misuse of influence in governmental decision-making which the bribery statutes make criminal." Carson, 464 F.2d at 434. Or as the Fourth Circuit has explained: "[T]he 'fraud' involved in the bribery of a public official lies in the fact that the public official is not exercising his independent judgment in passing on official matters." United States v. Mandel, 591 F.2d 1347, 1362 (4th Cir. 1979) (emphases added). The federal bribery prohibitions are thus not intended to police interactions between state officials and supporters when those interactions do not involve "governmental decision-making," Carson, 464 F.2d at 434, or exercising "official" government power, Mandel, 591 F.2d at 1362, but are rather mere issues of "access." Citizens United, 558 U.S. at 360.

---

[6] The Department of Justice's Manual recognizes that the Hobbs Act requires a showing of an "official act." See Criminal Resource Manual § 2404 ("[T]he courts will probably not extend the 'color of official right' clause of the Hobbs Act beyond the parameters of crimes of bribery and gratuities in relation to federal officials that are described in 18 U.S.C. § 201.")

[7] The wire fraud statute, 18 U.S.C. § 1346 reaches "a scheme or artifice to deprive another of the intangible right of honest services," which the Supreme Court has construed as criminalizing "only the bribe-and-kickback core of the pre-McNally case law" Skilling, 130 S. Ct. at 2931.

Courts have faithfully followed this straightforward distinction, consistently vacating convictions of public officials when those officials did not improperly exercise governmental power. For example, in United States v. Urciuoli, 513 F.3d 290, 295-96 (1st Cir. 2008), the First Circuit vacated a state senator's honest services fraud conviction when the senator was being paid to contact "mayors and other local officials urging them to comply with Rhode Island law governing patient entitlement to be taken by ambulance to the hospital of the patient's choice." Id. at 294. The Government argued that "a legislator's informal duties commonly extend to representing constituents with local officials and engaging in oversight functions and so to this extent should be regarded as official." Id. at 295-96. The First Circuit rejected that position, holding that "there is no indication that [the senator] invoked any purported oversight authority or threatened to use official powers in support of his advocacy." Id. at 296 (emphasis added). Because the senator's advocacy did not "bias[] his judgment in making an official decision on a matter before him," id. at 295, he never improperly exercised his governmental powers. The court rejected the notion that "trad[ing] on the reputation, network and influence that comes with political office" or using the "access and attention" that comes with a government title, or even the "(possibly improper) use of senate letterhead" were sufficient—standing alone—to transform that conduct into an improper exercise of official government power. Id. at 296.

Similarly, in Valdes v. United States, a policeman took payments in exchange for performing searches (for license plates, outstanding warrants, and the like) on the police department database. 475 F.3d 1319, 1321-22 (D.C. Cir. 2007) (en banc). The Government argued "that the bribery statute should be construed broadly, to encompass essentially any action which implicates the duties and powers of a public official." Id. at 1322. The en banc D.C. Circuit rejected the Government's broad construction, noting that the Supreme Court's opinion in Sun Diamond, "like the rule of lenity, [ ] works to protect a citizen from punishment under a statute that gives at best dubious notice that it has criminalized his conduct." Id. at 1323. The court held that the "official act" concept does not subsume "officials' moonlighting, or their misuse of government resources, or the two in combination"; rather, the Government must allege and prove that the defendant exerted "inappropriate influence on decisions that the government actually makes." Id. at 1324-25. Or as one of the cases cited in Defense Motion #1 explained in vacating a Hobbs Act conviction, that statute does not apply to an official who "promised only to introduce the [bribe-payer] to influential persons" and "did not promise to use his official position to influence those persons." Def.'s Mem. in Supp. of Mot. #1 (Jan. 21, 2014), Dkt. 8, at 7-8 (discussing the Eighth Circuit's decision in United States v. Rabbitt, 583 F.2d 1014 (8th Cir. 1978), abrogated on other grounds by 483 U.S. 350 (1987), superseded by 18 U.S.C. § 1346).

The Fourth Circuit recently reiterated the principle that not all acts falling within the range of official duty are "official acts." In Jefferson, a congressman was convicted of using his office to obtain government financing and regulatory approval for various business ventures of numerous bribe-paying companies. See generally 674 F.3d at 341-51. Congressman Jefferson argued that Sun-Diamond limited official acts solely to his formal legislative duties, id. at 355, such as voting on bills or introducing legislation. The Fourth Circuit rejected that argument, making clear that public officials take "official acts" only when they exercise governmental power or lobby other officials to do so. In so holding, the court carefully explained that "the bribery statute does not encompass every action taken in one's official capacity." Id. at 356. The court held that the "inquiry does not end" with the question of whether the official's conduct was "within the range of official duty"; rather, such an "act must yet adhere to the definition confining an official act to a pending 'question, matter, cause, suit, proceeding or controversy,'" such that juries cannot "rely exclusively on [ ] settled practices." Id. at 356-57.

Countless cases confirm that acts are "official" only when they involve the exercise of governmental power. For example, the Supreme Court long ago explained in United States v. Birdsall, 233 U.S. 223 (1914), that officials engaged in "official acts" when they accepted bribes "to influence their reports and recommendations" to an ultimate government decision-maker. Id. at 235. Those acts were "official" because they sought to improperly influence another official's exercise of governmental power. Id. at 235-36. Or in a more recent example, United States v. Ring, 706 F.3d 460 (D.C. Cir. 2013), the D.C. Circuit held that a government attorney who "himself lacked independent authority to expedite visa applications" performed an official action when he "acted in his official capacity to influence the visa application process." Id. at 470. The court distinguished between interfering with specific visa applications (an official act because it sought to improperly influence a governmental decision) and "making a purely informational inquiry" (an official act in some sense but not one that sought to influence governmental action).

Id. Likewise, in United States v. Biaggi, 853 F.2d 89, 96-99 (2d Cir. 1988), the Second Circuit upheld the conviction of a congressman for using his office to secure Navy contracts for a ship repair firm—conduct that was "clearly covered by the [bribery] statute because [the conduct] concern[ed] inappropriate influence on decisions that the government actually makes," Valdes, 475 F.3d at 1325 (emphasis added) (explaining the holding in Biaggi). And in Carson, 464 F.2d at 434, the court affirmed the conviction of a Senator's administrative assistant for accepting a bribe in exchange for using his influence "to alleviate, if not altogether quash, pending Justice Department action or bring about lenient post-conviction treatment."

The legal rule that unifies these decisions is the limitation of "official" acts to those actions relating to the exercise of actual government power. As the defense explained in its Memorandum in Support of Discovering the Grand Jury Instructions, that basic limitation likewise underlies every published Fourth Circuit decision upholding a bribery conviction. See Def.'s Mem. in Supp. of Mot. #1 (Jan. 21, 2014), Dkt. 8, at 8-9. The Fourth Circuit's decisions invariably involved public officials who sought to exercise governmental power by doing things like awarding government funding, selling a formal legislative act, or actively lobbying other public officials to take specific governmental action on an official matter.

In sum, the line is clear: Public officials perform "official acts" only when they exercise actual governmental power or improperly lobby other officials to exercise such power. The bribery statutes are not concerned with whom officials meet, how often officials have meetings, or why officials have meetings. See, e.g., Citizens United, 558 U.S. at 360. Rather, they criminalize only efforts by those officials to control the outcomes of those meetings and thereby produce tangible action by the government itself. Returning a supporter's phone call, asking a subordinate to meet with a supporter, attending a supporter's event, inviting a supporter to a reception, or saying nice things about a supporter are not "official acts"—even if they enhance that supporter's actual or perceived stature—because none of those actions deploy the sovereign power of government. Because the Government has not alleged that Mr. McDonnell improperly influenced an actual governmental decision or action or that he promised to do so, its federal bribery charges fail as a matter of law.

2. The Term "Official Act" Should Be Construed Narrowly.

The Government concedes that—at a minimum—it must satisfy the definition of "official act" in 18 U.S.C. § 201(a)(3) in order to convict the defendants of its honest services fraud and Hobbs Act charges. See Gov't's Opp'n to Def.'s Mot. for Discovery of Selected Recordings of Grand Jury Commc'ns (Feb. 3, 2014), Dkt. 41, at 8. That provision defines the term "official act" as: "any decision or action on any question, matter, cause, suit, proceeding or controversy, which may at any time be pending, or which may by law be brought before any public official, in such official's official capacity." 18 U.S.C. § 201(a)(3). The statutory text and well-established canons of construction confirm what the cases uniformly hold: that the Government must allege and prove that Mr. McDonnell exercised (or promised to exercise) actual governmental power in order to sustain its criminal charges.

First, the text expressly limits "official acts" to conduct that involves exercising actual governmental power. "[T]he six-term series" of words in the statute "refers to a class of questions or matters whose answer or disposition is determined by the government." Valdes, 475 F.3d at 1324 (emphasis added). This text does not reach "'the misuse of public office and contacts gained through that office to promote private ends.'" Id. (citation omitted). The text is, rather, limited to "'the corruption of official decisions through the misuse of influence in governmental decision-making.'" Id. (citation omitted) (emphasis added).

This textual limitation is consistent with the reality that the federal bribery statutes do not establish a comprehensive code of ethics for state officials. The bribery laws exist, rather, to prevent a precise problem: "'the corruption of official decisions through the misuse of influence in governmental decision-making.'" Id. (citation omitted). The Supreme Court was clear about this in Sun Diamond, explaining that "a narrow, rather than a sweeping, prohibition is more compatible with the fact that [the bribery and gratuity laws are] merely one strand of an intricate web of regulations, both administrative and criminal, governing the acceptance of gifts and other self-enriching actions by public officials." 526 U.S. at 409. Here, Mr. McDonnell was a state official subject to the regulatory framework of Virginia ethics law, which included rules governing what gifts he or his family could receive, how (if at all) those gifts needed to be reported, and what penalties (civil or criminal) attach for failing to comply with those rules. The federal government may dislike Virginia's ethics laws, but it cannot selectively expand the federal bribery laws to fill perceived gaps in the Virginia code of ethics. To the contrary: "Absent a text that clearly requires it, we ought not expand this one piece of the regulatory puzzle so dramatically as to make many other pieces misfits." Id. at 412. "[N]ot only does the text here not require that result; its more natural reading forbids," id., extending it to capture conduct that is "not corruption." Citizens United, 558 U.S. at 360.

Second, it is a cardinal legal principle under the Rule of Lenity that any ambiguity in a criminal statute must be resolved in favor of the accused. See, e.g., Staples v. United States, 511 U.S. 600, 619 n.17 (1994) ("an ambiguous criminal statute is to be construed in favor of the accused"). This principle reflects the importance our legal system places on fair warning and ensuring that individuals are not criminally convicted on the basis of a novel construction of criminal law. Any residual ambiguity concerning the breadth of "official act" must therefore be resolved in favor of Mr. McDonnell and against the Government.

Third, the Hobbs Act and honest services fraud provisions—which apply to state officials—should be construed especially narrowly given the critical federalism issues at stake. Nothing in the Constitution or common sense charges the federal government with policing the ethical codes in all fifty states via vague federal criminal laws. See, e.g., Citizens United, 558 U.S. at 357 (explaining that "26 States do not restrict independent expenditures by for-profit corporations" and that "[t]he Government does not claim that these expenditures have corrupted the political process"). It is Virginia's prerogative to set its own ethical standards and, if it chooses, to allow unlimited campaign contributions or gifts to its officials. During the relevant period, Virginia permitted state officials to accept gifts in any amount and—critically here—explicitly rejected criminal penalties for accepting too many gifts. Virginia law explains that officials should refrain from accepting "gifts from sources on a basis so frequent as to raise an appearance of the use of his public office for private gain" while simultaneously mandating that "[v]iolations of this subdivision shall not be subject to criminal law penalties." Va. Code § 2.2-3103(9) (emphasis added); see also id. § 2.2-3103(8) (no criminal sanctions for the acceptance of gifts "where the timing and nature of the gift would cause a reasonable person to question the officer's or employee's impartiality in the matter affecting the donor"). The federal government tramples Virginia's exclusive right to regulate its officials when it uses vague laws to criminalize non-corrupt conduct that Virginia has affirmatively chosen not to criminalize.

The Supreme Court has repeatedly cautioned against giving an expansive interpretation to a federal criminal statute when doing so would "alter sensitive federal-state relationships," Rewis v. United States, 401 U.S. 808, 812 (1971). It has accordingly rejected sweeping interpretations of the Travel Act, id., the precursor to the current federal felon-in-possession statute, United States v. Bass, 404 U.S. 336, 348-350 (1971), the federal arson statute, Jones v.

United States, 529 U.S. 848, 858 (2000), the mail fraud statute, Cleveland v. United States, 531 U.S. 12, 24-25 (2000), and the Hobbs Act, United States v. Enmons, 410 U.S. 396, 411-12 (1973). As the Court has explained, "unless Congress conveys its purpose clearly, it will not be deemed to have significantly changed the federal-state balance." Bass, 404 U.S. at 349. For that reason too, this Court should reject "the Government's less constrained construction," Skilling, 130 S. Ct. at 2933, of the "official act" requirement in the Hobbs Act and honest services fraud provision, given that Congress has not come close to clearly endorsing it.

3. The Government's Apparent Belief That Everything A Public Official Does In His Official Capacity Constitutes An "Official Act" Is Wrong.

The Government's construction, by contrast, would convert almost everything an official does into an "official act," and would make criminal liability dependent upon each particular official's political priorities and public commitments. The Government alleges that Mr. McDonnell engaged in "official acts" "on an as-needed basis, as opportunities arose, to legitimize, promote, and obtain research studies for Star Scientific's products, including Anatabloc®." Indictment ¶ 22. The Government suggests that these activities were "official" acts, not because they exercised government power (which they plainly did not), but rather because Mr. McDonnell's campaign slogan was "Bob's for Jobs" and because he made economic development in Virginia a top priority during his time as Governor. Indictment ¶ 7. In the Government's myopic view, those public priorities apparently transformed anything Mr. McDonnell did that "legitimized" or "promoted" a Virginia businesses into an "official act."

There is no legal support for this novel theory, and simply considering its converse demonstrates that it cannot be correct. If "Bob's for Jobs" converted all business-promotion activities into "official acts," it would mean that any public official who did not campaign on economic development does not take an "official act" when he does the exact same things alleged here to "promote" or "legitimize" home-state businesses. But the bribery laws plainly do not metamorphose with every election and have a different meaning for every official depending on his campaign slogans or political priorities.

Consequently, it is no surprise that there appears to be no case holding that public officials commit the crime of bribery when they do things that "legitimize or promote" a constituent or his home-state company. Whether or not promoting economic development is a "settled practice" of Virginia Governors, the Fourth Circuit has made clear that not all "settled practices" are "official acts." Rather, "[s]ettled practices" are "official acts" only if they involve deploying official government power. Jefferson, 674 F.3d at 356 ("[T]he bribery statute does not encompass every action taken in one's official capacity such an act must yet adhere to the definition confining an official act to a pending 'question, matter, cause, suit, proceeding or controversy.'"). The Government's construction thus contravenes Jefferson.

4. The Government's Interpretation Of "Official Act" Would Criminalize The Routine Activities Of All Public Officials.

If the Government were correct that every meeting referral for a donor, statement to third parties supporting a benefactor, or party invitation for a supporter and a supporter's associates constitutes federal bribery, then countless current and routine political practices are now felonies. That includes conduct that has never been considered criminal, such as exchanging access to officials for campaign contributions. The Government's theory would, for example, criminalize President Obama's practice of providing campaign donors with access to administration officials during his 2012 campaign.[8] Nobody has ever suggested, though, that the bribery laws prohibited cabinet secretaries from trading time and access in exchange for contributions to the President's re-election campaign.[9] [8] "The Obama campaign's 'Speaker Series' program turns Cabinet secretaries and top White House advisors into fundraising surrogates. For $5,000, a donor can get a kind of season pass to see [Cabinet Secretaries and White House advisors] when they come to town." Peter Nicholas, Administration Officials Double As Obama Campaign Speakers, L.A. Times (Nov. 16,

---

For better or for worse, elected officials routinely promote the private or corporate interests of their constituents and political backers in ways that do not exercise actual governmental power. It was not long ago, for example, that the President appeared in a promotional spot for George Lopez's late-night talk show, which featured the President endorsing Mr. Lopez's show as "the kind of change I can believe in."[10] Mr. Lopez had played a major role in "the effort to get out the Latino vote for Barack Obama" a few months earlier.[11] There is thus little question that the President endorsed Mr. Lopez's show to repay Mr. Lopez for his financial and political support.

Under the Government's theory, the only thing standing between these officials and a criminal conviction is prosecutorial discretion. Individuals paid money; they received access; some had a public official saying "favorable" things about them or their business (in some instances even directly promoting their business); and these individuals were able to leverage that access or those favorable comments into increased credibility, a better shot at achieving private and public goals, or whatever else they wanted. Criminalizing that conduct has never 2011), available at http://tinyurl.com/odqo7q4.

---

[9] Which is precisely what the Obama campaign was (lawfully) doing. As has been reported, the Administration's Cabinet Secretaries routinely engaged with donors on substantive matters of official policy. See, e.g., id.; see also Def.'s Mem. in Supp. of Mot. #1 (Jan. 21, 2014), Dkt. 8, at 11-14.

[10] Maria Elena Fernandez, President Obama Shills for Comedian George Lopez, L.A. Times (June 19, 2009), available at http://tinyurl.com/knve3f.

[11] Associated Press, George Lopez Seeks Latino Vote for Obama in Nevada, N.Y Daily News (Aug. 4, 2008), available at http://tinyurl.com/p624yyl; see also id. (noting that "[i]t took a personal call from Obama to get Lopez on board with the Democratic presidential candidate's campaign").

been—and is not suddenly now—the consequence of the long-unchanged Hobbs Act and wire fraud statute. Just as President Obama did not take an "official act" when he promoted a supporter's talk show or exchanged private meetings with his cabinet officials for high-dollar donations, Mr. McDonnell did not take an "official act" when he allegedly asked subordinates to meet with Williams or said favorable things about Star, a Virginia-based public company.

B. The Government Has Not Alleged That Mr. McDonnell Performed Or Promised To Perform Any "Official Act."

Once the Government's allegations are measured against the underlying legal standards, its corruption charges fail as a matter of law. The Government does not allege Mr. McDonnell promised or performed any "official acts," as that term has long been defined. It does not and cannot allege that either Star or Williams was promised or received any government funds, contracts, appointments, legislation, regulatory action or any other governmental benefit. The Government's honest services fraud and extortion charges should be dismissed.[12]

1. The Indictment Does Not Allege That Mr. McDonnell Promised Any Specific Future "Official Acts."

The Government has suggested in filings that, even if Mr. McDonnell performed no "official" acts, he is criminally liable because Williams believed he would someday perform such acts. In order to convict Mr. McDonnell without proving a completed official act, however, the Government would need to allege and prove that he "receive[d] a payment in return for his agreement to perform specific official acts." Evans, 504 U.S. at 268. The Indictment never alleges any such agreement or even any identifiable types of future official acts.

The Government comes closest in asserting that Mrs. McDonnell—who is not a public official and thus cannot violate the bribery laws on her own—"told JW that she could help Star [12] To the extent the Court determines that any of the Government's alleged official acts are legally sufficient, it should strike the acts which are not from the Indictment.

---

Scientific but that she needed JW's financial assistance." Indictment ¶ 26 (emphasis added). But tellingly, the Indictment does not allege that Mrs. McDonnell told Williams that the Governor would do anything, that Mr. McDonnell knew about his wife's alleged statement, or that Mrs. McDonnell promised to somehow deploy official government power on Star's behalf. The Indictment's vague assertions do not satisfy the threshold requirement of an "agreement to perform specific official acts." Evans, 504 U.S. at 268 (emphasis added).

2. None Of The Specific Actions Alleged By The Government Constitutes An "Official Act."

The conduct that the Government alleges constituted "official acts" falls within three broad categories: (1) arranging or recommending meetings with government officials about Anatabloc®, (2) hosting and attending events at the Mansion involving Star Scientific, including allowing Williams to suggest invitees to events, and (3) "contacting other government officials in the OGV as part of an effort to encourage Virginia state research universities to initiate studies of anatabloc." See Indictment ¶ 111(c). None of these allegations suffice to sustain the Government's charges under the Hobbs Act or honest services fraud statute.

(a) Arranging Or Recommending Meetings With Other Government Officials

The Indictment broadly asserts that Mr. McDonnell took "official acts" by arranging meetings for Williams with Virginia government officials "to discuss and promote Anatabloc®," and by recommending "that senior government officials in the OGV meet with Star Scientific executives to discuss ways that the company's products could lower health care costs." Indictment ¶ 111(c)(i), (v). The Indictment's factual allegations, in turn, describe only two incidents that involve such conduct. Neither qualifies as an "official act."

First, in the evening of July 31, 2011, Mr. McDonnell allegedly emailed the Virginia Secretary of Health to say that he "'would like to have [one of the Secretary of Health's Deputies] attend a short briefing at the mansion about 10am with first lady on the Star Scientific anatablock [sic] trials planned in va at vcu and uva.'" Indictment ¶ 48. The next morning, Williams met with Mrs. McDonnell and a senior policy advisor from the Department of Health. Id. ¶ 49. Williams allegedly stated at the meeting that "research scientists at UVa and MCV were interested in doing clinical trials," and that those researchers "would get small planning grants to develop test protocols so that large grant proposals could be submitted to the Tobacco Commission." Id. Williams allegedly stated that he "anticipated Tobacco Commission funding for these studies and that he had discussed this" with Mr. McDonnell. Id. Williams also allegedly discussed the possibility of using Virginia government employees as the control group for these studies. Id. The policy advisor subsequently sent Williams a polite note explaining that "'it is necessary for us to make policy recommendations and decisions off of sound data'" and that she was "'grateful that [Williams] [was] making strides to validate the incredible anecdotes and stories that result from your work.'" Id. ¶ 52. The Government does not claim that the policy advisor promised or took any official action benefiting Star (or that she even had jurisdiction over the meeting's topic). Nor does it allege that she spoke to Mr. McDonnell about the meeting. Nor is there any allegation that Mr. McDonnell attempted to influence the outcome of this meeting or that the meeting actually yielded anything. Simply put, nothing happened.

Second, on March 21, 2012, Mr. McDonnell allegedly met with the Virginia Secretary of Administration "to discuss the Virginia state employee health plan and ways to reduce healthcare costs in Virginia." Indictment ¶ 88. The Government contends that Mr. McDonnell pulled some Antabloc® from his pocket during this meeting and told the Secretary that he used it personally and that it "was working well for him." Id. Mr. McDonnell then allegedly asked her "to reach out to the 'Anatabloc people' and meet with them" to discuss "ways that the company's products could lower healthcare costs." Id. ¶¶ 88, 111(c)(v). The Government does not allege that the Secretary of Administration ever followed up on Mr. McDonnell's alleged suggestion. Nor does it claim that Mr. McDonnell ever asked the Secretary to take governmental action to assist Star, or that she ever did so. Once again, nothing happened.

Arranging meetings without attempting to control their outcomes does nothing more than provide "access" and is therefore "not corruption." Citizens United, 558 U.S. at 360. Public officials routinely refer supporters and other constituents for meetings with other government officials. But as the Eighth Circuit has explained, introducing a benefactor "to influential persons" is not an official act if the official providing the introduction does "not promise to use his official position to influence those persons." United States v. Loftus, 992 F.2d 793, 796 (8th Cir. 1993) (emphasis added). So too here.[13]

(b) Hosting And Attending Events At The Mansion

The Indictment alleges the Mr. McDonnell took "official acts" by "hosting, and attending, events at the Governor's Mansion designed to encourage Virginia university researchers to initiate studies of anatabine and to promote Star Scientific's products to doctors for referral to their patients." Indictment 111 ¶ (c)(ii). It further alleges that Mr. McDonnell "promot[ed] Star Scientific's products and facilitat[ed] its relationships with Virginia government officials by allowing [Williams] to invite individuals important to Star Scientific's business to exclusive events at the Governor's Mansion." Id. ¶ 111(c)(iv). These allegations appear to relate to two events: (1) a lunch at the Mansion on August 30, 2011, and (2) a [13] Although not alleged to be part of the conspiracy, the Government also claims that in 2010 Mr. McDonnell "put [Mr. Williams] in contact with the Virginia Secretary of Health and Human Resources," Indictment ¶ 17, and that he appeared at a Star event in February 2011 where he "made brief remarks in support of Star Scientific to the doctors and health professionals in attendance," id. ¶ 20. For the same reasons detailed above, these alleged actions would not qualify as official acts.

---

Healthcare Leaders Reception at the Mansion on February 29, 2012. Neither event qualifies as an "official act."

On August 30, 2011, Mr. and Mrs. McDonnell allegedly "hosted an event for the launch of Star Scientific's Anatabloc® product at the Governor's mansion."[14] Indictment ¶ 60. The Government alleges that the "invitees included some of the same UVa and VCU research scientists whom Star Scientific was attempting to convince to perform clinical trials of Anatabloc®." Id. Williams presented several $25,000 planning grants to UVa and VCU researchers to fund the preparation and submission of research proposals for the study of anatabine. Id. According to the Indictment, Mr. McDonnell attended the event and "spoke favorably to the attendees regarding further study of anatabine." Id.

As discussed above, however, a public official does not perform an "official act" simply by attending or hosting a luncheon and making supportive remarks. The Government does not claim that anything that happened at this lunch influenced any public official to perform any "official act."[15] Just like the legislator in Urciuoli—whose conviction the First Circuit vacated—

---

[14] Notably, the Indictment does not allege that Commonwealth funds paid for this lunch (to the contrary, Mr. McDonnell's PAC footed the bill), that this lunch was a public event, or that media were present. The only difference between the Government's allegations and the private events Governor McAuliffe is offering to six-figure donors, therefore, is the absence of any allegation here that there was an explicit quid pro quo arrangement between Williams and the accused.

[15] Even if it had occurred, encouraging Star to donate money to state universities could not possibly constitute corrupt official action. But in any event, the Indictment itself refutes the claim that the lunch had any impact on the decision of UVA and VCU researchers to study anatabine. According to the Indictment, UVA and VCU representatives attended a Star symposium at Gibson Island on July 23, 2011 to discuss research on anatabine. Indictment ¶ 45. The Indictment does not allege that Mr. or Mrs. McDonnell knew about—much less played a role in— that event. The Indictment alleges that one week later, on August 1, Mr. Williams reported that "research scientists at UVa and MCV were interested in doing clinical trials of the potential health benefits of Anatabloc®." Id. ¶ 49. Again, the Indictment does not allege that Mr. McDonnell had any contact—or authorized anyone else to have contact—with any university researcher regarding anatabine research prior to the August 30 lunch, at which Star

"there is no indication that [Mr. McDonnell] invoked any purported oversight authority or threatened to use official powers in support of [any] advocacy." 513 F.3d at 296.

The same is true of the Healthcare Leaders reception at the Mansion on February 29, 2012. Indictment ¶ 84. The Indictment alleges that Mrs. McDonnell "allowed [Williams] to invite dozens of individuals, including doctors whom Star Scientific was trying to convince to recommend Anatabloc® to their patients." Indictment ¶ 74. The Government does not allege that Mr. McDonnell did anything at the event to influence any official action on Star's behalf or that Star received any official benefit through being invited to the event. While the Government alleges that Mr. McDonnell "wanted to make sure that the 'Head officers at VCU/MCV, UVA, EVMS, [and the] Massey Cancer Center' were included on the [invitation] list," there is no allegation that any of these healthcare leaders were invited to benefit Star or that any of them even spoke with Star representatives at the event. Id. ¶ 75. Nothing relating to the Healthcare Leaders Reception thus comes close to meeting the requirements of an "official act."

(c) "Contacting Other Government Officials In OGV"

The Indictment also vaguely alleges that Mr. McDonnell took "official acts" when he "contact[ed] other government officials in the OGV as part of an effort to encourage Virginia state research universities to initiate studies of anatabine." Indictment 111 ¶ (c)(iii). The Indictment does not identify who those officials were or how this alleged "contact" related to encouraging research at Virginia state universities. Certainly, the Indictment does not allege that Mr. McDonnell ever contacted VCU or UVA to request that they conduct research on awarded research grants based on previously submitted applications. And finally, the Government does not allege that any attendee was in fact influenced to do anything as a consequence of the lunch.

---

anatabine or that they apply for Tobacco Commission funding. Nor does it allege that Mr. McDonnell asked anyone else to make such contacts on his behalf.

Indeed, other than the events described above, the Government's only apparent basis for this allegation is a cryptic email that Mr. McDonnell sent to his Chief Counsel, Mr. Eige, in February 2012. On February 9, 2012, Mrs. McDonnell allegedly emailed Mr. McDonnell, with a courtesy copy to Mr. Eige, stating that VCU and UVA were not returning calls from Williams regarding potential anatabine studies. Indictment ¶ 76. The Government alleges that on February 17, Mr. McDonnell emailed Mr. Eige stating "'Pls see me about anatabloc issues at VCU and UVA.'" Id. ¶ 80. Mr. Eige responded "will do. We need to be careful with this issue." Id. The Government does not allege that Mr. McDonnell instructed Mr. Eige to take, or that Mr. Eige did take, any action to assist Star as a consequence of this exchange. Indeed, there is no allegation that Mr. McDonnell ever actually followed up with Mr. Eige or sought to get UVA and VCU to return Williams' phone calls (which, even if it had occurred, still would not have constituted an "official act, see also Ring, 706 F.3d at 470 ("purely informational inquiry" not an official act)). Thus, yet again, absolutely nothing happened.

The Government is mistaken that a public official can commit the federal felony of bribery by merely asking his lawyer to "see" him. The role of in-house attorneys is to help public officials comply with the law. Mr. McDonnell's solicitation of advice from his attorney cannot possibly constitute an "official"—and therefore criminal—act.

3. The Government's Broad Characterizations Of Mr. McDonnell's Conduct Do Not Cure This Deficiency.

Finally, the Government's amorphous characterization of the alleged "scheme" does not cure its failure to allege any official acts. According to the Government, Williams and Star paid bribes to the [illegible] Donnells in order to obtain three things: (1) a research study using Virginia state employees as subjects; (2) Tobacco Commission funding for research studies to be performed by Johns Hopkins University, UVA, and VCU; and (3) encouragement of physicians to prescribe anatabine to their patients. See Indictment ¶¶ 41-45, 60, 63, 65, 74, 76. Notably, with respect to the first two alleged objectives, the Government never actually claims that Mr. McDonnell did anything (or promised to do anything) to assist Star with these supposed goals, neither of which Star achieved. The Indictment does not allege that any research study of Virginia employees was ever promised, authorized, or conducted. Nor does the Indictment claim that Mr. McDonnell ever promised—much less provided—any assistance with Star's plan to seek funding from the Tobacco Commission.[16] Indeed, the Indictment does not even claim that Mr. McDonnell had any discussions with Williams about these supposed objectives,[17] much less that Mr. McDonnell promised to do anything for Williams in exchange for gifts or loans.

As for the third alleged objective, encouraging physicians to prescribe Anatabloc to their patients is not an "official act." What private physicians prescribe to their private patients has nothing to do with "decisions that the government actually makes." Valdes, 475 F.3d at 1325. Whether or not the presence of Star executives at a reception at the Governor's Mansion somehow imbued Star with additional credibility or legitimacy in the eyes of those physicians, extending party invitations is not an official act because it does not cross the line between "[i]ngratiation and access," Citizens United, 558 U.S. at 360, and exercising government power. It is not materially different from the 2013 presidential inauguration package: "Corporations and other organizations that donate in the highest bracket—$1 million—will have access to a 'benefactors reception,' and four tickets to the official inaugural ball, among other perks."[18]

---

[16] The Indictment does not even claim that an application for funding was actually filed with the Tobacco Commission or that such funding was ever provided. Neither event happened.

[17] While the Government alleges that Star employees represented to various people that Mr. Williams had discussed the plan to seek Tobacco Commission funding with the Governor, Indictment ¶ 49, and that Mr. McDonnell had "expressed his support," id. ¶ 76, it does not allege that Mr. McDonnell himself—or anyone on his staff—ever made such a statement to anybody. Certainly, if the Government had any evidence that Mr. McDonnell ever made such a statement, it would have alleged as much in the Indictment.

The D.C. Circuit's decision in United States v. Muntain illustrates the point. There, the Government convicted a HUD official for allegedly accepting illegal gratuities after selling group automobile insurance policies to labor unions that he met as part of his official duties. The official "frequently combine[d] the promotion of the automobile insurance with trips taken at government expense for the purpose of conferring with labor officials across the United States concerning official business." 610 F.2d 964, 966-67 (D.C. Cir. 1979). The official argued that selling insurance policies was not an "official act" because it did not "involve[] any question, matter, cause, suit, proceeding or controversy which by law might have been brought before [him]." Id. at 967 The Government, by contrast, contended that "any acts within the range of an official's public duties" are "official acts," including any meetings "to discuss matters of interest to the unions." Id. The D.C. Circuit rejected the Government's construction and vacated the conviction, explaining that the Government's interpretation went "beyond permissible bounds." Id. "To the extent that [the defendant's] use of his official position to promote a purely private venture created an appearance of impropriety, his conduct is reprehensible, but it is not criminal." Id. at 967-68 (emphasis added).[19]

* * *

---

[18] Matthew Larotunda, Obama Inauguration's Big Donor Packages Previewed, ABC News (Dec. 8, 2012, 4:14 PM), available at http://goo.gl/97XaY1.

[19] The Government may argue that the Fourth Circuit's decision in Jefferson departed from Muntain and adopted a definition of "official act" that subsumes hosting an event for private doctors, but that would be mistaken. There was no question that Mr. Jefferson was accepting kickbacks in exchange for promoting bribe-payers' interests to government officials or government entities who were making decisions on government contracts. Mr. Jefferson was "promoting and facilitating lucrative deals between iGate and the Army, or between iGate, Mody, or Arkel and various African governments," Jefferson, 674 F.3d at 359 (emphases added), and was thus plainly using his office to influence "decisions the government actually makes."

In sum, all the Government alleges is that Mr. McDonnell provided a personal benefactor with access to himself and his staff. Whatever the appearance of such conduct, it is "not corruption," Citizens United, 558 U.S. at 360, because providing access does not, without more, exert "inappropriate influence on decisions that the government actually makes." Valdes, 475 F.3d at 1325. The Government's corruption charges—and its derivative conspiracy charge, Ventimiglia v. United States, 242 F.2d 620, 622 (4th Cir. 1957)—should therefore be dismissed.

II. If "Official Act" Means What The Government Claims, Then The Honest Services Statute And Hobbs Act Are Unconstitutionally Vague.

If the Government's construction of the statutes it invokes is correct, then those statutes are unconstitutionally vague and the Indictment should be dismissed for that reason. "To satisfy due process, a penal statute [must] define the criminal offense [1] with sufficient definiteness that ordinary people can understand what conduct is prohibited and [2] in a manner that does not encourage arbitrary and discriminatory enforcement." Skilling, 130 S. Ct. at 2927-28 (citation omitted). The Government's construction of the wire fraud statute and the Hobbs Act fails both tests. For that reason too, the Government's corruption charges should be dismissed.

First, interpreting "official act" to dispense with proof that the official sought to exercise governmental power will leave officials guessing about the legality of standard courtesies extended by politicians to supporters, benefactors, and the general public. The Government's interpretation of official act would potentially criminalize any interaction with a benefactor, such as facilitating a meeting, hosting or appearing at an event, or speaking favorably about that benefactor. It would even raise questions about the legality of offering photo opportunities at fundraisers, or organizing private events wherein donors obtain special access to officials in exchange for specified contributions. All such acts potentially "promote" or "legitimize" or lend "credibility." Such an amorphous and uncertain standard fails to provide fair notice in accordance with Skilling. It would also create a chilling effect on the rights of individual citizens to donate to their favored political candidates and participate in electoral politics.

Second, such a broad construction of "official act" would lead to arbitrary prosecutions. If providing "access" is criminal, then prosecutorial discretion is the only thing standing between most public officials and federal indictment. The danger of arbitrary prosecution is particularly clear here, given that Mr. McDonnell's gubernatorial predecessors and his current successor (all of whom are Democrats) engaged in similar conduct without even prompting an investigation. See Def.'s Mem. in Supp. of Mot. #1 (Jan. 21, 2014), Dkt. 8, at 16-17.

In short, the Government asks this Court to expand the "official act" concept beyond its settled scope. Should the Hobbs Act and honest services fraud provision be revised as the Government requests, then those statutes will be rendered unconstitutionally vague. The Court should "resist the Government's less constrained construction absent Congress' clear instruction otherwise." Skilling, 130 S. Ct. at 2933.

III. The Constitution Forbids Federal Prosecution Of State Officials For Non-Corrupt Conduct That Is Legal Under State Law.

Finally, the Government's broad legal theory criminalizes political activity of state public officials that has no impact on federal funds and is "not corruption." Citizens United, 558 U.S. at 360. Extending the federal criminal law into that core province of state self-governance violates the Tenth Amendment and the principles of federalism it embodies. "[H]aving the power to make decisions and to set policy is what gives the State its sovereign nature." FERC v. Mississippi, 456 U.S. at 761. State officials have constitutionally protected latitude to perform their duties free from undue federal interference. See id. at 769 (improper for the federal government to "set a mandatory agenda to be considered in all events by state legislative or administrative decisionmakers"). The federal government is permitted to interfere with State self-governance in only limited circumstances, such as when federal funds are at stake, see 18 U.S.C. § 666—which the Government does not allege here—or when federal intervention is necessary to discharge the Government's obligation to "guarantee a Republican Form of Government," U.S. Const. art. IV, § 4. The States are otherwise entitled to set their own rules governing the political activity of their officials. That is why the Supreme Court has warned against adopting over-broad constructions of the federal bribery laws that would improperly "involve[ ] the Federal Government in setting standards of disclosure and good government for local and state officials." McNally v. United States, 483 U.S. 350, 360 (1987). That is precisely what the Government is attempting to do here.

This prosecution is ultimately no different from the federal government setting fixed limits on campaign donations to state officials because, in the judgment of the federal government, unlimited campaign donations corrupt state governance. But such an intrusive prohibition would, of course, "upset[] the federal balance to a degree that renders it unconstitutional." United States v. Lopez, 514 U.S. 549, 580 (1995) (Kennedy, J., concurring).

CONCLUSION

The political corruption charges leveled against former Governor McDonnell are based on an unprecedented interpretation of federal law that would, if adopted by this Court, criminalize many basic practices of democratic politics. That would, in turn, convert federal prosecutors into the ultimate arbiters of public ethics for state officials. But the wire fraud statute and Hobbs Act do not accord federal prosecutors such broad-ranging power. The Government's attempt to charge Mr. McDonnell under those provisions without alleging that he abused the official power of Virginia's government therefore fails, and its corruption charges (Counts 1-11) should be dismissed.

Dated: March 25, 2014

Respectfully submitted,

/s/ Jonathan A. Berry

Henry W Asbill (pro hac vice)
Mary Ellen Powers (pro hac vice pending)
Noel J. Francisco (pro hac vice pending)
Ryan D. Newman (pro hac vice)
James M. Burnham (pro hac vice)
Jonathan A. Berry (VSB No. 81864)
JONES DAY
51 Louisiana Avenue, N.W.
Washington, D.C. 20001
Telephone: (202) 879-3939
Facsimile: (202) 626-1700

John L. Brownlee (VSB No. 37358)
Timothy J. Taylor (VSB No. 84529)
HOLLAND & KNIGHT LLP
800 17th Street, N.W., Suite 1100
Washington, D.C. 20006
Telephone: (202) 828-1854
Facsimile: (703) 720-8610

Counsel for Robert F McDonnell

CERTIFICATE OF SERVICE

I, Jonathan A. Berry, am a member of the Bar of this Court. I hereby certify that on this 25th day of March, 2014, I caused the foregoing to be electronically filed with the Clerk of Court using the CM/ECF system, causing it to be served on all registered users.

Dated: March 25, 2014

Respectfully submitted,

/s/ Jonathan A. Berry
Jonathan A. Berry (VSB No. 81864)
JONES DAY
51 Louisiana Avenue, N.W
Washington, D.C. 20001
Telephone: (202) 879-3939
Facsimile: (202) 626-1700
Email: jberry@jonesday.com

Counsel for Robert F McDonnell

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
FOR THE EASTERN DISTRICT OF VIRGINIA
RICHMOND DIVISION

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,	)
	)
v.	)	CRIMINAL NO. 3:14-CR-00012
	)
ROBERT F. MCDONNELL MAUREEN G. MCDONNELL	)	JUDGE JAMES R. SPENCER
	)

DEFENDANT ROBERT F. MCDONNELL'S MOTION #14 – MOTION FOR OMNIBUS VOIR DIRE RELIEF

MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT

TABLE OF AUTHORITIES ii

INTRODUCTION 1

ARGUMENT 2

I. PRE-TRIAL PUBLICITY HAS BEEN OVERWHELMING AND PREJUDICIAL TO THE ACCUSED. 2

- A. The volume of coverage of this case in the Richmond-area media has been overwhelming. 3
- B. The content of media coverage has been largely prejudicial to the McDonnells. 6
- C. Mr. McDonnell's political positions are also likely to affect potential jurors. 12

II. THOROUGH VOIR DIRE IS NEEDED TO ENSURE THAT AN IMPARTIAL JURY IS IMPANELED. 13

- A. A thorough written jury questionnaire is the best, fairest, and most efficient way of screening potential jurors in this case. 14
- B. Individual follow-up questions should be permitted. 18
- C. The defendants should receive 10 peremptory challenges each, with 6 for the Government. 20
- D. The "struck system" should be used for peremptory challenges. 21
- E. Potential jurors should be provided with a neutral summary of the case. 22
- F Jurors should be permitted to take notes during trial. 22
- G. Alternate jurors should not be informed until deliberation. 22

CONCLUSION 23

TABLE OF AUTHORITIES

Page

CASES

Goins v. Angelone,
52 F. Supp. 2d 638 (E.D. Va. 1999) 18

In re South Carolina Press Ass'n.,
946 F.2d 1037 (4th Cir. 1991) 14

Irvin v. Dowd,
366 U.S. 717 (1961) 18

Satcher v. Netherland,
944 F. Supp. 1222 (E.D. Va. 1996) 19

Skilling v. United States,
130 S. Ct. 2896 (2010) 13, 14

United States v. Bakker,
925 F.2d 728 (4th Cir. 1991) 13

United States v. Benyo,
No. 1:05-cr-12 (E.D. Va. 2006) 14

United States v. Blitch,
622 F.3d 658 (7th Cir. 2010) 13

United States v. Bodkins,
4:04-CR-70083, 2005 BL 24826 (W.D. Va. Aug. 1, 2005) 20

United States v. Edwards,
No. 1:11-00161 (M.D.N.C. 2012) 15

United States v. Edwards,
No. 1.11-cr-00161 (M.D.N.C. 2012) 16, 22

United States v. Ford,
Cr. No. 3:06-00235 (M.D. Tenn. 2008) 15

United States v. Hankish,
502 F.2d 71 (4th Cir. 1974) 18

United States v. Hasan,
747 F. Supp. 2d 642 (E.D. Va. 2010) 20

United States v. Ible,
630 F.2d 389 (5th Cir. 1980) 19

United States v. Jefferson,
Cr. No. 1:07-cr-209 (E.D. Va. 2009) 15, 16

United States v. Jeffery,
631 F.3d 669 (4th Cir. 2011) 13

United States v. Lancaster,
96 F.3d 734 (4th Cir. 1996) 13

United States v. Ledee,
549 F.2d 990 (5th Cir. 1977) 19

United States v. Polowichak,
783 F.2d 410 (4th Cir. 1986) 22

United States v. Rolle,
204 F.3d 133 (4th Cir. 2000) 14, 19

United States v. Stevens,
No. 1:08-cr-00231 (D.D.C. 2008) 16, 17

United States v. Wild,
47 F.3d 669 (4th Cir. 1995) 22

OTHER AUTHORITIES

A. Barton Hinkle, Hinkle: McDonnell Family Values, Richmond Times-Dispatch, May 12, 2013 7

Amy Gardner, Va. Candidate McDonnell Says Views Changed Since He Wrote Thesis, Washington Post, Aug. 30, 2009 12

BusinessWire, PGA Tour Professional Fred Couples Named Brand Ambassador For Anatabloc, Feb. 15, 2012 5

Editorial: A Cavalier Fiasco, Wall Street Journal, Feb. 26, 2013 12

Fed. R. Crim. P 24 ....20, 19

Greg Giroux, McDonnell Probe Taints Cuccinelli Virginia Governor Bid, Bloomberg.com, June 14, 2013 10

Google Trends, http://www.google.com/trends 5, 6

James Hohmann, McDonnell Admonishes GOP Over Shutdown, Politico, Sept. 30, 2013 12

Jeff E. Schapiro, Va.'s Image Now Like That Of Maryland, Illinois, Richmond Times-Dispatch, Jan. 22, 2014 11

Jeff Schapiro, Schapiro: McDonnell Legal Hit You Where It Hurts – The Wallet, Richmond Times-Dispatch, Nov. 20, 2013 8

Julian Walker, Va. Legislator Calls on Gov. Bob McDonnell to Resign, Virginian-Pilot, July 2, 2013 8

Laura Vozella & Rosalind S. Helderman, Did Maureen McDonnell Get Free Dental Work?, Washington Post, July 19, 2013 10

Laura Vozella, As McDonnell Leaves Office, His Hefty Record And Political Future Are Clouded By Scandal, Washington Post, Jan. 9, 2014 12

Laura Vozella, Mansion Bills May Break the Rules, Washington Post, June 17, 2013 10

Laura Vozzella, Herring Dismisses Lawyers For McDonnell, Washington Post, Jan. 17, 2014 9

Michael Martz & Jim Nolan, Star CEO Says He Told McDonnell Of Loan To First Lady, Richmond Times Dispatch, Oct. 20, 2013 8

Neil Vidmar, "Case Studies of Pre- and Midtrial Prejudice in Criminal and Civil Litigation," 26 Law and Human Behavior, No. 1 (Feb. 2002) 17

Olympia Meola, McDonnell: No Special Treatment for Donor, Richmond Times-Dispatch, May 1, 2013 11

Robert McCartney, Indictment Shows McDonnell As A Man In Denial, Washington Post, Jan. 22, 2014 10

Rosalind S. Helderman & Carol D. Leonnig, Ex-Va. McDonnell Rejected Plea Offer to Face One Felony, Spare Wife Any Charges, Avoid Trial, Washington Post, Jan. 23, 2014 9

Rosalind S. Helderman & Carol D. Leonnig, Federal Prosecutors Unlikely To Act In McDonnell Case Before Election, Washington Post, Sept. 28, 2013 8

Rosalind S. Helderman, New Invoices Bring Taxpayer-Paid Legal Bills For McDonnell Gifts Scandal To $575,000, Washington Post, Nov. 15, 2013 10

Ruth Marcus, Editorial: Unfit for His Office, Washington Post, July 12, 2013 7

Timeline: The McDonnells and Jonnie Williams, Richmond Times-Dispatch, Jan. 21, 2014 9

INTRODUCTION

For nearly a year, the media has engaged in near-constant speculation about the Government's investigation of, and false allegations against, Bob and Maureen McDonnell. From March 2013 forward, the Richmond-area press has reported on details related to the investigation in salacious terms, sometimes citing anonymous "law enforcement" personnel as the source of the information. This constant negative coverage placed a cloud over the final year of Mr. McDonnell's term as Governor and affected the campaign for his successor. The media's coverage intensified further following the indictment, spurred by the unique circumstance of criminal charges being filed against a well-regarded former governor and his spouse. While this case has garnered attention nationwide, the coverage in the Richmond press has been particularly extensive and prejudicial to the accused, stoking public antipathy toward the McDonnells before they have had the opportunity to respond to the charges at trial. That coverage undoubtedly will continue in the months leading up to the trial and will intensify during trial.

In cases that—like this one—involve heightened pre-trial publicity, great care must be taken to safeguard the accused's Sixth Amendment right to an impartial jury. Here, the duration, volume, and tenor of the media coverage, as well as the potential that strongly held political views could influence jurors, necessitates a thorough voir dire process that will ensure an unbiased jury—willing and able to follow the Court's instructions without hesitation—is impaneled. Mr. McDonnell therefore requests that the voir dire process include the following elements:

1. Use of an extensive written joint jury questionnaire to be completed by potential jurors at the courthouse at least two weeks in advance of trial that includes questions submitted by both the defense and prosecution;

2. Individual follow-up voir dire conducted by both the Court and the attorneys to address any issues raised by questionnaire responses, new developments, or by juror conduct observed during the process;
3. The exercise of 10 peremptory challenges for each defendant if they are tried jointly, with 6 peremptory challenges to be exercised by the prosecution;
4. Use of the "struck system" to exercise peremptory challenges;
5. Provision to potential jurors of a neutral summary of the allegations in the case (rather than the indictment) submitted with the jury questionnaire;
6. Permission for jurors to take notes during trial;
7. Notification to alternate jurors of their status and dismissal immediately before the jury retires to deliberate.

These steps will help minimize the likelihood that a change of venue or juror sequestration will be necessary to secure Mr. McDonnell's Sixth Amendment rights.

ARGUMENT

I. PRE-TRIAL PUBLICITY HAS BEEN OVERWHELMING AND PREJUDICIAL TO THE ACCUSED.

At trial, Mr. McDonnell will show that there was no quid pro quo with Jonnie Williams; that neither Williams nor Star Scientific received any benefit, contract, or favor from the Commonwealth of Virginia; and that Mr. McDonnell was unaware in real time of many of the gifts and loans received by Mrs. McDonnell from Williams. A consumer of Richmond-area media for the last year would have a very different (and mistaken) impression of the facts due to the barrage of prejudicial news coverage about this case. Local news sources have engaged in nonstop speculation about the allegations for the last twelve months, fueled in part by unnamed law enforcement sources.

A. The volume of coverage of this case in the Richmond-area media has been overwhelming.

Since this case involves criminal charges against Virginia's last governor and his wife, it is not surprising that it has been the frequent subject of Richmond-area news reports. A short review of those reports shows just how saturated the media market has been with stories about the accused. A Lexis search for reports appearing in U.S. media sources between March 1, 2013 and March 25, 2014 (including newspapers, television transcripts, and a selection of Internet sources) containing Mr. McDonnell's name and any of the terms "Jonnie Williams," "Star Scientific," "investigation," "scandal," or "Gift-gate" in the headline or lead paragraph returns 2,296 results.[1] The vast majority of these results (2,159 of the reports) appeared in Virginia and Washington, D.C. media sources.[2] In short, consumers of Richmond-area media sources have been exposed to an average of over five media reports per day about the investigation from March 2013 to the present. And this total does not include the many other sources of potentially prejudicial information about the McDonnells likely to reach potential jurors that are more difficult to quantify, such as blog posts not captured by Lexis, Facebook updates, Tweets, and anonymous comments on online news stories.

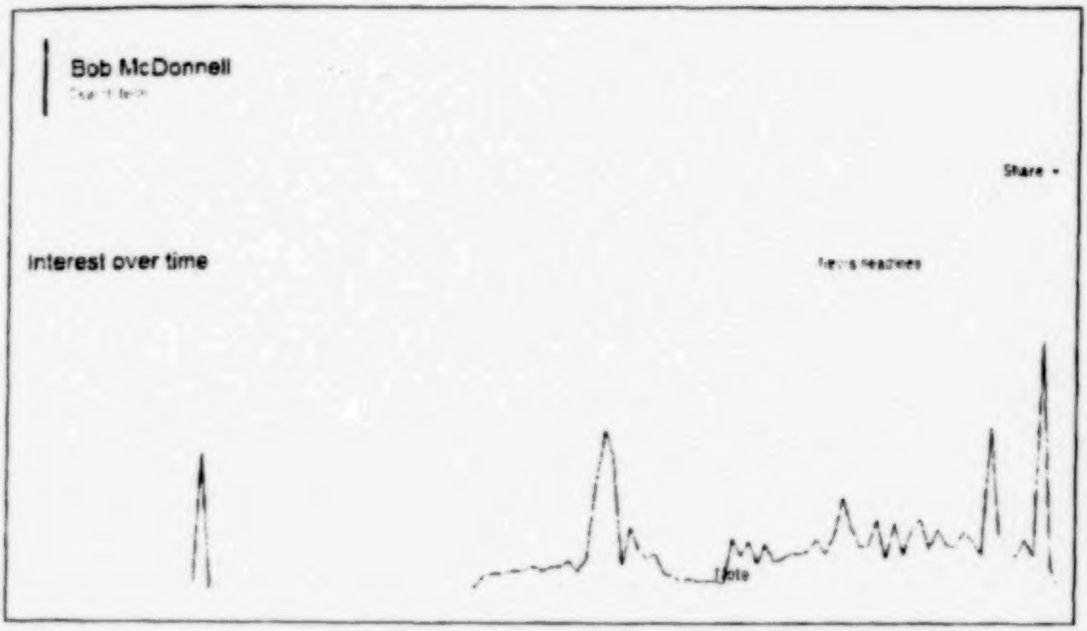
---

[1] Source: Lexis Advance search of all news sources for: (Robert or Bob or Governor or Gov. /3 McDonnell) and hlead ("Jonnie Williams" or "Star Scientific" or "investigation" or "scandal" or "gift-gate" or "gift gate" or "giftgate"), from March 1, 2013 through March 25, 2014. [The 'hlead' search function searches for terms within the article headline or lead paragraph.]

[2] Lexis Advance defines the following sources as reaching the Virginia and Washington, D.C. media markets: Washington Post, Richmond Times-Dispatch, Newsbank, State Capital Newsfeed, McClatchy-Tribute Business News, Newstex, Virginian-Pilot, Associated Press, Daily News Leader, Daily Progress, Bulletin's Frontrunner, Roanoke Time, Politico, ASAPII Database, CNN, and MSNBC.

Not only is the media frequently writing and speaking about this case; Virginians are also actively following the news about this matter. Data available from Google.com regarding searches conducted by Internet users in Virginia shows a surge of interest in Mr. McDonnell and Star Scientific just as the media coverage of the investigation increased in intensity. According to Google Trends, which tracks the relative number of times Google users search for various terms over time, Virginians searched Google for Mr. McDonnell's name more around the time of the indictment than at any previous time, including the 2009 campaign for governor and subsequent inauguration. See Figure A. This wave of interest was surely the result of the media's overwhelming coverage of the investigation and indictment.

Figure A. Relative frequency of Google.com searches for Bob McDonnell from Virginia computers:[3]

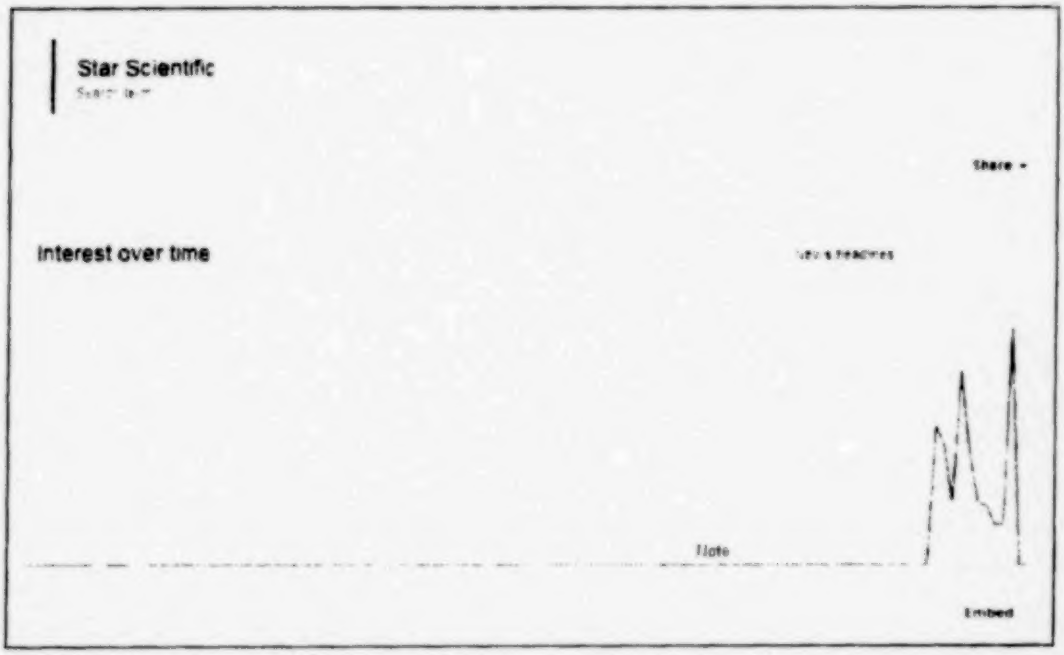


Similarly, searches of Google.com for Star Scientific from Virginia computers surged during 2013 as the media's attention to the investigation increased, and spiked even higher around the time of the indictment. See Figure B. This level of interest far surpassed any previous attention paid to Star Scientific, despite the fact that the company has been in the public eye since the 1990s and has been promoted by various celebrities and media campaigns over that period. See, e.g., BusinessWire, PGA Tour Professional Fred Couples Named Brand Ambassador For Anatabloc, Feb. 15, 2012.

---

[3] Source: Google Trends search for Bob McDonnell, http://www.google.com/trends (conducted March 18, 2014).

Figure B: Relative frequency of Google.com searches for Star Scientific from Virginia computers:[4]



In short, potential jurors are indisputably reading and listening to the extensive media coverage of this case, and are interested enough in the allegations to search the Internet for further information.

B. The content of media coverage has been largely prejudicial to the McDonnells.

The saturation of news coverage about this case is particularly alarming because the vast majority of it has been misleading and negative. To assess the extent of prejudicial news coverage likely to reach potential jurors, the defense conducted a detailed review of 141 articles about this case appearing in the Richmond Times-Dispatch, Washington Post, and Virginian-Pilot (three of the newspapers with the largest circulation in the geographic region from which jurors will be selected) between December 1, 2013 and March 12, 2014. This review found that approximately two-thirds of the articles contained substantially more negative statements about the McDonnells than positive or neutral statements.[5] [4] Source: Google Trends search for Star Scientific, http://www.google.com/trends (conducted March 18, 2014).

---

A full listing of the prejudicial coverage is not feasible in this space, given the large volume of coverage noted above, but a sampling of the reporting indicates just how unfair it has been to the accused in its nearly wholesale embrace of the prosecution's narrative.

- Starting from the very beginning of the investigation, the Richmond-area media jumped to condemn the McDonnells, frequently using highly disparaging language about the accused in both news reports and opinion pieces. For example, on May 12, 2013, a writer for the Richmond Times-Dispatch website posted a blog post stating that Mr. McDonnell was "[h]iding behind legal technicalities" and "making a mockery" of "personal responsibility" and "family values." A. Barton Hinkle, Hinkle: McDonnell Family Values, Richmond Times-Dispatch, May 12, 2013. On July 12, 2013, the Washington Post ran an editorial entitled "Unfit for His Office", in which the author claimed that "mountainous evidence" suggests that Mr. McDonnell "has no business continuing in office." Ruth Marcus, Editorial: Unfit For His Office, Washington Post, July 12, 2013. There are many more examples of similar language among the 2,296 media reports published since March 2013.

---

[5] For each of these 141 articles, the defense analyzed the number of neutral statements (simply reporting known facts), positive statements (such as those noting flaws in the Government's case), and negative statements (such as those adopting the Government's unproven allegations as true). This analysis showed that 64% of the articles contained at least 25% more negative statements than positive statements.

- Many media sources presented news of the investigation from a pro-prosecution standpoint, sometimes attributing information to anonymous "law enforcement sources." See, e.g., Julian Walker, Va. Legislator Calls on Gov. Bob McDonnell to Resign, Virginian-Pilot, July 2, 2013 ("The McDonnell family's connections to Williams and Star are the subject of an active federal inquiry, according to law enforcement sources."). Other articles suggested that the investigation had uncovered information favorable to the prosecution's arguments. See, e.g., Michael Martz & Jim Nolan, Star CEO Says He Told McDonnell Of Loan To First Lady, Richmond Times-Dispatch, Oct. 20, 2013 (the "investigation has found ample evidence that Williams sought the help of the governor, first lady, and other state officials in securing research grants and a place in the state employee health plan" for his dietary supplement, Anatabloc).
- The press also published one-sided, pro-prosecution news stories about sealed grand jury proceedings between the federal prosecutors and Mr. McDonnell. In September 2013, the Washington Post reported that federal prosecutors had "obtained new documents through a closed courtroom battle with McDonnell's legal team, and those papers prompted new leads." Rosalind S. Helderman & Carol D. Leonnig, Federal Prosecutors Unlikely To Act In McDonnell Case Before Election, Washington Post, Sept. 28, 2013. In November 2013, the Richmond Times-Dispatch also published inflammatory statements regarding the litigation over the Governor's office emails, prejudicing readers against the Governor by claiming that he could be viewed "[a]s having something to hide and going to great lengths – even turning to the courts – to hide it." Jeff Schapiro, Schapiro: McDonnell Legal Hit You Where It Hurts – The Wallet, Richmond Times-Dispatch, Nov. 20, 2013.

- Similarly, the press reported on leaked details from highly sensitive, confidential meetings between the Government and attorneys for the McDonnells. Nearly all of these articles provided one-sided, pro-prosecution accounts of the investigation that fueled the continuing negative publicity about the McDonnells. See, e.g., Rosalind S. Helderman & Carol D. Leonnig, Ex-Va. McDonnell Rejected Plea Offer to Face One Felony, Spare Wife Any Charges, Avoid Trial, Washington Post, Jan. 23, 2014 (claiming knowledge of confidential pre-indictment negotiations between the parties).
- Even though the Government's indictment does not claim that the loans from Williams to Mrs. McDonnell and MoBo Real Estate Partners, LLC were cash gifts, many media reports insist on describing them as "payments" that Mr. McDonnell "considers" or "characterizes" as loans. See Timeline: The McDonnells and Jonnie Williams, Richmond Times-Dispatch, Jan. 21, 2014 ("The governor considers the payments loans."); Laura Vozzella, Herring Dismisses Lawyers For McDonnell, Washington Post, Jan. 17, 2014 ("$165,000 in gifts and money characterized as loans").
- The media also unfairly created an incorrect perception that taxpayers have been footing the bill for Mr. McDonnell's private legal defense by undersigned counsel. On November 15, 2013, the Washington Post reported that "two private firms representing McDonnell and his staff racked up more than $331,000 in fees in July, August and September," stating that the Commonwealth of Virginia would pay those fees. Rosalind S. Helderman, New Invoices Bring Taxpayer-Paid Legal Bills For McDonnell Gifts Scandal To $575,000, Washington Post, Nov. 15, 2013. Only later in the article does this report clarify that Mr. McDonnell was paying for his personal legal defense, with outside counsel being hired by the Virginia Attorney General to represent the Governor's office only because the then-Attorney General had a potential conflict of interest.

- Some press reports have recognized that the investigation, and resulting negative coverage of Mr. McDonnell, was so pervasive as to influence the November 2013 election for Mr. McDonnell's successor. See, e.g., Greg Giroux, McDonnell Probe Taints Cuccinelli Virginia Governor Bid, Bloomberg.com, June 14, 2013.
- The media's coverage has even gone so far as to criticize Mrs. McDonnell for allegedly receiving free dental work, Laura Vozella & Rosalind S. Helderman, Did Maureen McDonnell Get Free Dental Work?, Washington Post, July 19, 2013, and criticize the McDonnell family for their choice of breakfast, Laura Vozella, Mansion Bills May Break the Rules, Washington Post, June 17, 2013.

Following the indictment, the prejudicial coverage markedly intensified, as many Virginia publications unquestioningly accepted the unproven allegations in the indictment as true. On January 22, 2014, the Washington Post published an article titled "Indictment Shows McDonnell as a Man in Denial," speculating that Mr. McDonnell was "brought down" by "a toxic mix of personal money worries, an assertive wife, a taste for luxury, and a culture of coziness between politicians and rich supporters." Robert McCartney, Indictment Shows McDonnell As A Man In Denial, Washington Post, Jan. 22, 2014. On the same date, the Richmond Times-Dispatch published a column that accepted virtually all of the allegations in the indictment as true, further editorializing that the McDonnells engaged in "unseemly" conduct and conjuring an image of a "governor in irons." Jeff E. Schapiro, Va.'s Image Now Like That Of Maryland, Illinois, Richmond Times-Dispatch, Jan. 22, 2014. After spending 18 paragraphs repeating content from the indictment (amplified with judgmental additions such as "ill-gotten," "lavish," and "garish"), this article finally briefly referenced Mr. McDonnell's defense in the penultimate paragraph. Id.

Meanwhile, very few of these articles reported on the key facts that are beneficial to Mr. McDonnell—namely, that a thorough review by outside counsel hired by the Virginia Attorney General's office concluded that (1) Star "received no funds, grants, or contracts" during the McDonnell administration; (2) no Star officer, including Williams, "was appointed to a Commonwealth board or commission during the McDonnell administration"; and (3) neither Star nor Williams "received any direct monetary benefit" from any meeting with cabinet members or their representatives. See Is The First-Family Gift Saga Reshaping Virginia's Image?, Virginia Business, July 26, 2013. Nor do many articles report that Star publicly confirmed that it "neither sought nor received any special benefits from any public official." Olympia Meola, McDonnell: No Special Treatment for Donor, Richmond Times-Dispatch, May 1, 2013.

The chance that this widespread, one-sided, and highly prejudicial coverage has infected potential jurors is high. Given the coverage to date, there is a substantial likelihood that this coverage will continue to be largely negative toward the accused. Given that reality, thorough voir dire—including a well constructed juror questionnaire—is essential to empanelling a fair and impartial jury able to follow the Court's instructions about avoiding media coverage and other outside influences.

C. Mr. McDonnell's political positions are also likely to affect potential jurors.

In addition to the media coverage focusing on the allegations in this case, Mr. McDonnell has been in the public eye for many years as a member of the Virginia House of Delegates, Attorney General, and then Governor. In those roles he has taken positions on a number of controversial issues about which potential members of the jury may have strong opinions. See, e.g., Laura Vozella, As McDonnell Leaves Office, His Hefty Record And Political Future Are Clouded By Scandal, Washington Post, Jan. 9, 2014 (noting that Mr. McDonnell's 2012 support of an abortion bill was criticized by opponents as "state-sponsored rape" and lampooned on Saturday Night Live); Amy Gardner, Va. Candidate McDonnell Says Views Changed Since He Wrote Thesis, Washington Post, Aug. 30, 2009 (reporting on controversy during 2009 gubernatorial campaign regarding Mr. McDonnell's 25 year old master's thesis). Mr. McDonnell's record on even seemingly mundane issues such as transportation policy has engendered strong and divisive opinions. See Editorial: A Cavalier Fiasco, Wall Street Journal, Feb. 26, 2013 (calling Mr. McDonnell's 2013 transportation bill a "fiasco [that] will haunt Republicans"). Nor is there a predictable partisan division to the strong feelings about Mr. McDonnell's record, as he has at times clashed with conservatives as well. See, e.g., James Hohmann, McDonnell Admonishes GOP Over Shutdown, Politico, Sept. 30, 2013. The voir dire process should examine potential jurors' perspectives on these issues, as well as their ability to put aside any political or religious biases when hearing the evidence at trial.

II. THOROUGH VOIR DIRE IS NEEDED TO ENSURE THAT AN IMPARTIAL JURY IS IMPANELED.

As a result of the extensive and prejudicial media coverage focused on this case, in addition to a number of other factors that will be addressed in the joint questionnaire submissions, a particularly thorough voir dire process is needed to protect the McDonnells' right to an unbiased jury. Voir dire "plays an essential role in guaranteeing a criminal defendant's Sixth Amendment right to an impartial jury," in that "it enables the court to select an impartial jury and assists counsel in exercising peremptory challenges." United States v. Lancaster, 96 F.3d 734, 738 (4th Cir. 1996) (internal quotation marks and alterations omitted). The voir dire process must be more searching in cases in which extensive media coverage has likely prejudiced potential jurors against the defendant, and in cases involving highly charged public issues. As noted by Justice Sotomayor: "Under [the Supreme Court's] relevant precedents, the more intense the public's antipathy toward a defendant, the more careful a court must be to prevent that sentiment from tainting the jury." Skilling v. United States, 130 S. Ct. 2896, 2942 (2010) (Sotomayor, J., concurring and dissenting in part). The Fourth Circuit has directed district courts as follows: "In an era of rapid and widespread communications, trial courts must be vigilant to ensure that jurors are not biased and trials are not compromised by media attention surrounding a case. The proper way to impanel such jurors is through a careful voir dire ." United States v. Bakker, 925 F.2d 728, 734 (4th Cir. 1991). See also United States v. Blitch, 622 F.3d 658, 656 (7th Cir. 2010) ("The appropriate procedure when potential juror bias presents itself is a function of the probability of bias; the greater the probability, the more searching the inquiry needed to make reasonably sure that an unbiased jury is impaneled.").

The district court has broad discretion to conduct voir dire in a manner best suited to the needs of the case. United States v. Jeffery, 631 F.3d 669, 673 (4th Cir. 2011) ("Appellate courts accord great deference to the district court's decisions about the conduct of voir dire."). Here, Mr. McDonnell requests specific voir dire procedures that will help ensure that defense counsel can make informed use of both peremptory and cause challenges and offer the best chance of empanelling an impartial jury that will strictly adhere to the Court's instructions about avoiding external influences. Given the extensive negative media coverage about Mr. McDonnell that will only intensify as trial approaches, anything less than extensive voir dire would necessitate either of two unpalatable options: (1) sequestering jurors for the duration of the expected five-week trial, without access to the Internet or smart phones; or (2) changing venue to a district in which media coverage has not been so extensive. Mr. McDonnell's requested voir dire measures are intended to avoid those far-more-burdensome outcomes.

A. A thorough written jury questionnaire is the best, fairest, and most efficient way of screening potential jurors in this case.

All parties request the use of a pre-voir dire written questionnaire, including questions submitted by both the defense and Government. Scheduling Order, ECF No. 55 (Feb. 18, 2014). This questionnaire should be designed to elicit honest responses from potential jurors about a broad range of background information and sensitive topics such as pre-trial publicity, political and religious views, and opinions about the defendants and their counsel. The questionnaire will also solicit responses about prospective jurors' willingness to abide by the Court's instructions regarding external influences, health problems, and ability to sit for five weeks in late summer.

The use of comprehensive pre-voir dire written questionnaires is a "common practice" in the Fourth Circuit. United States v. Rolle, 204 F.3d 133, 135 (4th Cir. 2000). See also United States v. Benyo, No. 1:05-cr-12 (E.D. Va. 2006) (ECF No. 457) (178-question juror questionnaire approved by the Court); Skilling, 130 S. Ct. at 2909 (use of a "77-question, 14-page" questionnaire); In re South Carolina Press Ass'n., 946 F.2d 1037, 1041 (4th Cir. 1991) (use of an "18 page questionnaire containing 66 sections"). Juror questionnaires are also commonly used in cases involving charges of political corruption, as those cases are likely to attract a substantial amount of pre-trial publicity.[6] The Court has already approved a Scheduling Order that requires the parties to submit joint and disputed questions for the proposed jury questionnaire on or before May 30, 2014. Scheduling Order, ECF No. 55 (Feb. 18, 2014).

A thorough jury questionnaire is needed in this case because of the extreme amount of one-sided media coverage and potential that strongly held personal views could influence jurors. Mr. McDonnell's proposed jury questionnaire, which will be submitted on or before May 30, 2014, pursuant to the scheduling order, will ask questions on the following topics:

- Jurors' personal background information;
- Potential hardship of jury service;
- Organizational and religious affiliations, and regular spare time activities;
- Internet and social networking usage;
- Media preferences and exposure;
- Contact and experiences with crime, courts, and the legal system;
- General opinions and beliefs about the criminal justice system;
- Knowledge and opinion of political corruption;
- Knowledge and opinion of media coverage of this case;
- Knowledge and opinion of Mr. McDonnell's political positions;
- Ability to fairly assess allegations;

---

[6] See, e.g., United States v. Jefferson, No. 1:07-cr-209 (E.D. Va. 2009) (ECF No. 421) (approval of 16-page, 40-part questionnaire); United States v. Edwards, No. 1:11-00161 (M.D.N.C. 2012) (ECF No. 262) (approval of 18-page, 84-part questionnaire); United States v. Ford, Cr. No. 3:06-00235 (M.D. Tenn. 2008) (ECF No. 151).

- Ability to obey court instructions;
- Knowledge of defendants, counsel, and potential witnesses.

This thorough review of potential sources of bias is essential in this case for two reasons. First, many potential jurors will have strongly held opinions about Mr. McDonnell's political positions, politicians, and allegations of political corruption generally. This is particularly true since allegations of political corruption by Virginia officials, if they were true, affect all Virginia citizens. The parties must be able to assess these views in order to make informed use of cause and peremptory challenges. Second, thorough questioning is needed to ensure that the selected jurors strictly adhere to the Court's instructions to avoid external influences. Those instructions will be particularly challenging here, given the high profile nature of the case and likelihood that family, friends, and colleagues of potential jurors will want to share their opinions about the allegations and defendants. Only with appropriate questioning can the Court and parties be confident that the selected jurors will be able to resist the temptation to discuss the case, thereby avoiding the potential for an incident that could lead to a mistrial or juror being held in contempt.

To ensure the effectiveness and integrity of the juror questionnaires, Mr. McDonnell requests that prospective jurors complete their answers at the courthouse at least two weeks in advance of trial, rather than at home. This, too, is an accepted practice in this Circuit, particularly in high-profile cases involving public officials, which pose a unique risk that a prospective juror's answers will be influenced by family members, friends, and colleagues. See, e.g., United States v. Jefferson, No. 1:07-cr-209 (E.D. Va. 2009) (ECF No. 421) (ordering prospective jurors to complete 16-page, 40-part questionnaire at courthouse); United States v. Edwards, No. 1:11-cr-00161 (M.D.N.C. 2012) (ECF No. 214) (ordering prospective jurors to complete 18-page, 84-part questionnaire at courthouse). As Judge Sullivan of the District Court for the District of Columbia explained in ordering in-court completion of a 21-page, 66-part juror questionnaire in United States v. Stevens, No. 1:08-cr-00231 (D.D.C. 2008) (ECF No. 7), this procedure provides "certainty about who is providing answers to the questions. There's always that mystique about mailing questionnaires to jurors, who's actually filling out the answers? Is it the summoned juror or is it the summoned juror's sibling or spouse or is it a group project or are people Googling to give answers, to provide answers to questions." Id. at 18. Requiring in-court completion "remove[s] that mystique" and ensures that the Court and parties "know the jurors summoned to court are, indeed, the people who are providing the answers." Id.

Moreover, requiring responses to be filled out at the courthouse will enhance the beneficial effects of the use of a jury questionnaire, including encouraging honest responses through enhanced privacy, reducing the potential influence of others on the answers provided, and reducing "evaluation anxiety," which is known to cause potential jurors to temper their answers when they feel they are being evaluated by others watching. See, e.g., Neil Vidmar, "Case Studies of Pre- and Midtrial Prejudice in Criminal and Civil Litigation," 26 Law and Human Behavior, No. 1 (Feb. 2002).

While it obviously is more convenient for prospective jurors to fill out questionnaires at home and to return them by mail, that process risks contamination of the answers and leaks to the press about trial issues. And if prospective jurors are not willing to come to court to fill out the questionnaire, they are not likely to be willing or able to sit for a trial estimated to last five weeks. Once the questionnaires have been completed, the parties can analyze the responses and recommend cause challenges to the Court. If the Court agrees with the challenges, those potential jurors can be excused without further appearance. Potential jurors who are not struck based on their written answers can then be directed to return to court in appropriately sized groups at designated times starting on July 28, 2014.

B. Individual follow-up questions should be permitted.

After prospective jurors have completed the questionnaire and the parties have had time to review the answers, Mr. McDonnell requests that the Court conduct individual follow-up voir dire to address any issues raised by answers to the questionnaire, new developments, or in-court conduct observed by the parties. Both the Court and attorneys should be permitted to ask follow-up questions during these sessions, and cause challenges should be exercised immediately after the interview.

A brief round of individual questioning for each potential juror, limited to a maximum of five minutes per party, is an efficient, fair, and confidential method by which to address any concerns about a potential juror's impartiality. This is particularly true where one juror's answers about exposure to pre-trial publicity might infect others in the jury pool. See United States v. Hankish, 502 F.2d 71, 77 (4th Cir. 1974) (if the court determines that any juror has been exposed to prejudicial pretrial publicity, that juror "must be examined, individually and outside the presence of the other jurors to determine the effect of the publicity") (quoting Margoles v. United States, 407 F.2d 727, 735 (7th Cir. 1969)); Goins v. Angelone, 52 F. Supp. 2d 638, 669 (E.D. Va. 1999) ("it is generally preferable to question prospective jurors individually where there is any concern that a prospective juror might be significantly influenced by the response of another or where the disabling knowledge of one, gained through pretrial publicity for instance, may infect or disable another"). Moreover, individual follow-up questioning "promotes candor by eliminating pressure to conform and minimizing the possibility of public embarrassment." JURYWORK, § 2.05 (E. Krauss and B. Bonora, eds.). See also Irvin v. Dowd, 366 U.S. 717, 728 (1961) ("No doubt each juror was sincere when he said that he would be fair and impartial to petitioner, but the psychological impact requiring such a declaration before one's fellows is often its father.").

The follow-up question process will be most effective if the attorneys—in addition to the Court—are able to direct questions to potential jurors. See Federal Rule of Criminal Procedure 24(a) ("The court may examine prospective jurors or may permit the attorneys for the parties to do so."). Courts in the Fourth Circuit have endorsed attorney involvement in this process. See, e.g., Rolle, 204 F.3d at 135-36 (following use of questionnaire with individualized voir dire at which the "court and the attorneys closely questioned the jurors to assess their impartiality"); Satcher v. Netherland, 944 F Supp. 1222, 1274 (E.D. Va. 1996) (the "voir dire examination was then turned over to counsel who asked further questions depending upon answers given to the more general, standard inquiries").

Attorney-directed questioning is essential because it is the "the parties, rather than the court, who have a full grasp of the nuances and the strength and weaknesses of the case." United States v. Ible, 630 F.2d 389, 395 (5th Cir. 1980). Permitting counsel a brief opportunity to ask follow-up questions ensures that peremptory challenges are well-informed. See id. ("Peremptory challenges are worthless if trial counsel is not afforded an opportunity to gain the necessary information upon which to base such strikes.") (internal citations omitted). The Fifth Circuit has gone so far as to state that voir dire examination "has little meaning if it is not conducted by counsel for the parties." United States v. Ledee, 549 F.2d 990, 993 (5th Cir. 1977). Studies have even shown that jurors are likely to be more candid in their responses to questions from an attorney than to questions from a judge, given the reduced perception of social distance between juror and attorney. See JURYWORK, § 2.05.

C. The defendants should receive 10 peremptory challenges each, with 6 for the Government.

Because of the exceptional level of negative pretrial publicity and divergent defense strategies involved in this case, Mr. McDonnell requests that each defendant be granted 10 peremptory challenges to be exercised independently, with 6 challenges for the Government.

The Federal Rules set the default in cases in which a defendant is charged with a crime punishable by imprisonment of more than one year as 6 peremptory challenges for the Government and 10 jointly for defendants. Fed. R. Crim. P 24. However, E.D. Va. Local Rule 24 permits additional peremptory challenges in criminal cases involving more than one defendant. See also United States v. Hasan, 747 F Supp. 2d 642, 699 (E.D. Va. 2010) ("While providing additional peremptory challenges may protract jury selection to some degree, it is unlikely to be unduly burdensome In any event, the Court finds it to be an appropriate safeguard to ensure that Defendants are afforded a fair trial."); United States v. Bodkins, 4:04-CR-70083, 2005 BL 24826, at *2 (W.D. Va. Aug. 1, 2005) ("the trial court does have the discretion to grant additional peremptory challenges to multiple defendants and to permit the exercise of these additional challenges either separately or jointly").

Mr. McDonnell has requested, in a Motion to Sever filed today, that he and Mrs. McDonnell be tried separately. It is no secret that the McDonnells' marriage and family—in addition to their individual conduct—will be center-stage at trial. Should the Court deny that motion, the McDonnells may well have divergent goals during jury selection and different strategies at trial, for all of the reasons explained in the memorandum accompanying the Motion to Sever. Accordingly, 10 peremptory challenges shared jointly will not be adequate to ensure fair voir dire. Moreover, fairness dictates that the accused, and not the Government, receive additional strikes. The vast majority of the pre-trial media coverage has been negative toward the McDonnells, a situation that has been fueled in part by leaks from "law enforcement" sources. The Government also made the decision to allege a conspiracy between the McDonnells, despite having no direct evidence that one existed. It was thus the Government's choice that put the McDonnells' marriage at the center of this trial and that might lead to divergent trial strategies for the defendants. Additional peremptory strikes for each defendant are therefore needed to ensure that the accused receive a fair trial.

D. The "struck system" should be used for peremptory challenges.

Mr. McDonnell requests that the Court adopt the struck system for exercising peremptory challenges. Through this system, potential jurors will be questioned and qualified until there are 42 total potential jurors qualified to sit on the jury. That total is equal to the number of actual jurors needed (12), alternate jurors (4), and peremptory challenges to be exercised by all parties (26). After 42 potential jurors have been qualified, a court recess would be declared, during which the parties would decide which qualified jurors they wish to challenge. Following the recess, a list of the qualified jurors' names would be passed back and forth between the parties. Each party (or all three parties, if the trial is not severed) would exercise challenges, one at a time, by crossing out the name of the challenged juror, until the number of people needed for the jury remains on the list or until all parties pass. If all parties pass before using any of their remaining challenges, the jurors remaining on the bottom of the list would be excused.

This system is the most efficient means of empanelling a jury while ensuring that all parties may intelligently exercise their peremptory challenges. See JURYWORK, § 2.09[1] (endorsing the struck system); G. Bermant, Jury Selection Procedures in the United States District Courts (Federal Judicial Center 1982) (same).

E. Potential jurors should be provided with a neutral summary of the case.

To ensure that no further prejudice infects the pool of potential jurors, Mr. McDonnell requests that the indictment not be provided to potential jurors. Rather, the parties should attempt to agree on a neutral summary of the case, to be included as part of the jury questionnaire that will be submitted to the Court on or before May 30, 2014.

F. Jurors should be permitted to take notes during trial.

Mr. McDonnell requests that jurors be permitted to take notes during trial. To that end, Mr. McDonnell's proposed juror questionnaire will ask about potential jurors' note-taking skill. Note taking by jurors is permitted within the Fourth Circuit, and is left to the discretion of the trial court. United States v. Polowichak, 783 F.2d 410, 413 (4th Cir. 1986). If juror note taking is permitted, jurors "should be instructed that their notes are not evidence and should not take precedence over the jurors' independent recollections of the proceedings." Id. See also United States v. Wild, 47 F.3d 669, 672 (4th Cir. 1995); 1-1 Modern Federal Jury Instructions-Criminal P 1.02 (Instruction 1-3) (Suggesting the jury instruction to "be sure that your note-taking does not interfere with your listening to and considering all of the evidence."). In this case, because of the length of trial and many witnesses likely to appear, the ability to take notes will be a beneficial resource for the jury.

G. Alternate jurors should not be informed until deliberation.

Mr. McDonnell requests that alternate jurors not be informed that they are alternates until immediately before the jury retires to deliberate. This will maximize the attention that every potential juror devotes to following the proceedings at trial. See Trial Conduct Order, Edwards, No. 1:11-cr-00161 (M.D.N.C. 2012) (ECF No. 214).

CONCLUSION

In order to avoid the possibility of a mistrial, sequestering jurors for the duration of the trial, or need to change venue, voir dire in this case should be particularly thorough. The best way to accomplish this goal is by means of the following procedures:

1. Use of a written jury questionnaire to be completed by potential jurors at the courthouse at least two weeks in advance of voir dire that includes questions submitted by both the defense and prosecution;
2. Individual follow-up voir dire conducted by both the Court and the attorneys to address any issues raised by the questionnaire responses, new developments, or conduct in court;
3. The exercise of 10 peremptory challenges for each defendant if they are tried jointly, with 6 peremptory challenges to be exercised by the prosecution;
4. Use of the struck system to exercise peremptory challenges;
5. The provision to potential jurors of a neutral summary of the allegations in the case to be submitted along with the proposed jury questionnaire, rather than providing the indictment to potential jurors;
6. Permission for jurors to take notes during trial;
7. Notification to alternate jurors of their status immediately before the jury retires to deliberate.

Mr. McDonnell asks the Court to order these voir dire procedures and requests a hearing on this motion.

Dated: March 25, 2014

Respectfully submitted,

/s/ Jonathan A. Berry
Henry W Asbill (pro hac vice)
Mary Ellen Powers (pro hac vice pending)
Noel J. Francisco (pro hac vice pending)
Owen T. Conroy (pro hac vice)
Jonathan A. Berry (VSB No. 81864)
JONES DAY
51 Louisiana Avenue, N.W
Washington, D.C. 20001
Telephone: (202) 879-3939
Facsimile: (202) 626-1700

John L. Brownlee (VSB No. 37358)
Timothy J. Taylor (VSB No. 84529)
HOLLAND & KNIGHT LLP
800 17th Street, N.W
Suite 1100
Washington, DC 20006
Telephone: (202) 828-1854
Facsimile: (703) 720-8610

Counsel for Robert F McDonnell

CERTIFICATE OF SERVICE

I, Jonathan A. Berry, am a member of the Bar of this Court. I hereby certify that on this 25th day of March, 2014, I caused the foregoing to be electronically filed with the Clerk of Court using the CM/ECF system, causing it to be served on all registered users.

Dated: March 25, 2014

Respectfully submitted,

/s/ Jonathan A. Berry
Jonathan A. Berry (VSB No. 81864)
JONES DAY
51 Louisiana Avenue, N.W
Washington, D.C. 20001
Telephone: (202) 879-3939
Facsimile: (202) 626-1700
Email: jberry@jonesday.com

Counsel for Robert F. McDonnell

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
FOR THE EASTERN DISTRICT OF VIRGINIA
RICHMOND DIVISION

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,	)
	)
v.	)	CRIMINAL NO. 3:14-CR-00012
	)
ROBERT F. MCDONNELL	)	JUDGE JAMES R. SPENCER
MAUREEN G. MCDONNELL	)

MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT OF DEFENDANT ROBERT F. MCDONNELL'S MOTION #11 – MOTION TO SEVER JOINT TRIAL

TABLE OF CONTENTS

INTRODUCTION 1

ARGUMENT 5

I. A Severance Is Warranted Because Trying The McDonnells Together Will Deprive Mr. McDonnell Of His Wife's Highly Exculpatory Testimony Because She Will Not Take The Stand In A Joint Trial 6

  A. The Government Cannot Prosecute Defendants In A Joint Trial When It Would Deprive One Defendant Of His Co-Defendant's Exculpatory Testimony 6

  B. Mrs. McDonell Could Provide Testimony That Exculpates Mr. McDonnell 7

  C. Mr. McDonnell's Need For His Wife's Exculpatory Testimony Justifies Severance 9

II. A Severance Is Warranted Because Trying The McDonnells Together Would Deprive Mr. McDonnell Of Exculpatory Evidence That Is Subject To The Marital Communications Privilege 16

  A. Severance Is Required When A Joint Trial Would Deprive One Defendant Of Exculpatory Testimony Due To A Co-Defendant's Privilege 16

  B. A Joint Trial Would Deprive Mr. McDonnell Of Exculpatory Testimony That Is Protected By The Marital Communications Privilege 18

    1. The Relevant Marital Communications Are Exculpatory 19

    2. Mrs. McDonnell Will Likely Invoke Her Privilege To Prevent Mr. McDonnell From Disclosing Confidential Marital Communications In His Defense 21

CONCLUSION 23

TABLE OF AUTHORITIES

Page

CASES

Ashcroft v. Iqbal,
556 U.S. 662 (2009) 13

Bell Atl. Corp. v. Twombly,
550 U.S. 544 (2007) 13

Bruton v. United States,
391 U.S. 123 (1968) 14

Faretta v. California,
422 U.S. 806 (1975) 17

Peek v. United States,
321 F.2d 934 (9th Cir. 1963) 18

Rock v. Arkansas,
483 U.S. 44 (1987) 17

United States v. Allen,
491 F.3d 178 (4th Cir. 2007) 6

United States v. Ammar,
714 F.2d 238 (3d Cir. 1983) 3, 18

United States v. Becker,
585 F.2d 703 (4th Cir. 1978) 9

United States v. Blevins,
960 F.2d 1252 (4th Cir. 1992) 13

United States v. Carona,
No. SA-CR-06-224-AG, 2008 WL 1970221 (C.D. Cal. May 2, 2008) 3, 5, 18, 22

United States v. Hall,
989 F.2d 711 (4th Cir. 1993) 17, 22

United States v. Martinez,
486 F.2d 15 (5th Cir. 1973) 6

United States v. McClain,
934 F.2d 822 (7th Cir. 1991) 13

United States v. Medford,
661 F.3d 746 (4th Cir. 2011) 7

United States v. Morrow,
537 F.2d 120 (5th Cir. 1976) 9, 10

United States v. Neal,
78 F.3d 901 (4th Cir. 1996) 13

United States v. Nixon,
418 U.S. 683 (1974) 16

United States v. Parker,
834 F.2d 408 (4th Cir. 1987) 17, 22

United States v. Parodi,
703 F.2d 768 (4th Cir. 1983) .... passim

United States v. Reavis,
48 F.3d 763 (4th Cir. 1995) 5

United States v. Shuford,
454 F.2d 772 (4th Cir. 1971) .... passim

United States v. Thoresen,
281 F. Supp. 598 (N.D. Cal. 1967) 3, 4, 18

United States v. Vigil,
561 F.2d 1316 (9th Cir. 1977) 6

Zafiro v. United States,
506 U.S. 534 (1993) 5, 6, 16

RULES

FED. R. CRIM. P 14(a) 5

FED. R. EVID. 801(d)(2)(E) 13

INTRODUCTION

Ensuring that criminal trials uncover the truth on the basis of all admissible evidence is fundamental to our legal system and constitutional order. That bedrock commitment to truth and justice underlies the established legal rule that, "if a 'substantial degree of prejudice' springs from a joint trial, a severance is mandated." United States v. Shuford, 454 F.2d 772, 776 (4th Cir. 1971) (citation omitted). Here, the Government has charged Mr. McDonnell and his wife with supposedly acting in concert to take advantage of Mr. McDonnell's public office—for the benefit of themselves and their five adult children and other family members—which Mr. McDonnell vehemently denies. In essence, the Government has chosen to put a 38-year marriage and the entire McDonnell family, in addition to the conduct of the accused, on trial. Permitting the Government to prosecute this married couple together—as it currently seeks to do—will severely constrain Mr. McDonnell's ability to introduce relevant, admissible, and exculpatory evidence at trial. That is so because Mrs. McDonnell does not intend to testify in her own defense and will assert her Fifth Amendment privilege if her husband calls her as a witness. She will also invoke her marital communications privilege in a joint trial if Mr. McDonnell takes the stand in his own defense and attempts to testify about confidential conversations he had with Mrs. McDonnell. Because this will cause Mr. McDonnell severe prejudice and will directly undermine the truth-seeking function of his trial, severance is warranted.

First, trying the McDonnells together will deprive Mr. McDonnell of the ability to call his wife as a witness and to introduce highly relevant and exculpatory testimony that only she can provide. The Government's central allegation is that the McDonnells conspired to obtain things of value from Jonnie Williams in exchange for performing "official acts" for the benefit of Williams and his company Star Scientific, Inc. ("Star"). Given that many of the incriminating allegations in the Indictment concerning both the alleged quid and quo are directed at Mrs. McDonnell, she is obviously the essential link in the Government's case against Mr. McDonnell. If she is not on trial, however, she will testify that her relationship with Mr. McDonnell was strained for a number of reasons, including Mr. McDonnell's demanding work and travel schedule, and that, far from acting in concert, they had no such agreement and he had no timely knowledge of many of her interactions with Williams. Declaration #1 of William A. Burck ("Burck Decl.") at ¶¶ 5-6 (see Mr. McDonnell's Motion for Leave to File Supporting Declarations under Seal and for Ex Parte In Camera Review). Mrs. McDonnell is the only person who can provide this critical information, but because she is charged with the same corruption offenses as Mr. McDonnell, in addition to obstruction of justice, she has made clear that she presently does not intend to take the stand in a proceeding where she is also on trial. See id. ¶¶ 3, 27 If Mr. McDonnell is tried alone, by contrast, then his wife would be willing to testify in his defense. See id. at ¶ 4.

Mr. McDonnell is entitled to have the option of calling his wife as a witness in his defense, and the Government should not be able to take that option away by insisting on a joint trial. As the Fourth Circuit has long held, "a severance is obligatory where one defendant's case rests heavily on the exculpatory testimony of his co-defendant, willing to give such testimony but for the fear that by taking the stand in the joint trial he would jeopardize his own defense." Shuford, 454 F.2d at 776. This is that case.

Second, trying the McDonnells together will also limit Mr. McDonnell's ability to address compelling exculpatory evidence that is subject to the marital communications privilege. At trial, Mr. McDonnell expects to offer exculpatory evidence that stems from privileged marital communications between him and his wife. Mr. McDonnell should be able to offer this evidence without concern that Mrs. McDonnell will seek to preclude portions of it on grounds of privilege, which she presently intends to do. See Burck Decl. ¶ 3. Trying the McDonnells separately avoids this problem, since there would be no prejudice to Mrs. McDonnell from allowing Mr. McDonnell to reveal the privileged communications in a severed trial to which she is not a party. Because any invocation of the marital communications privilege in a joint trial would prevent Mr. McDonnell from presenting exculpatory evidence in his defense, severance is imperative on this basis too. See United States v. Ammar, 714 F.2d 238, 257 (3d Cir. 1983) (explaining that "[t]estimony essential to a spouse's criminal defense must be permitted even if it discloses privileged communications" and that "[a] severance may be granted for a co-defendant spouse, if necessary to protect his or her rights"); United States v. Carona, No. SA-CR-06-224-AG, 2008 WL 1970221, at *4 (C.D. Cal. May 2, 2008) (granting severance "on the basis of the marital communications privilege").

For both of these reasons, Mr. McDonnell cannot receive a fair trial—and the jury cannot hear a complete presentation of highly material evidence—if the Government prosecutes the McDonnells together. In these circumstances, the perceived need for efficiency must yield to fairness and the paramount, systemic interest in a complete presentation of admissible and relevant evidence. The Court should therefore sever the McDonnells for separate trials.

Moreover, the defense requests that the Court sever the accused now, not mid-trial. Waiting until then to do what the law permits the Court to do now would only exacerbate the prejudice to Mr. McDonnell of a joint trial. He should not have to face the possibility of changing his entire trial strategy midstream. As one court put it, "the wait and see alternative offers little consolation to a party while he is attempting to prepare his defense." United States v.

Thoresen, 281 F Supp. 598, 602 (N.D. Cal. 1967). If a severance is not granted now, the defense must prepare as if the McDonnells will be tried together. This has enormous implications in terms of the themes the defense decides to emphasize, the voir dire strategy, the in limine and in trial evidentiary arguments the defense makes to the Court, opening statements and closing argument, the manner and scope of cross-examination of the Government's witnesses, and the choice of defense witnesses and topics of direct examination. If the Court defers ruling on severance, the defense will be put to the unfair choice of sticking with its joint trial strategy or changing its trial strategy on the fly, which is unduly burdensome and puts the defense at risk of appearing inconsistent to the jury.

Not only would a wait-and-see approach prejudice Mr. McDonnell, it would be less efficient and would make management of the trial more difficult in a variety of ways. A mid-trial severance and resulting mistrial of Mrs. McDonnell would raise potential double jeopardy issues, and depending on the evidence presented, it may even require a mistrial finding for Mr. McDonnell. If Mrs. McDonnell is severed during the trial, moreover, the jurors will surely notice, and this could have a profound effect on their thinking and deliberations about the case, regardless of whatever instructions pertaining to the severance the Court might give them. The uncertain effect of a mid-trial severance and the chance that it could adversely impact the outcome of the trial counsel in favor of severing the joint trial before it begins. To "avoid the trial difficulties and prejudices" that a joint trial in this case will engender, see id., the Court should grant a severance now rather than later.

The defense respectfully requests a hearing on this motion. In addition, the defense requests that the Court grant Mr. McDonnell's accompanying motion for ex parte in camera review of the supporting Declarations (which are cited throughout) so that the defense can avoid needlessly disclosing confidential trial strategy to the Government. See Carona, 2008 WL 1970221, at *1 (explaining that the moving defendant "is not required to disclose [the supporting] declarations to the Government, as disclosure would unduly risk prejudicing Defendants by revealing elements of their trial strategy").

ARGUMENT

It is generally true that "[j]oint trials are favored in those cases in which defendants have been indicted together for the sake of judicial economy." United States v. Reavis, 48 F.3d 763, 767 (4th Cir. 1995). But mere efficiency, even if it were certain, is an "inappropriate" basis for trying defendants together if doing so would "sacrifice[] a defendant's right to a fundamentally fair trial." Shuford, 454 F.2d at 776. Severance is required whenever a defendant can "establish that actual prejudice would result from a joint trial." Reavis, 48 F.3d at 767; see also Shuford, 454 F.2d at 776 ("[I]f a 'substantial degree of prejudice' springs from a joint trial, a severance is mandated."). The Federal Rules expressly codify this principle, authorizing courts to "sever the defendants' trials" if a joint trial "appears to prejudice a defendant." FED. R. CRIM. P. 14(a). As the Supreme Court has explained, Rule 14 requires severance when "there is a serious risk that a joint trial would compromise a specific trial right of one of the defendants, or prevent the jury from making a reliable judgment about guilt or innocence." Zafiro v. United States, 506 U.S. 534, 539 (1993).

Here, there is no serious question that Mrs. McDonnell's actions, and the communications (or lack thereof) she had with her husband about those actions, go to the heart of the Government's allegations. The vast majority of the allegations set forth in the Indictment involve Mrs. McDonnell's supposed conduct, her purported communications with Jonnie Williams, and her husband's supposed knowledge of her alleged agreements with Williams. See infra at 11-12. For many of the allegations concerning her interactions with Williams, which are either false or misleading, she is the only defense witness who could possibly give competent evidence. Mrs. McDonnell's testimony is thus central in refuting the Government's core false claim—that the McDonnells conspired to solicit gifts and loans from Williams in exchange for Mr. McDonnell performing official acts for the benefit of Williams and Star. Absent severance, Mr. McDonnell will be unable to elicit this critical, exculpatory evidence at a joint trial. For that reason, a severance is essential to protect Mr. McDonnell's right to a fair trial and the jury's right to hear all competent, available evidence before rendering a verdict.

I. A Severance Is Warranted Because Trying The McDonnells Together Will Deprive Mr. McDonnell Of His Wife's Highly Exculpatory Testimony Because She Will Not Take The Stand In A Joint Trial.

A. The Government Cannot Prosecute Defendants In A Joint Trial When It Would Deprive One Defendant Of His Co-Defendant's Exculpatory Testimony.

The Fourth Circuit and the Supreme Court have consistently recognized that "a defendant may be prejudiced"—such that severance may be warranted—"if he could not avail himself of exculpatory evidence in a joint trial that would be available were he tried alone." United States v. Allen, 491 F.3d 178, 189 (4th Cir. 2007); see also Zafiro, 506 U.S. at 539 ("[A] defendant might suffer prejudice if essential exculpatory evidence that would be available to a defendant tried alone were unavailable in a joint trial."). It is well established that "a severance is obligatory where one defendant's case rests heavily on the exculpatory testimony of his co-defendant, willing to give such testimony but for the fear that by taking the stand in the joint trial he would jeopardize his own defense." Shuford, 454 F.2d at 776; see also United States v. Vigil, 561 F.2d 1316, 1318 (9th Cir. 1977) (holding that the district court "abused its discretion in refusing to sever the trials upon the reliable representation that [the co-defendant] would testify for [the defendant] if the trials were severed"); United States v. Martinez, 486 F.2d 15, 23 (5th Cir. 1973) (holding that failure to grant severance was prejudicial because the co-defendant "was the only individual other than [the defendant] himself in a position directly to rebut the government's circumstantial evidence of [the defendant's] knowledge of these facts").

Obtaining a severance based "on the asserted need for a co-defendant's testimony," United States v. Parodi, 703 F.2d 768, 779 (4th Cir. 1983), requires that the moving defendant demonstrate: (1) "a bona fide need for the testimony of his co-defendant," (2) "the likelihood that the co-defendant would testify at a second trial and waive his Fifth Amendment privilege," (3) "the substance of his co-defendant's testimony," and (4) "the exculpatory nature and effect of such testimony." United States v. Medford, 661 F.3d 746, 753 (4th Cir. 2011) (citing Parodi, 703 F.2d at 779). Once an accused satisfies these threshold requirements, the Court then considers (1) "the significance of the testimony in relation to the defendant's theory of defense," (2) "the extent of prejudice caused by the absence of the testimony," (3) "judicial administration and economy," (4) "the timeliness of the motion," and (5) "the likelihood that the co-defendant's testimony could be impeached." Parodi, 703 F.2d at 779. Mr. McDonnell satisfies this test. He is therefore entitled to a severance.

B. Mrs. McDonnell Could Provide Testimony That Exculpates Mr. McDonnell.

It is clear from the allegations in the Indictment that most of the Government's case is based on Mrs. McDonnell's alleged conduct. Indeed, very few of the Government's accusations are actually directed at Mr. McDonnell. The Government cannot hope to prove its weak case against Mr. McDonnell unless it can attribute the actions and knowledge of Mrs. McDonnell to her husband. To overcome this problem, the Government alleges in conclusory terms the existence of a conspiracy between the McDonnells. See Indictment ¶¶ 22, 110. But it provides no specific allegation of an agreement between them. Instead, the Government appears to be inferring a conspiracy solely by virtue of their marriage. Given the nature of the Government's allegations, the trial will require examining the McDonnells' 38-year marriage, which cannot be done in a full and complete way without Mrs. McDonnell's testimony. By alleging this amorphous conspiracy—rather than simply charging Mr. McDonnell alone—the Government seeks to unfairly attribute the actions of Mrs. McDonnell, a private citizen, to Mr. McDonnell, a public official. See infra at 11-12. Since Mrs. McDonnell is the key figure in the Government's narrative, and since she frequently met with or communicated with Williams alone, she is uniquely equipped to repudiate the Government's false account by refuting, allegation by allegation, the Government's heavily circumstantial and inferential case. Her testimony would, in turn, clearly exonerate her husband.

As set forth in substantial detail in her attorney's Declaration, Mrs. McDonnell's testimony would exculpate Mr. McDonnell in at least four ways. First, her testimony would disprove the Government's primary claim that the McDonnells acted in concert through a criminal conspiracy to corruptly accept gifts and loans in exchange for Mr. McDonnell using his office to benefit Williams and his company. See Burck Decl. ¶¶ 5-6, 7, 8, 9, 11-14, 15, 17, 19, 21, 22, 23, 24. Second, her testimony would refute the Government's allegation that Mr. McDonnell agreed or promised to use his office to improperly "promote" Star's products or to "obtain research studies for Star Scientific's products," Indictment ¶¶ 22, 110. See Burck Decl. ¶¶ 16, 18, 19, 20, 24. Third, Mrs. McDonnell would refute the Government's allegation that she solicited certain gifts and loans identified in the Indictment. See id. ¶¶ 9, 22, 25-26. Finally, Mrs. McDonnell would refute the Government's allegation that the McDonnells "took steps to conceal" their supposed scheme, Indictment ¶ 22. See Burck Decl. ¶¶ 10-14.

C. Mr. McDonnell's Need For His Wife's Exculpatory Testimony Justifies Severance.

Because Mrs. McDonnell possesses clearly exculpatory evidence, Mr. McDonnell should have the option of calling her to testify on his behalf.

1. Mr. McDonnell easily satisfies the four threshold requirements for severance based on "the asserted need for a co-defendant's testimony." Parodi, 703 F.2d at 779. First, "the exculpatory nature and effect of [Mrs. McDonnell's] testimony" is clear. See id. Mrs. McDonnell's testimony would refute the Government's central claim that the McDonnells conspired together to take gifts and loans from Williams in exchange for Mr. McDonnell performing official action on behalf of Williams and Star. Her testimony, as described in substantial detail in her attorney's Declaration, is far "more than a 'vague and conclusory' statement of facts 'of purely cumulative or negligible weight or probative value.'" Id. at 780 (citation omitted). Given the centrality of Mrs. McDonnell's role in the Government's case as set forth in the Indictment, her testimony has clear importance and substantial exculpatory significance. If Mr. McDonnell is denied the ability to introduce this exculpatory testimony—the direct effect of a joint trial—that plainly would make him "unable to obtain a fair trial." Id. (quotation marks and citation omitted).

Second, the accompanying proffer from Mrs. McDonnell's counsel amply illustrates "the substance of [Mrs. McDonnell's] testimony." See id. at 779; see also United States v. Becker, 585 F.2d 703, 706 (4th Cir. 1978) ("Ordinarily a codefendant need not proffer his testimony under oath to establish a basis for granting a motion for severance."); United States v. Morrow, 537 F.2d 120, 135 n.9 (5th Cir. 1976) (explaining that the "movant must make a clear showing of what his co-defendant would testify to in the later trial, though it is not required that movant present an affidavit under oath from his co-defendant"). It is "sufficiently definite" to demonstrate the exculpatory nature and effect of that testimony. See Parodi, 703 F.2d at 779-80.

Third, Mr. McDonnell has a "bona fide need" for Mrs. McDonnell's testimony because she is the only person who can offer the exculpatory evidence detailed in her attorney's Declaration. See id. at 779. Other than Williams himself, an immunized witness whose credibility will be called into question, only Mrs. McDonnell knows what was said in their private conversations. And only she can directly corroborate Mr. McDonnell's likely testimony about private conversations and interactions between husband and wife. She is therefore uniquely capable of disproving the Government's assertion that there was some sort of conspiracy involving, inter alia, her, her husband, and Williams.[1]

Finally, Mrs. McDonnell is unwilling to testify in a joint trial, but it is "like[ly] that [she] would testify at [Mr. McDonnell's] trial and waive [her] Fifth Amendment privilege" if he is tried alone, thus satisfying the fourth Parodi factor. See id. Mrs. McDonnell's agreement to waive her Fifth Amendment rights and testify at a severed trial need not be established to "an absolute certainty." Shuford, 454 F.2d at 778. Rather, it is enough to show a "reasonable probability that the proffered testimony would, in fact, materialize." Id.; see also Morrow, 537 F.2d at 135 n.9 ("Movant also need only demonstrate a 'likelihood' of future testimony by his co-defendant, and movant's attorney need not testify under oath or by affidavit that he will call the co-defendant as a witness in a separate trial."). And here, Mrs. McDonnell, through counsel, see Burck Decl. ¶¶ 3-4, 28, has clearly "indicated" to the Court that she would likely testify in a severed trial but not in a joint trial. Id.; see also Parodi, 703 F.2d at 779 n.8.

---

[1] The Court denied Mr. McDonnell's motion for disclosure of the identities of known unindicted co-conspirators, and discovery provided by the Government to date has not enabled the defense to determine the identities of such persons.

Moreover, Mrs. McDonnell has indicated her likely willingness to testify in a severed trial regardless of the order in which the severed defendants are tried. See Burck Decl. ¶ 28. Cf. Parodi, 703 F.2d at 779 ("[T]he requirement of a showing of willingness to testify if there is a severance is not met when that offer to testify is further conditioned on the co-defendant's case being tried first.").

2. Because Mr. McDonnell has established the threshold requirements for severance, this Court must weigh the remaining considerations specified in Parodi. See Parodi, 703 F.2d at 779. These additional factors, too, weigh decisively for trying the McDonnells separately.

To begin with, it is undeniable that Mrs. McDonnell's testimony would be significant "in relation to the defendant's theory of defense." Id. Mr. McDonnell contends he never agreed to accept gifts or loans from Williams with the understanding or promise that he would use his office to perform official actions for Williams or Star. Mrs. McDonnell's testimony would fully corroborate that. See Burck Decl. ¶¶ 16, 18, 19, 20, 24. Mr. McDonnell's defense would further make clear that he and his wife did not conspire to commit any crime and that he was unaware about many of his wife's interactions with Williams. Mrs. McDonnell's testimony would support this defense as well. See id. ¶¶ 5-6, 7, 8, 9, 11-14, 15, 17, 19, 21, 22, 23, 24. Accordingly, Mrs. McDonnell's testimony is significant "in relation to [Mr. McDonnell's] theory of defense." Parodi, 703 F.2d at 779.

Secondly, there is no question that depriving Mr. McDonnell of his wife's testimony will cause him substantial "prejudice." Id. As discussed, Mrs. McDonnell is key to the Government's allegations against Mr. McDonnell concerning both the alleged quid and the alleged, albeit legally insufficient, quo. The Indictment casts her as the central character in its narrative. The Government alleges, for instance, that Mrs. McDonnell asked Williams to take her shopping in New York, see Indictment ¶ 23; promised to seat Williams next to Mr. McDonnell at an event, see id. ¶ 24; asked Williams for a $50,000 personal loan and for $15,000 to pay for catering for her daughter's wedding, see id. ¶¶ 26-27; told Williams that "she could help Star Scientific but that she needed [his] financial assistance," see id. ¶ 26; bought, sold, and repurchased Star stock, see id. ¶¶ 39, 53, 61, 67, 71, 96-97; attended and spoke at several Star events, see id. ¶¶ 40, 62-63; was a conduit for correspondence from Williams and for information about Star, see id. ¶¶ 41, 54, 64; asked Williams for the Rolex watch she gave to Mr. McDonnell at Christmas, see id. ¶¶ 50, 68; offered and then hosted a lunch at the Mansion for university researchers, see id ¶¶ 40, 51, 58, 60; coordinated with Williams on invitation lists for Mansion events, see id. ¶¶ 60, 74; asked an OGV staff member to follow up with Williams about "why nothing has developed w [sic] studies after [Williams] gave $200,000" to UVA and VCU, see id. ¶¶ 76-78; asked Williams to pay for roundtrip airline tickets for two of her daughters, see id. ¶ 99; and invited Williams to stay at the McDonnells' beach house, see id. ¶ 100. Given her omnipresence throughout the Indictment, Mrs. McDonnell's testimony is obviously essential to refuting the Government's factual theory and corroborating Mr. McDonnell's defense.

Not only would a joint trial prejudice Mr. McDonnell by depriving him of his wife's highly relevant and exculpatory testimony, it would also allow the Government to take unfair advantage of evidentiary rules to introduce statements by Mrs. McDonnell that could incriminate Mr. McDonnell without giving him an opportunity to examine her on those statements. The most obvious example is Mrs. McDonnell's alleged email to Mr. McDonnell's counsel that the "Gov wants to know why nothing has developed w studies after [Williams] gave $200,000" and that the "Gov wants to get this going w VCU MCV." Indictment ¶ 78. In a joint trial, these hearsay statements could be used against Mrs. McDonnell, but not against Mr. McDonnell unless the Government can establish by a preponderance of the evidence that there was a conspiracy involving the McDonnells and that "the statements at issue were made during the course of and in furtherance of that conspiracy." See United States v. Neal, 78 F.3d 901, 905 (4th Cir. 1996) (setting forth the standard for admissibility of co-conspirator statements under Federal Rule of Evidence 801(d)(2)(E)). Moreover, "a trial court [could] conditionally admit [these] co-conspirators' statements subject to the subsequent satisfaction of the requirements for their admission." United States v. Blevins, 960 F.2d 1252, 1256 (4th Cir. 1992) (emphasis added). If the Government subsequently failed to make its showing (a likely possibility[2]) or elected only to use the statements against Mrs. McDonnell, the jury (assuming no mistrial) will have been exposed nevertheless to evidence that it could use against Mr. McDonnell without affording him an opportunity to test the truth of the statements.

---

[2] The Government will have great difficulty establishing by a preponderance of the evidence that the McDonnells were engaged in the alleged conspiracy. The Government does not allege any direct evidence of a conspiratorial agreement, so the best it can do is infer a conspiracy from the McDonnells' marital relationship or ambiguous conduct. But their conduct, as alleged by the Government, is not obviously criminal, and conspiracy cannot be inferred from ambiguous conduct that is consistent with both lawful and unlawful action. See Bell Atl. Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 553-54 (2007) (holding that proof of a conspiracy "must include evidence tending to exclude the possibility of [innocent] action"); Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 556 U.S. 662, 679 (2009) (holding that inferences of illegal intent may not be drawn from ambiguous conduct that is consistent with both lawful and unlawful intent and, therefore, that suggests only the "mere possibility of misconduct"). Mrs. McDonnell, for one, is a private individual, not a public official, and cannot be held criminally liable in her own right for public corruption unless she "masquerad[es] as a public official," which is not alleged here, or "act[s] in coordination with public officers." See United States v. McClain, 934 F.2d 822, 830 (7th Cir. 1991). Given the Government's allegations, the only way it can prove that Mrs. McDonnell is guilty of a corruption-related offense is if it can show that she coordinated with Mr. McDonnell, who in turn performed illegal acts. But the Indictment does not allege that Mr. McDonnell personally promised, performed, or sought to influence any legally cognizable "official act." See Def.'s Mem. in Supp. of Mot. #10—Mot. to Dismiss Counts 1-11 of the Indictment (March 25, 2014). Given these facts, the Government cannot then simply infer that the McDonnells nevertheless conspired to corrupt Mr. McDonnell's office.

Limiting instructions would not unring this prejudicial bell. As the Supreme Court has warned, a jury cannot be expected to follow limiting instructions—and "the consequences of failure [are] so vital to the defendant"—"where the powerfully incriminating extrajudicial statements of a codefendant, who stands accused side-by-side with the defendant, are deliberately spread before the jury in a joint trial." Bruton v. United States, 391 U.S. 123, 135-36 (1968). The only way to cure this prejudice is to sever the trial and to allow Mrs. McDonnell to testify in Mr. McDonnell's trial at his option. The Government should not be permitted to deprive Mr. McDonnell of his wife's exculpatory testimony while at the same time introducing statements by his wife that incriminate him without giving him an opportunity to examine her.

Further, because Mr. McDonnell would suffer extreme prejudice if he is unable to obtain Mrs. McDonnell's exculpatory testimony, less weight should be given to considerations of "judicial administration and economy." See Parodi, 703 F.2d at 780 (stating that the weight that should be given to judicial economy "varies with the strength of the moving defendant's presentation and the type of case"). Moreover, a court should consider judicial economy as a "'possible counter-weight[] to the benefits accruing to the moving defendant from severance in the particular circumstances'" only where "'severance would necessitate a great number of otherwise unnecessary trials or the duplication of an unusually complex trial.'" Id. (quoting Shuford, 454 F.2d at 777 n.5). Here, however, there are only two defendants, such that severance means only a maximum of two trials rather than one. Indeed, aside from the vagueness of the allegations and the unprecedented expansion of federal law that is the focus of the defense's motion to dismiss, the complexity of the trial of this case is in large measure a function of the complexity of the McDonnells' marital relationship. And, each case—even if both are tried sequentially—will be much less complex if the McDonnells are separated.

Therefore, whatever duplication of effort may result from a severance cannot outweigh the substantial prejudice to Mr. McDonnell's defense (and the ability of his trial to uncover the truth) if Mr. McDonnell is unable to secure the exculpatory testimony of Mrs. McDonnell.

Additionally, this motion is timely. See id. at 779. The defense is asking to sever this trial four months before the trial date and just two months after the Indictment. There will be little disruption to the proceedings if the Court is able promptly to address this request. Both the Government and the Court should also have sufficient time to accommodate the severed trials since the separate trials are likely to take less combined time to resolve than the joined one.

Finally, "the likelihood that the co-defendant's testimony could be impeached" also favors severance. See id. To the extent that Mrs. McDonnell's testimony relates to private conversations she had with Williams, her testimony is no more susceptible to impeachment than his as both have substantial interests in the outcome. At bottom, some of the facts in this case will turn on witness credibility. Here, the Government appears to have leveraged threats of prosecution for bribery, securities fraud, and tax fraud against Williams to convince him to admit to having committed crimes for which he now has immunity. The credibility of his assertions will therefore be at the heart of the trial. "In a situation where the elusive quality of credibility is of such importance, the jury should have the benefit of all relevant testimony likely to shed light on the situation." Shuford, 454 F.2d at 777. For this reason, too, the trial should be severed so that the jury can have the benefit of Mrs. McDonnell's testimony.

This case is, indeed, much like Shuford, where the Fourth Circuit reversed a district court's denial of a motion to sever. Id. at 779. In simplest form, that case involved a credibility dispute between the defendant and an unindicted co-conspirator. If the jury credited the unindicted co-conspirator, then it could find the defendant guilty. See id. at 777. But if the jury believed the defendant, then it should find him innocent. Id. "Plainly, the guilt or innocence of [the defendant] hinged, in large measure, on the outcome of this credibility dispute." Id. There was only one other witness with direct knowledge of the factual dispute, but that witness—a co-defendant—would not testify absent a severance. Id. The district court nonetheless denied the severance. On appeal, however, the Fourth Circuit reversed, holding "that the denial of the severance, resulting in withholding this witness' testimony on such a critical point, so tipped the scales against [the defendant] that he failed to receive a fair trial." Id. The court of appeals concluded that a "verdict based so heavily on less than the full available testimony, where the missing testimony could, with relative ease, have been procured, should not stand." Id.

Here, as in Shuford, denying Mr. McDonnell's motion to sever would deprive him of the ability to introduce critical, exculpatory testimony that could markedly help the jury resolve a credibility dispute between Mr. McDonnell and Williams. As explained above, all of the relevant factors weigh in favor of severance. Because Mrs. McDonnell's testimony will take on "unusual importance" for Mr. McDonnell's defense and her testimony can "become available only by severance," the severance should be granted. See id. at 779.

II. A Severance Is Warranted Because Trying The McDonnells Together Would Deprive Mr. McDonnell Of Exculpatory Evidence That Is Subject To The Marital Communications Privilege.

A. Severance Is Required When A Joint Trial Would Deprive One Defendant Of Exculpatory Testimony Due To A Co-Defendant's Privilege.

Severance is required anytime "there is a serious risk that a joint trial would compromise a specific trial right of one of the defend " Zafiro, 506 U.S. at 539. Two fundamental rights are at stake here—the right to the production of evidence and the right of criminal defendants to testify in their own defense. The Supreme Court has made clear that "[t]he right to the production of all evidence at a criminal trial has constitutional dimensions." United States v.

Nixon, 418 U.S. 683, 711 (1974). To ensure the fulfillment of the Fifth Amendment right to due process and the Sixth Amendment right to a fair trial, "it is essential that all relevant and admissible evidence be produced." Id. The right to testify on one's own behalf also has constitutional dimensions. The Supreme Court has held that it is "'essential to due process of law in a fair adversary process'" for the accused to take the stand in his own defense if he so chooses. Rock v. Arkansas, 483 U.S. 44, 51 (1987) (quoting Faretta v. California, 422 U.S. 806, 819 n.15 (1975)). Given these two well-established rights, if severance is warranted when a joint trial prevents a defendant from obtaining exculpatory testimony from a co-defendant, it surely follows that severance should also be granted when a co-defendant's privilege prevents the defendant from presenting exculpatory testimony in his own defense.

Here, the marital communications privilege—which Mrs. McDonnell intends to invoke in a joint trial, see Burck Decl. ¶ 3—would prevent Mr. McDonnell from testifying about highly exculpatory conversations he had with his wife. See Joint Declaration #1 of John L. Brownlee and Henry W. Asbill ("Brownlee/Asbill Decl.") (see Mr. McDonnell's Motion for Leave to File Supporting Declarations under Seal and for Ex Parte In Camera Review). This privilege protects against the disclosure of confidential communications between spouses that occur during their marriage. See United States v. Parker, 834 F.2d 408, 411 (4th Cir. 1987) ("Information that is privately disclosed between husband and wife in the confidence of the marital relationship is privileged."). Both spouses hold the privilege. United States v. Hall, 989 F.2d 711, 716 n.8 (4th Cir. 1993). Thus, if one spouse invokes it, the other spouse is barred from disclosing the privileged communications.

Severance is required where—as here—one spouse seeks to disclose exculpatory marital communications, but the other invokes the privilege. As one court has explained, "[t]estimony essential to a spouse's criminal defense must be permitted even if it discloses privileged communications." Ammar, 714 F.2d at 257. Therefore, to protect the rights of both spouses—i.e., the right of one accused spouse to present exculpatory testimony and the right of the other accused spouse to invoke the privilege—severance should be granted. Id.; see also Carona, 2008 WL 1970221, at *2, *4 (granting severance where one spouse wanted to offer exculpatory testimony in her own defense but the other spouse invoked the marital communications privilege); Peek v. United States, 321 F.2d 934, 942 (9th Cir. 1963) (suggesting that severance would be necessary where the Government sought to introduce prejudicial statements against a spouse in violation of the marital communications privilege); Thoresen, 281 F. Supp. at 601 ("In a joint trial the probability of a conflict between the right of a defendant to testify in his own behalf and the right of the respective spouses to exercise their marital privileges is likely and real, and should be avoided, if possible.").

B. A Joint Trial Would Deprive Mr. McDonnell Of Exculpatory Testimony That Is Protected By The Marital Communications Privilege.

Mr. McDonnell is likely to waive his Fifth Amendment rights, take the stand in his own defense, and offer highly exculpatory testimony at trial that is protected by the marital communications privilege. See Brownlee/Asbill Decl. ¶ 4. If the McDonnells are tried together, however, Mrs. McDonnell intends to assert her privilege against the disclosure of those communications, as the Declaration of her counsel confirms. See Burck Decl. ¶ 3. This, of course, will prevent Mr. McDonnell from presenting crucial, exculpatory evidence to the jury. To ensure that Mr. McDonnell can testify fully in his defense while at the same time protecting Mrs. McDonnell's marital communications privilege, the Court should grant a severance.

1. The Relevant Marital Communications Are Exculpatory.

Mr. McDonnell intends to introduce testimony about several marital communications that are clearly exculpatory. The communications are described in detail in the Declaration of Mr. McDonnell's counsel, which the defense requests be filed under seal and reviewed ex parte in camera. See generally Brownlee/Asbill Decl.

a. The Conspiratorial Agreement. The Indictment alleges that the McDonnells "conspire[d] with each other and with others" to use Mr. McDonnell's office to obtain gifts and loans "in exchange for [Mr. McDonnell and his staff] performing official actions on an as-needed basis, as opportunities arose, to legitimize, promote, and obtain research studies for Star Scientific's products." Indictment ¶¶ 109, 110, 115. But there is no specific factual allegation of a conspiratorial agreement. The Indictment simply infers that the McDonnells acted in concert because of their marital relationship. Mr. McDonnell intends to disclose confidential marital communications that will disprove that inference. See Brownlee/Asbill Decl. ¶ 5.

b. The New York Shopping Trip. The Indictment alleges that Mrs. McDonnell asked Williams to take her shopping in New York City and that she promised to have Williams seated next to Mr. McDonnell at a political event later that evening. Indictment ¶¶ 23-24. According to the Indictment, Williams purchased thousands of dollars in luxury goods for Mrs. McDonnell. Id. ¶ 24. This allegation is relevant to the Government's claim that the McDonnells conspired to solicit gifts from Williams and that Mr. McDonnell concealed the relationship by failing to disclose the gifts in his Statement of Economic Interest. Mr. McDonnell intends to rely on confidential marital communications that will refute the Government's inference of an illicit conspiracy. See Brownlee/Asbill Decl. ¶ 6.

c. The $50,000 Personal Loan to Mrs. McDonnell. The Indictment alleges that Mrs. McDonnell asked Williams for a $50,000 personal loan in May 2011 but that Williams did not agree to provide it until after speaking with Mr. McDonnell. Indictment ¶¶ 26, 28. Mr. McDonnell intends to disclose confidential marital communications that will refute this allegation. See Brownlee/Asbill Decl. ¶ 7.

d. The Wedding Gift to Cailin McDonnell. The Indictment alleges that Williams' assistant wrote a $15,000 check as a wedding gift on May 23, 2011, which was subsequently cashed by the catering company handling the wedding reception for Cailin McDonnell, the McDonnells' daughter. See Indictment ¶¶ 32, 35; see also id. ¶ 113. The Indictment further alleges that on June 13, 2011, the catering company issued a $5,266.50 refund check to Mrs. McDonnell, which she deposited in her bank account. Id. ¶ 35. Mr. McDonnell intends to rely on marital communications to demonstrate his lack of knowledge of his wife's actions and to disprove the Government's allegation that Williams' $15,000 gift was to Mr. McDonnell rather than to his daughter. See Brownlee/Asbill Decl. ¶¶ 15-16.

e. The Rolex Watch. The Indictment alleges that Mrs. McDonnell received a Rolex watch from Williams and then gave it to Mr. McDonnell as a Christmas present in December 2011. Indictment ¶¶ 50, 68. This allegation is relevant to the Government's claim that the McDonnells conspired to solicit gifts from Williams and that Mr. McDonnell concealed the relationship by failing to disclose the gift in his Statement of Economic Interest. Mr. McDonnell intends to disclose confidential marital communications that will refute any such inference. See Brownlee/Asbill Decl. ¶ 8.

f. The Star Stock. The Indictment alleges that Mrs. McDonnell purchased Star stock in June and August 2011, sold it in December 2011, purchased stock again in January 2012, and then transferred most of it to her children in December 2012. Indictment ¶¶ 39, 53, 67, 71, 97 The Indictment alleges that Mrs. McDonnell informed her broker that she wanted to make these year-end sales and transfers in order to avoid certain annual reporting requirements. Id. ¶¶ 61, 96. Although the stock is not alleged to have been a gift or bribe, the Government seeks to establish that the McDonnells conspired to conceal their relationship with Star by avoiding state reporting requirements. But Mr. McDonnell will rely on confidential marital communications to establish his lack of knowledge of certain stock transactions and to disprove the Government's allegation that he and his wife were acting in concert to conceal her stock ownership or their relationship with Williams. See Brownlee/Asbill Decl. ¶¶ 9-14.

g. Mrs. McDonnell's Appearances at Star Events. The Indictment alleges that Mrs. McDonnell appeared at a Star event in Sarasota, Florida, in June 2011 where she "offer[ed] the Governor's Mansion for the location of Star Scientific's official product launch of Anatabloc®." Indictment ¶ 40. The Indictment also alleges that Mrs. McDonnell appeared at Star-sponsored events in Richmond, Virginia and Grand Blanc, Michigan, where in both cases she "was the featured guest of the dinner and spoke favorably regarding Star Scientific and its products." Id. ¶¶ 62, 63. It is not clear to the defense whether the Government claims that these perfectly legal acts of a private citizen are somehow "official acts" or otherwise part of an illicit scheme, but to the extent it does so, Mr. McDonnell will rely on confidential marital communications to establish his general lack of knowledge about Mrs. McDonnell's activities at these events and to further disprove the Government's allegation of a conspiracy. See Brownlee/Asbill Decl. ¶¶ 17-18.

2. Mrs. McDonnell Will Likely Invoke Her Privilege To Prevent Mr. McDonnell From Disclosing Confidential Marital Communications In His Defense.

As the Declaration of Mrs. McDonnell's attorney makes clear, Mrs. McDonnell plans to invoke her marital communications privilege, which will bar the disclosure of all confidential marital communications between her and her husband. See Burck Decl. ¶ 3. She has strong legal grounds for doing so. Confidential communications between husband and wife are privileged, Parker, 834 F.2d at 411, and cannot be waived unless both spouses consent, see Hall, 989 F.2d at 716 n.8.

The relevant marital communications easily satisfy the elements for establishing the privilege because (1) they were intended to be communicative, (2) they were made during the McDonnells' marriage, and (3) they were intended to be—and were in fact—confidential. See Brownlee/Asbill Decl. ¶ 19. And because the communications tend to exculpate Mr. McDonnell, it is clear that they could not have been made in furtherance of any allegedly illicit conspiracy—even if the Government could make a showing that such a conspiracy existed. Therefore, the joint-crime exception to the marital communications privilege does not apply. See Carona, 2008 WL 1970221, at *3 ("The case law makes clear that application of the joint-crime exception requires that the purported communications not only relate to present or future crimes, but that the communications were made 'in furtherance' of the crimes."); see also Parker, 834 F.2d at 413 ("[T]he joint participation exception to the confidential communication privilege extends to statements made in the course of successfully formulating and commencing joint participation in criminal activity.").

* * *

Mr. McDonnell has a constitutional right to testify in his own defense. But his testimony would include highly exculpatory conversations with his wife over which she intends to invoke her marital communications privilege. To ensure that Mr. McDonnell can fully exercise his constitutional rights—and thereby give the jury complete access to all relevant evidence—while at the same time preserving Mrs. McDonnell's privilege against the disclosure of confidential marital communications, the Court should grant a severance.

CONCLUSION

Given the facts of this case, a joint trial would "sacrifice[] [Mr. McDonnell's] right to a fundamentally fair trial" by "prejudicially den[ying] [him] the opportunity to present testimony highly relevant in the resolution of the issue of guilt or innocence." Shuford, 454 F.2d at 776. Severance should therefore be granted, and it should be granted now to avoid the prejudice, disruption, and inefficiency that would surely ensue if severance were granted after a joint trial had already begun.

Dated: March 25, 2014

Respectfully submitted,

/s/ Jonathan A. Berry

Henry W Asbill (pro hac vice)
Mary Ellen Powers (pro hac vice pending)
Noel J. Francisco (pro hac vice pending)
Ryan D. Newman (pro hac vice)
James M. Burnham (pro hac vice)
Jonathan A. Berry (VSB No. 81864)
JONES DAY
51 Louisiana Avenue, N.W
Washington, D.C. 20001
Telephone: (202) 879-3939
Facsimile: (202) 626-1700

John L. Brownlee (VSB No. 37358)
Timothy J. Taylor (VSB No. 84529)
HOLLAND & KNIGHT LLP
800 17th Street, N.W
Suite 1100
Washington, D.C. 20006
Telephone: (202) 828-1854
Facsimile: (703) 720-8610

Counsel for Robert F McDonnell

CERTIFICATE OF SERVICE

I, Jonathan A. Berry, am a member of the Bar of this Court. I hereby certify that on this 25th day of March, 2014, I caused the foregoing to be electronically filed with the Clerk of Court using the CM/ECF system, causing it to be served on all registered users.

Dated: March 25, 2014

Respectfully submitted,

/s/ Jonathan A. Berry
Jonathan A. Berry (VSB No. 81864)
JONES DAY
51 Louisiana Avenue, N.W
Washington, D.C. 20001
Telephone: (202) 879-3939
Facsimile: (202) 626-1700
Email: jberry@jonesday.com

Counsel for Robert F. McDonnell

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
FOR THE EASTERN DISTRICT OF VIRGINIA
RICHMOND DIVISION

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,	)
	)	CRIMINAL NO. 3:14-CR-00012
v.	)
	)	JUDGE JAMES R. SPENCER
ROBERT F. MCDONNELL	)
MAUREEN G. MCDONNELL	)

DEFENDANT ROBERT F. MCDONNELL'S MOTION #12 — MOTION FOR LEAVE TO FILE SUPPORTING DECLARATIONS UNDER SEAL AND FOR EX PARTE IN CAMERA REVIEW

NON-CONFIDENTIAL MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT

Defendant Robert F McDonnell, by and through undersigned counsel and pursuant to Local Rule 49(E) of the Local Criminal Rules for the United States District Court for the Eastern District of Virginia, hereby moves for leave to file Declarations under seal and for ex parte in camera review. These Declarations support Mr. McDonnell's pending motion to sever his joint trial with his wife. The Declarations contain privileged or otherwise confidential information that would reveal elements of the defense's trial strategy and would thus give an unfair advantage to the Government if it gained access to them. Accordingly, Mr. McDonnell requests that the Court (1) grant leave to file the Declarations under seal, (2) review the Declarations ex parte and in camera, and (3) deny the Government access to the Declarations for at least the remainder of the criminal proceedings.[1]

---

[1] Because sealed filings submitted for ex parte in camera review must be hand delivered, if the Court prefers to review the Declarations prior to ruling on this Motion, counsel will hand deliver the Declarations to Chambers or the clerk's office at the Court's direction.

I. Items To Be Sealed And Reviewed Ex Parte And In Camera (Local Rule 49(D)(1))

In support of his motion to sever, Mr. McDonnell seeks to file two highly confidential Declarations—one by Mrs. McDonnell's counsel, William A. Burck, and the other by Mr. McDonnell's counsel, John L. Brownlee and Henry W. Asbill. These Declarations describe in substantial detail selected testimony that the McDonnells expect to offer if the trial is severed. Some of the testimony is subject to the confidential marital communications privilege. All of the testimony, if disclosed, would give the Government unfair access to information that would reveal elements of Mr. McDonnell's defense.

Mr. McDonnell asks the Court to seal the Declarations and to review them ex parte and in camera. Mr. McDonnell further requests that the Court deny the Government access to these Declarations.

II. Sealing And Ex Parte In Camera Review Is Necessary And Appropriate (Local Rule 49(D)(2))

The supporting Declarations help establish Mr. McDonnell's entitlement to a severance of his joint trial with his wife. Filing these Declarations under seal for ex parte in camera review is necessary, however, because they contain confidential communications protected by the marital privilege and because disclosing these Declarations to the Government would prejudice Mr. McDonnell by revealing elements of his trial strategy that would give the Government an unfair advantage. The Government, by contrast, will not be prejudiced because Mr. McDonnell's memorandum in support of his motion for severance is sufficiently detailed for the Government adequately to respond. Mr. McDonnell has considered procedures other than filing under seal for ex parte in camera review, and none will suffice to protect the information from disclosure.

Finally, sealing and ex parte in camera review are appropriate because any First Amendment public right of access is outweighed by Mr. McDonnell's competing interests in not disclosing his trial strategy or privileged marital communications. See, e.g., United States v. Beckford, 964 F Supp. 1010, 1029-30 (E.D. Va. 1997) (finding sealing and ex parte procedures appropriate where public's right of access outweighed by interest in not divulging trial strategy or attorney work-product).

III. References To Governing Case Law (Local Rule 49(D)(3))

There is ample legal authority for granting Mr. McDonnell's request here. First, the Court has the inherent power to seal materials submitted to it. See In re Knight Pub. Co., 743 F.2d 231, 235 (4th Cir. 1984) ("The trial court has supervisory power over its own records and may, in its discretion, seal documents if the public's right of access is outweighed by competing interests."); see also Am. Civil Liberties Union v. Holder, 673 F.3d 245, 255–56 (4th Cir. 2011); United States v. Hubbard, 650 F.2d 293, 315 n.81 (D.C. Cir. 1980); In re Sealed Affidavit(s) to Search Warrants Executed on February 14, 1979, 600 F.2d 1256, 1257 (9th Cir. 1979).

Second, and more importantly, the Court has the inherent power to review ex parte and in camera documents that contain privileged information or would reveal a party's trial strategy. See, e.g., Arieff v. U.S. Dep't of Navy, 712 F.2d 1462, 1469 (D.C. Cir. 1983) (noting the power of courts to review affidavits in camera); Thomas v. Cumberland Cnty. Schools, et al., No. 5:09-cv-359-FL, 2011 WL 779805, at *1-2 (E.D.N.C. Feb. 28, 2011) (permitting filing of declaration under seal and in camera where content governed by attorney-client privilege and denying access to defendants); United States v. Carona, No. SA-CR-06-224-AG, 2008 WL 1970221, at *1 (C.D. Cal. May 2, 2008) (granting severance based, in part, on its in camera review of supporting declarations); Tilden v. Tenet, 140 F Supp. 2d 623, 625-26 (E.D. Va. 2000) (granting motion for in camera review of classified declaration and denying plaintiff's request to participate); Beckford, 964 F Supp. at 1029-30 (permitting ex parte procedures where defendant would be required to disclose trial strategy, witnesses, or attorney work product to the Government).

One case in particular is directly on point. In United States v. Carona, the district court granted a defendant's motion for severance, basing its ruling, in part, on its ex parte in camera review of the defendant's supporting declarations. Carona, 2008 WL 1970221, at *1. In its order granting severance, the court referenced its previous ruling that the moving defendant was not required to disclose her declarations to the Government where, as here, "disclosure would unduly risk prejudicing Defendants by revealing elements of their trial strategy." Id. In her declaration, the moving defendant "describ[ed] the nature of the testimony which she would seek to present in her defense, but which may be precluded by operation of evidentiary privilege." Id. She also submitted a declaration of her husband, "asserting his intention to invoke the evidentiary privilege at trial to prevent her from testifying about their confidential marital communications." Id.

The Declarations here are no different. The Declaration of Mr. McDonnell's counsel describes the nature of the testimony Mr. McDonnell would seek to present in his defense, including confidential marital communications. Likewise, the Declaration of Mrs. McDonnell's counsel reveals Mrs. McDonnell's potential testimony and reasons for invoking the marital communications privilege at trial. In short, disclosure of these Declarations to the Government would unduly prejudice Mr. McDonnell (and Mrs. McDonnell) by revealing elements of their defense. Confidential ex parte review of the Declarations should be permitted here, just as it was in Carona.

IV. Period Of Time Mr. McDonnell Seeks To Have Matter Remain Under Seal (Local Rule 49(D)(4))

Mr. McDonnell requests that the Court hold the Declarations under seal, without disclosure to the Government, for at least the remainder of the criminal proceedings.

* * *

For these reasons, Mr. McDonnell requests that the Court (1) grant leave to file the Declarations under seal, (2) review the Declarations ex parte and in camera, and (3) deny the Government access to the Declarations for at least the remainder of the criminal proceedings.

Dated: March 25, 2014

Respectfully submitted,

/s/ Jonathan A. Berry
Henry W Asbill (pro hac vice)
Mary Ellen Powers (pro hac vice pending)
Noel J. Francisco (pro hac vice pending)
Ryan D. Newman (pro hac vice)
James M. Burnham (pro hac vice)
Hilary K. Perkins (pro hac vice pending)
Jonathan A. Berry (VSB No. 81864)
JONES DAY
51 Louisiana Avenue, N.W.
Washington, D.C. 20001
Telephone: (202) 879-3939
Facsimile: (202) 626-1700

John L. Brownlee (VSB No. 37358)
Timothy J. Taylor (VSB No. 84529)
HOLLAND & KNIGHT LLP
800 17th Street, N.W., Suite 1100
Washington, D.C. 20006
Telephone: (202) 828-1854
Facsimile: (703) 720-8610

Counsel for Robert F McDonnell

CERTIFICATE OF SERVICE

I, Jonathan A. Berry, am a member of the Bar of this Court. I hereby certify that on this 25th day of March, 2014, I caused the foregoing to be electronically filed with the Clerk of Court using the CM/ECF system, causing it to be served on all registered users.

Dated: March 25, 2014

Respectfully submitted,

/s/ Jonathan A. Berry
Jonathan A. Berry (VSB No. 81864)
JONES DAY
51 Louisiana Avenue, N.W
Washington, D.C. 20001
Telephone: (202) 879-3939
Facsimile: (202) 626-1700
Email: jberry@jonesday.com

Counsel for Robert F McDonnell

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
EASTERN DISTRICT OF VIRGINIA
RICHMOND DIVISION

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,

v.

ROBERT F. MCDONNELL,

and

MAUREEN G. MCDONNELL,

Defendants.

Action No. 3:14-CR-12

ORDER

THIS MATTER is before the Court on a Motion of the National Association of Criminal Defense Lawyers for Leave to File a Memorandum of Law as Amici Curiae ("Motion") (ECF No. 126). The NACDL has cited no authority authorizing the filing of, or mandating this Court's consideration of, amicus curiae briefs in a criminal matter. Accordingly, the Motion is DENIED.

Let the Clerk send a copy of this Order to all counsel of record.

It is SO ORDERED.

/s/
James R. Spencer
Senior U. S. District Judge

ENTERED this 1st day of April 2014.

IN THE UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT FOR THE
EASTERN DISTRICT OF VIRGINIA
Richmond Division

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA	)
	)
v.	)
	)	No. 3:14cr12-JRS
ROBERT F MCDONNELL and	)
MAUREEN G. MCDONNELL,	)
	)
Defendants.	)

RESPONSE OF THE UNITED STATES IN OPPOSITION TO DEFENDANT ROBERT F. MCDONNELL'S MOTION FOR LEAVE TO FILE SUPPORTING DECLARATIONS UNDER SEAL AND FOR EX PARTE IN CAMERA REVIEW

The United States of America, by undersigned counsel, hereby responds in opposition to defendant Robert F McDonnell's Motion for Leave to File Supporting Declarations Under Seal and for Ex Parte In Camera Review. See Doc. Nos. 116, 117 The United States respectfully opposes Mr. McDonnell's motion because precluding Government review of the declarations would prevent the Government from providing the Court with an informed response to the defendants' accompanying Motions to Sever, which trigger a fact-intensive and circumstance-dependent inquiry. See Doc. Nos. 114, 115, 120. In seeking a severance, defense counsel claim that Mrs. McDonnell is willing to testify on Mr. McDonnell's behalf, but only if this Court grants the defendants separate trials. Likewise, defense counsel claim that unless this Court grants separate trials, Mrs. McDonnell would invoke the confidential marital communications privilege to try to block Mr. McDonnell from testifying about what she told him in confidence.

But defense counsel's claims about Mrs. McDonnell's assertions of her Fifth Amendment and marital privileges are difficult to understand or assess without the declarations, and their pleadings' conclusory descriptions of those declarations do not clarify the confusion. Notably, the evidence that Mrs. McDonnell claims that she would block from being presented at a joint trial apparently purports to be exculpatory for both defendants. The defendants therefore seem to be claiming that, unless they receive the separate trials that they want, Mrs. McDonnell will refuse to provide exculpatory testimony that helps both defendants and also will prevent Mr. McDonnell from providing exculpatory testimony himself. Why a severance is necessary for Mrs. McDonnell to be willing to provide (or allow) testimony that purports to exculpate herself as well as her husband is difficult to understand in any event, but it is impossible to understand without access to exactly what Mrs. McDonnell's (or Mr. McDonnell's) anticipated testimony would be.

Equally important, the McDonnells want a severance without demonstrating that separate trials are necessary—even taking the McDonnells' claims at face value. Mr. McDonnell's motion repeatedly says merely that he wants the "option" of calling Mrs. McDonnell. Mem. in Supp. Mot. Sever at 2, 9, 14. He offers no commitment to actually calling Mrs. McDonnell—even though Mrs. McDonnell appears to have said through her attorneys that she would testify if her husband called her as a witness. The Court should not permit the McDonnells to demand a severance on such equivocal terms while simultaneously hiding from the Government what Mrs. McDonnell would in fact say, in effect handicapping the Government's ability to assist the Court in evaluating their actual reasons for seeking separate trials.

Moreover, "[i]t is settled beyond peradventure that, in our system of justice, ex parte judicial proceedings are greatly disfavored." RZS Holdings AVV v. PDVSA Petroleo S.A., 506 F.3d 350, 356 (4th Cir. 2007). And as explained below, given that both the standards governing severance and the defendants' arguments are necessarily highly fact-intensive, this Court would particularly benefit from the Government's evaluation of the details about the evidence in this case in the context of the pending severance motion. If ex parte declarations are permitted, by contrast, the Government will not have a fair opportunity to respond fully to the defendants' arguments.

In addition, the high hurdle that the law imposes to severances like the one requested here underscores why the defendants should not be able to clear that hurdle with secret filings. In this regard, it is well-established that "[j]oint trials 'play a vital role in the criminal justice system.'" Zafiro v. United States, 506 U.S. 534, 537 (1993) (quoting Richardson v. Marsh, 481 U.S. 200, 209 (1987)). As a result, "severance pursuant to [Fed. R. Crim. P.] 14 is rarely granted." United States v. Dinkins, 691 F.3d 358, 368 (4th Cir. 2012). And the presumption against severance is especially strong in conspiracy cases, such as in the present case. Dinkins, 691 F.3d at 368 ("Joinder is highly favored in conspiracy cases, over and above the general disposition supporting joinder for reasons of efficiency and judicial economy."). Indeed, under these standards, as the Supreme Court has explained, "it is well settled that defendants are not entitled to severance merely because they may have a better chance of acquittal in separate trials." Zafiro, 506 U.S. at 540.

In short, given the highly fact-intensive nature of the defendants' claims, the stringent standards they must meet as movants, and the facial implausibility of their claims, there is no basis for this Court to recognize an exception in this case to the rule that "ex parte communications 'should be avoided whenever possible.'" RZS Holdings AVV, 506 F.3d at 357 (quoting United States v. Napue, 834 F.2d 1311, 1318 (7th Cir. 1987)).

Argument

I. Without the declarations, the Government is unable to respond to the severance framework set forth by the Fourth Circuit in Parodi.

Both the Supreme Court and the Fourth Circuit apply fact-intensive standards in evaluating motions for severance, while granting district judges broad deference in ruling on severance motions in light of the circumstances. To obtain severance, the Fourth Circuit requires the defendants to establish four threshold elements: (1) a bona fide need for the testimony of Mrs. McDonnell; (2) the likelihood that Mrs. McDonnell would testify at her husband's trial and waive her Fifth Amendment privilege; (3) the substance of Mrs. McDonnell's testimony: and (4) the exculpatory nature and effect of her testimony. United States v. Parodi, 703 F.2d 768, 779 (4th Cir. 1983). Once the defendants meet these requirements, then the defendants must convince the Court that the following factors weigh in their favor: (1) the significance of Mrs. McDonnell's testimony in relation to the defendants' theory of defense; (2) the extent of the prejudice caused by the absence of her testimony; (3) judicial administration and economy; (4) the timeliness of the motion; and (5) the likelihood that Mrs. McDonnell's testimony could be impeached. Id. The fact-intensive inquiry described above focuses primarily on the substance of Mrs. McDonnell's purported testimony. Though the defendants summarily characterize the two declarations throughout their Motions to Sever and Memoranda in Support, see Doc. Nos. 114, 115, 120, their conclusory statements do not provide adequate specificity about Mrs. McDonnell's testimony. Simply put, as illustrated below, if the declarations are submitted to the Court ex parte, the Government cannot adequately assist the Court in addressing the requisite Parodi framework. See United States v. Fastow, 269 F Supp. 2d 905, 910 (S.D. Tex. 2003) (noting that a defendant's ex parte affidavit in support of severance motion "deprive[s the Government] of the opportunity to meaningfully address the factors related to the testimony itself").

A. The necessity of Mrs. McDonnells testimony.

As to the first factor—bona fide need—the defendants surely know of numerous witnesses who may provide the same testimony that Mrs. McDonnell would. For example, virtually all of Mr. McDonnell's staff would agree that he had a "demanding work and travel schedule" during his tenure as Governor. Mem. in Supp. Mot. Sever at 2. And beyond such noncontroversial facts, the defendants offer no details of Mrs. McDonnell's testimony beyond denying the charges, something that a defendant can accomplish without even taking the witness stand and being exposed to cross-examination. Indeed, so nonexistent are the details about Mrs. McDonnell's denials that it is incredible to think that she actually would risk cross-examination to make the flat denials of the charges conveyed in the McDonnells' severance motion. Mr. McDonnell's bona fide need for his wife's testimony remains completely opaque, particularly in the absence of any detail about what she would say.

B. The likelihood of Mrs. McDonnell's testimony.

As to the second factor, although Mrs. McDonnell's attorney may have said unequivocally in his affidavit that she would testify if called, Mr. McDonnell's motion is wholly noncommittal about whether he will ever call her as a witness. Mr. McDonnell's motion offers the Court no assurance at all that he intends to use Mrs. McDonnell as a witness. According to his memorandum supporting his motion, Mr. McDonnell simply would like the "option" to call her. See id. at 2, 9, 14. The proposed ex parte declarations may provide greater certainty about the probability that Mr. McDonnell will call her as a witness, but the Government should be allowed to respond to them based on their substance, not on counsel's conclusory pronouncements about their content.

It is also unclear whether Mrs. McDonnell really would waive her Fifth Amendment rights at a separate trial of Mr. McDonnell given her refusal to do so at a joint trial. Id. at 10. As noted by the Eastern District of North Carolina, "[i]f [the defendant] intends to invoke his Fifth Amendment privilege at a joint trial, then the court can think of no reason why [s]he would waive the privilege by testifying at [co-defendant's] trial in the event [co-defendant] was tried first." United States v. Dawson, No. 5:12cr284-F2, 2013 WL 3381380, at *2 (E.D.N.C. July 8, 2013). To meet the second Parodi element, Mr. McDonnell must demonstrate that Mrs. McDonnell has "an unequivocal willingness" to waive her Fifth Amendment rights and testify at a severed trial regardless of which trial began first. United States v. Medford, 661 F.3d 746, 753 (4th Cir. 2011); see also United States v. Silverio, No. 12-4629, 2013 WL 870638, at *1 (4th Cir. Mar. 11, 2013) (unpublished) (affirming district court's denial of severance motion when counsel was "equivocal" about likelihood of co-defendant testifying). The ex parte declaration may provide additional clarification about Mrs. McDonnell's equivocation—or lack thereof—but again, the Government should be permitted to challenge the basis for such a claim.

C. The substance of Mrs. McDonnell's testimony.

Turning to the third threshold factor, the defendants claim that Mrs. McDonnell's testimony would exculpate Mr. McDonnell "in at least four ways." Mem. in Supp. Mot. Sever at 8. This recitation of "four ways" that Mrs. McDonnell would aid Mr. McDonnell's defense offers no details beyond a blanket denial of the Indictment's allegations, and equally importantly, it rests on the implausible premise that these denials will be forthcoming only if this Court grants separate trials. Indeed, nowhere in any of their pleadings do the defendants offer details about

Mrs. McDonnell's testimony beyond saying that she is involved in the charged conduct and would deny what is alleged in the Indictment—something every coconspirator in every case would say. And nothing in the defendants' briefs suggests that Mrs. McDonnell will inculpate herself.[1]

Without further explanation (which may or may not be contained in the declarations), Mrs. McDonnell's position makes little sense. If her testimony indeed incriminates her, it remains unclear why Mrs. McDonnell would invoke her Fifth Amendment right at a joint trial and refuse to testify, but would willingly waive this right at separate trials "regardless of the order in which the severed defendants are tried." Mem. in Supp. Mot. Sever at 11 (emphasis omitted). This means that if Mr. McDonnell were tried first, Mrs. McDonnell would waive her rights against self-incrimination and testify on his behalf—knowing full well that her own trial would occur next and her statements would be used against her. The rationale for her refusal to waive her Fifth Amendment rights at a joint trial—namely that her statements would be used against her—applies equally to this scenario. Meanwhile, if Mrs. McDonnell's testimony is entirely exculpatory, then why would she need to invoke the Fifth Amendment when testifying at a joint trial?

Nor does the Government understand why Mrs. McDonnell would invoke the marital communications privilege at a joint trial, id. at 17, when she is willing to waive this privilege at separate trials. Indeed, it appears that Mr. McDonnell's purported testimony—which Mrs. McDonnell would supposedly block at a joint trial with the marital communications privilege—would exculpate them both. Id. at 19 (noting that Mr. McDonnell will disclose confidential marital communications to show that no conspiratorial agreement existed between them). To the extent that Mr. McDonnell's testimony revealing marital privileged communications would inculpate Mrs. McDonnell and Mr. McDonnell's trial occurs first, she would likely be cross-examined extensively about these communications when she testified at Mr. McDonnell's trial, and that testimony could be used against her at her subsequent trial. Indeed, Mrs. McDonnell's waiver of the marital communications privilege at Mr. McDonnell's trial would waive that privilege for her trial, too.

---

[1] If true, this would weigh heavily against severance. In the context of a severance motion, "[a] codefendant's proposed testimony lacks credibility when it does not contravene his own penal interests." United States v. Tencer, 107 F.3d 1120, 1133 (5th Cir. 1997); accord United States v. Beale, 921 F.2d 1412, 1428 (11th Cir. 1991).

D. Exculpatory nature and effect of Mrs. McDonnell's testimony.

Turning to the fourth Parodi factor—the exculpatory nature and effect of the testimony—at present, the Government has no more than a "'vague and conclusory statement of counsel of facts 'of purely cumulative or negligible weight or probative value,'" which is insufficient under Fourth Circuit law. Parodi, 703 F.3d at 780 (quoting United States v. Butler, 611 F.2d 1066, 1071 (5th Cir. 1980)). Without knowing the contents of the declarations, the Government cannot assess the defendants' claims to have satisfied the test in Parodi and understand why Mrs. McDonnell would "deprive" Mr. McDonnell of his own purportedly exculpatory testimony at a joint trial. Mem. in Supp. Mot. Sever at 16.

E. The remaining five Parodi considerations.

Without the declarations, the Government is unable to assist the Court in evaluating the remaining considerations under Parodi based on the information the defendants have provided. 703 F.2d at 779. The extent of the prejudice caused by the absence of Mrs. McDonnell's testimony remains unclear. Other witnesses or documents may be able to provide the same information that Mr. McDonnell seeks. Given that, it also seems highly unlikely that the McDonnells would risk cross-examination of Mrs. McDonnell to make points that could be presented in much less risky ways. In addition, the Government cannot help the Court assess the likelihood that Mrs. McDonnell's broad denial of criminal activity could be impeached without access to her declaration. For example, should the declaration from Mrs. McDonnell's counsel indicate that she was lying to Mr. McDonnell during the conspiracy—but is now telling the truth—this is significant impeachment fodder. Mrs. McDonnell also is charged with obstruction of justice and would be testifying for her husband, which does not weigh in favor of her credibility. Further, without the declarations the Government cannot assess the likelihood that her specific testimony could be impeached by emails, text messages, and other witnesses' testimony—all information that the Government is in a uniquely qualified position to provide to the Court.

II. Ex parte procedures are "greatly disfavored" under Fourth Circuit law and should not be used here.

Courts do not welcome ex parte pleadings, and that should be particularly true where, as here, the moving party is the one requesting the use of ex parte pleadings and the standard that the moving party seeks to satisfy is stringent and fact-intensive. The Seventh Circuit has aptly observed, "An ex parte proceeding 'places a substantial burden upon the trial judge to perform what is naturally and properly the function of an advocate.'" Napue, 834 F.2d at 1319 (citation omitted). And "ex parte communications 'should be avoided wherever possible.'" RZS Holdings AVV, 506 F.3d at 357 (quoting Napue, 834 F.2d at 1318). Ex parte proceedings are, in sum, "greatly disfavored." Id.

In this case, the defendants ask the Court to accept the "substantial burden" of evaluating the Parodi factors without the benefit of an informed response by the Government. If allowed, the Court will face the daunting challenge of trying to determine on its own whether the testimony is actually necessary, the testimony's exculpatory nature and effect, and whether the testimony would be easily impeached—all without the aid of the Government being able to effectively supplement the record with additional facts that would likely be highly relevant to the Court's determination. This would result not only in the Government's inability to effectively respond to the motion, but also in the Court being asked to sever the trials without all of the facts necessary for judicial determination.

In evaluating severance motions, courts "have often looked hard at the substance of the affidavits proffered by the co-defendant who purportedly would testify in a separate trial." United States v. Novation, 271 F.3d 968, 989 (11th Cir. 2001). That close evaluation of the affidavits is not possible without allowing the Government to respond to the affidavits, as illustrated by Novation, which affirmed denial of severance based on affidavits that the moving defendants filed publicly.

The McDonnells cite just one case that permitted a defendant to submit an ex parte affidavit in support of a severance motion. United States v. Carona, No. SA-CR-06-224-AG, 2008 WL 1970221 (C.D. Cal. May 2, 2008). This unpublished district court opinion offered almost no analysis for its decision to permit ex parte affidavits, did so where the sole basis for granting severance was the need for specific and marital privileged communications that incriminated one spouse defendant and exculpated the other spouse defendant, and acknowledged "the Government's difficult task of opposing" the motion where the facts supporting the motion were submitted ex parte. Id. at *4. And the defendants' parenthetical reliance on United States v. Beckford, 964 F. Supp. 1010 (E.D. Va. 1997), is equally misplaced. Beckford pertained to the issuance of Rule 17(c) subpoenas, and the Court noted that proponents of sealing those subpoena applications "will have to meet a heavy burden." Id. at 1030. Significantly, the Court in Beckford based its approval of ex parte procedures for 17(c) subpoenas, in part, on its recognition that "a court needs no assistance from an opposing party" in applying the legal standard for issuance of Rule 17(c) subpoenas. Id. at 1028. Given the highly fact-intensive inquiry in severance motion determinations, such is not the case here.

The defendants have not sought to tailor their ex parte filings in the way that ordinary privilege litigation would require. Neither the Government nor apparently this Court has been provided with anything close to sufficient information to evaluate the validity of any assertion by Mrs. McDonnell against Mr. McDonnell of the marital privilege and whether Mr. McDonnell could readily make the same points without the purportedly privileged information. Moreover, an ongoing conspiracy is charged during the time (presumably) of the communications in question, and spouses have no marital privilege over communications during their joint participation in a crime. See, e.g., United States v. Parker, 834 F.2d 408, 411 (4th Cir. 1987) ("[W]here marital communications have to do with the commission of a crime in which both spouses are participants, the conversation does not fall within the marital privilege." (citation omitted)). To the extent the McDonnells' request for ex parte submission and severance are based on the marital privilege, their request should be denied until the statements and validity of the privilege can be better evaluated and placed in context. Zafiro, 506 U.S. at 538–39 ("Rule 14 does not require severance even if prejudice is shown; rather, it leaves the tailoring of the relief to be granted, if any, to the district court's sound discretion.").

Many other cases have analyzed severance motions where the defendants were required to present evidence and testimony to support a motion to sever without the benefit of ex parte submissions. See, e.g., United States v. Medford, 661 F.3d 746, 753 (4th Cir. 2011) (affirming severance denial based on publicly filed pleadings of factual positions by counsel); Novation, 271 F.3d at 989 (affirming severance denial where publicly filed affidavits used); United States v. Freedman, 317 F. App'x. 22 (2d Cir. 2008) (affirming severance denial based on publicly filed affidavit from co-defendant about purported testimony); United States v. Sherifi, No. 7:12cr00020-BR, 2012 WL 4191935, *1–2 (E.D.N.C. Sept. 19, 2012) (publicly filed declaration from co-defendant's lawyer and testimony at hearing from co-defendant); United States v. Pingaro, 784 F. Supp. 2d 77, 78 (D. Mass. 2011) (publicly filed affidavit from co-defendant about purported testimony).

A recent unpublished Fourth Circuit opinion illustrated this practice, in a case from the Alexandria Division of this District where no ex parte procedures were used in ruling on a severance motion. The Fourth Circuit's opinion observed, "During the colloquy on Silverio's motion, counsel was equivocal as to whether Benavente would testify on Silverio's behalf if the motion were granted." Silverio, 2013 WL 870638 at *1. This practice is consistent with the Fourth Circuit's observation elsewhere of the general rule that "ex parte communications by an adversary party to a decision-maker in an adjudicatory proceeding are prohibited as fundamentally at variance with our conceptions of due process." RZS Holdings AVV, 506 F.3d at 356 (citations and internal quotation marks omitted).

The McDonnells' claims are extremely broad in the sweep of evidence they address—covering a conspiracy that ran many months and encompassed many incidents—and are simultaneously vague and conclusory. Eliminating full adversary procedures in this setting, where the defendants are both the moving parties and the ones insisting on blocking adversarial presentation of their evidence, is unjustifiable. As the Supreme Court has stressed that as the evidentiary issues become more complex, avoiding adversary procedures becomes less justifiable.

> Adversary proceedings are a major aspect of our system of criminal justice. Their superiority as a means for attaining justice in a given case is nowhere more > evident than in those cases, such as the ones at bar, where an issue must be decided on the basis of a large volume of factual materials, and after consideration of the many and subtle interrelationships which may exist among the facts reflected by these records. As the need for adversary inquiry is increased by the complexity of the issues presented for adjudication, and by the consequent inadequacy of ex parte procedures as a means for their accurate resolution, the displacement of well-informed advocacy necessarily becomes less justifiable.

Alderman v. United States, 394 U.S. 165, 184 (1969).

Conclusion

The Government should be permitted full access to the declarations the defendants' lawyers have prepared, so that it may properly brief this fact-intensive legal analysis. For the foregoing reasons, the Government respectfully requests that the Court deny Mr. McDonnell's motion, Doc. No. 116.

Respectfully submitted,

DANA J. BOENTE
Acting United States Attorney

By: /s/
Richard Cooke
Michael S. Dry
Jessica D. Aber
Ryan S. Faulconer
Counsel for the United States
U.S. Attorney's Office
600 E. Main Street, Suite 1800
Richmond, Va. 23219
Phone: 804-819-5400
Fax: 804-771-2316

JACK SMITH
Chief, Public Integrity Section
Criminal Division
U.S. Department of Justice

By: /s/
David V Harbach, II
Counsel for the United States
U.S. Department of Justice
Criminal Division
Public Integrity Section
1400 New York Ave., N.W., Ste 12100
Washington, D.C. 20005
Phone: 202-514-1412
Fax: 202-514-3003

CERTIFICATE OF SERVICE

I hereby certify that on April 2, 2014, a true and correct copy of the foregoing was delivered to all counsel of record via the Court's Electronic Filing System.

By: /s/
Jessica D. Aber
Virginia Bar No. 72680
Assistant United States Attorney
United States Attorney's Office
600 East Main Street, Suite 1800
Richmond, Virginia 23219
Phone: (804) 819-5400
Fax: (804) 771-2316
Email: jessica.d.aber@usdoj.gov

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
EASTERN DISTRICT OF VIRGINIA
RICHMOND DIVISION

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,

v.

ROBERT F. MCDONNELL,

Defendant.

Action No. 3:14-CR-12-1

ORDER

THIS MATTER is before the Court on a Motion for Leave to File Memorandum Amicus Curiae in Support of Defendants' Motion to Dismiss ("Motion") (ECF No. 132) filed by five former Attorneys General of Virginia. The Court declines to exercise its discretion to allow amicus curiae briefs to be filed in this criminal matter. Accordingly, the Motion is DENIED.

Let the Clerk send a copy of this Order to all counsel of record.

It is SO ORDERED.

/s/
James R. Spencer
Senior U. S. District Judge

ENTERED this 7th day of April 2014.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
FOR THE EASTERN DISTRICT OF VIRGINIA
RICHMOND DIVISION

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,	)
	)
v.	)	CRIMINAL NO. 3:14-CR-00012
	)
ROBERT F. MCDONNELL MAUREEN G. MCDONNELL	)	JUDGE JAMES R. SPENCER
	)

REPLY OF DEFENDANT ROBERT F. MCDONNELL TO THE GOVERNMENT'S OPPOSITION TO MOTION # 12 – MOTION FOR LEAVE TO FILE SUPPORTING DECLARATIONS UNDER SEAL AND FOR EX PARTE IN CAMERA REVIEW

TABLE OF CONTENTS

Page

INTRODUCTION 1

ARGUMENT 2

I. Ex Parte Proceedings Are Commonly Used In Criminal Matters To Protect The Defendant's Sixth Amendment Right To Maintain The Confidentiality Of His Trial Strategy. 2

II. The Government Has Only Limited Interests At Stake In This Motion, While Mr. McDonnell's Interests Are Substantial. 7

III. The Court Can Adequately Evaluate The Motion To Sever By Examining The Declarations Ex Parte And In Camera. 8

CONCLUSION 11

INTRODUCTION

In order to enable the Court to evaluate the merits of his motion to sever, Mr. McDonnell has moved for permission to make a sealed, ex parte filing of two declarations from the defendants' counsel (the "Declarations"). These Declarations contain defense counsel's detailed accounts of the substance of the testimony that the McDonnells would give if their trials are severed. As such, the Declarations detail privileged marital communications; and they constitute attorney work product that summarizes much of the defendants' trial strategy. The request to file these sensitive materials ex parte for in camera review is not extraordinary In many contexts in criminal cases, courts routinely allow defendants to make such ex parte filings in order to protect privileged information and to preserve the defendant's Sixth Amendment right to maintain the confidentiality of his trial strategy.

The Government strenuously opposes Mr. McDonnell's motion, claiming that it is contrary to Fourth Circuit and other precedent and is inordinately burdensome. None of the authorities the Government cites, however, is relevant to this case, where a criminal defendant seeks ex parte in camera review of sensitive, privileged materials that the defendant believes will reveal important aspects of his trial strategy. On the contrary, courts have consistently recognized that requiring a defendant to make disclosures to the Government through which "defense planning and strategy would necessarily be revealed" compromises a "defendant['s] Sixth Amendment right to effective assistance of counsel." United States v. Beckford, 962 F Supp. 748, 764 n.16 (E.D. Va. 1997).

Its inapposite generalizations notwithstanding, the essence of the Government's argument is that its interest in making additional arguments to the Court based on the Declarations is compelling enough to overcome the marital communications privilege, the attorney work product protection, and Mr. McDonnell's Sixth Amendment right not to reveal his trial strategy to the prosecution. This contention cannot withstand scrutiny. As the Court can confirm simply by reading the Declarations themselves, whatever attenuated interest (if any) the Government has in disclosure is far outweighed by the vital interests the McDonnells have in maintaining confidentiality. This Court should therefore grant Mr. McDonnell's motion to file the Declarations under seal for ex parte in camera review.

ARGUMENT

I. Ex Parte Proceedings Are Commonly Used In Criminal Matters To Protect The Defendant's Sixth Amendment Right To Maintain The Confidentiality Of His Trial Strategy.

Inherent in this Court's supervisory power is its discretionary authority to accept filings under seal. See In re Knight Pub. Co., 743 F.2d 231, 235 (4th Cir. 1984). In criminal cases, it is not unusual for courts to accept ex parte, sealed filings from defendants in order to make necessary rulings while preserving the confidentiality of the defendants' trial strategy. Indeed, courts have done so in this specific situation: when a defendant, in support of a motion concerning trial sequencing, wishes to proffer evidence outlining the testimony he or she would give at an alleged co-conspirator's trial. In United States v. Carona, in circumstances precisely analogous to those presented here, the court granted husband and wife co-defendants permission to file ex parte declarations in support of the wife's motion to sever. United States v. Carona, No. SA CR-06-224-AG, 2008 WL 1970221, at *1 (C.D. Cal. May 2, 2008). The Carona court noted that it had allowed the filing "[o]ver the Government's objection, as disclosure would unduly risk prejudicing Defendants by revealing elements of their trial strategy." Id. Similarly, in United States v. Fastow, the court allowed the defendant to submit an ex parte, sealed affidavit from her husband, a defendant in a related case, in support of her motion to be tried after his trial was complete (the court applied the test for severance to the defendant's motion). 269 F Supp. 2d 905, 906-07 (S.D. Tex. 2003).

There are, moreover, numerous other contexts in which courts have found it not only appropriate but necessary to receive materials and conduct proceedings ex parte in order to preserve the confidentiality of the defendant's trial strategy. In United States v. Beckford, 964 F Supp. 1010, 1019 (E.D. Va. 1997), a court in this district held that, in light of a defendant's Sixth Amendment right to maintain the secrecy of his trial strategy, Rule 17(c) must be read to authorize ex parte process for the acquisition of a trial subpoena duces tecum by indigent defendants. See also, e.g., United States v. Tomison, 969 F Supp. 587, 595 (E.D. Cal. 1997) ("Rule [17(c)] should be interpreted to provide for ex parte applications in situations, such as the matter at bar, where the defendant seeks to serve a subpoena duces tecum for the pre-trial production of documents on a third party, and cannot make the required showing without revealing trial strategy."); United States v. Florack, 838 F Supp. 77, 78 (W.D.N.Y 1993) (noting that prior version of Rule 17(b) presented "an indigent with Hobson's choice: either make no defense or disclose his whole case to the Government before his trial"); United States v. Weissman, No. 01-cr-529, 2002 WL 1467845, at *1 (S.D.N.Y July 8, 2002) (permitting ex parte applications in Rule 17(c) subpoena context where "a party can demonstrate that it would be required to prematurely disclose its trial strategy, witness list, or other privileged information in its application"). Similarly, in United States v. Lindh, 198 F Supp. 2d 739, 743-44 (E.D. Va. 2002), a court in this district specified that the defendant should make ex parte, sealed submissions when he sought to share national security-related discovery materials protected by a Rule 16(d)(1) order with potential witnesses. The court designed the procedures to "minimize any burdens on [the] defendant's Sixth Amendment right to prepare and present a full defense at trial." Id. at 744.[1] See also United States v. Carriles, 654 F Supp. 2d 557, 570 (W.D. Tex.

---

[1] The court left open the possibility that the government would be notified and allowed to 2009) (adopting procedures for granting the defendant access to materials filed under a Rule 16(d)(1) protective order and stating that "[i]f necessary to avoid disclosing trial strategy, Defendant may make such submission ex parte"). The Criminal Justice Act itself explicitly provides for ex parte proceedings to address defendants' requests for investigative, expert, and other services, see 18 U.S.C. § 3006A(e)(1), a measure courts have uniformly recognized as necessary to safeguard the confidentiality of defense trial strategy, see, e.g., United States v. Gonzales, 150 F.3d 1246, 1258 (10th Cir. 1998) ("Maintaining the secrecy of the application prevents the possibility that an open hearing may cause a defendant to reveal his or her defense." (quoting Administrative Office of the U.S. Courts Guide, chap. III, part A, § 3.03)). The courts use ex parte proceedings in these contexts even though the Government could certainly otherwise assist in evaluating the legitimacy and scope of Rule 17(c) subpoena filings and other sorts of defense requests.

Nor is the trial court's discretionary authority to receive filings under seal and ex parte limited to these well-established examples. Trial courts may adopt such procedures whenever revealing materials to the Government would compromise the confidentiality of a defendant's trial strategy. See, e.g., United States v. Stepney, 246 F Supp. 2d 1069, 1078 (N.D. Cal. 2003) (noting that the court had "conducted its inquiry into joint defense agreements in camera in order to avoid offering the prosecution any hint of defense strategies"); United States v. Smith, No. 13– litigate if the defendant proposed to share sensitive intelligence with potential witnesses who were themselves detainees suspected of terrorism. 198 F Supp. 2d at 743. In other words, the Lindh court recognized that ex parte submission is an appropriate way to safeguard a defendant's Sixth Amendment right to maintain the secrecy of the defense strategy, except where there are governmental interests as compelling as keeping sensitive information out of the hands of suspected terrorists.

---

CR-297, 2013 WL 6576791, at *8 (S.D.N.Y Dec. 4, 2013) (denying that the public has the right to compel disclosure of criminal discovery materials, in part because "unfettered public access could jeopardize a defendant's trial strategy").

The wealth of authority supporting Mr. McDonnell's motion repudiates the Government's repeated assertion that ex parte proceedings are uniformly disfavored. Unsurprisingly, the limited support the Government provides for this broad claim comes either from civil cases, see Gov't Opp'n to Def. Robert F McDonnell's Mot. for Leave to File Supp. Decls. Under Seal and for Ex Parte In Camera Review ("Opp'n"), Dkt. 131, at 2, 3, 9, 12 (citing RZS Holdings AVV v. PDVSA Petroleo S.A., 506 F.3d 350, 356, 357 (4th Cir. 2007)), or from criminal cases in which the court was concerned with possible prejudice to the defendant, see Opp'n at 3, 9 (citing United States v. Napue, 834 F.2d 1311, 1318, 1319 (7th Cir. 1987)); Opp'n at 13 (citing Alderman v. United States, 394 U.S. 165, 184 (1968)). The statements in those cases disapproving ex parte proceedings primarily reflect a concern with the due process rights of individuals—not the Government. See RZS Holdings AVV, 506 F.3d at 356 ("The conduct of such proceedings present substantial due process concerns."); Napue, 834 F.2d at 1318-19 ("Ex parte communications between the government and the court deprive the defendant of notice of the precise content of the communications and an opportunity to respond." (emphasis added)); Alderman, 394 U.S. at 184 (disapproving use of in camera review process from which defendant is excluded to determine whether evidence tainted by Fourth Amendment violation is relevant to criminal conviction). No such issue is present here because the Government does not have any independent constitutional right to due process.

The Government does not cite a single case in which a court has expressed broad disapproval of the use of ex parte proceedings from which the Government is excluded—let alone any case in which a court found that a defendant's right to preserve the confidentiality of his trial strategy was outweighed by the Government's interest in disclosure.[2] The Government relies on a handful of cases in which severance motions were decided by courts on the basis of public filings. See Opp'n at 11-12 (citing United States v. Medford, 661 F.3d 746, 753 (4th Cir. 2011); United States v. Novaton, 271 F.3d 968, 989 (11th Cir. 2001); United States v. Freedman, 317 F. App'x 22 (2d Cir. 2008); United States v. Sherifi, No. 7:12-cr-00020-BR, 2012 WL 4191935, at *1-2 (E.D.N.C. Sept. 19, 2012); United States v. Pingaro, 784 F. Supp. 2d 77, 78 (D. Mass. 2011)). But in none of those cases did a defendant seeking severance actually request an ex parte review of his evidentiary proffer on the ground that disclosure to the government would reveal elements of his trial strategy. Moreover, there is no indication in any of those cases that the defendant's basis for seeking severance involved privileged material. Of course courts routinely decide severance motions on the basis of public filings where the defendant does not rely on privileged material and has not even requested ex parte review. But that says nothing about the proper approach where a defendant's arguments for severance require the court's consideration of privileged documents that contain indications of the defendant's trial strategy. In such circumstances, ex parte review is necessary and appropriate to protect defendants' Sixth Amendment rights.

---

[2] The Government does not allude to any First Amendment concerns. This silence is appropriate. The Declarations unquestionably contain privileged marital communications, and courts have consistently held that a litigant's interest in safeguarding such privileges "is capable of overriding the general preference for public access to judicial records." Siedle v. Putnam Invs., Inc., 147 F.3d 7, 11 (1st Cir. 1998).

II. The Government Has Only Limited Interests At Stake In This Motion, While Mr. McDonnell's Interests Are Substantial.

Not only does the Government fail to adduce any precedent supporting its contention that ex parte proceedings are improper in this context, it also fails to identify any compelling governmental interest at stake in this motion. As an initial matter, the Government's interests in the underlying severance motion are markedly less substantial than Mr. McDonnell's. From the Government's perspective, all that is gained by a denial of severance are the potential benefits of efficiency and the avoidance of multiple trials. See Zafiro v. United States, 506 U.S. 534, 540 (1993) (explaining that the joint-trial rules are designed to promote judicial economy). And even on that score, as explained in Mr. McDonnell's memorandum in support of his motion to sever, it is far from clear—as the defense will explain further when the Government responds to the merits of its severance request—that a joint trial would be more efficient. See Memo. in Support of Def. Robert F McDonnell's Mot. to Sever Joint Trial ("Motion to Sever"), Dkt. 115, at 14-15. But even if efficiencies could be achieved by a joint trial, those efficiencies would be slight since there are only two defendants. See id. at 14. For Mr. McDonnell, by contrast, severance is crucial to both preserving his rights at trial and allowing him to fully contest the ultimate issue of guilt or innocence. See Zafiro, 506 U.S. at 539 (discussing the "risk that a joint trial [could] compromise a specific trial right of one of the defendants, or prevent the jury from making a reliable judgment about guilt or innocence"). As Mr. McDonnell explained in his severance memorandum (and as the supporting Declarations will show), critical exculpatory evidence exists that will be introduced at trial only if severance is granted. See Motion to Sever at 7-11.

Moreover, as explained above, the Government—unlike an individual—has no due process right that could potentially be compromised by allowing the requested ex parte filing. Accordingly, the sole interest the Government can legitimately assert in resisting Mr.

McDonnell's motion is a generalized interest in the benefits of adversarial advocacy. To be sure, courts recognize—and Mr. McDonnell does not question—the advantages of the adversary system as a means for resolving legal and factual questions. See, e.g., Alderman, 394 U.S. at 184. But as outlined above, the courts have nevertheless consistently held that when adversarial proceedings would expose privileged materials or a defendant's trial strategy to the prosecution, some of the advantages of such proceedings must be sacrificed in favor of proceeding ex parte.

III. The Court Can Adequately Evaluate The Motion To Sever By Examining The Declarations Ex Parte And In Camera.

Finally, the Government overstates the actual burden that would be imposed by allowing the Declarations to be filed ex parte. Ultimately, the Government's argument boils down to the assertion that it will be unable to fully assist the Court with its evaluation of the merits of Mr. McDonnell's severance motion if it is not granted access to these highly sensitive declarations. The Government claims that, unless it is granted access to the Declarations, the Court will face the "daunting challenge" of resolving the "fact-intensive" severance motion without the Government's aid. Opp'n at 9, 13. But the Government exaggerates the difficulty that the Court will face in assessing the significance of the ex parte Declarations and deciding the severance motion on the basis of their content in light of well-settled law. In doing so, the Government makes a variety of arguments that go to the merits of the severance motion. Mr. McDonnell will not address those arguments here—though the defense has strong responses to each—but rather will await the Government's opposition to his actual severance motion.[3] Those portions of the Government's Opposition that actually purport to identify issues the Court will be unable to resolve without the benefit of full adversarial review of the Declarations, however, are not convincing.

---

[3] Among other things, the defense disputes the Government's claim that Mr. McDonnell "offers no assurance at all that he intends to use Mrs. McDonnell as a witness." Opp'n at 5. Mr. McDonnell's present intention is to call Mrs. McDonnell to testify if their trials are severed.

For example, the Government claims that without further detail about the testimony Mrs. McDonnell would give, it cannot evaluate whether there is a bona fide need for her testimony or whether it would be duplicative of that provided by such individuals as Mr. McDonnell's staff members. Opp'n at 5. But the Court can readily determine by reviewing the Declarations that no one besides Mr. and Mrs. McDonnell had access to much of the information to which she would testify or could provide testimony that would be similar in content or impact to hers. The Government's aid is not necessary to understand this point.

Similarly, the Government protests that it has insufficient information about the substance of the proposed testimony. In so doing, it poses a series of questions regarding Mrs. McDonnell's reasons for making certain choices about the waiver of her Fifth Amendment rights and marital communications privilege. Opp'n at 6-8. These questions, unsurprisingly, go to the heart of the defendants' trial strategy. As much as the Government might prefer to have full access to the defense's trial strategy for the purposes of the severance motion and beyond, the McDonnells' interest in maintaining its confidentiality are precisely why an ex parte filing is warranted.[4] As for whether the Declarations provide enough information about the substance of the proffered testimony to satisfy the test laid out in United States v. Parodi, 703 F.2d 768, 779 (4th Cir. 1983), again the Court can readily answer that question through its own review

---

[4] The Government recognizes the importance of protecting trial strategy, of course, and has thus vigorously defended its right to conceal its trial strategy. See, e.g., Gov't Opp. Mot. Particulars, Dkt. 84, at 1 (attacking the defense's request for particulars as a "thinly veiled 'attempt to compel [the] [defense] to disclose all of its evidence and perhaps its legal theory of the case . . . in advance of trial'" (quoting United States v. Taylor, No. 3:04-cr-227, 2005 WL 2298170, at *4 (E.D. Va. Sept. 21, 2005)). The defense should not be required to disclose "its legal theory of the case," id., as a precondition to requesting a severance from the Court.

The Government further asserts that without access to the Declarations, it cannot assess whether the testimony Mrs. McDonnell would provide is truly exculpatory in nature and effect. It complains that, at present, it has only a "vague and conclusory statement of counsel" describing the testimony. Opp'n at 8 (quoting Parodi, 703 F.2d at 780). But of course the Government has only an unadorned summary of the evidence Mr. McDonnell will present if severance is granted; describing it in any more detail would reveal privileged information and disclose core elements of his trial strategy. The Court, however, can review the fuller account provided in the Declarations, compare those Declarations to the Government's detailed Indictment, and then assess whether the testimony is sufficiently exculpatory to satisfy this aspect of the Parodi test.[5]

Although the Court, if it grants this motion, will be required to decide the severance motion without the benefit of the Government's detailed analysis of the content of the Declarations, the Court will face no insurmountable difficulties in executing that task. Courts have decided such motions on the basis of ex parte filings in the past when defendants' rights have required it. See, e.g., Fastow, 269 F. Supp. 2d at 910 (deciding defendant's motion regarding consecutive trial scheduling while "acknowledg[ing] that the Government is deprived of the opportunity to meaningfully address the factors related to the [proffered] testimony itself"). This Court will be fully capable of doing the same.

---

[5] The Government suggests that the marital communications privilege invoked by Mrs. McDonnell is invalid because "an ongoing conspiracy is charged during the time of the communications in question," Opp'n at 11, and the marital privilege does not cover "communications [that] have to do with the commission of a crime in which both spouses are participants," United States v. Parker, 834 F.2d 408, 411 (4th Cir. 1987). The Government further asks that the Court deny the request for ex parte submission of the Declarations until "the statements and validity of the privilege can be better evaluated and placed in context." Opp'n at 11. It is readily apparent from the Declarations, however, that the communications are exculpatory for Mr. McDonnell and that, as a result, he could not have been a joint participant in any crime with his wife. The Court can therefore quickly determine, by reading the Declarations, that the communications do not fall within the joint-crime exception to the marital communications privilege.

CONCLUSION

The Government's arguments in opposition to Mr. McDonnell's Motion are unsupported by relevant authority, exaggerate the harm to its interests, and overstate the burden that will be placed on the Court by ex parte in camera review. Ex parte filing of these privileged and sensitive documents is warranted in order to preserve the confidentiality of the defendants' trial strategy. Mr. McDonnell therefore respectfully requests that this Court grant his motion to file the supporting Declarations ex parte and under seal.

The defense stands ready to present further argument at a hearing on this Motion if the Court desires.

Dated: April 7, 2014

Respectfully submitted,

/s/ Jonathan A. Berry

Henry W. Asbill (pro hac vice)
Mary Ellen Powers (pro hac vice)
Noel J. Francisco (pro hac vice)
Ryan D. Newman (pro hac vice)
James M. Burnham (pro hac vice)
Jonathan A. Berry (VSB No. 81864)
JONES DAY
51 Louisiana Avenue, N.W
Washington, D.C. 20001
Telephone: (202) 879-3939
Facsimile: (202) 626-1700

John L. Brownlee (VSB No. 37358)
Timothy J. Taylor (VSB No. 84529)
HOLLAND & KNIGHT LLP
800 17th Street, N.W., Suite 1100
Washington, D.C. 20006
Telephone: (202) 828-1854
Facsimile: (703) 720-8610

Counsel for Robert F McDonnell

CERTIFICATE OF SERVICE

I, Jonathan A. Berry, am a member of the Bar of this Court. I hereby certify that on this 7th day of April, 2014, I caused the foregoing to be electronically filed with the Clerk of Court using the CM/ECF system, causing it to be served on all registered users.

Dated: April 7, 2014

Respectfully submitted,

/s/ Jonathan A. Berry
Jonathan A. Berry (VSB No. 81864)
JONES DAY
51 Louisiana Avenue, N.W
Washington, D.C. 20001
Telephone: (202) 879-3939
Facsimile: (202) 626-1700
Email: jberry@jonesday.com

Counsel for Robert F McDonnell

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
EASTERN DISTRICT OF VIRGINIA
RICHMOND DIVISION

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,

v.

ROBERT F. MCDONNELL,

Defendant.

Action No. 3:14-CR-12-1

MEMORANDUM ORDER

THIS MATTER is before the Court on Defendant Robert F. McDonnell's Motion for Leave to File Supporting Declarations Under Seal and for Ex Parte In Camera Review ("Motion") (ECF No. 116). McDonnell seeks to file two declarations in support of Defendants' Motion to Sever Trial (ECF Nos. 114, 120); the first declaration is by William A. Burck, counsel for Maureen G. McDonnell, and the second declaration is by John L. Brownlee and Henry W. Asbill, counsel for Mr. McDonnell (collectively, "Declarations"). For the reasons that follow, the Motion is hereby GRANTED IN PART, to the extent that it requests leave to file the Declarations under seal, and DENIED IN PART, to the extent that it requests in camera review of the Declarations.

The Declarations purportedly describe in detail testimony that Defendants expect to offer if the trial is severed. McDonnell asserts that the Declarations reveal testimony subject to the marital communications privilege and that allowing the Government to access the Declarations would impermissibly expose Defendants' trial strategy. The Government asserts that without access to the Declarations, it cannot respond to Defendants' Motion to Sever and the Court will be deprived of an adversarial proceeding in resolving the issue of severance.

The Supreme Court has recognized that "[a]s the need for adversary inquiry is increased by the complexity of the issues presented for adjudication, and by the consequent inadequacy of ex parte procedures as a means for their accurate resolution, the displacement of well-informed advocacy necessarily becomes less justifiable." Alderman v. United States, 394 U.S. 165, 184 (1969); compare United States v. Apple, 915 F.2d 899, 910 (4th Cir. 1990) (reversing a district court's judgment—which was made after in camera review of evidence and without an adversarial proceeding—that evidence was not tainted by a Fourth Amendment violation), with United States v. Beckford, 964 F. Supp. 1010, 1028 (E.D. Va. 1997) (finding that an adversarial proceeding was not necessary to apply the legal standard for issuance of a Rule 17 subpoena). Unlike determinations of whether Rule 17 subpoenas should issue, a motion to sever requires a fact-intensive, multi-factored analysis for which there is a heightened need for well-informed advocacy. In this respect, Defendants' Motion to Sever is more akin to the Fourth Amendment analysis considered by the Alderman Court than the less complex issues presented in the cases cited by McDonnell. See United States v. Carriles, 654 F. Supp. 2d 557, 570 (W.D. Tex. 2009) (allowing memoranda of understanding to be filed ex parte with the court in order to preserve the confidentiality of defense witnesses, while also ensuring that sensitive government information would be handled in compliance with a protective order); United States v. Lindh, 198 F. Supp. 2d 739 (E.D. Va. 2002) (same).[1]

Courts "should rarely if ever resort to in camera, ex parte examination of evidence or conduct such proceedings." United States v. Barnette, 644 F.3d 192, 209 (4th Cir. 2011). The Supreme Court has expressed concern about the accuracy of ex parte determinations and has implied that the burden of justifying such proceedings in complex determinations is high. See Alderman, 394 U.S. at 184. Reviewing the Declarations in camera and, thereby, allowing Defendants to support their Motion to Sever with argument and evidence not available to the Government would effectively deprive the Court of an adversarial proceeding in a complex determination. McDonnell has not met the high burden to justify such a deprivation.

---

[1] Although McDonnell has pointed to two district courts which allowed ex parte submission of documents in support of motions to sever, the facts and reasoning leading to those courts' opinions are not sufficiently clear to make them persuasive.

Accordingly, the Motion is DENIED IN PART to the extent that it seeks ex parte, in camera review of the Declarations.[2]

Nevertheless, McDonnell has otherwise met the requirements of Local Criminal Rule 49, and therefore, the Motion is GRANTED IN PART to the extent that it seeks leave to file the Declarations under seal. E.D. Va. Loc. Crim. R. 49(D). The Court finds that it has inherent authority to seal the Declarations, In re Knight Pub. Co., 743 F.2d 231, 235 (4th Cir. 1984), that McDonnell's interest in maintaining the confidentiality of the Declarations outweighs the public's right of access, and that no member of the public has objected to this Motion. Accordingly, McDonnell may file the Declarations under seal within three (3) days of the date of this Memorandum Order, if he so chooses. Additionally, McDonnell may file the Declarations ex parte under seal only for the purposes of preserving the record on appeal; the Court will not review the Declarations if filed ex parte under seal.

Let the Clerk send a copy of this Order to all counsel of record.

It is SO ORDERED.

/s/
James R. Spencer
Senior U. S. District Judge

ENTERED this 17th day of April 2014.

---

[2] Although McDonnell cites concerns about revealing trial strategy or privileged communications, the Court notes that Defendants' Motion to Sever affirmatively places the facts related to their potential testimony in issue. See United States v. Parodi, 703 F.2d 769, 779 (4th Cir. 1983) (delineating the test for severance). Not only would reviewing the Declarations in camera inequitably allow Defendants to employ the marital communications privilege as both a sword and a shield, see Baltimore Scrap Corp. v. David J. Joseph Co., No. L-96-827, 1996 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 19617, at *77 (D. Md. Sept. 16, 1996), McDonnell has failed to demonstrate either that the Declarations are privileged or that they necessarily reveal trial strategy.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
FOR THE EASTERN DISTRICT OF VIRGINIA
RICHMOND DIVISION

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,	)
	)
v.	)	CRIMINAL NO. 3:14-CR-00012
	)
ROBERT F. MCDONNELL	)	JUDGE JAMES R. SPENCER
MAUREEN G. MCDONNELL	)

DEFENDANT ROBERT F. MCDONNELL'S NOTICE OF NON-FILING OF DECLARATIONS PURSUANT TO THE COURT'S APRIL 17, 2014 ORDER

On April 17, 2014, the Court issued an Order concerning Defendant Robert F McDonnell's Motion #12 – Motion for Leave to File Supporting Declarations Under Seal and for Ex Parte in Camera Review. Though that Order authorized the defense to file declarations under seal, it denied the defense's request to file two declarations ex parte in order to preserve the marital communications privilege and avoid "prejudicing Defendants by revealing elements of their trial strategy." United States v. Carona, No. SA CR-06-224-AG, 2008 WL 1970221, at *1 (C.D. Cal. May 2, 2008). The defense now formally notifies the Court and the Government that it cannot file any declarations in support of the Motion to Sever at this time.

As outlined below, the defense cannot file declarations containing privileged information and core components of the defense's trial strategy three months before trial without irreparably prejudicing the defendants. Filing the declarations now would jeopardize the marital communications privilege, would undermine the defendants' Fifth Amendment rights, and would give the Government an unfair ability to prepare for trial with advance knowledge of the defense case. The defense therefore requests that the Court consider its Motion to Sever on the briefs as-filed (and to-be-filed), hear oral argument on that motion, and consider that motion on the current record. Should the Court be inclined to deny severance on this record, the defense respectfully requests that it take the Motion to Sever under advisement until the defendants are able to support their request with detailed information without irreparably prejudicing their trial rights. The defense intends to provide such information closer to the time of trial in the event that the Court declines to grant severance now.

I. The Brownlee-Asbill Declaration.

The Brownlee-Asbill declaration contains information that is protected by the marital communications privilege, which Mr. McDonnell seeks to introduce at trial but which Mrs. McDonnell presently intends to stop him from introducing, on grounds of privilege. As the Declaration's contents make clear, the information therein is privileged. "Information that is privately disclosed between husband and wife in the confidence of the marital relationship is privileged." United States v. Parker, 834 F.2d 408, 411 (4th Cir. 1987); see also id. ("Marital communications are presumptively confidential."). That declaration is an attorney-prepared summary of private conversations the McDonnells had and private emails between the McDonnells (on their private email accounts) that were confidential between the spouses and which are therefore privileged.

The Government has suggested that the privilege may not apply to these communications due to the joint-crime exception. That is not correct. To fall within the joint crime exception, statements must be "made in the course of the spouses' joint planning or participation in [a] crime." United States v. Parker, 834 F.2d 408, 412 n.7 (4th Cir. 1987) (Powell, J.). None of the statements in the Brownlee-Asbill Declaration fall within this exception because none pertain to "planning or participation in" any crime. To the contrary, all of the communications at issue repudiate the notion that the McDonnells were jointly participating in a crime because all negate any inference that the McDonnells were together planning or perpetrating any sort of crime.

Under the Court's Order, Mr. McDonnell cannot file the Brownlee-Asbill Declaration in a manner that the Government can access without violating Mrs. McDonnell's marital-communications privilege, which she is presently invoking. And because Mr. McDonnell cannot share that Declaration with the Government without violating his wife's privilege, the effect of the Court's decision is that the McDonnells must either waive or violate the marital communications privilege in order to present evidence in support of severance on the basis of the marital communications privilege. For that reason—as well as because the Brownlee-Asbill Declaration contains critical details of the defense's trial strategy—the defense cannot file the Brownlee-Asbill Declaration at this time.

II. The Burck Declaration.

The Burck Declaration contains an attorney-prepared summary outlining the testimony that Mrs. McDonnell will offer at Mr. McDonnell's trial should the Court sever the defendants. That information is extremely sensitive, such that disclosing it to the Government will severely prejudice Mr. and Mrs. McDonnell by revealing core elements of their trial strategy to the Government over three months before trial. The defense cannot file that declaration with service on the Government at this time without irreparably damaging the defendants' trial rights and thus will not file the Burck Declaration now.

* * *

In sum, the defense formally notifies the Court and the Government that it will not file any declarations at this time. As the defense will further explain in its Reply on the Motion to Sever, the defense requests—unless the Court is inclined to grant severance on the current record once briefing is complete—that the Court hold the defense's Motion to Sever under advisement pending trial. The defense intends to provide the Court with information supporting severance at a time when the defense is able to provide that information without giving a substantial and unfair advantage to the Government and thus irreparably prejudicing the McDonnells.

Dated: April 21, 2014

Respectfully submitted,

/s/ Jonathan A. Berry
Henry W Asbill (pro hac vice)
Mary Ellen Powers (pro hac vice)
Noel J. Francisco (pro hac vice)
Ryan D. Newman (pro hac vice)
James M. Burnham (pro hac vice)
Jonathan A. Berry (VSB No. 81864)
JONES DAY
51 Louisiana Avenue, N.W.
Washington, D.C. 20001
Telephone: (202) 879-3939
Facsimile: (202) 626-1700

John L. Brownlee (VSB No. 37358)
Timothy J. Taylor (VSB No. 84529)
HOLLAND & KNIGHT LLP
800 17th Street, N.W., Suite 1100
Washington, D.C. 20006
Telephone: (202) 828-1854
Facsimile: (703) 720-8610

Counsel for Robert F McDonnell

CERTIFICATE OF SERVICE

I, Jonathan A. Berry, am a member of the Bar of this Court. I hereby certify that on this 21st day of Aprii, 2014, I caused the foregoing to be electronically filed with the Clerk of Court using the CM/ECF system, causing it to be served on all registered users.

Dated: April 21, 2014

Respectfully submitted,

/s/ Jonathan A. Berry

Jonathan A. Berry (VSB No. 81864)
JONES DAY
51 Louisiana Avenue, N.W
Washington, D.C. 20001
Telephone: (202) 879-3939
Facsimile: (202) 626-1700
Email: jberry@jonesday.com

Counsel for Robert F McDonnell

IN THE UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT FOR THE
EASTERN DISTRICT OF VIRGINIA
Richmond Division

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA	)
	)
v.	)
	)	No. 3:14cr12-JRS
ROBERT F MCDONNELL and	)
MAUREEN G. MCDONNELL,	)
Defendants.	)

RESPONSE OF THE UNITED STATES IN OPPOSITION TO DEFENDANTS' MOTION TO SEVER JOINT TRIAL

The United States of America, by undersigned counsel, hereby responds to defendant Robert F McDonnell's and defendant Maureen G. McDonnell's joint Motion to Sever Joint Trial. See Doc. Nos. 114, 115, 120.[1] The Supreme Court and the Fourth Circuit apply a strong presumption in favor of trying defendants together who have been indicted together, especially defendants charged in a conspiracy. The defendants have presented only vague statements disclaiming all culpability and conclusory assertions that they want separate trials, all of which fall far short of the requisite factual showing in order to justify severance. The defendants simply have not demonstrated that they "will be unable to obtain a fair trial without severance." United States v. Parodi, 703 F.2d 768, 780 (4th Cir. 1983). As such, the Court should deny their severance motions. Further, the Court should reject the defendants' most recent proposal to defer litigation of severance until the eve of trial. Permitting the defendant to do so—using facts that the defendants possess now—would improperly evade this Court's orders, and as the defendants stated in originally demanding that this Court make its severance determination now,

---

[1] Mrs. McDonnell's motion, Doc No. 120, adopts Mr. McDonnell's motion, Doc. No. 114, and memorandum in support, Doc No. 115 ("Def. Mem.").

"a wait-and-see approach would be less efficient and would make management of the trial more difficult in a variety of ways." Def. Mem. at 3.

Argument

I. Defendants who are indicted together should be tried together.

"There is a preference in the federal system for joint trials of defendants who are indicted together. Joint trials 'play a vital role in the criminal justice system.'" Zafiro v. United States, 506 U.S. 534, 537 (1993) (quoting Richardson v. Marsh, 481 U.S. 200, 209 (1987)); see also United States v. Medford, 661 F.3d 746, 754 (4th Cir. 2011) ("[T]here is a presumption in favor of joint trials in cases in which defendants have been indicted together."); United States v. Lighty, 616 F.3d 321, 350 (4th Cir. 2010) ("The Supreme Court has recognized a strong preference for trying defendants who are indicted together in joint trials."); United States v. Strickland, 245 F.3d 368, 384 (4th Cir. 2001) ("Generally individuals indicted together should be tried together." (internal quotations omitted)). As a result, "severance pursuant to [Fed. R. Crim. P.] 14 is rarely granted." United States v. Dinkins, 691 F.3d 358, 368 (4th Cir. 2012). "A defendant's attempt to have her trial severed from that of a co-defendant is far less likely to succeed when the request is based on the asserted need for a co-defendant's testimony." United States v. Reavis, 48 F.3d 763, 767 (4th Cir. 1995).

On appeal, the "appellant must show that he was prejudiced by the denial of a severance motion in order to establish that the trial court abused its broad discretion in that regard." United States v. Singh, 518 F.3d 236, 255 (4th Cir. 2008). And no abuse of discretion will have occurred unless the denial of severance resulted in a miscarriage of justice. Reavis, 48 F.3d at 767 ("We will only find an abuse of discretion 'where the trial court's decision to deny a severance deprives the defendant of a fair trial and results in a miscarriage of justice.'").

II. The defendants fail to establish that severance is warranted to obtain Mrs. McDonnell's testimony on Mr. McDonnell's behalf.

To overcome the strong presumption in favor of joint trials in conspiracy cases and obtain severance on the basis of a need for a co-defendant's testimony, the Fourth Circuit requires the defendants to establish four threshold elements: (1) a bona fide need for the testimony of Mrs. McDonnell; (2) the likelihood that Mrs. McDonnell would testify at her husband's trial and waive her Fifth Amendment privilege; (3) the substance of Mrs. McDonnell's testimony; and (4) the exculpatory nature and effect of her testimony. Parodi, 703 F.2d at 779. "A defendant seeking to sever his trial from a codefendant's trial based on the asserted need for a codefendant's testimony must satisfy all four requirements articulated in Parodi." Medford, 661 F.3d at 754 (affirming denial of severance and stating that the "district court, upon concluding that the second Parodi factor had not been satisfied was not required to examine the remaining factors in conducting its Parodi analysis"). If the defendants meet the four Parodi threshold requirements, they then must convince the Court that the following factors weigh in their favor: (1) the significance of Mrs. McDonnell's testimony in relation to the defendants' theory of defense; (2) the extent of the prejudice caused by the absence of her testimony; (3) judicial administration and economy; (4) the timeliness of the motion; and (5) the likelihood that Mrs. McDonnell's testimony could be impeached. Id.

A. The defendants' vague and conclusory assertions cannot satisfy the threshold Parodi factors.

The defendants fail to meet even the threshold requirements under Parodi. When attempting to convince this Court to allow filing of declarations ex parte, the defendants conceded that their legal pleadings merely provided an "unadorned summary of the evidence." Def. R. McDonnell's Reply to Mot. for Leave to File Supp. Decl. for Ex Parte at 10 (Doc. No.

136) (emphasis added). Despite apparently recognizing that their bare pleadings were insufficient to meet the test for severance under Parodi, as evidenced by their attempt to have the Court consider the declarations, the defendants have now made the strategic decision that their concerns over revealing their trial strategy outweigh the necessity of a severance—or at least a severance right now. While a defendant seeking severance is not required to make a factual showing under oath,[2] the defendants' "vague and conclusory" statements through counsels' pleadings are obviously insufficient. Parodi, 703 F.2d at 780. The defendants must establish all four Parodi factors to obtain severance. Medford, 661 F.3d at 754. They have failed to meet this burden.

1. The bona fide need for, the substance of, and the exculpatory nature of Mrs. McDonnell's testimony.

The defendants' attempt to meet the first, third, and fourth Parodi factors essentially boils down to the summary claim that Mrs. McDonnell's testimony would exculpate Mr. McDonnell in "at least four ways": (1) her testimony "would disprove the Government's primary claim" as to the existence of a criminal conspiracy; (2) her testimony "would refute the Government's allegation" that Mr. McDonnell used his office to "promote" products; (3) her testimony "would refute the Government's allegation" that she solicited gifts and loans; and (4) her testimony "would refute the Government's allegation[s]" of concealment of the crimes. Def. Mem. at 8. Without any further specifics, blanket assertions that Mrs. McDonnell "would refute" or "would disprove" fall short of the necessary factual showing. "It only amounts to general assertions of [Mr. McDonnell's] innocence." United States v. Sherifi, No. 7:12cr20, 2012 WL 4191935, at *2 (E.D.N.C. Sept. 19, 2012). And general allegations that "merely contradict[] part of the Government's proof" do not support severance. Parodi, 703 F.2d at 780 (internal alterations, quotations, and citations omitted); see also Pursley, 577 F.3d at 1217 ("Under our precedent, this conclusory assertion of innocence lacks the requisite exculpatory value to require severance."); United States v. DeSimone, 660 F.2d 532, 540 (5th Cir. 1981) (affirming denial of severance because the "affidavit contains no clear indication of specific and exonerative facts to which he would testify if severed. Rather, it amounts to little more than a bare, conclusory assertion that he did not conspire with his co-defendants, nor they with him.").

---

[2] In Parodi, the Fourth Circuit noted that "in a proper case" the district court may require a statement under oath. 703 F.2d at 781. Other courts, however, have denied motions for severance based simply on the failure to submit affidavits or declarations. See, e.g., United States v. Pursley, 577 F.3d 1204, 1216 (10th Cir. 2009) (affirming denial of severance motion based on "the absence, at the time the motions were filed, of affidavits from [co-defendants] validating [movant defendant's] assertions"); United States v. Struminikovski, No. 87cr669-1, 1998 WL 74378, at *3 (N.D. Ill. July 12, 1988) ("To justify severance, a defendant must provide some support, such as an affidavit or the existence of recorded testimony, that his codefendant would testify in a manner that would exculpate him").

If Mrs. McDonnell plans to summarily deny the allegations in the indictment, this weighs against the exculpatory value of her testimony. "A codefendant's proposed testimony lacks credibility when it does not contravene his own penal interests." United States v. Tencer, 107 F.3d 1120, 1133 (5th Cir. 1997); accord United States v. Beale, 921 F.2d 1412, 1428 (11th Cir. 1991); United States v. Calhoun, 3:08cr77, 2010 WL 235026, at *3 (S.D. Miss. Jan. 15, 2010). Her testimony would be entirely self-serving. See DeSimone, 660 F.2d at 540 ("[B]ecause the purportedly exonerating testimony proffered by [co-defendant] did not contravene his own penal interests, but instead was extremely self-serving, it lacked a certain amount of credibility."). So nonexistent are the details about Mrs. McDonnell's denials that it is incredible to think that she actually would risk cross-examination to make the flat denials of the charges conveyed in the defendants' severance motions. And without such details it is impossible for the defendants to meet their burden of showing a bona fide need for Mrs. McDonnell's testimony.

2. The likelihood that Mrs. McDonnell would testify at her husband's trial and waive her Fifth Amendment privilege.

To meet the final remaining threshold Parodi factor, the defendants must demonstrate a likelihood that Mrs. McDonnell would waive her Fifth Amendment rights and testify at a severed trial regardless of which trial began first. Medford, 661 F.3d at 753; see also United States v. Silverio, No. 12-4629, 2013 WL 870638, at *1 (4th Cir. Mar. 11, 2013) (unpublished) (affirming district court's denial of severance motion when counsel was "equivocal" about likelihood of co-defendant testifying). The likelihood of Mrs. McDonnell's actual testimony at trial has two components: her willingness to testify in Mr. McDonnell's defense and his intent to actually call her. The defendants' pleadings are noncommittal on both components. Mrs. McDonnell's attorney merely states that it is "like[ly] that [she] would testify at [Mr. McDonnell's] trial and waive [her] Fifth Amendment privilege" if called. Def. Mem. at 10 (emphasis added).

But, it is far from clear that Mrs. McDonnell actually would waive her Fifth Amendment rights at Mr. McDonnell's separate trial given her refusal to do so at a joint trial. Id. at 10. If Mr. McDonnell were tried first, Mrs. McDonnell would purportedly waive her rights against self-incrimination and testify on his behalf—knowing full well that her own trial would occur next and her statements would be used against her. As noted by the Eastern District of North Carolina, "[i]f [the defendant] intends to invoke his Fifth Amendment privilege at a joint trial, then the court can think of no reason why [s]he would waive the privilege by testifying at [co-defendant's] trial in the event [co-defendant] was tried first." United States v. Dawson, No. 5:12cr284-F2, 2013 WL 3381380, at *2 (E.D.N.C. July 8, 2013). The Court should reject the defendants' inexplicable claim that Mrs. McDonnell is likely to testify at a severed trial, even though her testimony could be used against her.

Mr. McDonnell is even more noncommittal regarding whether he would call his wife to testify at his trial, stating repeatedly that he simply would like the "option" to call her. Def. Mem. at 2, 9, 14. Indeed, the heading on page 7 reads "Mrs. McDonnell Could Provide Testimony That Exculpates Mr. McDonnell." Def. Mem. at 7 (emphasis added). Even after the Government pointed out the equivocal nature of Mr. McDonnell's intent to use Mrs. McDonnell as a witness, see Gov. Resp. in Opp'n to Mot. for Leave to File Supp. Decl. for Ex Parte Review at 5 (Doc. No. 131), Mr. McDonnell responded by merely stating that he has the "present intention" of calling Mrs. McDonnell. Def. R. McDonnell's Reply to Mot. for Leave to File Supp. Decl. for Ex Parte Review at 10 (Doc. No. 136) (emphasis added). A "present intention" to call Mrs. McDonnell is incongruous with Mr. McDonnell's basic argument that he will be unable to obtain a fair trial without her testimony.

B. The defendants also fail to meet the remaining five Parodi considerations.

Even assuming that the defendants had established all four Parodi threshold requirements—which they plainly have not—they have not shown that the remaining five Parodi considerations weigh in their favor. First, as to the significance of Mrs. McDonnell's testimony in relation to the defendants' theory of defense, the defendants' "vague and conclusory allegations," Parodi, 703 F.2d at 780, provide no insight. They broadly contend that Mrs. McDonnell would "fully corroborate" the absence of a conspiratorial agreement. Def. Mem. at 11. But based on the record before this Court, they fail to offer any specific examples of how Mrs. McDonnell's testimony will do so.

As for the second consideration, the extent of the prejudice caused by the absence of her testimony, the defendants contend that her "omnipresence throughout the indictment" requires her testimony. Def. Mem. at 12. But other witnesses or documents may be able to provide the same information that Mr. McDonnell seeks (which the Court cannot determine absent more factual specifics from the defendants). Speculative allegations of prejudice, without specific examples, are insufficient. When considering prejudicial joinder on appeal, the Fourth Circuit has held: "Speculative allegations as to possible prejudice do not meet the burden of showing an abuse of discretion in denying a motion for severance." United States v. Becker, 585 F.2d 703, 707 (4th Cir. 1978).

As to the third consideration, judicial administration and economy weigh in favor of trying the defendants together. United States v. Ford, 88 F.3d 1350, 1361 (4th Cir. 1996). The Fourth Circuit has made clear that this is an important consideration directing trial courts to "pay close attention to judicial administration and economy" when making their severance determinations. Parodi, 703 F.2d at 779 (emphasis added). "Joint trials play a vital role in the criminal justice system and serve important interests: they reduce the risk of inconsistent verdicts and the unfairness inherent in serial trials, lighten the burden on victims and witnesses, increase efficiency, and conserve scarce judicial resources." United States v. Lopez, 649 F.3d 1222, 1233 (11th Cir. 2011). "It would impair both the efficiency and the fairness of the criminal justice system to require that prosecutors bring separate proceedings, presenting the same evidence again and again, requiring victims and witnesses to repeat the inconvenience (and sometimes trauma) of testifying, and randomly favoring the last-tried defendants who have the advantage of knowing the prosecution's case beforehand." Richardson v. Marsh, 481 U.S. 200, 210 (1987).

Furthermore, the defendants obviously receive great benefits from separate trials. The defendant going second receives a precise, highly detailed transcript of the Government's case, and codefendants can offer directly conflicting defenses, shifting the blame onto each other, without having a single jury sort out the conflicts. In this case, the second defendant will inevitably receive Jencks, Giglio, and other discovery materials at the time of disclosure to the first defendant. See United States v. Thomas, 48 F.3d 763, 767 (4th Cir. 1995) ("We will not grant a severance when doing so would allow co-defendants to obtain benefits that they would not have but for their joint indictment." (internal quotation and citations omitted)). But as the Supreme Court has observed, "it is well settled that defendants are not entitled to severance merely because they may have a better chance of acquittal in separate trials." Zafiro, 506 U.S. at 540.

In response, the defendants claim without explanation that severed trials "will be much less complex." Def. Mem. at 14. The defendants further claim, without explanation, that "separate trials are likely to take less combined time to resolve than the joined one." Id. at 15. But the joint trial is currently scheduled for five to six weeks. Given that the evidence is largely overlapping as to both defendants' involvement in the conspiracy, at a severed trial the Government would present basically the same case twice. It is difficult to imagine how separate trials could take less combined time to resolve than a joint trial.

As for the fourth consideration, the timeliness of the motion, the defendants' motion for severance is timely filed. But, as explained more fully below, their refusal to provide more than vague and conclusory assertions and attempt to utilize the filing of their severance motion as a placeholder for judicial determination at some later, unspecified date (if and when they should choose to supplement the record) may very well turn what would otherwise be a timely motion into an untimely one.

The final consideration, the likelihood that Mrs. McDonnell's testimony could be impeached, weighs heavily against severance. While it is unclear on the current record to what she would purportedly testify, the defendants' trial strategy boils down to their argument that—since she was not an elected or paid government official—Mrs. McDonnell cannot be guilty unless Mr. McDonnell is guilty. See Def. M. McDonnell's Mem. in Supp. Mot. to Dismiss at 9 (Doc. No. 119) ("Without a viable corruption case against Governor McDonnell, the Government's corruption case against Mrs. McDonnell must necessarily collapse as well.") As a result, Mrs. McDonnell has a strong incentive to attempt to exonerate Mr. McDonnell at trial, which would serve as significant impeachment fodder on cross-examination. In addition, the Government has compelling evidence that Mrs. McDonnell attempted to obstruct justice by lying to law enforcement officers and falsifying records to cover up the scheme. See Ind. ¶¶ 104, 106–107. This would further undercut the credibility and usefulness of her testimony before the jury. Factual detail regarding the specifics of Mrs. McDonnell's anticipated testimony would allow the Government to explain how that testimony could be impeached by emails, text messages, and other witnesses' testimony, but the defendants have refused to provide such specifics. In any event, even the vague and conclusory assertions of Mrs. McDonnell's testimony appear to be eminently impeachable, and this factor weighs against severance.

C. Defendants' reliance on Shuford for their claim that severance is obligatory here is erroneous.

Throughout their brief, the defendants rely heavily on United States v. Shuford, 454 F.2d 772 (4th Cir. 1971), a 2-1 Fourth Circuit case from 40 years ago that is factually distinguishable and fails to take into account much intervening law. Def. Mem. at 1, 2, 5, 6, 14, 15, 16, and 23. The defendants claim that "a severance is obligatory where one defendant's case rests heavily on the exculpatory testimony of his codefendant, willing to give such testimony but for the fear that by taking the stand in the joint trial he would jeopardize his own defense." Shuford, 454 F.2d at 776 (emphasis added), quoted in Def. Mem. at 6. Presumably, on the defendants' view, under Shuford's statement of an obligatory right to a severance, all that they need to do is assert that Mrs. McDonnell will not testify in a joint trial because it would jeopardize her own defense, and that is essentially the end of the matter.

In 1993, in keeping with a long tradition of law in analyzing severances, the Supreme Court addressed a circuit split on a defendant's right to a severance when codefendants had conflicting defenses. A number of lower-court cases had suggested a rather categorical approach to joint trials where the codefendants had antagonistic defenses. As the Supreme Court noted, "a vast number of [lower] court cases say that a defendant is entitled to a severance when the defendants present mutually antagonistic defenses in the sense that the acceptance of one party's defense precludes the acquittal of the other defendant." Zafiro, 506 U.S. at 537 (internal quotation marks omitted). The Supreme Court continued that "petitioners urge us to adopt a bright-line rule, mandating severance whenever codefendants have conflicting defenses." Id. at 538. But the Supreme Court responded, "We decline to do so." Id. The Court rejected that mutually antagonistic defenses are "prejudicial per se" and explained that Fed. R. Crim. P 14 "does not require severance even if prejudice is shown; rather it leaves the tailoring of relief to be granted, if any, to the district court's sound discretion." Id. at 538-539.

Citing Shuford, the defendants seem to argue that when defendants assert compatible defenses that involve denying all the charges, the defendants have a greater right (indeed an absolute one) to a severance than the Supreme Court held in Zafiro that defendants asserting antagonistic defenses have. But such an argument cannot be supported under the Supreme Court's long line of authority illustrated most recently by Zafiro or the Fourth Circuit's cases like Parodi, Dinkins, and Medford. Thus, Shuford offers no path for the defendants to rely on vague and conclusory assertions in their pleadings.

Moreover, in Parodi, this Court limited Shuford in part due to the simplicity of the trial in Shuford and the extremely narrow focus of the codefendant's testimony that prompted the separate trials. After noting that the conspiracy charged in Parodi occurred, unlike the one in Shuford, "over a substantial period of time at various locations" involving multiple participants, Parodi distinguished Shuford as follows:

> In Shuford the issue centered on one simple fact, i.e., the instructions given by the defendant to his employee for the billing of a single charge made against one single individual on one day. The Government's witness gave one version of the instruction; the defendant a contradictory one. If the defendant's version were the true one, he was innocent; if the witness' version were accurate, the jury could find him guilty. The co-defendant was expected to testify, if severance was granted, that the defendant's version was correct.

Parodi, 703 F.2d at 781. As the Fourth Circuit aptly observed in language that applies equally here, "That is not this case." Id; see also, e.g., United States v. Santoni, 585 F.2d 667, 674 (4th Cir. 1978) (noting the "unique factual setting" of Shuford in declining to extend it).[3] In sum, Shuford does not support the defendants' motion to sever in this case.

III. The defendants fail to establish that Mr. McDonnell's testimony at a joint trial will be impeded by the marital privilege so as to result in substantial prejudice.

The defendants next argue that Mr. McDonnell wants to testify about exculpatory marital communications but that Mrs. McDonnell will invoke the marital privilege to prevent this—but only at a joint trial. As a threshold matter, the defendants' litigation strategy and common sense seriously undermine their claim that Mrs. McDonnell would invoke the marital communications privilege at a joint trial. Mrs. McDonnell has made plain her belief that the Government's ability to successfully prosecute her is contingent on its successful prosecution of Mr. McDonnell. Def.

---

[3] The Supreme Court has rejected Shuford on a separate ground relating to aiding-and-abetting liability. See Standefer v. United States, 447 U.S. 10, 14 & n.7 (1980).

M. McDonnell's Mem. in Supp. Mot. to Dismiss at 9 (Doc. No. 119). Mr. McDonnell, in turn, claims that Mrs. McDonnell "intends to invoke [the marital communications privilege] at a joint trial" to prevent him "from testifying about highly exculpatory conversations he had with his wife." Def. Mem. at 17 Left unexplained, and apparently inexplicable, is why Mrs. McDonnell would prevent evidence from being presented to the jury at a joint trial that she apparently believes would inure to her benefit by exculpating her husband.

Mrs. McDonnell's proclaimed willingness to waive the marital communications privilege at separate trials, regardless of the order of the trials, further undercuts the defendants' claims that Mrs. McDonnell actually would invoke the privilege at a joint trial. If Mr. McDonnell's trial occurred first and he disclosed marital communications, through testimony or the introduction of documentary evidence, those communications would no longer be privileged. United States v. Hamilton, 701 F.3d 404, 407 (4th Cir. 2012) ("But, of course, to be covered by the privilege, a communication between spouses must be confidential; 'voluntary disclosure' of a communication waives the privilege."). Further, if Mrs. McDonnell followed through on her purported offer to testify on Mr. McDonnell's behalf, even if he were tried first, then she could be cross-examined by the Government regarding those communications. The Government would then be able to use the marital communications revealed at Mr. McDonnell's trial (e.g., the documentary evidence or Mrs. McDonnell's testimony) against her at her subsequent trial. As such, the defendants' claim that Mrs. McDonnell would invoke the marital communications privilege at a joint trial, but waive it at a separate trial, is perplexing to say the least.

The defendants' most recent litigation tactic suggests that Mrs. McDonnell would not actually invoke the marital communications privilege at either a joint or severed trial, because it is not in her strategic interest to do so. In Mr. McDonnell's notice to the Court of his refusal to file the two declarations, Mr. McDonnell asks the Court, if it is inclined to deny the severance motion, to delay ruling "until the defendants are able to support their request with detailed information." Def. R. McDonnell Notice of Non-Filing of Decl. at 1 (Doc. No. 140) ("RFM Notice"). He then claims that the "defense intends to provide such information closer to the time of trial in the event that the Court declines to grant severance now." Id. Apparently, Mrs. McDonnell is willing to allow the disclosure of the marital communications at issue in advance of trial, thereby waiving any privilege—but is unwilling to waive the privilege at this time. This tactical decision suggests little more than a desire to choose the time and place of the waiver so as to maintain a perceived strategic advantage.

Even assuming that Mrs. McDonnell would, in fact, invoke privileged marital communications at a joint trial to prevent Mr. McDonnell from testifying about their conversations, the defendants have failed to meet their burden of showing that they "will be unable to obtain a fair trial without severance." Parodi, 703 F.2d at 780 (internal quotations omitted). In their brief in support of their severance motion, the defendants make conclusory assertions that Mr. McDonnell's testimony about "several marital communications [] are clearly exculpatory." Def. Mem. at 19. The defendants then lists seven topic areas that they claim that Mr. McDonnell will testify to that relate to exculpatory marital communications.[4] Id. The defendants fail to provide any specifics regarding when the marital communications occurred or the circumstances of the communications. While the Government can only guess at what Mr. McDonnell would specifically testify to, it appears that he intends to disavow knowledge of each of the topic areas. Id. But even if Mrs. McDonnell successfully invoked the marital communications privilege, Mr. McDonnell still would be able to take the stand and disavow knowledge of each of the listed topic areas. For example, he would be free to testify that he didn't know that Mr. Williams paid for the New York shopping trip or the Rolex watch. Mr. McDonnell would similarly be able to testify that Mrs. McDonnell did not tell him about those things, as the absence of communications could not be considered privileged under the marital communications privilege. Given Mr. McDonnell's unfettered ability to testify about his lack of knowledge and the lack of communications with Mrs. McDonnell regarding the seven listed topic areas, and in the absence of any detail whatsoever about Mrs. McDonnell's testimony, the defendants have failed to demonstrate severance is necessary in order for them to receive a fair trial.

---

[4] A close examination of his brief reveals that of these seven topic areas, he only claims that he "intends to disclose" marital communications for three of them. Def. Mem. at 19-21 (e.g., "the Conspiratorial Agreement," "the $50,000 Personal Loan to Mrs. McDonnell," and "the Rolex Watch"). For the remaining four topic areas, Mr. McDonnell merely claims that he "intends to rely" on marital communications. Id. The Government is unable to discern if there is a purposeful distinction between "intends to disclose" and "intends to rely." To the extent that "intends to rely" means something less than the disclosure of privileged communications, Mrs. McDonnell would be unable to invoke the marital privilege to prevent Mr. McDonnell from testifying on these topic areas.

Mr. McDonnell's reliance on the Third Circuit's decision in United States v. Ammar, 714 F.2d 238 (3d Cir. 1983), is misplaced.[5] Def. Mem. at 18. In his memorandum, Mr. McDonnell cites Ammar in support of his argument that "severance is required where one spouse seeks to disclose exculpatory marital communications, but the other invokes the privilege." Id. at 17–

---

[5] The other cases cited by Mr. McDonnell in support of his argument that severance should be granted where one spouse may attempt to invoke the marital privilege are similarly unavailing. See United States v. Carona, No. 8:06cr224, 2008 WL 1970221 (C.D. Cal. May 2, 2008) (granting severance, with almost no analysis, in case where wife wanted to testify in her defense and inculpate her spouse based on court's determination that wife had met burden of establishing the basic exculpatory nature of the communications); Peek v. United States, 321 F.2d 934, 942 (9th Cir. 1963) (affirming district court's denial of pre-trial severance motion because "granting of such motion is within the discretion of the district court"); United States v. Thoresen, 281 F. Supp. 598, 600–01 (N.D. Cal. 1967) (granting severance based on potential invocation by both defendants, who had antagonistic defenses, of adverse spousal privilege where law at the time barred the testimony of one spouse against the other unless both consented).

18 (emphasis added). But the court in Ammar merely stated that a "severance may be granted for a co-defendant spouse, if necessary to protect his or her rights." 714 F.2d at 257 (emphasis added). The court did not suggest that severance was mandatory. In fact, the court in Ammar upheld the trial court's denial of severance because the marital communications at issue pertained to ongoing or future criminal activity and severance is "a decision discretionary with the trial court." Id. at 258. Here, Mr. McDonnell has failed to provide any specifics about how his purported testimony about maritally privileged communications would be exculpatory. Nor has he been able to explain any legitimate reason why Mrs. McDonnell would invoke the privilege in a joint trial, but not in a separate trial. As such, Ammar dictates that this Court has the discretion to deny severance, and the Court should exercise that discretion to deny the motion here.

IV This Court should reject the defendants' proposal to relitigate severance on the eve of trial, using information that the defendants possess now.

In response to this Court's Order of April 17, 2014, Doc. No. 137 ("April 17 Order"), Mr. McDonnell informed the Court that the defendants declined to pursue either of the two options that the Court provided for them to submit factual support for their severance motion. See RFM Notice at 2. The defendants declined to file their attorneys' declarations under seal, but not ex parte, so that this Court and the Government could review them in evaluating their severance motion, and they also declined to file both ex parte and under seal their already drafted declarations to preserve the record on appeal. Compare April 17 Order at 3 with RFM Notice at 3. Instead, Mr. McDonnell filed a notice expressing his intent to follow a third option that this Court's order of April 17 did not offer, that Fed. R. Crim. P 12 does not permit, and that this Court's agreed-upon scheduling order of February 21, 2014, does not authorize. Mr. McDonnell asserts that, if this Court denies his severance motion, the "defense intends" to "support their request with detailed information" and will do so "closer to the time of trial." RFM Notice at 2. The Court should reject this third option.

Under Fed. R. Crim. P 12(c), a "court may, at the arraignment or as soon afterward as practicable, set a deadline for the parties to make pretrial motions and may also schedule a motions hearing." In keeping with this provision, this Court entered an agreed-upon scheduling order on February 21, 2014. Doc. No. 64. That order provides that the defendants "shall file all dispositive and other motions pursuant to Fed. R. Crim. P 12 no later than March 25, 2014, unless for good cause shown." Id. at 1. This provision covers a severance motion because Rule 12 expressly identifies severance motions and says that "a Rule 14 motion to sever charges or defendants" is among the motions that "must be raised before trial." Fed. R. Crim. P 12(b)(3)(D). Although this provision refers merely to "before trial," the 1974 Advisory Committee Notes for Rule 12 explain that a court's scheduling order sets the specific pretrial deadline. The Advisory Committee notes say that, while an old version of the rule was "unclear as to whether the waiver results only from a failure to raise the issue prior to trial or from the failure to do so at the time fixed by the judge for a hearing," the current version of Rule 12 "makes clear that the defendant and, where appropriate, the government have an obligation to raise the issue at the motion date set by the judge pursuant to subdivision (c)." The plain language of Rule 12(e) confirms what the Advisory Committee notes say: "A party waives any Rule 12(b)(3) defense, objection, or request not raised by the deadline the court sets under Rule 12(c) or by any extension the court provides. For good cause, the court may grant relief from the waiver." Fed. R. Crim. P 12(e) (emphasis added).

The Fourth Circuit has rigorously enforced the deadlines for motions that must be made before trial under Rule 12. See, e.g., United States v. Cabrera-Beltran, 660 F.3d 742, 753-54 (4th Cir. 2011) (claim of indictment error waived by failure to file timely pretrial motion); United States v. King, 628 F.3d 693, 699 (4th Cir. 2011) (same); United States v. Ruhe, 191 F.3d 376, 385–87 (4th Cir. 1999) (suppression ruling); United States v. Ricco, 52 F.3d 58, 62 (4th Cir. 1995) (same). More specifically, the Fourth Circuit has applied this precedent to severance motions. "We conclude that Jacobs waived his objection to a joint trial because he failed to file a motion to sever prior to trial, see Fed. R. Crim. P. 12(b)(3)(D), and does not claim on appeal that he had insufficient information to make a severance motion prior to trial." United States v. Jacobs, 70 F. App'x 689, 691 (4th Cir. 2003) (citing Fed. R. Crim. P. 12(e); United States v. Ferguson, 778 F.2d 1017, 1019-20 (4th Cir. 1985)); see also United States v. Akins, __ F.3d __, No. 12-40515, 2014 WL 1225098, at *12 (5th Cir. Mar. 25, 2014) ("[W]here an appellant failed to move to sever before trial as Federal Rule of Criminal Procedure 12(b) requires, he waive[s] his severance argument on appeal." (internal quotation omitted)). These cases are in keeping with longstanding Supreme Court precedent. Davis v. United States, 411 U.S. 233 (1973) (constitutional challenge to selection of grand jurors waived when no pretrial motion was made; good cause could not be established because facts supporting challenge were available before trial).

In essence, the defendants seek to file an unsupported placeholder motion by the motions deadline and then, if they lose that unsupported motion, relitigate the issue on the eve of trial, at a time of their choosing, and force this Court and the Government to evaluate whatever factual detail they choose to provide then. But in announcing their intention to follow this procedure, the defendants cannot claim that they "had insufficient information" to provide the factual support for their motion by the deadline in the agreed-upon scheduling order. Jacobs, 70 F. App'x at 691; see also Ferguson, 778 F.2d at 1020 ("The record shows that sufficient information was available to defendants before trial to allow them to frame motions for severance based on a theory of irreconcilable defenses; consequently, there was not good cause, under Fed. R. Crim. P 12(f), to excuse their waiver."). Moreover, this Court has already rejected what the defendants would have to invoke as "good cause"; this Court found that "McDonnell has failed to demonstrate either that the Declarations are privileged or that they necessarily reveal trial strategy." April 17 Order at 3 n. 2. But even if their declarations were privileged or did reveal trial strategy, that would not constitute good cause because this Court correctly determined that ex parte affidavits are unjustifiable here.

In seeking unilaterally to move the agreed-upon deadline for a severance motion and force this Court to adjudicate severance twice, the defendants rely on their disagreement with this Court's ruling declining to accept ex parte filings. But in declining to accept the defendants ex parte filings on the severance motion, this Court made two points that the defendants' proposal would effectively undercut.

First, this Court concluded that "allowing Defendants to support their Motion to Sever with argument and evidence not available to the Government would effectively deprive the Court of an adversarial proceeding in a complex determination. McDonnell has not met the high burden to justify such a deprivation." April 17 Order at 2. But by forcing the United States and the Court to evaluate their severance motion on the eve of trial, the defendants again seek to "effectively deprive the Court of an adversarial proceeding in a complex determination" by forcing the litigation to occur when the Court and the parties are deeply involved in trial preparations immediately before trial. The need for orderly pretrial procedure is exactly why Rule 12 and this Court's February 21 order set a deadline for severance motions well in advance of trial, and apparently why the defendants—at least at first—insisted on prompt resolution of their motion.[6] Cf. Davis, 411 U.S. at 242 ("a claim once waived pursuant to [Rule 12] may not later be resurrected, either in the criminal proceedings or in federal habeas, in the absence of the showing of 'cause' which that Rule requires.").

Second, this Court observed that allowing the defendants to use ex parte filings when they are the movants—seeking relief that cuts against the usual rule that coconspirators are tried together—would "inequitably allow Defendants to employ the marital communications privilege as both a sword and a shield." April 17 Order at 3 n. 2. The defendants' proposal to relitigate a severance motion at a time of their choosing, right before trial, aggravates the problem of their seeking to use secret pleadings as both sword and shield, using information that they have possessed all along.

In short, there is no justification for revisiting this Court's severance ruling on the eve of trial, after the agreed-upon deadline for a severance motion, because the defendants do not want to reveal until then information that they possess now.

Conclusion

For the foregoing reasons, the Government respectfully requests that the Court deny the defendants' Motion to Sever Joint Trial (Doc. Nos. 114 and120).

---

[6] In moving for a severance, the defendants stated that "the defense requests that the Court sever the accused now, not midtrial" because they "should not have to face the possibility of changing his entire trial strategy midstream." Def. Mem. at 3. "If a severance is not granted now, the defense must prepare as if the McDonnells will be tried together." Id. at 4. "Not only would a wait-and-see approach prejudice Mr. McDonnell, it would be less efficient and would make management of the trial more difficult in a variety of ways." Id.

Respectfully submitted,

DANA J. BOENTE
United States Attorney

By: /s/
Michael S. Dry
Richard Cooke
Ryan S. Faulconer
Jessica D. Aber
Counsel for the United States
U.S. Attorney's Office
600 E. Main Street, Suite 1800
Richmond, Va. 23219
Phone: 804-819-5400
Fax: 804-771-2316
Email: michael.s.dry@usdoj.gov
richard.cooke@usdoj.gov
ryan.faulconer2@usdoj.gov
jessica.d.aber@usdoj.gov

JACK SMITH
Chief, Public Integrity Section
Criminal Division
U.S. Department of Justice

By: /s/
David V Harbach, II
Counsel for the United States
U.S. Department of Justice
Criminal Division
Public Integrity Section
1400 New York Ave., N.W., Ste 12100
Washington, D.C. 20005
Phone: 202-514-1412
Fax: 202-514-3003
Email: david.harbach@usdoj.gov

CERTIFICATE OF SERVICE

I hereby certify that on April 24, 2014, a true and correct copy of the foregoing was delivered to all counsel of record via the Court's Electronic Filing System.

By: /s/
Jessica D. Aber
Virginia Bar No. 72680
Assistant United States Attorney
United States Attorney's Office
600 East Main Street, Suite 1800
Richmond, Virginia 23219
Phone: (804) 819-5400
Fax: (804) 771-2316
Email: jessica.d.aber@usdoj.gov

IN THE UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT FOR THE
EASTERN DISTRICT OF VIRGINIA
Richmond Division

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA	)
	)
v.	)
	)	No. 3:14cr12-JRS
ROBERT F MCDONNELL and MAUREEN G. MCDONNELL,	)
	)
Defendants.	)

RESPONSE OF THE UNITED STATES TO DEFENDANTS' MOTIONS FOR OMNIBUS VOIR DIRE RELIEF

The United States of America, by undersigned counsel, hereby responds to defendant Robert F McDonnell's and defendant Maureen G. McDonnell's Joint Motion for Omnibus Voir Dire Relief. See Doc. Nos. 109, 110, 113.[1] As a general matter, the Government considers Mr. and Mrs. McDonnell to be equal to other defendants who appear before this Court; their treatment should be no better and no worse. Public interest in the case, however, warrants some of the additional voir dire measures proposed by the defendants—not just to ensure that the defendants receive a fair trial, but to ensure that the public and the Government do, as well.[2] As to the specific measures requested in the defendants' motion, the Government supports them in part, opposes them in part, and defers to the Court in part, as described below.

---

[1] Mrs. McDonnell's motion, Doc No. 113, adopts Mr. McDonnell's motion, Doc. No. 109, and memorandum in support, Doc No. 110 ("Def. Mem.").

[2] The Government strongly disagrees with the defendants' implicit accusations that it is the source of the "unnamed law enforcement sources" that provided information to the press. Def. Mem. at 3. It should be noted that Mr. McDonnell, his legal defense fund, and supporters have made numerous public statements that captured media attention. See, e.g., Laura Vozzella, McDonnell Says He'll Return All of Businessman's Gifts, Washington Post, July 31, 2013; Laura Vozzella, McDonnell's Backers Create Defense Fund, Washington Post, July 20, 2013; Olympia Meola, McDonnell's Lawyer: Star Scientific Got No Public Money, Richmond Times-Dispatch, July 19, 2013. And Mr. McDonnell's legal defense fund has sent blast emails to large groups of individuals, including potential witnesses in this case, which include self-serving characterizations of the prosecution, such as: (1) "Justice Goes After the GOP" (Feb. 1, 2014); (2) "Indictment A Lot of Smoke But No Fire" (Jan. 23, 2014); and (3) "Governor Bob McDonnell's legal team filed their first public motions in response to the government's wrongful indictment built upon a witness with no credibility" (Jan. 22, 2014). Nevertheless, the

I. Applicable Law

Federal Rule of Criminal Procedure 24 provides the procedure for empaneling a jury in a federal criminal trial:

> (1) In General. The court may examine prospective jurors or may permit the attorneys for the parties to do so.
>
> (2) Court Examination. If the court examines the jurors, it must permit the attorneys for the parties to:
>
> (A) ask further questions that the court considers proper; or
> (B) submit further questions that the court may ask if it considers them proper.

Fed. R. Crim. P 24(a).

Under this rule, district courts have broad discretion relating to voir dire, so long as the questions presented by the trial court ensure that the defendants have "a fair trial by a panel of impartial, 'indifferent' jurors." Irvin v. Dowd, 366 U.S. 717, 722 (1960); see also United States v. Lancaster, 96 F.3d 734, 738 (4th Cir. 1996) (en banc) ("The conduct of voir dire necessarily is committed to the sound discretion of the trial court because the determination of impartiality, in which demeanor plays such an important part, is particularly within the province of the trial judge."). In order to determine jury impartiality, "the Constitution lays down no particular tests and procedure is not chained to any ancient or artificial formula." Skilling v. United States, __U.S. __, 130 S.Ct. 2896, 2917 (2010) (internal quotation omitted).

Government agrees that the volume of pretrial publicity—regardless of perceived tone—warrants some of the measures proposed by the defendants.

II. Proposed Measures

1. Jury Questionnaire

The parties previously agreed to submit proposed jury questionnaires to the Court. See Order ¶ 3 (Doc. No. 64). The Government will reserve comment on the broad topic areas foreshadowed by the defendants, Def. Mem. at 15, until it sees their actual questionnaires. The Government defers to the Court, however, on balancing judicial economy concerns in evaluating whether the Court should mail the questionnaires to the prospective jurors or require prospective jurors to come to the Courthouse.

2. Attorney Questioning of Prospective Jurors

The Government opposes direct attorney questioning of individual prospective jurors. It is well-settled that a trial judge may conduct voir dire without allowing counsel to pose questions directly to the potential jurors. Fed. R. Crim. P 24(a). And "a trial judge may question prospective jurors collectively rather than individually." United States v. Bakker, 925 F.2d 728, 734 (4th Cir. 1991). A defendant does not always have the right "to have questions posed during voir dire specifically directed to matters that conceivably might prejudice veniremen against him." Ristaino v. Ross, 424 U.S. 589, 594 (1976). It is only necessary that the "voir dire as a whole is reasonably sufficient to uncover bias or partiality in the venire." Lancaster, 96 F.3d 734, 739-40 (4th Cir. 1996).

Because the Court does not customarily permit attorney questioning, and because the Court can ably conduct voir dire from the bench, the Court should not make a special exception in this case.

3. Additional Peremptory Challenges for the Defendants

The Government opposes additional peremptory challenges for the defendants—particularly, as the defendants request, without commensurate additional challenges for the Government. In general, in a non-capital felony case involving multiple defendants, the government has 6 peremptory challenges, and the defendants jointly have 10 challenges. Fed. R. Crim. P 24(b)(2). However, a district court "may allow additional peremptory challenges to multiple defendants, and may allow the defendants to exercise those challenges separately or jointly." Fed. R. Crim. P 24(b); see E.D. Va. Local R. 24(B) ("In a criminal case where there is more than one defendant, the Court may allow each or both sides more than the usual number of peremptory challenges permitted by law").

Moreover, "[t]he requirement to treat the parties defendant as a single party for the purpose of peremptory challenges has long been a part of the federal system " Stilson v. United States, 250 U.S. 583, 586 (1919). Although Rule 24 permits the court to grant additional challenges in multi-defendant cases, it remains within the court's discretion whether to do so. Id. at 586; see also United States v. Meredith, 824 F.2d 1418, 1423 (4th Cir. 1987) (affirming denial of additional challenges in seven-defendant case, where court offered defense counsel the opportunity to explain why additional challenges were necessary, and allowed one additional challenge to strike prospective juror with hearing impairment).

Additional peremptory challenges also protract jury selection. See Fed. R. Crim. P 2 (rules should be interpreted to eliminate unjustifiable delay). Indeed, "[t]he whole point of setting a limit on the number of peremptory challenges is to require counsel to make strategic decisions and to conserve judicial resources that might be wasted by allowing each counsel to challenge every juror." United States v. Farmer, 924 F.2d 647, 653 (7th Cir. 1991).

While the defendants summarily characterize their trial goals as "divergent,"[3] they fail to explain with any specificity how this differs from most joint trials in which co-conspirators have various defenses. The defendants also claim that the purportedly negative publicity about the case somehow warrants additional strikes (and fewer for the Government), but provide no authority for this proposition. In sum, the defendants have failed to demonstrate that, in addition to the usual voir dire procedures, additional peremptory challenges are necessary to ensure that the jurors in this case are impartial. See Stilson, 250 U.S. at 586 ("[T]here is nothing in the Constitution of the United States which requires the Congress to grant peremptory challenges to defendants in criminal cases; trial by an impartial jury is all that is secured.").

Accordingly, the Government opposes the defendants' request for additional peremptory challenges, but in the event the Court increases the defendants' number of peremptory challenges, the Government requests a commensurate increase in its peremptory challenges.

4. The "Struck System" of Peremptory Challenges

The defendants propose the use of the "struck system" for exercising peremptory challenges. Because the Court does not customarily use this method, the Government opposes this request. We note that no other Court in this division uses this method, and the Government is unaware of any reason why this case should be treated differently. The Court should conduct jury selection using its typical procedures.

---

[3] This factual assertion is somewhat inconsistent with the defendants' motions to sever, in which they claim that both Mr. McDonnell and Mrs. McDonnell will provide exculpatory testimony as to themselves and each other. See, e.g., Mem. in Supp. Mot. Sever (Doc. No. 115), at 8 (noting that Mrs. McDonnell's testimony would exculpate Mr. McDonnell "in at least four ways"), 19 (noting that Mr. McDonnell will disclose confidential marital communications to show that no conspiratorial agreement existed between them).

5. A Neutral Summary of the Case

The Government takes no position on this request, but notes that it can provide the Court with a paragraph summary of the pending Indictment for use in jury selection. This will not be "neutral" as the allegations in the Indictment are not neutral.

6. Juror Note-Taking During Trial

The Government does not oppose the defendants' request that jurors be permitted to take notes during trial and note that this is the Court's customary practice..

7. Disclosure of Alternate Jurors

The Government defers to the Court on the defendant's request that alternate jurors not be informed of their status until deliberation.

III. Conclusion

For the foregoing reasons, the Government supports in part, opposes in part, and takes no position in part on the defendants' Joint Motion for Omnibus Voir Dire Relief (Doc. Nos. 109, and 113).

Respectfully submitted,

DANA J. BOENTE
United States Attorney

JACK SMITH
Chief, Public Integrity Section
Criminal Division
U.S. Department of Justice

By: /s/
Jessica D. Aber
Michael S. Dry
Ryan S. Faulconer
Counsel for the United States
U.S. Attorney's Office
600 E. Main Street, Suite 1800
Richmond, Va. 23219
Phone: 804-819-5400
Fax: 804-771-2316
Email: jessica.d.aber@usdoj.gov
michael.s.dry@usdoj.gov
ryan.faulconer2@usdoj.gov

By: /s/
David V Harbach, II
Counsel for the United States
U.S. Department of Justice
Criminal Division
Public Integrity Section
1400 New York Ave., N.W., Ste 12100
Washington, D.C. 20005
Phone: 202-514-1412
Fax: 202-514-3003
Email: david.harbach@usdoj.gov

CERTIFICATE OF SERVICE

I hereby certify that on April 24, 2014, a true and correct copy of the foregoing was delivered to all counsel of record via the Court's Electronic Filing System.

By: /s/

Jessica D. Aber
Virginia Bar No. 72680
Assistant United States Attorney
United States Attorney's Office
600 East Main Street, Suite 1800
Richmond, Virginia 23219
Phone: (804) 819-5400
Fax: (804) 771-2316
Email: jessica.d.aber@usdoj.gov

IN THE UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
FOR THE EASTERN DISTRICT OF VIRGINIA

Richmond Division

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA	)
	)
v.	)
	)	No. 3:14cr12
ROBERT F MCDONNELL and	)
MAUREEN G. MCDONNELL,	)
Defendants.	)

GOVERNMENT'S RESPONSE IN OPPOSITION TO DEFENDANTS' JOINT MOTION TO DISMISS COUNTS 1–11 OF THE INDICTMENT

The United States of America, by undersigned counsel, respectfully files this response in opposition to defendant Robert F McDonnell's and defendant Maureen G. McDonnell's joint Motion to Dismiss Counts 1–11 of the Indictment. See Doc. Nos. 105, 111.[1] Counts 1–11 charge both defendants with (i) conspiracy to commit honest-services wire fraud, in violation of 18 U.S.C. § 1349 (Count 1); (ii) honest-services wire fraud, in violation of 18 U.S.C. § 1343 (Counts 2–4); (iii) conspiracy to obtain property under color of official right, in violation of 18 U.S.C. § 1951 (Count 5); and (iv) obtaining and attempting to obtain property under color of official right, in violation of 18 U.S.C. § 1951 (Counts 6–11). The defendants move to dismiss those counts pursuant to Federal Rule of Criminal Procedure 12(b)(3)(B), claiming that the Indictment's allegations are legally insufficient.[2] For the reasons discussed below, the defendants' motion prematurely raises factual issues that should be reserved for trial, is meritless in any event, and should be denied.

---

[1] Mrs. McDonnell's motion, Doc. No. 111, adopts Mr. McDonnell's motion, Doc. No. 105, and memorandum in support, Doc No. 106 ("Def. Mem."). In addition, Mrs. McDonnell has filed a separate motion to dismiss, which sets forth additional arguments with respect to Counts 1–11 and also moves to dismiss Count 14. See Doc. No. 118. The Government will respond in a separate filing to that motion.

[2] See Def. Mem. at 5 (citing Rule 12); Doc. No. 111 at 1 (citing Rule 12(b)(3)(B)).

I. Overview of Facts Alleged in the Indictment[3]

A businessman has a new product. It is a dietary supplement that he believes has various positive health benefits. To convince potential customers to buy the product, he wants independent research studies demonstrating that those health benefits are real, and he wants word of mouth to spread about the health benefits to those who use the product. As with any new product, however, he knows that physicians and researchers may be skeptical, and he knows that finding enough new customers to spread the word will not be easy. See Ind. ¶¶ 4–5, 8–12.

The businessman decides to ask his state's governor for help in the matter. The businessman and the governor are not friends, and they had not met before the campaign. But the governor had been elected on a platform of taking action to foster economic development for businesses across the state. On a cross-country flight after the governor takes office, the businessman describes the health benefits of his new product to the governor and explains that the businessman needs the state government's help to further the cause. Six months later, at a dinner at the governor's mansion with the governor and his wife, the businessman again discusses his new product with the governor. See Ind. ¶¶ 6–7, 13–14, 17, 25.

Within days of the dinner, the governor's wife requests $65,000 from the businessman—a $50,000 loan and $15,000 to defray the cost of the governor's daughter's upcoming wedding. The businessman discusses the loan with the governor, agreeing that no paperwork is necessary and that no payments need be made for two years. Less than a week after the businessman pays the $65,000, the governor and his family spend more than $2,300 on a day of golf and meals at the businessman's private golf club. The businessman does not join them, but he foots the bill.

---

[3] Because the defendants move to dismiss Counts 1–11 of the Indictment as legally insufficient, they are required "to demonstrate that the allegations therein, even if true, would not state an offense." United States v. Thomas, 367 F.3d 194, 197 (4th Cir. 2004). The facts set forth here are taken from the Indictment's allegations.

Three days later, the governor's wife offers the governor's mansion for the businessman's upcoming official launch of his new product. Just over two weeks after that, the businessman sends a letter to the governor, reiterating the businessman's desire for help from the state government in obtaining research studies at state universities. See Ind. ¶¶ 26–28, 32, 37, 40–41.

Over the year or so that follows, the governor and his wife solicit additional things of value from the businessman, including $70,000 in additional undocumented personal loans negotiated by the governor, thousands of dollars of golf for the governor and his family, a weekend vacation at the businessman's multimillion-dollar lake house (including use of the businessman's Ferrari), and a Rolex. In exchange, the governor agrees to (and does) arrange meetings for the businessman, host events for the businessman, attend events for the benefit of the businessman, and advocate for the businessman's product with other state officials—all in his official capacity and to advance the businessman's effort to obtain research studies and other assistance from state government. The governor intentionally structures his financial dealings with the businessman to avoid disclosure. See Ind. ¶¶ 22, 42–101, 110–11.

As described in greater detail below, the conduct set forth above—and alleged in the Indictment here—is a quid pro quo bribe scheme that satisfies any reasonable definition of corruption. The defendants' motion to dismiss should therefore be denied.

II. Argument

The defendants have moved pursuant to Federal Rule of Criminal Procedure 12(b)(3)(B) to dismiss Counts 1–11 of the Indictment because, they erroneously claim, (i) the Indictment fails to allege a corruption offense because it does not properly allege the necessary "official action" required to prove a quid pro quo, Def. Mem. at 7–28; (ii) the statutes criminalizing the charged conduct are unconstitutionally vague as applied to them, id. at 28–29; and (iii) the United States Constitution forbids federal prosecution of Mr. McDonnell for "non-corrupt conduct that is legal under state law," id. at 29–30. For the reasons set forth below, their arguments have no merit, and their motion should be denied.

A. The Indictment adequately charges the necessary elements of the corruption offenses at issue and is sufficient on its face.

To meet the guarantees of the Fifth and Sixth Amendments to the Constitution, an indictment is sufficient if it (i) contains the elements of the offense charged and fairly informs a defendant of the charge; and (ii) enables a defendant to plead double jeopardy as a bar to future prosecutions for the same offense. See Hamling v. United States, 418 U.S. 87, 117 (1974). An indictment that tracks the statutory language is normally sufficient if it contains all the elements and is accompanied by a statement of facts that adequately apprises the defendant of the charges against him. See id; see also, e.g., United States v. Lockhart, 382 F.3d 447. 449 (4th Cir. 2004); United States v. Bolden, 325 F.3d 471, 490 (4th Cir. 2003). Counts 1–11 all set forth the elements of the offenses charged, track the statutory language, and inform the defendants with specificity of the charges against them. Accordingly, the Indictment should not be dismissed.

1. Elements of the Corruption Charges[4]

Counts 1–4 of the Indictment are the honest-services wire fraud charges. In pertinent part, the governing statute reads:

> Whoever, having devised or intending to devise any scheme or artifice to defraud, transmits or causes to be transmitted by means of wire, radio, or television communication in interstate commerce, any writings, signs, signals, pictures, or sounds for the purpose of executing such scheme or artifice, shall be fined under this title or imprisoned not more than 20 years, or both.

18 U.S.C. § 1343. In turn, "the term 'scheme or artifice to defraud' includes a scheme or artifice to deprive another of the intangible right of honest services." 18 U.S.C. § 1346. And to properly allege honest-services fraud, the Indictment must allege the following elements, which it does in the paragraphs indicated:

---

[4] The Government omits from this discussion the familiar elements of conspiracy and restricts its focus to the underlying and substantive corruption charges.

> (i) the defendant knowingly devised or participated in a scheme to defraud the public of its right to the honest services of a public official through bribery (¶¶ 109–11, 113);
>
> (ii) the defendant did so knowingly and with an intent to defraud (¶¶ 109, 113);
>
> (iii) the scheme or artifice to defraud involved a material misrepresentation, false statement, false pretense, or concealment of fact (¶¶ 110, 111(b), 112); and
>
> (iv) in advancing, or furthering, or carrying out the scheme to defraud, the defendant transmitted, or caused to be transmitted, any writing, sign, signal, picture, or sound by means of a wire communication in interstate commerce (¶¶ 109, 113).

See Skilling v. United States, __ U.S. __, 130 S. Ct. 2896, 2933–34 (2010); United States v. Harvey, 532 F.3d 326, 333 (4th Cir. 2008).

Counts 5–11 charge violations of the Hobbs Act, set forth at 18 U.S.C. § 1951. In pertinent part, that statute reads:

> (a) Whoever in any way or degree obstructs, delays, or affects [interstate] commerce or the movement of any article or commodity in [interstate] commerce, by extortion or attempts or conspires so to do, shall be fined under this title or imprisoned not more than twenty years, or both.
>
> (b) As used in this section the term "extortion" means the obtaining of property from another, with his consent under color of official right.

In turn, to properly allege extortion under color of official right, the Indictment must allege the following elements, which it does in the paragraphs indicated:

(i) proof of the underlying extortion or attempted extortion—that is, the obtaining of or attempt to obtain property under color of official right (¶¶ 115, 117); and

(ii) an effect on interstate commerce (¶¶ 115, 117).

See United States v. Williams, 342 F.3d 350, 353 (4th Cir. 2003). And to prove the obtaining of or attempt to obtain property under color of official right, the Government must prove that "a public official has obtained [or attempted to obtain] a payment to which he was not entitled, knowing that the payment was made in return for official acts." Evans v. United States, 504 U.S. 255, 268 (1992). The Indictment also includes that allegation. See Ind. ¶¶ 22, 110–11, 114, 116.

2. Applicable Law Governing the Elements

As the Court is well aware, the honest-services fraud and Hobbs Act charges in the Indictment will require proof of a conspiracy or scheme to engage in, or the entering into of, a quid pro quo agreement. See Skilling, 130 S. Ct. at 2933–34 (citing United States v. Ganim, 510 F.3d 134, 147–149) (2d Cir.) (requiring quid pro quo for honest-services bribery prosecution) (Sotomayor, J.), cert. denied 552 U.S. 1313 (2008)); United States v. Jefferson, 674 F.3d 332, 360 (4th Cir.) (requiring quid pro quo for honest-services wire fraud counts), cert. denied 133 S. Ct. 648 (2012); Evans 504 U.S. at 268 (requiring quid pro quo under § 1951).[5] Proof of a quid pro quo, in turn, requires proof of soliciting, accepting, or obtaining "things of value in exchange for performing official acts on an as-needed basis, so that [when]ever the opportunity presented itself, [the defendant] would take specific action on the payor's behalf." Jefferson, 674 F.3d at

---

[5] The Indictment need not use that exact phrase, of course. See, e.g., United States v. Jennings, 160 F.3d 1006, 1013 (4th Cir. 1998) (characterizing quid pro quo requirement as illumination of the statutory term "corruptly" in 18 U.S.C. § 201, the bribery statute applicable to federal public officials); United States v. Baumann, 684 F. Supp. 2d 1146, 1150–51 (D.S.D. 2010) (phrase "quid pro quo" is not additional element but is subsumed within statutory term "corruptly" in 18 U.S.C. § 666, the federal program bribery statute).

358 (first alteration in original and internal quotation omitted). Again, the Indictment includes this allegation. See Ind. ¶¶ 22, 110, 111(c)(i)–(v), 112, 114, 116. It is therefore legally sufficient.

Importantly, however, the Government need neither prove nor even allege that a public official actually followed through on the corrupt bargain and took or caused official action because "fulfillment of the quid pro quo is not an element of the offense." Evans, 504 U.S. at 268; see also United States v. Brewster, 408 U.S. 501, 526 (1972) ("There is no need [under § 201] for the Government to show that [defendant public official] fulfilled the alleged illegal bargain; acceptance of the bribe is the violation of the statute, not performance of the illegal promise."); United States v. Hairston, 46 F.3d 361, 365 (4th Cir. 1995) (Hobbs Act quid pro quo requirement is "not onerous" and "[t]he official need not actually fulfill the quid pro quo").

Furthermore, it is beyond dispute that no specific official action need be identified at the time the corrupt agreement is formed or at the time any given bribe payment is made. Rather, "[i]f the public official knows that he or she is expected as a result of the payment to exercise particular kinds of influence or decision making to the benefit of the payor, and, at the time the payment is accepted, intended to do so as specific opportunities arose, that is bribery." Ganim, 510 F.3d at 149 (internal quotation omitted). Indeed, in Skilling the Supreme Court cited Ganim as a paradigmatic honest-services bribery case when rejecting a vagueness challenge to § 1346. 130 S. Ct. at 2934. The Fourth Circuit has similarly adopted Ganim's reasoning. See Jefferson, 674 F.3d at 359 ("We agree with [the Second Circuit's] explanation [in Ganim] that, 'in order to establish the quid pro quo essential to proving bribery, the government need not show that the defendant intended for his payments to be tied to specific official acts (or omissions).'" (quoting Ganim, 510 F.3d at 148)). Thus, in Jefferson, the Fourth Circuit approved a jury instruction stating:

> [T]he quid pro quo requirement is satisfied if you find that the government has established beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant agreed to accept things of value in exchange for performing official acts on an as-needed basis, so that [when]ever the opportunity presented itself, he would take specific action on the payor's behalf.

674 F.3d at 358 (second alteration in original). This instruction had its roots in Jennings, which held that "the intended exchange in bribery can be 'this for these' or 'these for these,' not just 'this for that.'" 160 F.3d at 1014. In other words, "all that must be shown is that payments were made with the intent of securing a specific type of official action or favor in return. For example, payments may be made with the intent to retain the official's services on an 'as needed' basis, so that whenever the opportunity presents itself the official will take specific action on the payor's behalf." Id.[6] As a result, the Indictment need not specify any particular official actions contemplated either at the time of the corrupt agreement or at the time of the payments.

It is equally black-letter law that the agreement between bribe payor and public official need not be explicit.[7] See Evans, 504 U.S. at 274 ("The official and the payor need not state the quid pro quo [required by the Hobbs Act] in express terms, for otherwise the law's effect could be frustrated by knowing winks and nods. [A] quid pro quo with the attendant corrupt motive can be inferred from an ongoing course of conduct." (Kennedy, J., concurring)); United States v. Hamilton, 701 F.3d 404, 409 (4th Cir. 2012) (holding, in case involving bribery under § 666 and Hobbs Act extortion, that corrupt intent can be implied and need not be expressly stated); Jennings, 160 F.3d at 1014 ("To prove bribery under § 201, the government is not required to prove an expressed intention (or agreement) to engage in a quid pro quo."); Kemp, 500 F.3d at 284 ("[E]vidence of a quid pro quo [required for honest-services fraud] can be implicit, that is, a conviction can occur if the Government shows that [the defendant] accepted payments or other consideration with the implied understanding that he would perform or not perform an act in his official capacity." (internal quotation omitted) (third alteration in original)).

---

[6] See also, e.g., United States v. McDonough, 727 F.3d 143, 154 (1st Cir.) (citing Jennings), cert. denied, 134 S. Ct. 1041 (2014); United States v. Kemp, 500 F.3d 257, 282 (3d Cir. 2007) (citing Jennings), cited in Skilling, 130 S. Ct. at 2934; United States v. Whitfield, 590 F.3d 325, 350 (5th Cir. 2009) (citing Jennings), cited in Skilling, 130 S. Ct. at 2934; United States v. Terry, 707 F.3d 607, 612 (6th Cir.) (citing Jefferson and Ganim), cert. denied, 134 S. Ct. 1490 (2014); United States v. Redzic, 627 F.3d 683, 692 (8th Cir.) (citing Jennings), cert. denied, 131 S. Ct. 2126 (2011); United States v. Kincaid-Chauncey, 556 F.3d 923, 943 (9th Cir.) (citing Jennings), cert. denied, 558 U.S. 1077 (2009), abrogated on other grounds by Skilling, 130 S. Ct. at 2933; United States v. McCarter, 219 F. App'x 921, 928 (11th Cir.) (citing Jennings), cert. denied, 552 U.S. 867 (2007).

[7] There is an exception to this rule for cases involving campaign contributions. See McCormick v. United States, 500 U.S. 257, 273 (1991) (requiring, in cases involving campaign contributions, "explicit promise or undertaking by the official to perform or not to perform an official act"). As will be discussed below, however, the present case does not involve campaign contributions, and McCormick is thus inapplicable here.

The Indictment tracks the statutory language, properly alleges every essential element of all of the crimes charged (including a quid pro quo exchange), and provides more than sufficient specificity to avoid a double jeopardy concern.[8] Accordingly, the Indictment satisfies the requirements of the Constitution and should not be dismissed.

The defendants' sole argument to the contrary is that the Indictment's allegations are insufficient as to the "official action" in question. But the defendants do not claim—nor could they—that the charging language in the Indictment fails to allege an "official action" as part of the alleged quid pro quo. Instead, the defendants' argument, at bottom, is that the facts alleged in the Indictment in support of the "official action" allegation do not adequately support that aspect of the charges, and so the Indictment must be dismissed. That distinction is dispositive here because "[a] district court may dismiss an indictment under Rule 12 where there is an infirmity of law in the prosecution; a court may not dismiss an indictment, however, on a determination of facts that should have been developed at trial." United States v. Engle, 676 F.3d 405, 415 (4th Cir. 2012) (emphasis added) (internal quotation omitted).[9] The defendants' motion asks for the latter and is thus no more than a motion for summary judgment masquerading as a motion to dismiss. Unfortunately for the defendants, "[t]here is no federal criminal procedural mechanism that resembles a motion for summary judgment in the civil context." United States v. Yakou, 428 F.3d 241, 246 (D.C. Cir. 2005).[10]

---

[8] Indeed, in denying the defendants' motion for a bill of particulars, this Court has already found that the Indictment adequately apprises the defendants of the charges against them. See Mem. Order, Doc. No. 93, at 2.

The simple truth is that whether the facts alleged in the Indictment, together with the evidence adduced at trial, establish the necessary quo in the quid pro quo is a question for a properly instructed jury. Because the Indictment is sufficient on its face, "the government is entitled to present its evidence at trial and have its sufficiency tested by a motion for acquittal pursuant to Federal Rule of Criminal Procedure 29." United States v. Salman, 378 F.3d 1266, 1268 (11th Cir. 2004). As the Sixth Circuit aptly explained in Terry:

> As most bribery agreements will be oral and informal, the question is one of inferences taken from what the participants say, mean and do, all matters that juries are fully equipped to assess. "[M]otives and consequences, not formalities," are the keys for determining whether a public official entered an agreement to accept a bribe, and the trier of fact is "quite capable of deciding the intent with which words were spoken or actions taken as well as the

---

[9] The defendants selectively quote the first half of this sentence from Engle but substitute an ellipsis for the second half—the half that guts their argument. See Def. Mem. at 5.

[10] The Government has located one Fourth Circuit case discussing when pretrial disposition of a motion like the defendants' might be appropriate, but the circumstances present there are not present here. See United States v. Weaver, 659 F.3d 353, 355 n. * (4th Cir. 2011) ("Although there is no provision for summary judgment in the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure, a district court may consider a pretrial motion to dismiss an indictment where the government does not dispute the ability of the court to reach the motion and proffers, stipulates, or otherwise does not dispute the pertinent facts." (citations omitted)). Here, the Government does dispute the Court's ability to reach the motion, and the parties clearly do dispute the pertinent facts.

> reasonable construction given to them by the official and the payor."

707 F.3d at 613 (quoting Evans, 504 U.S. at 274 (Kennedy, J., concurring)). The Indictment here properly alleges all the elements of the crimes charged, including a quid pro quo, and it gives the defendants ample notice of the charges against them. The defendants' motion should be denied.

B. The Official Action Requirement

Even assuming, arguendo, that the question of whether the alleged "official actions" referenced in the Indictment are indeed "official" were a proper inquiry in the context of a motion to dismiss—which, for the reasons stated above, it is not—the Indictment alleges official actions that fall well within the applicable definition of that term for the reasons set forth below.

1. The Applicable Definition

In light of the defendants' persistent mischaracterizations of the Government's position, and their repeated claim that the sky will fall on Virginia electoral politics unless the Indictment is dismissed, it is worth stating clearly what the Government's position actually is. The Government's position is that an official action is any decision or action on any question, matter, cause, suit, proceeding or controversy, which may at any time be pending, or which may by law be brought before a public official in his or her official capacity, or in his or her place of trust or profit. That definition includes those activities that have been clearly established by settled practice as part of the public official's position, even if not taken pursuant to responsibilities explicitly assigned by law. The Government does not define the term in this way in an attempt to arbitrarily broaden the scope of the corruption laws, or to needlessly "criminalize[] political activity of state public officials," Def. Mem. at 29. The Government defines the term in this way because a federal statute and the United States Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit do.

In Jefferson, the Fourth Circuit approved jury instructions for both § 201 and honest-services bribery that defined "official act" using the broad statutory definition found at § 201(a)(3) ("any decision or action on any question, matter, cause, suit, proceeding or controversy, which may at any time be pending, or which may by law be brought before any public official, in such official's official capacity, or in such official's place of trust or profit"), coupled with the following elaboration based on the Supreme Court's decision in United States v. Birdsall, 233 U.S. 223, 230–31 (1914): "An act may be official even if it was not taken pursuant to responsibilities explicitly assigned by law. Rather, official acts include those activities that have been clearly established by settled practice as part [of] a public official's position." Jefferson, 674 F.3d at 353, 357–58 (alteration in original).[11]

Importantly, this definition does not require that the official acts or pattern of official action alleged result in—or even contemplate—a financial benefit or disbursement of government funding to the bribe payor. Similarly, it does not require that the action or course of actions to be taken by the public official be particularly substantial, and an action is no less official because it is one in a series of steps towards a longer-term goal. In other words, it is the official nature of the action, not its substantiality, that makes it sufficient to be the basis for corruption charges, so long as it is part of a prohibited quid pro quo exchange.

Consistent with this approach, courts have routinely found interim steps in furtherance of longer-term goals to be official actions and courses of action—particularly in the case of the implicit these-for-those, as-needed, stream-of-benefits exchanges approved in Jefferson,

---

[11] The Second Circuit in Ganim similarly defined the official action for Hobbs Act quid pro quo to include "act[s] taken under color of official authority." Ganim, 510 F.3d at 142 n. 4, quoted in United States v. Rosen, 716 F.3d 691, 700 (2d Cir. 2013) (same for honest-services bribery). Of course, the appropriate jury instruction is a matter for the Court to decide not in the context of a motion to dismiss, but after hearing the evidence adduced at trial. See United States v. Jefferson, 634 F. Supp. 2d 595, 600 n. 9 (E.D. Va. 2009) (Ellis, J.).

Jennings, Ganim, and the other cases cited above. For example, as the Fourth Circuit put it in Jefferson, "it would be impossible—and it is unnecessary—to link every dollar paid to one of the Jefferson family companies to a specific meeting, letter, trip, or other action by [former Congressman] Jefferson to fulfill his end of a corrupt bargain." 674 F.3d at 359 (emphasis added). In other words, the "ultimate" benefit sought by Jefferson's bribe payors may have been the success of private business ventures, or alternatively the procurement of government resources for those ventures. But the fact that some of Jefferson's official actions in furtherance of those goals may have been interim, smaller steps—"meeting[s], letter[s], trip[s], or other action[s]," id.—did not somehow render his conduct outside the ambit of legally cognizable quo.

In United States v. Ring, 706 F.3d 460, 468–70 (D.C. Cir. 2013), the D.C. Circuit interpreted § 201(a)(3)'s definition of "official act" similarly broadly in the context of § 201(c)'s gratuity provision. There, the D.C. Circuit found sufficient evidence of an "official act" where the public official in question was a U.S. Department of Justice ("DoJ") Office of Intergovernmental Affairs attorney who made a phone call and sent an email seeking to expedite review of a visa application by the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service ("INS"). The attorney's email was then passed along by a secretary to five different INS officials, who then expedited the application. Id. at 469. The D.C. Circuit found the email and phone call to provide sufficient evidence of official acts, in part based on testimony that the DoJ attorneys in question "reach[] across agency boundaries to get things done" and that the secretary who received the email "felt unable to ignore the attorney's request because of the office he held." Id. at 470. In other words, even an act as insubstantial as an email or a phone call can, in context, be quo.

Likewise, in United States v. Dimora, 879 F. Supp. 2d 718, 730 (N.D. Ohio 2012), a district court found sufficient evidence of official action to support Hobbs Act and honest-services fraud charges based in part on testimony that one cooperator "was experiencing difficulty in getting his foot in the door with various government entities" and gave things of value in exchange for the defendant public official "help[ing] with 'opening doors, getting access to, you know, places that I had a chance to do some business.'" The cooperator went on to explain that "he expected 'an open line of communication. So if I needed help, I could ask.'" Id. The cooperator further testified that he "took advantage of this arrangement," and the defendant public official's official actions included "arrang[ing] for meetings with [a] [m]ayor." Id. at 730 n. 8.[12] Again, arranging a meeting was sufficient, in context, to be quo in a quid pro quo.[13]

The Fourth Circuit's analysis of § 201(a)(3)'s text in Jefferson is also instructive. There, the court acknowledged that § 201(a)(3)'s official act definition "does not encompass every action taken in one's official capacity," but only those that relate to a pending "question, matter, cause, suit, proceeding or controversy" before the public official in question. Id. at 356. However, the court rejected Jefferson's attempts to use that statutory language to restrict the definition of "official act" to traditional legislative acts like voting or earmarking funds. Rather, the Fourth Circuit found sufficient evidence for the jury to conclude "first of all, that performing constituent services was a settled official practice of Jefferson's congressional office and, second, that African trade issues were 'matters' or 'causes' that were pending before him." Id. at 357 (emphasis added). With "African trade issues" as the broadly defined "matters" or "causes" pending before former Congressman Jefferson, the Fourth Circuit found myriad actions by Jefferson to promote constituents' interests in African trade issues (and thus "on" that "matter" or "cause") to be official acts. Those included Jefferson (i) "[g]ranting requests for assistance to business ventures by corresponding and visiting with foreign officials"; (ii) "[s]cheduling and conducting meetings with Army officials and representatives, at which [Jefferson] promoted [a bribe-paying business]"; (iii) "[t]raveling to Nigeria and Ghana, and meeting with representatives of the [Export-Import] Bank [of the United States] to endorse, assist, and promote [a bribe-paying business's] scheme"; and (iv) "[v]ouching for [a bribe-paying business] in Nigeria and seeking to secure construction contracts for [its] entities." Id. at 356.

---

[12] The Dimora defendants have appealed their convictions, and that appeal includes a challenge to an as-needed quid pro quo jury instruction that was based on Jennings. See Brief of the United States at 58–71, United States v. Dimora, No. 12-4004 (6th Cir. June 3, 2013), 2013 WL 2470340.

[13] See also, e.g., Rosen, 716 F.3d at 695 (state legislator, among other things, "wrote a letter on State Assembly letterhead stationery" and "set up a meeting between Rosen and the Governor's chief of staff"); United S[illegible]s v. Moore, 525 F.3d 1033, 1041 (11th Cir. 2008) (rejecting argument that "the 'low le[illegible]tions alleged in this case'" were not official acts and finding actions such as prison offic[illegible]tching unit assignments, allowing telephone calls, making telephone calls, permitting meetings, and giving a key to help facilitate meetings all sufficient to "fall within the broad definition of 'official act' set forth in Birdsall"); United States v. Hullender, No. 90cr60, 1990 WL 124068, at *4 (N.D.N.Y Aug. 24, 1990) (rejecting argument that "ministerial tasks are not 'official act[s]' contained within the ambit of § 201" because § 201(a)(3) includes no "distinction between ministerial and non-ministerial duties" (alteration in original)).

2. The allegations in the Indictment satisfy the definition.

As discussed above, whether the evidence adduced at trial in support of the Indictment's allegations satisfies the definition of official action is among the questions the jury will have to answer. Nevertheless, should the Court desire to entertain the substantive question pretrial, the Indictment's allegations easily suffice.

To begin with, the allegations here are not materially different from those in Jefferson. In Jefferson, African trade issues and the business ventures sought to be furthered by his constituents were matters or causes pending before Jefferson as a congressman, and he took action on those matters or causes by arranging meetings and the like. Here, Virginia business development issues and Jonnie Williams's desired promotion of his product using Virginia state government were matters or causes pending before Mr. McDonnell and his former office, and the defendants took and caused official actions on those matters and causes by arranging meetings and the like.[14] In this regard, as the district court ruled in Jefferson, "the government need not show that the 'question, matter,' etc. at issue was or could have been pending before defendant pursuant to any responsibilities explicitly assigned by law, nor is the government required to prove that the defendant had the authority to resolve the question, matter, cause, [etc.] at issue." 634 F Supp. 2d at 603. To the contrary, "it is sufficient for the government to adduce proof that it was customary, as a matter of clearly established settled practice, for [the type of public official in question] to exert influence—by advice, recommendation, or otherwise—on the issues in question." Id. The Government will adduce such proof at trial here.

Here, the Indictment alleges specific examples of the types of official actions provided and to be provided during the scheme, including:

> (i) arranging meetings for JW with Virginia government officials, who were subordinates of the Governor, to discuss and promote Anatabloc®;
>
> (ii) hosting, and the defendants attending, events at the Governor's Mansion designed to encourage Virginia university researchers to initiate studies of anatabine and to promote Star Scientific's products to doctors for referral to their patients;
>
> (iii) contacting other government officials in the OGV [the Office of the Governor of Virginia] as part of an effort to encourage Virginia state research universities to initiate studies of anatabine;

---

[14] The defendants attack the Indictment's reference to Mr. McDonnell's campaign slogan—"Bob's for Jobs," Ind. ¶ 7—as evincing a "myopic view," Def. Mem. at 16, that the slogan itself transformed his actions to promote a Virginia business into an official act. The Indictment, of course, neither says nor suggests anything of the sort. Rather, this factual allegation merely refers to the defendants' public acknowledgement of, and is thus evidence of, the official nature of Mr. McDonnell's actions in this arena. See Jefferson, 634 F Supp. 2d at 603 (proof that an act is "official" can include a "defendant's admissions and conduct").

(iv) promoting Star Scientific's products and facilitating its relationships with Virginia government officials by allowing JW to invite individuals important to Star Scientific's business to exclusive events at the Governor's Mansion; and

(v) recommending that senior government officials in the OGV meet with Star Scientific executives to discuss ways that the company's products could lower healthcare costs.

Ind. ¶111(c). Although these alone are more than sufficient allegations of "official action," the Indictment goes further, providing significant detail regarding the official actions promised and performed. See, e.g., Ind. ¶¶ 29–30, 41, 48–49, 51, 60, 63–65, 74–80, 84, 88. These allegations amply suffice to withstand a motion to dismiss in light of Jefferson and the other cases above.

In sum, where, as here, a chief state executive directs a subordinate to attend a meeting about a businessman's efforts to secure state government assistance in promoting a product, the chief state executive plainly has taken "action" (directing the subordinate) that is "on" (relates to or furthers) a "question, matter, [or] cause" (defined broadly as state business development or more narrowly as the particular question, matter, or cause of securing state government assistance to promote the product) that is pending before the executive by virtue of his position. Similarly, where, as here, a chief state executive hosts and speaks at an event at a state facility designed to encourage state university researchers to conduct studies of a businessman's product, the chief state executive has taken "action" (hosting and attending the event) that is "on" (relates to or furthers) a "question, matter, [or] cause" (state business development or the particular question, matter, or cause of securing state government assistance through research studies) that is pending before the executive by virtue of his position.

C. The defendants' attempts to redefine "official action" misstate the law, defy logic, or contest allegations not actually made in the Indictment.

In an attempt to escape the precedent of Jefferson, Jennings, Ganim, and the other cases discussed above, the defendants attempt to transmute the term "official action" into something far narrower: "promise[] or recei[pt] [of] government funds, contracts, appointments, legislation, regulatory action or any other governmental benefit." Def. Mem. at 19. As discussed above, however, the phrase "official action" is not so limited, nor should it be.[15] And even the defendants' narrowly circumscribed definition fails to exclude the conduct here, because a meeting with a cabinet official's deputy, an event at a state facility to promote a product, favorable comments to subordinate state officials about the prospect of conducting research studies, and directions at cabinet meetings to meet with a particular business are in fact a "governmental benefit." That is, after all, why Mr. Williams was willing to pay for these things and why the defendants were able to extract payment in exchange, as the Indictment alleges.[16]

Moreover, the cases on which the defendants rely in defining (and redefining) "official action" and arguing that the term does not cover the alleged actions at issue are inapposite.[17] The defendants begin, as so many bribery defendants do, by invoking dicta in United States v. Sun-Diamond Growers, 526 U.S. 398 (1999), in an attempt to engraft a substantiality-of-quo requirement into Hobbs Act and honest-services fraud cases. See Def. Mem. at 8–9. In Sun-Diamond, the Supreme Court mentioned the hypothetical examples of "[the President] receiving sports teams at the White House, [a Secretary of Education] visiting [a] high school, and [a Secretary of Agriculture] speaking to farmers about policy" and stated that "those actions—while they are assuredly 'official acts' in some sense—are not 'official acts' within the meaning of the [gratuity] statute [set forth at § 201(c)]." 526 U.S. at 407 However, in Jefferson the Fourth Circuit strongly expressed a limited view of Sun-Diamond's force in bribery cases:

---

[15] As the Second Circuit has observed, "[t]he need for flexibility is especially important in the context of criminal laws aimed at public corruption." Rosen, 716 F.3d at 699.

[16] Alternatively, the defendants argue throughout their brief that to conduct an "official action," a public official must "exercise governmental power." See, e.g., Def. Mem. at 2, 5, 7, 9, 11, 12. Of course, that formulation only begs the question of what it means to "exercise governmental power"—something a chief executive can unilaterally do in myriad ways. Indeed, although not in the context of a bribery case, the D.C. Circuit has opined that a U.S. Senator's arranging for his wife's business to make use of Senate rooms was "an exercise of his official powers" such that a letter the Senator wrote responding to an Ethics Committee inquiry about this practice was protected under the Speech or Debate Clause. See Ray v. Proxmire, 581 F.2d 998, 1000 (D.C. Cir. 1978). Mr. McDonnell's hosting an event at the Governor's Mansion to benefit Star was no less an exercise of his official governmental powers.

[17] Before addressing the cases, it is important to remember that because of the procedural posture of the defendants' motion, they are asking this Court to rule that the types of and specific official actions alleged here could never constitute official action, no matter the price of the bribe extracted in exchange. That argument is as dangerous as it is meritless.

> The only analysis by Sun-Diamond of the definition of an official act comes as a rebuttal to the hypothetical impact of the Court's narrow reading of the illegal gratuity statute.
>
> Without a more explicit directive, we are unwilling to translate Sun-Diamond's brief discussion of the 'official act' definition into an unqualified exclusion of all settled practices by a public official from the bribery statute's definition of an official act.

Jefferson, 674 F.3d at 355–56.[18] Based on this reading of Sun-Diamond, the Fourth Circuit rejected Jefferson's attempt to use its dicta to his advantage. Rather, because "[t]he trial evidence showed that Jefferson, as a congressman, had long-standing relationships with businesspersons and investors, and it was his practice to request and receive favors, gifts, and beneficial business deals in exchange for his actions in promoting such businesses, and in ensuring the success of specific business ventures," the Fourth Circuit found the "official act" proof sufficient. Id. at 356. Here, the Indictment alleges receipt of things of value in exchange for official actions by Mr.

---

[18] See also Ganim, 510 F.3d at 146–47 (observing that "[u]ndergirding the Court's decision in Sun-Diamond was a need to distinguish legal gratuities (given to curry favor because of an official's position) from illegal gratuities (given because of a specific act)" but emphasizing that "[t]he same limiting principle is not needed in the extortion or bribery contexts, however, because it is the requirement of [a] quid pro quo that distinguishes those crimes").

McDonnell and his former office to promote Mr. Williams's business venture. Accordingly, Sun-Diamond is no obstacle to this prosecution.[19]

The defendants also cite to a series of gratuity and bribery cases from other circuits in support of their motion, but a close inspection of those cases shows that they do not bear the weight the defendants attempt to place on them. For example, the defendants cite to Valdes v. United States, 475 F.3d 1319 (D.C. Cir. 2007). See Def. Mem. at 10, 12–13, 26, 28. In Valdes, the D.C. Circuit reversed a gratuity conviction under § 201(c) because the trial court refused to instruct the jury on § 201(a)(3)'s "official act" definition "or anything comparable." 475 F.3d at 1325. The D.C. Circuit explained that the § 201(a)(3) definition was important, as it limited its scope to "those questions, matters, causes, suits, proceedings, and controversies that are decided by the government." Id. In Valdes, the alleged official act was a police officer's search of a law enforcement database for information that the government did not allege was related to any pending investigation, but rather was "linked only by pure supposition to an imaginary future matter" that could not "in any meaningful sense, be 'pending' before an official, now or at 'any time' in the future." Id. at 1329. Here, not only is it anticipated that the Court will instruct the jury with an appropriate definition of "official act," which the district court failed to do in Valdes, but Mr. Williams's sought-after research studies at state universities are but one example of a question, matter, cause, etc. that was much more than imaginary; rather, based on initial planning already underway at the state universities, it was far more than the "at least nascent" matter that Valdes suggested would be sufficient. Id. at 1328.[20] [19] Indeed, Sun-Diamond's observation that "receiving sports teams at the White House, visiting [a] high school, and speaking to farmers about policy," 526 U.S. at 407—without more—are not "official acts" within the scope of § 201(a)(3) does not mean that hosting an event for a business at the White House or directing other government officials to meet with a business can never constitute an "official act." Rather, it simply means, as it meant in Jefferson, that the "action" at issue (the hosting, visiting, speaking, or directing of a meeting) must be "on" (relate to or further) a particular "question, matter, cause," etc. (such as African trade issues, Virginia business development, or obtaining research studies for a businessman's product).

---

The defendants' reliance on United States v. Muntain, 610 F.2d 964 (D.C. Cir. 1979), a gratuities case, fares no better. Muntain involved analysis of a public official's efforts to promote a "purely private venture" that the D.C. Circuit concluded the Government did not allege or prove to be action "on" an identified question, matter, cause, etc., that was actually pending before the public official. Id. at 966–68. Here, by contrast, the Government has alleged and will prove just that. As Ring, Jefferson, and Ganim make clear, Muntain did not hold that a public official's promotion of a private business venture can never constitute official action; rather, it merely held that the government must prove that the action in question is official in each particular case. See Muntain, 610 F.2d at 966 (noting that the Government did "not contend and produced no evidence at trial to suggest that [the private venture] fell within [the public official's agency's] jurisdiction").

Nor is the defendants' citation of United States v. Urciuoli, 513 F.3d 290 (1st Cir. 2008), persuasive. In Urciuoli, the First Circuit rejected an honest-services instruction (before Skilling) that official action included what a public official does "under the cloak of his office." Id. at 295 n. 2. The First Circuit did so because it found that the instruction could have permitted conviction of a state legislator for lobbying a mayor and other local officials to follow state laws about ambulance runs—something that the jury would not necessarily have found to be "on a matter before him." Id. at 295. Importantly, however, the First Circuit also found that a separate scheme could have violated the statute and could serve as the proper basis for a conviction at a new trial; in that scheme, the legislator "played a role in summoning to meetings officials" of insurance companies that were "at odds with" the company paying the legislator and "urg[ed] them to come to terms." Id. at 294. The First Circuit found the actions could be official because, in essence, the jury could have found that they were on matters pending before the official—in other words, because the legislator "had become chair of a senate committee with considerable power over health care legislation, and both [insurance companies] were regularly concerned with matters affected by the committee." Id. at 296. Urciuoli thus turned on questions of jury instructions and evidentiary sufficiency—neither of which is at issue at this stage here.[21] [20] In Jefferson, the Fourth Circuit found Valdes to be no barrier to prosecution. 674 F.3d at 354, 357–58. Similarly, in Ring, the D.C. Circuit rejected the defendant's attempt to use Valdes, describing Valdes as standing for the proposition that "whether an action constitutes an 'official act' [is] one of 'sufficiency of the evidence.'" 706 F.3d at 469 (quoting Valdes, 475 F.3d at 1322). In the end, the D.C. Circuit in Ring noted that "the attorney's swift success in procuring expedited review spoke for itself." Id. Here, Mr. McDonnell's swift success in, for example, securing the presence of a subordinate government official at a meeting on less than 12 hours of notice will similarly speak for itself. See Ind. ¶¶ 48–49.

---

---

[21] The defendants' citations to two Eighth Circuit cases addressing post-verdict sufficiency of the evidence are similarly misplaced. For example, the defendants cite to United States v. Loftus, 992 F.2d 793 (8th Cir. 1993), and United States v. Rabbitt, 583 F.2d 1014 (8th Cir. 1978), claiming that they stand for the proposition that "introducing a benefactor 'to influential persons' is not an official act if the official providing the introduction does 'not promise to use his official position to influence those persons.'" Def. Mem. at 22 (quoting Loftus, 992 F.2d at 796), 10 (citing Rabbitt for same proposition). But what Loftus actually held was that the government presented sufficient evidence under the Hobbs Act where it showed that the defendant "promised to use his official position as county commissioner to serve the bribe-giver's interests." 992 F.2d at 796. Moreover, the court found that "[a]ctual authority over the end result is not controlling if Loftus, through his official position, had influence and authority over a means to that end." Id. (emphasis added). In other words, Loftus supports that interim steps by a public official towards a larger goal can be official actions where they are a "means to that end," id.—something that the Indictment's alleged official actions in this case were vis-à-vis Mr. Williams's goals. Indeed, the language from Loftus that the defendants quote was actually from the Eighth Circuit's explanation for why Rabbitt did not support a reversal in Loftus. As the court explained, Rabbitt reversed a conviction for evidentiary insufficiency based on facts that showed "the official promised only to introduce the [paying] firm to influential persons; he did not promise to use his official position to influence those persons." Loftus, 992 F.2d at 796 (citing Rabbitt, 583 F.2d at 1028) (emphasis added). Thus, Loftus and Rabbitt make clear that the question of whether a particular type of action is an official action is a factual one that, at least in the Eighth Circuit, requires proof that it was a "means to [an] end," id. Moreover, insofar as Rabbitt's conclusion rested on there being no "tangible loss to the citizens or state" or that the defendant "did not, in his official capacity, control the awarding of state contracts," 583 F.2d at 1026, it contradicts the well-settled bribery law principles explained above that such

Moreover, the defendants' attempts to engage the facts alleged in the Indictment prove the weakness of their argument. They argue, among other things, that (i) Mr. McDonnell's ordering a subordinate state official to attend a meeting cannot be an official act because "[t]he Government does not claim that the policy advisor [who attended the meeting] promised or took any official action benefiting Star (or that she even had jurisdiction over the meeting's topic)," Def. Mem. at 21, (ii) Mr. McDonnell's direction at a cabinet meeting that his subordinates meet with Star Scientific officials cannot be an official act because "[t]he Government does not allege that the [cabinet official] ever followed up on Mr. McDonnell's alleged suggestion," id. at 22; and (iii) their decision to host an event at a state facility to promote Mr. Williams's product cannot be an official act because "[t]he Government does not claim that anything that happened at this lunch influenced any public official to perform any 'official act,'" id. at 23.

The flawed premise of each of these arguments is clear. In each of them, the defendants condition whether they took or caused official action on whether other public officials—officials who assuredly had not personally received more than $140,000 in things of value from Mr. Williams—took official action. The fact is, Mr. McDonnell took official action when he ordered a subordinate to take a meeting, attended an event at a state facility, and directed a cabinet official to arrange a meeting, and all of those actions were on the questions, matters, or causes of (i) Virginia business development, (ii) the use of state government to promote and obtain research studies for Anatabloc®, or even simply (iii) whether to have or attend the meeting or event in question. The fact that Mr. McDonnell's subordinate state officials, whether in his proof is not required for an official act. Perhaps for this reason, Urciuoli recognized that Rabbitt's reasoning was "criticized by Judge Posner and . . . is in tension with another Seventh Circuit case in which an aide to the mayor recommended awarding a contract to a company in which he held a concealed interest." 513 F.3d at 296 n. 4 (citing United States v. Holzer, 816 F.2d 304, 309 (7th Cir. 1987) (Posner, J.); United States v. Bush, 522 F.2d 641, 647–48 (7th Cir. 1975)).

---

former office or at the state universities, may have chosen not to take additional official action (whether for independent reasons or because they, unlike him, were not on retainer) is beside the point.[22] And the fact that Mr. McDonnell had the unilateral power as the chief state executive to promise and take the actions he did—or promise and make the decisions that he did—is precisely the point. That unilateral power to "arrang[e] meetings," "host[] and attend[] events at the Governor's Mansion," "contact[] other government officials," "promot[e] Star Scientific's products and facilitat[e] its relationships with Virginia government officials," and "recommend[] that senior government officials meet with Star Scientific executives," Ind. ¶ 111(c), is exactly what was worth more than $140,000 to the businessman who decided to pay. All of those alleged decisions and actions did in fact involve "'decisions that the government actually makes,'" Jefferson, 674 F.3d at 357 (quoting Valdes 475 F.3d at 1325).[23] [22] Indeed, directing a subordinate to take a meeting is a quintessential part of an executive's job, and no reasonable definition of "official action" should exclude such conduct. Moreover, 18 U.S.C. § 2(b), which provides that [w]hoever willfully causes an act to be done which if directly performed by him or another would be an offense against the United States, is punishable as a principal," precludes any argument that Mr. McDonnell can escape liability for causing others in his former office to engage in official actions. See, e.g., United States v. Margiotta, 688 F.2d 108, 131 (2d Cir. 1982); United States v. Mitchell, 993 F.2d 229, 1993 WL 136996, at *5 (4th Cir. 1993) (unpublished) (upholding gratuity conviction where public official caused another public official to commit official acts because "[a] conviction under § 2(b) is proper even when the defendant acted through innocent agents").

---

[23] Unsurprisingly, the broad power of a member of Congress—or the even arguably broader power of a governor, one of fifty-one chief executives of sovereign governments—means a broader range of questions, matters, or causes will be pending before him or her than before a lower-level government official. Similarly, the broader power of the office of a chief state executive means a broader range of official actions that the official can perform unilaterally and thus put on the menu for prospective bribe payors. Birdsall's explanation of § 201(a)(3)'s definition provides the statutory flexibility to accommodate such variation. See, e.g., United States v. Carson, 464 F.2d 424, 434 (2d Cir. 1972) (finding exertion of the influence inherent in an administrative assistant's official position as a congressional staffer to be § 201(a)(3) "official act" and observing that "[a]pparently [the assistant], and those bribing him, thought he had access to the Justice Department through his position that would enable him to alleviate, if not altogether quash, pending Justice Department action or bring about lenient post-conviction treatment"); United States v. Biaggi, 853 F.2d 89, 98 (2d Cir 1988) ("A congressman's own

D. The defendants' reliance on Citizens United is misplaced.

The defendants have also spilled much ink trying to paint what is alleged in the Indictment as properly governed by political speech cases instead of corruption law. But neither their repeated citation to Citizens United v. Federal Election Commission, 558 U.S. 310 (2010), nor their numerous attempts to bait the Government into commenting on alleged practices by other politicians with respect to campaign contributions changes one irreducible truth: not one penny of the $120,000 in loans, the $15,000 check to subsidize the defendants' daughter's wedding, the free vacations, or any of the other graft charged here was a campaign contribution. More to the point for present purposes, the Indictment does not allege that they were campaign contributions; it alleges they were bribes. Ind. ¶¶ 22, 110, 117 Accordingly, whatever understandable allure Citizens United may have to the defendants, for this simple reason and the reasons discussed in more detail below, it is simply irrelevant to the defendants' motion.

The defendants' fixation on campaign-finance law shows—on the very first page of their brief—a fundamental misconception about the basic corruption law that controls this case. They claim that the Supreme Court has "recognized the fundamental difference" between public officials "exercising their official powers differently to favor donors" and "providing access that does not, without more, alter any official decisions on government policy," and that "only the former sorts of actions are 'official' and thus illegal when offered in exchange for benefits." Def.

---

invocation of his position and of congressional interest in his intercession with others on behalf of a constituent can hardly be considered less of an official act [than the acts in Carson]."). And in any event, as the Third Circuit recognized just yesterday, a Hobbs Act violation can obtain whether or not a public official has de jure authority to carry out a promised official act, so long as the bribe payor reasonably believed the public official had the power to do so (or even merely influence in the process). See United States v. Bencivengo, __ F 3d __, 2014 WL 1613315, at *6, (3d Cir. Apr. 23, 2014); see also, e.g., United States v. Hamilton, 263 F.3d 645, 653–54 (6th Cir. 2001); United States v. Mazzei, 521 F.2d 639, 643 (3d Cir. 1975) (en banc) (citing United States v. Price, 507 F.2d 1349 (4th Cir. 1974)); Dimora, 879 F Supp. 2d at 735.

Mem. at 1. For this proposition they have cited the following sentence from Citizens United: "Ingratiation and access are not corruption." 558 U.S. at 360. Not only does the defendants' argument attempt to wring far more out of that phrase than it will bear, it also illustrates the problem with their attempt to rely on campaign-finance case law in what is charged as a corruption case. It is black-letter corruption law that a public official need not exercise his or her power "differently" or "alter any official decisions" in order to be guilty of a corruption offense. For example, in United States v. Quinn, 359 F.3d 666, 675 (4th Cir. 2004), a § 201 bribery and honest-services fraud case, the Fourth Circuit stated:

> It is not necessary for conviction under § 201(b) that the official act offered in exchange for the bribe be harmful to the government or inconsistent with the official's legal obligations. The critical question is whether the government official solicited something of value with a corrupt intent, i.e., in exchange for an official act. By the same reasoning, it does not matter whether the government official would have to change his or her conduct to satisfy the payor's expectations.

(citations omitted).[24] Accordingly, the defendants are flat wrong in their opening assertion that only an exercise of official power that is "different" is illegal when offered in exchange for benefits, and they are further wrong in suggesting that Citizens United said anything close to otherwise.

What the Supreme Court actually held in Citizens United was that "[a]n outright ban on corporate political speech during the critical preelection period is not a permissible remedy" to address Government anticorruption concerns about corporate spending on independent electioneering communications that are by definition not coordinated with any public official. 558 U.S. at 361. The Court observed that "independent expenditures do not lead to, or create the appearance of, quid pro quo corruption. In fact, there is only scant evidence that independent expenditures even ingratiate." Id. at 360. It was at this point that the Court stated that "[i]ngratiation and access, in any event, are not corruption." Id. In other words, the Supreme Court observed that the mere fact of ingratiation or access did not necessarily equal corruption—particularly where, as there, the activity in question is money spent on political speech protected by the First Amendment and not coordinated with any public official. But to suggest, as the defendants here argue, that in Citizens United the Supreme Court held that "ingratiation" or "access" can never be present as part of a corrupt exchange of personal payments in return for official action is a bridge too far.

---

[24] See also United States v. Derrick, 163 F.3d 799, 819 (4th Cir. 1998) ("The receipt of money, even for official action that would have been taken anyway, violates the Hobbs Act " (citation omitted)).

Indeed, the defendants' cherrypicking of this single sentence from Citizens United to suggest that whatever might be subsumed under the rubric of "ingratiation" or "access" can never form a basis for a corruption charge is undermined by what the Supreme Court made sure to emphasize first: "'The hallmark of corruption is the financial quid pro quo: dollars for political favors.'" 558 U.S. at 359 (quoting Fed. Election Comm'n v. Nat'l Conservative Political Action Comm., 470 U.S. 480, 497 (1985)). The defendants' argument is no less absurd than would be a Government argument that as a result of that sentence, "political favors" supplants the definition of official action. The defendants' reliance on Citizens United is misplaced.[25]

---

[25] The Supreme Court recently reiterated the same concepts in another campaign-finance opinion, McCutcheon v. Federal Election Comm'n, __ U.S. __, 134 S. Ct. 1434, 1441–42 (Apr. 2, 2014). In McCutcheon, the Supreme Court quoted Citizens United's statement about "[i]ngratiation and access" to illustrate that a mere correlation of political speech in the form of spending (in McCutcheon, contributions to other candidates and entities in excess of aggregate contribution limits) does not necessarily amount to corruption. Id. at 1441. But immediately after that quotation, McCutcheon reasserted that "[t]he hallmark of corruption is the financial quid pro quo: dollars for political favors." Id. (internal quotation omitted). McCutcheon is no more help to the defendants than Citizens United.

E. The defendants' vagueness challenge fails.

The contours of the defendants' vagueness challenge are not entirely clear from the four paragraphs they devote to it. See Def. Mem. at 28–29. They do not appear to mount a facial challenge to either the honest-services fraud statute or the Hobbs Act, and nor could they after Skilling (honest services) and Evans (Hobbs Act). Instead, the defendants appear to contend that the statutes are unconstitutionally vague as applied to them in the Indictment because they allegedly lacked notice that their conduct was criminal. The Court should reject this argument.

First, although in general a law must clearly prohibit the conduct in question in order for a finding of criminal intent to be possible, the specific intent requirements for honest-services fraud and Hobbs Act extortion eliminate the problem here. As the Fourth Circuit has observed, "The Supreme Court 'has long recognized that the constitutionality of a vague statutory standard is closely related to whether that standard incorporates a requirement of mens rea.'" United States v. Jaensch, 665 F.3d 83, 90 (4th Cir.) (quoting Colautti v. Franklin, 439 U.S. 379, 395 (1979)), cert. denied, 132 S. Ct. 2118 (2012). The Supreme Court's holding in Colautti dates back to Screws v. United States, 325 U.S. 91, 101–02 (1945), where the Court stated:

> The Court, indeed, has recognized that the requirement of a specific intent to do a prohibited act may avoid those consequences to the accused which may otherwise render a vague or indefinite statute invalid. The constitutional vice in such a statute is the essential injustice to the accused of placing him on trial for an offense, the nature of which the statute does not define and hence of which it gives no warning. But where the punishment imposed is only for an act knowingly done with the purpose of doing that which the statute prohibits, the accused cannot be said to suffer from lack of warning or knowledge that the act which he does is a violation of law.

(internal citation omitted).

Both corruption laws charged here have a specific intent requirement. Honest-services fraud requires proof of "intent to defraud." See Harvey, 532 F.3d at 333; Skilling, 130 S. Ct. at 2933 ("As to fair notice, it has always been as plain as a pikestaff that bribes constitute honest-services fraud, and the statute's mens rea requirement further blunts any notice concern." (internal citations and quotations omitted)). As for the Hobbs Act, the Government will have to prove that the defendants attempted to or did obtain "a payment to which [Mr. McDonnell] was not entitled, knowing that the payment was made in return for official acts." Evans, 504 U.S. at 268 (emphasis added). These specific intent requirements defeat any complaint of "lack of warning or knowledge that the act [alleged] is a violation of law," Screws, 325 U.S. at 102.[26]

F. The defendants' attempt to invoke federalism principles is baseless.

The defendants' brief closes with an argument that the federal corruption laws as applied here violate the Tenth Amendment. Def. Mem. at 29–30. Although it is surely true that "having the power to make decisions and to set policy is what gives the State its sovereign nature," FERC v. Mississippi, 456 U.S. 742, 761 (1982), quoted in Def. Mem. at 29, that case involved a challenge to a federal statutory scheme regarding public utilities, and moreover, the opinion upheld the federal regulations at issue there against the challenge that they impermissibly infringed on state sovereignty. In doing so, the Supreme Court pointed out that as Tenth Amendment law has developed, the Court has "upheld federal statutory structures that in effect directed state decisionmakers to take or refrain from taking certain actions." Id. at 762. The Court rejected what it called "the 19th-century view, expressed in a well-known slavery case, that Congress 'has no power to impose on a State officer, as such, any duty whatever, and compel him to perform it.'" Id. at 761 (quoting Kentucky v. Dennison, 65 U.S. 66, 107 (1860)).

---

[26] Because the defendants' as-applied challenge fails, the parade of horribles they claim will follow from the Indictment have no place. See, e.g., United States v. Masciandaro, 638 F.3d 458, 474 (4th Cir. 2011) ("[A] person … to whom a statute was constitutionally applied[] 'will not be heard to challenge that statute on the ground that it may conceivably be applied unconstitutionally to others, in other situations not before the Court.'" (quoting Broadrick v. Oklahoma, 413 U.S. 601, 610 (1973))); United States v. Welch, 327 F.3d 1081, 1097 (10th Cir. 2003) ("Speculation about the vagueness of [a statute] in hypothetical situations is inadequate to sustain an attack on a Utah statute which surely applies to the conduct alleged in the indictment.").

But this Court need not resort to parsing the niceties of Tenth Amendment jurisprudence to resolve the question before it, because the Indictment does not charge "state officials for non-corrupt conduct that is legal under state law," Def. Mem. at 29 To the contrary, the Indictment charges core corruption offenses. The defendants' argument that "the Government's broad legal theory criminalizes political activity [that] is 'not corruption,'" Def. Mem. at 29 (quoting Citizens United, 558 U.S. at 360), and therefore violates principles of federalism is just another conclusory jury argument. As the defendants concede, the statutes at issue apply to state officials. Def. Mem. at 15. Because Virginia law criminalizes bribery, neither the federal statutes at issue nor the Indictment charging violations of them is any more out of step with state law than the federal robbery statute is with state laws criminalizing the same.[27] And in any event, the province of the federal government to enforce the honest-services statute against state officials was unequivocally established in Skilling.[28] The defendants' federalism argument is meritless.

III. Conclusion

For all of these reasons, the defendants' motion to dismiss Counts 1–11 should be denied.

---

[27] Indeed, the Virginia bribery statute appears to contemplate an arguably broader definition of official act than § 201(a)(3). It reads, in relevant part, "A person shall be guilty of bribery [i]f he accepts or agrees to accept from another any pecuniary benefit offered, conferred or agreed to be conferred as consideration for or to obtain or influence the recipient's decision, opinion, recommendation, vote or other exercise of discretion as a public servant or party official." Va. Code Ann. § 18.2-447 (emphasis added).

[28] The bribe-payor defendant in Rosen made similar federalism arguments on appeal, but the Second Circuit rejected them. 716 F.3d at 700–01 (nonviolation of state law no defense to federal corruption charge); see also Urciuoli, 513 F.3d at 299 (same).

Respectfully submitted,

DANA J. BOENTE
United States Attorney

By: /s/
Ryan S. Faulconer
Michael S. Dry
Jessica D. Aber
Counsel for the United States
U.S. Attorney's Office
600 E. Main Street, Suite 1800
Richmond, VA 23219
Phone: 804-819-5400
Fax: 804-771-2316
Email: ryan.faulconer2@usdoj.gov
michael.s.dry@usdoj.gov
jessica.d.aber@usdoj.gov

JACK SMITH
Chief, Public Integrity Section
Criminal Division
U.S. Department of Justice

By: /s/
David V Harbach, II
Counsel for the United States
U.S. Department of Justice
Criminal Division
Public Integrity Section
1400 New York Ave., N.W., Ste 12100
Washington, D.C. 20005
Phone: 202-514-1412
Fax: 202-514-3003
Email: david.harbach@usdoj.gov

CERTIFICATE OF SERVICE

I hereby certify that on April 24, 2014, I will electronically file the foregoing with the Clerk of Court using the CM/ECF system, which will then send a notification of such filing ("NEF") to all counsel of record.

By: /s/

Ryan S. Faulconer
Counsel for the United States
U.S. Attorney's Office
600 E. Main Street, Suite 1800
Richmond, VA 23219
Phone: 804-819-5400
Fax: 804-771-2316
Email: ryan.faulconer2@usdoj.gov

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
FOR THE EASTERN DISTRICT OF VIRGINIA
RICHMOND DIVISION

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,	)
	)
v.	)	CRIMINAL NO. 3:14-CR-00012
	)
ROBERT F. MCDONNELL	)	JUDGE JAMES R. SPENCER
MAUREEN G. MCDONNELL	)

REPLY OF DEFENDANT ROBERT F. MCDONNELL TO THE GOVERNMENT'S OPPOSITION TO MOTION # 10 – MOTION TO DISMISS COUNTS 1-11 OF THE INDICTMENT

TABLE OF CONTENTS

Page

TABLE OF AUTHORITIES iii

INTRODUCTION 1

ARGUMENT 2

I. The Indictment Must Be Dismissed If The Allegations Therein, Taken As True, Do Not State A Criminal Offense 2

II. Merely Providing Access Is Not An "Official Act" 5

- A. Every Judicial Decision Cited By Either Side Repudiates The Government's Broad Construction 5
  - 1. The Supreme Court Has Repeatedly Rejected The Government's Broad Construction 5
    - (a) Sun-Diamond held that speeches and meetings without more are not official acts 5
    - (b) "Ingratiation and access are not corruption" 6
  - 2. Every Court Of Appeals To Consider A Construction Of "Official Act" Similar To The Government's Has Rejected It 7
  - 3. The Decisions The Government Cites Do Not Support (Or Even Suggest) Its Broad Construction Of "Official Act" 10
- B. The Government's Broad Construction Would Criminalize Basic Political Practices, Which Is Likely Why Every Court To Consider It Has Rejected It 12
- C. The Statutory Text Also Forecloses The Government's Broad Construction 15
  - 1. The Statutory Text Clearly Forecloses The Government's Position 15
  - 2. To The Extent The Text Is Ambiguous, Multiple Canons Of Construction Dispel That Ambiguity 16

(a) Under the Rule of Lenity, the "tie must go to the defendant" 16

(b) Statutes should be interpreted to avoid "serious constitutional concerns" 17

(c) Statutes must be "clear and manifest" before they can be construed to invade state self-governance 18

III. Under The Long-Settled Definition Of "Official Act," The Indictment Should Be Dismissed 19

CONCLUSION 20

TABLE OF AUTHORITIES

Page

CASES

Bartlett v. Strickland,
556 U.S. 1 (2009) 17

Citizens United v. Federal Election Comm'n,
558 U.S. 310 (2010) 7

Clark v. Martinez,
543 U.S. 371 (2005) 17

Evans v. United States,
504 U.S. 255 (1992) 1

Gregory v. Ashcroft,
501 U.S. 452 (1991) 18, 19

Hale v. United States,
89 F.2d 578 (4th Cir. 1937) 4

McCutcheon v. Fed. Election Comm'n,
134 S. Ct. 1434 (2014) .... passim

McNally v. United States,
483 U.S. 350 (1987) 16

Scheidler v. NOW,
537 U.S. 393 (2003) 16

Skilling v. United States,
130 S. Ct. 2896 (2010) 16

United States v. Baer,
92 Fed. Appx. 942 (4th Cir. 2004) 3

United States v. Berlin,
707 F Supp. 832 (E.D. Va. 1989) 3

United States v. Bodmer,
342 F Supp. 2d 176 (S.D.N.Y 2004) 3

United States v. Boettcher,
780 F.2d 435 (4th Cir. 1985) 3, 4

United States v. Cassese,
273 F Supp. 2d 481 (S.D.N.Y 2003) 3

United States v. Derrick,
163 F.3d 799 (4th Cir. 1998) 14

United States v. Dimora,
879 F Supp. 2d 718 (N.D. Ohio 2012), aff'd, No. 12-4004, 2014 WL 1687766 (6th Cir. Apr. 30, 2014) 11

United States v. Ganim,
510 F.3d 134 (2d Cir. 2007).... 14

United States v. Gatewood,
173 F.3d 983 (6th Cir. 1999) 3

United States v. Good,
326 F.3d 589 (4th Cir. 2003) 3

United States v. Hairston,
46 F.3d 361 (4th Cir. 1995) 14

United States v. Hooker,
841 F.2d 1225 (4th Cir. 1988) 4

United States v. Hullender,
No. 90-cr-60, 1990 WL 124068 (N.D.N.Y Aug. 24, 1990)....12

United States v. Jefferson,
674 F.3d 332 (4th Cir. 2012) .... passim

United States v. Lamont,
330 F.3d 1249 (9th Cir. 2003) 3

United States v. Loftus,
992 F.2d 793 (8th Cir. 1993) 9

United States v. Moore,
525 F.3d 1033 (11th Cir. 2008) 11

United States v. Muntain,
610 F.2d 964 (D.C. Cir. 1979)....8, 9

United States v. Pope,
613 F.3d 1255 (10th Cir. 2010) 3

United States v. Rabbitt,
583 F.2d 1014 (8th Cir. 1978) 9

United States v. Ring,
706 F.3d 460 (D.C. Cir. 2013)....10

United States v. Rosen,
716 F.3d 691 (2d Cir. 2013) 11

United States v. Santos,
553 U.S. 507 (2008) 17

United States v. Sun-Diamond Growers,
526 U.S. 398 (1999) 5, 6, 10, 16

United States v. Terry,
707 F.3d 607 (6th Cir. 2013) 4, 5, 14

United States v. Thomas,
367 F.3d 194 (4th Cir. 2004) 3

United States v. Urciuoli,
513 F.3d 290 (1st Cir. 2008) 9

United States v. Walters,
359 F.3d 340 (4th Cir. 2004) 3

United States v. Yakou,
393 F.3d 231 (D.C. Cir. 2005) 3

Valdes v. United States,
475 F.3d 1319 (D.C. Cir. 2007) 2, 6, 8, 10, 15

Village of Hoffman Estates v. The Flipside, Hoffman Estates, Inc., 455 U.S. 489 (1982) 18

STATUTES

18 U.S.C. § 201(a)(3) 15

18 U.S.C. § 201(g) 8

Va. Code. § 2.2-3103(8) 19

OTHER AUTHORITIES

Bill Allison, Stealthy Wealthy: Did Katzenberg's Support for Obama Fast-Track Movie Deal with China, Sunlight Foundation (April 18, 2012), available at http://tinyurl.com/ml5slfz 13

Bill Dedman, Obama Blocks List of Visitors to White House NBC News.com (June 16, 2009), available at http://tinyurl.com/kzn2eun. 13

Jackie Calmes, A Hollywood Welcome for Obama at Clooney Fund-Raiser, The New York Times (May 11, 2012), available at http://tinyurl.com/n5t6az7 13

Public Citizen, Lobbying Disclosure Act: A Brief Synopsis of Key Components, available at http://tinyurl.com/mjndzs7. 13

Richard Verrier and Kate Linthicum, Obama Visits DreamWorks, Calls Hollywood A 'Bright Spot' of Economy, L.A. Times (Nov. 27, 2013), available at http://tinyurl.com/kclrosu....................13

INTRODUCTION

In its Opposition to Mr. McDonnell's Motion to Dismiss, the Government asks this Court to hold that merely appearing at an event, meeting with a supporter, deciding whether to meet with a supporter, or asking a subordinate to meet with a supporter are all "official acts" that can support a federal bribery indictment. The Government claims that such actions are "official" regardless of whether the public official promises to influence or attempts to influence the outcome of the meeting or any governmental decision. As the Government puts it: "Mr. McDonnell took official action when he ordered a subordinate to take a meeting, attended an event at a state facility, and directed a cabinet official to arrange a meeting" because those steps—even absent any thumb on the governmental scale—were each "actions on the questions, matters, or causes of (i) Virginia business development, (ii) the use of state government to promote and obtain research studies for Anatabloc®, or even simply (iii) whether to have or attend the meeting or event in question." Opp'n at p. 23, Dkt. 146. Under this theory, every public official who facilitates political access is subject to a bribery indictment. Indeed, the Government does not even dispute that this is the necessary consequence of its position.

If adopted, this interpretation would mark an extraordinary expansion of federal bribery law. The Hobbs Act, for example, has prohibited obtaining property from another "with his consent under color of official right" since 1946. See, e.g., Evans v. United States, 504 U.S. 255, 262 (1992) (explaining as much). No court in the seventy years since that provision's enactment, however, has even suggested—much less endorsed—the Government's broad construction of those words. To the contrary, the courts have consistently held that to be an "official" act—as opposed to any act an official takes—an action must cause (or attempt to influence someone else to cause) the government itself (i.e., the government as an entity) to do something (spend public funds, enter a contract, hire an employee, etc.). In other words, the act must involve "inappropriate influence on decisions that the government actually makes." United States v. Jefferson, 674 F.3d 332 (4th Cir. 2012) (quoting Valdes v. United States, 475 F.3d 1319, 1325 (D.C. Cir. 2007) (en banc)). Arranging a meeting with a subordinate does not cross that line unless the meeting-arranger also exerts "inappropriate influence" over whatever decision the subordinate will ultimately make (or be asked to make) on behalf of "the government." Id.

Here, the Indictment does not allege that Mr. McDonnell ever exercised "inappropriate influence" over any decision "that the government actually makes," id., which is why the Government is now asking this Court to endorse a wholly unprecedented construction of the bribery statutes. Careful review of the cases cited by both sides, however, makes clear that the courts have consistently rejected prosecutorial theories which seek to dispense with the requirement that "official" acts must involve either (1) making decisions on the government's behalf or (2) inappropriately influencing someone else to make decisions on the government's behalf. Every single decision cited by the parties dutifully reiterates this precise point. Even the Supreme Court has explained as much, most recently last month: "[G]overnment regulation may not target the general gratitude a candidate may feel toward those who support him or his allies, or the political access such support may afford." McCutcheon v. Fed. Election Comm'n, 134 S. Ct. 1434, 1441 (2014) (emphasis added).

This Court should not be the first to deviate from these well-settled principles. Counts 1-11 should therefore be dismissed.

ARGUMENT

I. The Indictment Must Be Dismissed If The Allegations Therein, Taken As True, Do Not State A Criminal Offense.

The Government does not dispute that the Indictment must be dismissed if "the allegations therein, even if true, would not state an offense." Gov't. Opp'n. at 2 n.3 (quoting United States v. Thomas, 367 F.3d 194, 197 (4th Cir. 2004)). Nor could it, as it is well settled that "a court may always ask whether the allegations in the indictment, if true, are sufficient to establish a violation of the charged offence' and dismiss the indictment if its allegations fail that standard." United States v. Pope, 613 F.3d 1255, 1260 (10th Cir. 2010). That is particularly true where, as here, the validity of the Indictment turns on a "clear-cut question of statutory construction." United States v. Boettcher, 780 F.2d 435, 436 (4th Cir. 1985). When "the conduct of the defendant set forth in the indictment" does not violate a federal statute, the courts should be "obedient to that Congressional purpose" and dismiss the indictment. Id. at 437 (affirming dismissal of an indictment). That is why courts routinely dismiss indictments when those indictments are legally deficient.[1] And that includes indictments which, like this one, "contravene[] the constitutional fair notice requirement, [such that] the rule of lenity demands [] dismissal." United States v. Bodmer, 342 F. Supp. 2d 176, 189 (S.D.N.Y. 2004).

The defense is not claiming, as the prosecution suggests, that the Government has failed to supply sufficient evidence in support of its Indictment. (Such a claim would be impossible at this juncture, even if procedurally proper, since the defense has not yet received the Government's most important evidence.) The defense is arguing solely that the Government has not made factual allegations that—even if entirely true—constitute a federal offense. The defense's motion thus presents a "clear-cut question of statutory construction," Boettcher, 780 F.2d at 436, which the cases, statutory text, and applicable canons of construction resolve decisively against the Government. None of the decisions the Government cites endorse its suggestion that prosecutors can replace concrete allegations with transcriptions of statutory text, proclaim that the Indictment recites a statute's elements, and then take their case before a jury. To the contrary, the Government must allege facts that, if true, would satisfy each element of each charged crime before it may plunge the Court, the parties, twelve citizens, and hundreds of witnesses (per the Government's witness list) into a trial. As the Fourth Circuit sitting en banc has explained: "[I]n testing the sufficiency of an indictment, 'it is the statement of facts in the pleading, rather than the statutory citation that is controlling . . . .'" United States v. Hooker, 841 F.2d 1225, 1227 (4th Cir. 1988) (en banc) (emphasis added). "It is elementary that every ingredient of [the] crime must be charged in the bill, a general reference to the provisions of the statute being insufficient." Id. at 1228 (quoting 89 F.2d 578, 579 (4th Cir. 1937)).

---

[1] See, e.g., United States v. Baer, 92 Fed. Appx. 942, 945 (4th Cir. 2004) (affirming dismissal of an indictment for failure to state an offense); United States v. Walters, 359 F.3d 340, 347 (4th Cir. 2004) (same); United States v. Good, 326 F.3d 589, 592 (4th Cir. 2003) (same); United States v. Berlin, 707 F. Supp. 832, 836, 838 (E.D. Va. 1989) (dismissing charges in an indictment due to insufficient factual allegations); see also, e.g., United States v. Yakou, 393 F.3d 231, 233 (D.C. Cir. 2005) (affirming dismissal of an indictment for failure to state an offense); United States v. Lamont, 330 F.3d 1249, 1250 (9th Cir. 2003) ("[W]e reverse the judgment of the district court with instructions to vacate the plea and dismiss the indictment."); United States v. Gatewood, 173 F.3d 983, 986-88 (6th Cir. 1999) (vacating a conviction and remanding "with instructions for the district court to dismiss the indictment" for failure to state a criminal offense); United States v. Cassese, 273 F. Supp. 2d 481, 484-88 (S.D.N.Y. 2003) (dismissing an indictment due to insufficient factual allegations).

Here, the Government has failed to allege that Mr. McDonnell performed (or promised he would perform) a specific "official act." Opp'n at pp. 5-6 (acknowledging that this is an element). What attributes make an act "official"—and thus illegal if undertaken in exchange for benefits—is a question of law that the Court must resolve. And at this stage in the proceedings, the Court must determine whether the Indictment alleges facts which—if proven—would constitute an "official act" under the proper definition. Because the Government's Indictment does not do that, it does "not state an offense," Opp'n. at 2 n.3, and must be dismissed.[2]

---

[2] The Government's block quote from United States v. Terry, 707 F.3d 607 (6th Cir. 2013), is irrelevant. That passage discusses the standard for alleging an "agreement" (or a

II. Merely Providing Access Is Not An "Official Act."

A. Every Judicial Decision Cited By Either Side Repudiates The Government's Broad Construction.

1. The Supreme Court Has Repeatedly Rejected The Government's Broad Construction.

The Supreme Court has repeatedly rejected the Government's notion that providing preferential access in exchange for benefits constitutes corruption. That is true in both the political corruption and campaign finance contexts. That authority is controlling here.

(a) Sun-Diamond held that speeches and meetings without more are not official acts.

The Supreme Court's decision in United States v. Sun-Diamond Growers, 526 U.S. 398 (1999), directly refutes the Government's broad construction of the term "official act." There, the Government argued that the Secretary of Agriculture would be taking an "official act" if he made a "speech to [] farmers concerning various matters of USDA policy—so long as the Secretary had before him, or had in prospect, matters affecting the farmers." Id. at 407. The Supreme Court flatly rejected that contention, holding that this sort of action, while "assuredly" an "'official act[]' in some sense," is not an "'official act[]' within the meaning of the statute." Id. As the Court explained, corruption statutes "that can linguistically be interpreted to be either a meat axe or a scalpel should reasonably be taken to be the latter." Id. at 412.

Rather than grapple with Sun-Diamond's straightforward explanation, the Government simply repeats the same argument it made there, re-characterizing the Supreme Court's decision as being "that the 'action' at issue (the hosting, visiting, speaking, or directing of a meeting) must be 'on' (relate to or further) a particular 'question, matter, cause,' etc. (such as African trade issues, Virginia business development, or obtaining research studies for a businessman's product)." Opp'n at 20 n.19. But that is the argument the Court rejected, holding that mere speeches or public appearances are never official acts, even though "the Secretary of Agriculture always has before him or in prospect matters that affect farmers, just as the President always has before him or in prospect matters that affect college and professional sports, and the Secretary of Education matters that affect high schools." 526 U.S. at 407. Indeed, this portion of the Court's holding could not be clearer: "[T]hose actions … are not 'official acts' within the meaning of the statute." Id. The Government's construction is therefore foreclosed.

"pro"), see id. at 613—a straightforward term where the legal term (agreement) is literally synonymous with the required factual showing (an agreement). With "official act," in contrast, the term itself does not constitute a complete factual allegation.

The Government also attempts to escape Sun-Diamond by arguing that Jefferson gives it "limited" force in bribery cases. Opp'n at 19. But nothing in Jefferson suggested that lower courts should ignore Sun-Diamond's construction of the same statutory text the Government is asking this Court to apply. To the contrary, Jefferson explained that "we agree with Sun-Diamond and Valdes that the bribery statute does not encompass every action taken in one's official capacity." 674 F.3d at 356. The discussion the Government latches onto relates to an entirely different argument—that to be "official," an act must be taken pursuant to duties that are formally codified in statute or regulation (such as voting on funding as opposed to lobbying other officials about funding). See id. at 355-56. The Fourth Circuit never suggested that it was rejecting Sun-Diamond's core determination that speeches or receptions are never official acts. Instead, Jefferson reaffirmed that to be "official," an act must exert "inappropriate influence on decisions that the government actually makes." Id. at 357 (quotation omitted).

(b) "Ingratiation and access are not corruption."

The Government's position is further undermined by the Supreme Court's repeated explanations in campaign finance cases of what constitutes "corruption" under federal law. The Government criticizes the defense for "cherrypicking" a "single sentence" from Citizens United v. Federal Election Comm'n, 558 U.S. 310 (2010). Opp'n at 27. Just last month, however, the Supreme Court provided an even more detailed explanation of what conduct is "corrupt" (and thus criminal) and what conduct is not. In McCutcheon, the Court explained that "government regulation may not target the general gratitude a candidate may feel toward those who support him or his allies, or the political access such support may afford." McCutcheon, 134 S. Ct. at 1441 (emphasis added). That is because "[i]ngratiation and access are not corruption." Id. (quoting 558 U.S. at 360). "Any regulation"—the Court emphasized—"must instead target 'quid pro quo' corruption or its appearance," which the Court defined as "a direct exchange of an official act for money." Id. By directly contrasting "the political access such support may afford," with "a direct exchange of an official act for money," the Court made crystal clear that exchanging only "political access" for "support" is not itself an "official act."

The Government asserts that these decisions hold only that "a mere correlation of political speech in the form of spending does not necessarily amount to corruption." Opp'n at 27 n.25. But that, of course, is not what the Court said; its opinions never discuss a "correlation" between spending and access. Rather, the Court held that "[i]ngratiation and access are not corruption," Citizens United, 558 U.S. at 360, and that the law cannot penalize "the political access such [financial] support may afford." McCutcheon, 134 S. Ct. at 1441. Those are definitive holdings about what cannot be exchanged for money (official acts) and what can be exchanged for money ("ingratiation and access" or "political access").

2. Every Court Of Appeals To Consider A Construction Of "Official Act" Similar To The Government's Has Rejected It.

In light of these common sense principles, it is not surprising that every court of appeals to have addressed the issue has rejected the Government's efforts to expand the concept of an "official act" beyond actions that exert "inappropriate influence on decisions that the government actually makes." Jefferson, 674 F.3d at 357 (quotation omitted). The Government's attempt to distinguish these cases merely demonstrates how wrong it is.

For example, the Government attempts to distinguish the D.C. Circuit's en banc decision in Valdes, but promptly defeats itself when it quotes the court's holding that official acts are limited to "questions, matters, causes, suits, proceedings, and controversies that are decided by the government." Opp'n at 20 (emphasis added). An official's decision about whether to meet with a supporter is not—and could not possibly be—a decision by "the government" on a "question[], matter[], cause[], suit[], proceeding[], and controvers[y]." It is as simple as the difference between a judge ruling on a motion (exercising the government's power) and a judge speaking at a law school (a settled practice of judges, to be sure, but one that does not exercise governmental power even if the judge's talk is "on" general legal "issues" that are "pending" before him). Consequently, a judge does not violate federal bribery laws when he agrees to speak at the law school of a dean who has hosted the judge at his summer vacation home. If the law were otherwise, then, as explained below, longstanding and routine political practices would suddenly be the bases for criminal prosecutions. See infra at II.B.

The Government likewise has no response to United States v. Muntain, which rejected the same argument the Government offers here: "The Government urges this Court to construe the scope of 'official acts' to encompass any acts within the range of an official's public duties, broadly defined, including, in the instant case, any meeting between the Assistant to the Secretary for Labor Relations at HUD and labor union officials to discuss matters of interest to the unions." 610 F.2d 964, 967 (D.C. Cir. 1979). Like here, "the Government would have this Court construe 18 U.S.C. § 201(g) as a statutory prohibition against the misuse of public office and contacts gained through that office to promote private ends." Id. The Court, however, held that such a construction would "extend its language beyond permissible bounds." Id.[3]

The Government is similarly stymied by United States v. Urciuoli, which rejected the Government's argument that "a legislator's informal duties commonly extend to representing constituents with local officials and engaging in oversight functions and so to this extent should be regarded as official." 513 F.3d 290, 295-96 (1st Cir. 2008). The Government notes that Urciuoli—like every appellate decision in which the Indictment was not dismissed—is in the context of "jury instructions and evidentiary sufficiency." Opp'n at 22. But that is always the case for defense-side criminal appeals. That procedural inevitability does not support the Government's attempt to try the McDonnells using an invented, uniformly-rejected legal theory.

Finally, the Government relegates its effort to distinguish United States v. Rabbitt, 583 F.2d 1014 (8th Cir. 1978), to a footnote wherein it fails to offer any actual distinction. To the contrary, the Government readily acknowledges that, under Rabbitt, an official does not take an official act if he "promised only to introduce the [paying] firm to influential persons; [but does] not promise to use his official position to influence those persons." Opp'n at 22 n.21 (quoting United States v. Loftus, 992 F.2d 793, 796 (8th Cir. 1993)) (second alteration added). Here, of course, all that the Government alleges is that Mr. McDonnell introduced Williams to "influential persons." Under Rabbitt and all of the other cases described above, however, that is simply not an "official act" under the federal bribery laws.

---

[3] The Government's only attempt to distinguish Muntain is to note that it was "a gratuities case." Opp'n at 21. That, of course, is irrelevant, since the gratuities statute uses the same definition of "official act" the Government is urging upon the Court here. See, e.g., Muntain, 610 F.2d at 967 (quoting the definition).

3. The Decisions The Government Cites Do Not Support (Or Even Suggest) Its Broad Construction Of "Official Act."

Nor do any of the six decisions cited by the Government support its legal theory. The Government relies chiefly on the Fourth Circuit's decision in Jefferson. Opp'n 12-13. But in Jefferson, the Fourth Circuit explicitly "agree[d] with Sun-Diamond and Valdes that the bribery statute does not encompass every action taken in one's official capacity"; rather, to be "official," an act "must yet adhere to the definition confining an official act to a pending 'question, matter, cause, suit, proceeding or controversy.'" 674 F.3d at 356. Jefferson, moreover, unquestionably involved "inappropriate influence on decisions that the government actually makes." Id. (quotation omitted). Indeed, far from merely facilitating access, Congressman Jefferson participated in five separate bribery schemes, each of which involved "the congressman [] soliciting ongoing bribe payments in exchange for promoting and facilitating lucrative deals between, for example, iGate and the Army, or between iGate, Mody, or Arkel and various African governments. Id. at 359. The interpretation the Government presses here, by contrast, would reach "every action taken in one's official capacity"—directly contravening Jefferson.

The D.C. Circuit's decision in United States v. Ring, 706 F.3d 460 (D.C. Cir. 2013), is even less helpful to the Government. There, the court held that pressuring an immigration official to expedite a visa application is an "official act." Id. at 469. That was correct because expediting a visa application (just like granting a visa) is an "official act" of the government. As the court explained, "the attorney acted in his official capacity to influence the visa application process, conduct better analogized to 'a congressman's use of his office to secure Navy contracts for a ship repair firm.'" Id. at 470 (citation omitted). The Government's observation that "even an act as insubstantial as an email or a phone call can, in context, be quo," Opp'n at 13, is thus irrelevant. The key question is whether the email or phone call exerts "inappropriate influence" over a governmental decision. That was true in Ring, but is not alleged here.

Nor does United States v. Dimora, 879 F Supp. 2d 718, 730 (N.D. Ohio 2012), support the Government's position. Like the other cases cited by the Government, that case clearly involved "official acts," which included, as the Sixth Circuit noted in its recent affirmance, Dimora providing various bribe-payers with, among other things, "county patronage," "government jobs," and "public construction contracts." United States v. Dimora, No. 12-4004/4051, 2014 WL 1687766 (6th Cir. Apr. 30, 2014), at *1. Thus, in the portion of the opinion discussing the "official act" requirement, Dimora explained that the Fourth Circuit's decision in Jefferson turned upon "efforts to obtain business assistance for certain business ventures by 'exerting his influence as a Member of Congress,'" 879 F Supp. 2d at 736, further emphasizing that, under the court's jury instruction, "'official action' includes the exercise of both formal official influence (such as a public official's votes) and informal official influence (such as a public official's influence on other public officials)." Id. at 734-36 (emphases added). Dimora, therefore, plainly limited "official" acts to those which exert "inappropriate influence on decisions that the government actually makes." Jefferson, 674 F.3d at 357 (quotation omitted). The portions of the opinion cited by the Government, in contrast, are not even from the opinion's discussion of the "official act" requirement. See Dimora, 879 F Supp. 2d at 730.

Finally, the Government cites a number of other cases in footnote 13. None support it:

- In quoting United States v. Rosen, 716 F.3d 691 (2d Cir. 2013), the Government omits a critical fact: "Seminerio wrote a letter on State Assembly letterhead stationery to the New York State Senate Majority Leader asking him to restore millions of dollars in funding." Id. at 695. That case, therefore, involved clear-cut "official acts"—which is likely why the defendant did not even argue otherwise.

- United States v. Moore, 525 F.3d 1033 (11th Cir. 2008), involved five "official acts" committed by prison guards, all of which involved exercising the power of the prison itself to afford preferential treatment to prisoners: (1) switching a prisoner's unit; (2) permitting a prisoner to make phone calls to request contraband; (3) lobbying another guard on behalf of an inmate; (4) permitting an inmate to leave her unit; (5) supplying a key to another guard to permit trysts on prison property. Id. at 1041.

- Finally, United States v. Hullender, No. 90-cr-60, 1990 WL 124068, at *4 (N.D.N.Y Aug. 24, 1990), a Northern District of New York decision resolving a discovery dispute, never even discusses what conduct was at issue or what the term "official act" means. As for the "ministerial exception" that Hullender cursorily rejects, that decision has no bearing where, as here, the problem is not that the allegations are "ministerial" but rather that they do not allege that Mr. McDonnell made or influenced any "decisions that the government actually makes." Jefferson, 674 F.3d at 357 (quotation omitted).

In short, the Government's own cases only underscore the reality that no court has ever endorsed the Government's expansive construction of the term "official act."

B. The Government's Broad Construction Would Criminalize Basic Political Practices, Which Is Likely Why Every Court To Consider It Has Rejected It.

It is not surprising that the cases uniformly reject the Government's position. For if, as the Government claims, providing preferential access in exchange for benefits constitutes federal bribery, then there is little question that virtually every elected official is vulnerable to federal indictment. The Government does not even dispute that this is the necessary consequence of its position. Instead, it simply refuses to "comment." Opp'n at 25. The courts, however, have no such luxury, since they must consider how the legal rules they adopt will apply to future cases.

Any doubt about the grave consequences of the Government's position is dispelled by considering the countless relationships between public officials and major donors it would criminalize. Just looking at the top of our political system, there are numerous wealthy donors who have well-documented symbiotic relationships with the current President—just as there have been with every past President—wherein massive donations yield increased "political access" (but not "inappropriate influence over decisions the government actually makes"). To take just one example, consider the President's relationship with Jeffrey Katzenberg, the wealthy Hollywood businessman who helms Dreamworks Animation.

Mr. Katzenberg donated $30,800 to the President's first campaign, while also bundling $500,000 in donations.[4] During and after that campaign, the President and his associates regularly solicited benefits from Mr. Katzenberg. He complied, giving hundreds of thousands of dollars "to congressional candidates" and "more than $1 million to party committees." Id. In return, Mr. Katzenberg received extraordinary access, visiting "the White House for a state dinner and high level diplomatic receptions" and having multiple "private meetings with key advisors."[5] His company's outside lobbyist (a former Dreamworks executive) received similarly privileged access, visiting the President and his staff "38 times, including two meetings when [the businessman] was also present."[6] Oftentimes, the President arranged important meetings for Mr. Katzenberg immediately after Mr. Katzenberg did things for him. For instance, shortly after Mr. Katzenberg announced that he would host an extravagant fundraiser, the President invited him to attend an official lunch with the future Premier of China. Id. The President even rewarded Mr. Katzenberg with an official speech (traveling at government expense) at Dreamworks—a speech in which the President lavished praise on Mr. Katzenberg and his company, unquestionably enhancing Mr. Katzenberg's credibility with the government and the public.[7] All the while, Mr. Katzenberg and his lobbyist never registered as lobbyists, id., enabling them to conceal many of their interactions with the President and his staff.[8] The

---

[4] Bill Allison, Stealthy Wealthy: Did Katzenberg's Support for Obama Fast-Track Movie Deal with China?, Sunlight Foundation (April 18, 2012), available at http://tinyurl.com/ml5slfz.

[5] Jackie Calmes, A Hollywood Welcome for Obama at Clooney Fund-Raiser, The New York Times (May 11, 2012), available at http://tinyurl.com/n5t6az7

[6] Allison, supra.

[7] Richard Verrier and Kate Linthicum, Obama Visits DreamWorks, Calls Hollywood A 'Bright Spot' of Economy, L.A. Times (Nov. 27, 2013), available at http://tinyurl.com/kclrosu.

[8] Public Citizen, Lobbying Disclosure Act: A Brief Synopsis of Key Components, at pp. 1-2, available at http://tinyurl.com/mjndzs7.

President, too, appears to have worked to conceal these meetings.[9]

Under the Government's broad theory, everyone involved in these events is at risk of federal indictment. The prosecution's only response to that startling conclusion is the ipse dixit that none of this matters because "not one penny" of the benefits it alleges "were campaign contributions." Opp'n at 25. But campaign contributions—no less than personal gifts—can constitute the quid in a quid pro quo bribery scheme. The Government's own authorities make this clear. For example, in Terry the Sixth Circuit explained that "a bribe doubl[ing] as a campaign contribution does not by itself insulate it from scrutiny." 707 F.3d at 613 (cited in Opp'n at pp. 8, 10). "[I]f a donor makes a contribution so that an elected official will 'do what I asked him to do,' and the official accepts the payment with the same understanding, the donor and the official have formed a corrupt bargain"; it is that "agreement[, which] marks the difference between a run-of-the-mine contribution and a bribe." Id. Or as the Fourth Circuit has held, "campaign contributions may be the subject of a Hobbs Act violation, no less than any other payments." United States v. Derrick, 163 F.3d 799, 816-17 (4th Cir. 1998).[10]

In short, if facilitating meetings constitutes an "official act," then facilitating access in exchange for campaign contributions is just as illegal as facilitating access in exchange for gifts and loans.[11] And under that theory, routine political practices, including those of the President, Virginia's current Governor, and others, see, e.g., Mem. Supp. Mot. Dismiss, Dkt. 106, at pp. 4, 17-18, 23, are subject to criminal prosecution. That is not—and has never been—the law.

---

[9] Bill Dedman, Obama Blocks List of Visitors to White House, NBC News.com (June 16, 2009), available at http://tinyurl.com/kzn2eun.

[10] Some courts have suggested that cases involving campaign contributions require an explicit—rather than implicit—quid pro quo. See, e.g., United States v. Ganim, 510 F.3d 134, 142-43 (2d Cir. 2007). The Fourth Circuit, however, has held that the Hobbs Act requires the same showing of intent in cases involving campaign contributions as in cases involving gifts. See United States v. Hairston, 46 F.3d 361, 372 (4th Cir. 1995) (requiring "proof of a quid pro quo in all cases charging extortion under color of official right"). But this issue is irrelevant here, where the issue is not the explicitness of any agreement, but whether the Government has alleged an "official act." And there is no basis—nor precedent—for the proposition that the same conduct is "official" in some cases (gifts) and "non-official" in others (contributions).

C. The Statutory Text Also Forecloses The Government's Broad Construction.

The prosecution is further mistaken in claiming that the statutory text supports its expansive construction. Opp'n at 14, 20 n.19. To the contrary, the text makes clear that acts are "official" only when they exercise (or seek to influence the exercise of) the power of the government itself. But if there is any doubt about that, a phalanx of interpretive canons make clear that all ambiguities in the text must be resolved against the Government—further foreclosing its attempt to twist the bribery laws into criminalizing political access.

1. The Statutory Text Clearly Forecloses The Government's Position.

The statutory definition the Government seeks to borrow, 18 U.S.C. § 201(a)(3), defines an "official act" as "any decision or action on any question, matter, cause, suit, proceeding or controversy, which may at any time be pending, or which may by law be brought before any public official, in such official's official capacity." "[T]he six-term series" of words "refers to a class of questions or matters whose answer or disposition is determined by the government." Valdes, 475 F.3d at 1324. In other words, the act must represent a disposition or determination "by the government," or an effort to inappropriately influence the same. Merely giving a private person political access so that he can try to influence the government is not enough.

The Government's only response is to assert that the word "on" actually means "relates to or furthers." Opp'n at 17. It thus claims that taking action "on" an issue means the same thing as taking action that "relates to or furthers" an issue. Id. (emphases added). But that is plainly wrong, since the phrase "relates to or furthers" is substantially broader than the word "on." For example, making a decision "on" whether to hire someone is different than making a decision that "relates to or furthers" whether to hire someone. The former means making an actual decision about whether to make the hire, while the latter would include decisions about all sorts of neutral and prefatory steps, such as whether to interview someone, read a resume, or even return a phone call. Here, the word "on" does the critical textual work of limiting the statute to "decisions or actions" that inappropriately influence or directly cause the government to do something (or not do something), while "relates to or furthers" would expand the statute to include merely providing people with access to the government so that those people can plead their case for governmental action. The text does not adopt that latter, broader construction.

---

[11] Not even the intent requirement could keep the Government at bay, since the quid pro quo in fundraising is typically explicit.

2. To The Extent The Text Is Ambiguous, Multiple Canons Of Construction Dispel That Ambiguity.

To the extent the statutory text is unclear, multiple canons foreclose the Government's sweeping construction. As the Supreme Court admonished in Sun-Diamond, "a statute in this field that can linguistically be interpreted to be either a meat axe or a scalpel should reasonably be taken to be the latter." 526 U.S. at 412. These canons reinforce that directive here.

(a) Under the Rule of Lenity, the "tie must go to the defendant."

The Rule of Lenity requires the Court to construe any ambiguity in the statutory definition of "official act" against the Government. "[W]hen there are two rational readings of a criminal statute, one harsher than the other, [the Court is] to choose the harsher only when Congress has spoken in clear and definite language." McNally v. United States, 483 U.S. 350, 359-60 (1987); see also Skilling v. United States, 130 S. Ct. 2896, 2932-33 (2010) (applying rule of lenity to honest services statute); Scheidler v. NOW, 537 U.S. 393, 409 (2003) (applying rule of lenity to Hobbs Act). "This venerable rule not only vindicates the fundamental principle that no citizen should be held accountable for a violation of a statute whose commands are uncertain, or subjected to punishment that is not clearly prescribed," but "also places the weight of inertia upon the party that can best induce Congress to speak more clearly and keeps courts from making criminal law in Congress's stead." United States v. Santos, 553 U.S. 507, 514 (2008) (plurality opinion). Here, the statutes clearly foreclose the Government's construction. But at a minimum they are ambiguous and so the "tie must go to the defendant." Id.

(b) Statutes should be interpreted to avoid "serious constitutional concerns."

It is likewise a bedrock principle of statutory construction that legislation should be interpreted to avoid "serious constitutional concerns." Bartlett v. Strickland, 556 U.S. 1, 4 (2009). This canon is "a tool for choosing between competing plausible interpretations of a statutory text" that rests "on the reasonable presumption that Congress did not intend the alternative which raises serious constitutional doubts." Clark v. Martinez, 543 U.S. 371, 381-382 (2005). Here, the Government's construction would render the provisions it invokes unconstitutionally vague and would transgress core First Amendment freedoms. The Court should interpret those provisions to avoid these serious constitutional issues.

First, according to the Government: "Mr. McDonnell took official action when he ordered a subordinate to take a meeting, attended an event at a state facility, and directed a cabinet official to arrange a meeting, and all of those actions were on the questions, matters, or causes of (i) Virginia business development, (ii) the use of state government to promote and obtain research studies for Anatabloc®, or even simply (iii) whether to have or attend the meeting or event in question." Opp'n at 23. The Government thus believes that the term "official act" potentially includes every decision an official makes that relates to anything that official ever addresses in his official capacity. The Government even suggests that this construction could criminalize any decision about "whether to have [a] meeting" with anyone who has conferred a benefit. If that is what the statute means, then it is unclear how officials could ever avoid violating it. After all, whenever a supporter requests a meeting, the official will have to decide "whether to have the meeting"—even if the decision is no. This problem is avoided, however, by construing "official act" as the courts have uniformly construed it until now—as limited to acts that exert inappropriate influence over an actual governmental decision.

Second, the Supreme Court has consistently held that when laws "interfere[] with the right of free speech or of association, a more stringent vagueness test should apply." Village of Hoffman Estates v. The Flipside, Hoffman Estates, Inc., 455 U.S. 489, 499 (1982). The Government's broad construction would directly infringe core First Amendment freedoms. As the Supreme Court just held, "government regulation may not target the general gratitude a candidate may feel toward those who support him or his allies, or the political access such support may afford." McCutcheon, 134 S. Ct. at 1441 (emphases added). Criminal laws are plainly "government regulation." It therefore flows directly from McCutcheon that those laws "may not target" the "political access" that financial "support may afford." The Government's construction runs headlong into that basic principle. The correct construction does not.

(c) Statutes must be "clear and manifest" before they can be construed to invade state self-governance.

Finally, Federalism supplies yet another reason to reject the Government's sweeping construction of the phrase "official act." The Supreme Court has repeatedly held that, "[i]f Congress intends to alter the usual constitutional balance between the States and the Federal Government, it must make its intention to do so unmistakably clear in the language of the statute." Gregory v. Ashcroft, 501 U.S. 452, 461 (1991). Federal intrusion into a state's code of ethics "pre-empt[s a] historic power[] of the States" and should thus be rejected unless Congress has made "its intention 'clear and manifest.'" Id. at 461. Here, Virginia law explicitly decriminalizes accepting "a gift from a person who has interests that may be substantially affected by the performance of the officer's official duties under circumstances where the timing and nature of the gift would cause a reasonable person to question the officer's impartiality in the matter affecting the donor." Va. Code. § 2.2-3103(8). The Govenrment's broad construction would fully override this state law, along with the rest of Virginia's code of ethics. Congress's intent to preempt that wide swath of Virginia's (and every other state's) ethics code for state officials is hardly "clear and manifest" in the provisions the Government invokes.[12]

III. Under The Long-Settled Definition Of "Official Act," The Indictment Should Be Dismissed.

Once the Court applies the proper definition of "official act," it is clear that the Indictment fails to allege a complete corruption offense.[13] As Mr. McDonnell demonstrated in the Memorandum supporting his Motion to Dismiss, the Government does not allege that he attempted to inappropriately influence any governmental decision (or promised he would do so). See Mem. Supp. Mot. Dismiss, Dkt. 106, at pp. 23-27 The Government alleges only—at the most—that Mr. McDonnell gave Williams access to some of Mr. McDonnell's subordinates so that Williams could attempt to influence those individuals to help his company. Merely affording access to those subordinates without attempting to exert any "inappropriate influence" over what they decided to do (or not do) is simply not an "official act," as Jefferson, 674 F.3d at 357, and countless other decisions make clear. See supra at II.A.

---

[12] The Government's principal response to this point is that "Virginia law criminalizes bribery." Opp'n at 30. Tellingly, however, the Government cites no example of Virginia prosecuting a state official for providing gift-givers with preferential access.

[13] Toward the end of its Opposition, the Government seizes upon a few lines of the defense's Memorandum to mischaracterize the defense's argument as something the defense has never suggested—that officials must take different official action in order to consummate bribery. Opp'n. at 25-26. This obfuscation fails. Mr. McDonnell has never argued that an act is not "official" if the official can show he would have done the same thing absent the bribe. If a governor took gifts in exchange for signing legislation, he would obviously be guilty of bribery regardless of whether he would have signed the bill anyway.

Nor can the Government save its Indictment by suggesting that Mr. McDonnell took "official acts" by exerting inappropriate influence over the Tobacco Commission's decision whether to fund Star research, or over state university researchers' decisions whether to conduct studies. See, e.g., Opp'n at 12 (referring to allegations as a "series of steps towards a longer-term goal"); id. at 20-21 ("sought-after research studies at state universities"). The Indictment does not allege that Mr. McDonnell attempted to influence the decisions of the Tobacco Commission or university researchers (or promised he would). It does not even allege that Star Scientific requested research funding.[14] Un-alleged facts plainly cannot sustain an Indictment.

CONCLUSION

The jury arguments laced throughout the Government's Opposition highlight the importance of the Court acting as gatekeeper in this case. The Government barely pretends to have pled an "official act" under the long-settled definition of that requirement. It has instead broadcast its intention to convict Mr. McDonnell using eye-catching details about his supposed excess, while ignoring fundamentals like the actual elements of the charged crimes. That is not how criminal law works. The Indictment should be dismissed.

---

[14] The Government briefly mentions one other possibility: "Mr. McDonnell's hosting an event at the Governor's Mansion to benefit Star was [ ] an exercise of his official governmental powers." Opp'n at 18 n.16. That, too, is wrong. Mr. McDonnell hosting a privately funded lunch event in his then-home does not exercise the sovereign power of Virginia. The fact that the Government's only "authority" for claiming otherwise is a forty-year-old, out-of-circuit decision construing the Speech and Debate Clause confirms it. Otherwise, the quadrennial practice of selling access to presidential inaugural events would constitute bribery, as would hosting an event in a government building to which the guests bring gifts.

Dated: May 5, 2014

Respectfully submitted,

/s/ Jonathan A. Berry

Henry W Asbill (pro hac vice)
Mary Ellen Powers (pro hac vice)
Noel J. Francisco (pro hac vice)
Ryan D. Newman (pro hac vice)
James M. Burnham (pro hac vice)
Jonathan A. Berry (VSB No. 81864)
JONES DAY
51 Louisiana Avenue, N.W.
Washington, D.C. 20001
Telephone: (202) 879-3939
Facsimile: (202) 626-1700

John L. Brownlee (VSB No. 37358)
Timothy J. Taylor (VSB No. 84529)
Daniel I. Small (pro hac vice)
Christopher M. Iaquinto (pro hac vice)
HOLLAND & KNIGHT LLP
800 17th Street, N.W., Suite 1100
Washington, D.C. 20006
Telephone: (202) 828-1854
Facsimile: (202) 955-5564

Counsel for Robert F. McDonnell

CERTIFICATE OF SERVICE

I, Jonathan A. Berry, am a member of the Bar of this Court. I hereby certify that on this - 5th day of May, 2014, I caused the foregoing to be electronically filed with the Clerk of Court using the CM/ECF system, causing it to be served on all registered users.

Dated: May 5, 2014

Respectfully submitted,

/s/ Jonathan A. Berry

Jonathan A. Berry (VSB No. 81864)
JONES DAY
51 Louisiana Avenue, N.W.
Washington, D.C. 20001
Telephone: (202) 879-3939
Facsimile: (202) 626-1700
Email: jberry@jonesday.com

Counsel for Robert F. McDonnell

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
FOR THE EASTERN DISTRICT OF VIRGINIA
RICHMOND DIVISION

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,	)
	)
v.	)	CRIMINAL NO. 3:14-CR-00012
	)
ROBERT F. MCDONNELL	)	JUDGE JAMES R. SPENCER
MAUREEN G. MCDONNELL	)

REPLY OF DEFENDANT ROBERT F. MCDONNELL TO THE GOVERNMENT'S RESPONSE TO MOTION # 14 – MOTION FOR OMNIBUS VOIR DIRE RELIEF

INTRODUCTION

The Government concedes—as it must—that this case has garnered an unusual "volume of pretrial publicity warrant[ing]" at least some voir dire measures proposed by Mr. McDonnell. Opp'n at 2 n.2. Its brief, however, reveals that concession as hollow, by affirmatively agreeing to only the one requested procedure—juror note-taking—that is already customary in this Court. At every other turn, the Government urges the Court to retain the "standard procedure" even though it admits that this is not a standard case.

The Government defends its position via misdirection—insisting the accused is equal to other criminal defendants. That misses the point entirely. Of course Mr. McDonnell has no more basic rights under the law than any other defendant. But selecting a fair and impartial jury is not a one-size-fits-all concept. The difference is in the nature of the charges, the unique job the former Governor held over the last four years, and the likely exposure of potential jurors to information about the case and the accused. The Government cannot contest that this case is far from the average criminal prosecution. It is already one of the most high-profile prosecutions in Virginia history, as demonstrated by the massive press coverage at the arraignment and the thousands of news articles over the past nine months. Further, this case has a defendant whose policy decisions, as Governor, affected millions of Virginians personally. Mr. McDonnell has thus requested voir dire relief to mitigate the obvious risk of prejudice.

ARGUMENT

I. The Government Concedes That Pre-Trial Publicity Has Been Overwhelming And Overwhelmingly Prejudicial to the Accused in This Proceeding.

The Government does not dispute that—unlike the typical criminal defendant—Mr. McDonnell has been subject to a constant deluge of prejudicial publicity saturating the district's jury pool. The media reflects this reality every time anything is filed in this proceeding—no matter how innocuous—by making detailed reports on the filing. (The Government tries to lay this publicity at the defense's doorstep, but it is illogical to suggest that Mr. McDonnell has been feeding this toxic publicity.)[1] Nor does the Government contest that Mr. McDonnell's political and policy positions are likely to influence potential jurors. In short, the Government admits that this case presents highly unusual circumstances, which in turn pose unique challenges in selecting an impartial jury. Mr. McDonnell is not, as the Government implies, seeking "special treatment." To the contrary, he seeks only fair treatment commensurate with the unique circumstances surrounding this prosecution.

II. Thorough Voir Dire Is the Only Way to Protect the Accused's Sixth Amendment Rights in This Proceeding.

Despite readily acknowledging—as it must—that there is an extraordinarily atypical risk of a prejudiced jury pool in this case, the Government proceeds to demand typical treatment of the accused, according to what it describes as standard practice. While its response claims to endorse "some" additional voir dire measures, the only request it actually approves is the request to permit jurors to take written notes, which is already the custom in this Court. In light of the Government's agreement that (1) Mr. McDonnell has faced overwhelming, prejudicial publicity before trial and (2) that publicity justifies additional safeguards, it is clear that more than already-permitted note taking is required.

---

[1] Mr. McDonnell was the Commonwealth's Governor during a grand jury investigation riddled with leaks, many explicitly attributed to unnamed law enforcement sources by the reporters who printed them. As Governor, Mr. McDonnell was fully entitled to make limited public statements in response to those leaks and, indeed, had an obligation to do so. The Government complains about emails sent from a legal defense fund—a private organization properly exercising its First Amendment rights. To be clear, no member of the defense team controls the fund or is responsible for its statements.

The Government supports its opposition with little analysis, instead offering repeated references to this Court's discretion over voir dire, making virtually no arguments about how the Court should exercise that discretion.

The Government takes no position on Mr. McDonnell's fifth and seventh requests and does not oppose his sixth request, so he stands on his original brief for those, asking the Court to use its sound discretion to grant that unopposed relief. As discussed below, the remaining requests should also be granted, given voir dire's "essential role in guaranteeing a criminal defendant's Sixth Amendment right to an impartial jury." United States v. Lancaster, 96 F.3d 734, 738 (4th Cir. 1996) (en banc); Mu'Min v. Virginia, 500 U.S. 415, 431 (1991) ("Voir dire examination serves the dual purposes of enabling the court to select an impartial jury and assisting counsel in exercising peremptory challenges.").

A. Administering juror questionnaires at the courthouse protects the integrity of the voir dire process.

The Government invokes "judicial economy" in opposing Mr. McDonnell's request that potential jurors fill out their questionnaires on-site. But given the amount of governmental and judicial resources this prosecution will consume if permitted to proceed to trial, it is hard to see how administering a jury questionnaire at the courthouse—substantially increasing the reliability of each prospective juror's answers—would be disproportionately burdensome. Indeed, other than the few minutes required for introductory remarks, the Court itself would not have to be present for the remainder of the exercise. Having prospective jurors complete the questionnaire on-site will ensure the questionnaire's integrity and help guard against overzealous and biased jurors (for either side) making it onto the jury—a risk that is unquestionably more acute in a highly publicized prosecution like this one, which features such a polarizing criminal defendant. And by guarding against this possibility, on-site administration of the questionnaire will minimize the risk of a mistrial and additional litigation, which would, of course, impose a far greater drain on the Court's resources.

B. Individual questioning by the Court and the parties will help them to root out bias caused by the concededly negative and overwhelming publicity of the last year.

The Government's recitation of the Court's broad discretion over in-person juror questioning makes no specific argument against Mr. McDonnell's request, beyond another unadorned appeal to custom. But the defense has already demonstrated—without opposition from the Government—that this case is not typical, as the jury pool in a typical case has not been inundated with publicity castigating the defendant for over a year, nor is the typical defendant a former Governor who has taken controversial policy positions.

That extraordinary and atypical prejudicial publicity, coupled with the defendant's polarizing political reputation, is best mitigated by careful screening of potential jurors through a written questionnaire followed by a brief period of individual follow-up questioning from the Court and the parties. Adding these safeguards merely reflects the commonsense observation that "[t]he appropriate procedure when potential juror bias presents itself is a function of the probability of bias; the greater that probability, the more searching the inquiry needed to make reasonably sure that an unbiased jury is impaneled." United States v. Blitch, 622 F.3d 658, 665 (7th Cir. 2010) (citation and internal quotation marks omitted). Specifically, Mr. McDonnell's request that potential jurors be questioned individually comports with the Fourth Circuit's instruction that, if the court "determines that a member of the venire has been exposed to prejudicial pretrial publicity, that juror must then be examined, individually and outside the presence of the other jurors, to determine the effect of the publicity." Coins v. Angelone, 226 F.3d 312, 325 (4th Cir. 2000) (citation and internal quotation marks omitted).

That same undisputed risk of prejudice justifies the added safeguard of having the "court and the attorneys closely question[] the jurors to assess their impartiality." United States v. Rolle, 204 F.3d 133, 136 (4th Cir. 2000) (emphasis added). This safeguard is especially appropriate given the sheer volume of documents (over 5 million) and potential witnesses (over 200) with which counsel have had to become familiar. Counsel will have much greater facility with the facts (and potential bases for bias) during voir dire and will therefore—if given just five minutes apiece—be able to aid the Court and expedite the jury-selection process by quickly evaluating anomalous questionnaire answers and juror conduct that the parties observe in court. See also JEFFREY T. FREDERICK, MASTERING VOIR DIRE & JURY SELECTION: GAIN AN EDGE IN QUESTIONING & SELECTING YOUR JURY 5 (3d ed. 2011) ("Jurors simply are more reluctant to reveal personal, sensitive, or socially unacceptable information or opinions to judges than to lawyers, whom they perceive as closer in social status.").[2]

---

[2] That same trial expert has collected research documenting the difficulties of rooting out bias created by pretrial publicity:

> [J]urors often do not recognize or admit bias produced by pretrial publicity. One study found that only 26 percent of jurors exposed to damaging pretrial publicity recognized their biases, while the remaining, supposedly "neutral" jurors who were exposed to damaging pretrial publicity still convicted the defendant at a 2-to-1 rate as compared to jurors not exposed to such publicity. Later studies have supported this finding. Similar results concerning the "hollowness" of assertions by respondents that they can be "fair and impartial" have been found in surveys and public opinion polling. To complicate matters even further, jurors tend to downplay their exposure to pretrial publicity, what has been termed the "minimization effect," making it difficult for lawyers to unravel the scope and impact of exposure of pretrial publicity.

Id. (footnotes omitted).

C. The defendants should receive 10 peremptory challenges each, with 6 total for the Government.

The Government does not dispute that the balance of pretrial publicity has tipped heavily against the accused, fueled in part by leaks attributed to "law enforcement" sources. For that reason, Mr. McDonnell requests pursuant to Loc. Crim. R. 24(b) that the defendants receive 10 peremptory challenges each, as "an appropriate safeguard to ensure that Defendants are afforded a fair trial." United States v. Hasan, 747 F Supp. 2d 642, 699 (E.D. Va. 2010) (granting additional challenges after defendant showed heightened media coverage of his prosecution), aff'd sub nom. United States v. Dire, 680 F.3d 446 (4th Cir. 2012), cert. denied, 133 S. Ct. 982 (2013). While "additional peremptory challenges may protract jury selection to some degree," another court in this district has noted that "it is unlikely to be unduly burdensome." Id. And the Government has advanced no reason here to believe it would be unusually hard or take unusually long to exercise the additional challenges.

If the Court does not ultimately sever the defendants, Mr. McDonnell requests that each defendant be permitted to exercise his or her peremptory challenges separately. The defendants had very different relationships with Jonnie Williams, as the Government well knows. The Government's decision nonetheless to indict the defendants together—and thus put the McDonnells' marriage at center stage—created a situation with divergent trial strategies and thus the need for separately exercised peremptory challenges.

Here too, the Government's default argument touting judicial economy undercuts itself. Exercising additional peremptory challenges will take minutes—a modest cost to help insure a five-week-long trial against mistrial. This is precisely the sort of case—a highly publicized prosecution of a well-known political figure, coupled with the highly publicized prosecution of a co-defendant with much different circumstances and trial interests—in which the Court should use its discretion to grant additional challenges.

D. The "struck system" helps ensure a fair and impartial jury in the face of overwhelming and negative pretrial publicity.

Mr. McDonnell proposes the struck system to help the parties combat the bias and polarization threatened by pretrial publicity and by his political reputation. As one trial expert has found, under the default selection method, "[w]hen polarization of opinions occurs, the risk [increases] that replacement jurors will hold opinions adverse to a party, e.g., belief in the guilt or innocence or liability of a defendant, yet unknown to the parties." JEFFREY T FREDERICK, MASTERING VOIR DIRE & JURY SELECTION: GAIN AN EDGE IN QUESTIONING & SELECTING YOUR JURY 9–10 (3d ed. 2011). But under the struck system, "there is no such risk," because the parties are allowed to consider the entire jury pool when deciding how to allocate their peremptory challenges. Id. at 10. Under the circumstances, the struck system "is the superior method because it reduces the uncertainty that lawyers face and removes the information deficits inherent in the sequential method." Id.[3]

Unlike the typical case, moreover, the Government has apparently retained a jury consultant, as has the defense. The involvement of those consultants will enable the parties to evaluate the juror questionnaires more effectively, leaving them better equipped to use the struck system to root out hidden juror bias.

---

[3] If the Court will not assent to the struck system, as a fallback Mr. McDonnell respectfully requests that (1) the parties be given an ordered list of which replacement jurors will be seated after jurors are struck and (2) the parties be permitted to "back-strike" potential jurors in rounds after they have already been seated. These measures would reduce the risk of prejudice from pretrial publicity, albeit not as much as the struck system.

The parties thus have much greater need to consider the entire jury pool—and will have much more information at hand—than in the typical criminal case. And of course, once again, the Government offers no argument beyond its appeal to the norm. Opp'n at 5 ("Because the Court does not customarily use this method, the Government opposes this request."). Accordingly, Mr. McDonnell requests the Court approve the struck system for this case, to allow the parties to make the best use of their information about potential jurors and thus minimize the risk of biased jurors making the final cut, jeopardizing whatever verdict the jury ultimately reaches—or fails to reach.

CONCLUSION

For the reasons given above, Mr. McDonnell requests the Court grant his motion for voir dire relief, and requests a hearing on the motion.

Dated: May 5, 2014

Respectfully submitted,

/s/ Jonathan A. Berry
Henry W Asbill (pro hac vice)
Mary Ellen Powers (pro hac vice)
Noel J. Francisco (pro hac vice)
Owen T. Conroy (pro hac vice)
Jonathan A. Berry (VSB No. 81864)
JONES DAY
51 Louisiana Avenue, N.W.
Washington, D.C. 20001
Telephone: (202) 879-3939
Facsimile: (202) 626-1700

John L. Brownlee (VSB No. 37358)
Timothy J. Taylor (VSB No. 84529)
HOLLAND & KNIGHT LLP
800 17th Street, N.W
Suite 1100
Washington, DC 20006
Telephone: (202) 828-1854
Facsimile: (703) 720-8610

Counsel for Robert F McDonnell

CERTIFICATE OF SERVICE

I, Jonathan A. Berry, am a member of the Bar of this Court. I hereby certify that on this 5th day of May, 2014, I caused the foregoing to be electronically filed with the Clerk of Court using the CM/ECF system, causing it to be served on all registered users.

Dated: May 5, 2014

Respectfully submitted,

/s/ Jonathan A. Berry
Jonathan A. Berry (VSB No. 81864)
JONES DAY
51 Louisiana Avenue, N.W.
Washington, D.C. 20001
Telephone: (202) 879-3939
Facsimile: (202) 626-1700
Email: jberry@jonesday.com

Counsel for Robert F McDonnell

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
FOR THE EASTERN DISTRICT OF VIRGINIA
RICHMOND DIVISION

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,	)
	)
v.	)	CRIMINAL NO. 3:14-CR-00012
	)
ROBERT F. MCDONNELL MAUREEN G. MCDONNELL	)	JUDGE JAMES R. SPENCER
	)

REPLY OF DEFENDANT ROBERT F. MCDONNELL TO THE GOVERNMENT'S OPPOSITION TO MOTION # 11 – MOTION TO SEVER JOINT TRIAL

TABLE OF CONTENTS

Page

INTRODUCTION 1

ARGUMENT 2

I. Mr. McDonnell Has Not Waived His Request For Severance. 2

II. The Government Misreads Rule 12 And Misstates The Applicable Standard. 5

III. It Is Equitable And Appropriate To Hold Mr. McDonnell's Severance Motion In Abeyance 7

IV Mr. McDonnell's Substantive Arguments For Severance Are Meritorious. 12

CONCLUSION 20

TABLE OF AUTHORITIES

Page

CASES

Horton v. Mayle,
408 F.3d 570 (9th Cir. 2005) 16

Maryland v. Universal Elections, Inc.,
729 F.3d 370 (4th Cir. 2013) 6

Schaffer v. United States,
362 U.S. 511 (1960) 10

United States v. Abu Ali,
528 F.3d 210 (4th Cir. 2008) 7

United States v. Ammar,
714 F.2d 238 (3rd Cir. 1983) 12

United States v. Cain,
544 F.2d 1113 (1st Cir. 1976) 18

United States v. Carona,
No. SA CR 06-224-AG, 2008 WL 1970221 (C.D. Cal. May 2, 2008) 16

United States v. Carona,
No. SACR-06-224(A)-AG (C.D. Cal. Apr. 8, 2008) 12

United States v. Chavez,
902 F.2d 259 (4th Cir. 1990) 9

United States v. Danielson,
325 F.3d 1054 (9th Cir. 2003) 7

United States v. Dawson,
No. 5:12-cr-284-F2, 2013 WL 3381380 (E.D.N.C. July 8, 2013) 18, 19

United States v. Grace,
526 F.3d 499 (9th Cir. 2008) 6

United States v. Johnston,
685 F.2d 934 (5th Cir. 1982) 6

United States v. Lindh,
198 F. Supp. 2d 739 (E.D. Va. 2002) 7

United States v. Olano,
507 U.S. 725 (1993) 4

United States v. Parodi,
703 F.2d 768 (4th Cir. 1983) 14, 15, 20

United States v. Salgado-Campos,
442 F.3d 684 (8th Cir. 2006) 6

United States v. Shuford,
454 F.2d 772 (4th Cir. 1971) 14, 15, 17, 19

United States v. Walden,
625 F.3d 961 (6th Cir. 2010) 8

United States v. Williams,
No. 2:06-cr-100, 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 65996 (E.D. Va. Sept. 15, 2006), aff'd, 254 Fed Appx. 945 (4th Cir. 2007) 6

Zafiro v. United States,
506 U.S. 534 (1993) 18

STATUTES

Criminal Rule 12(A) 6

Fed. R. Crim. P 12(b)(3) 2, 3, 5

Fed. R. Crim. P. 12(c) 2, 5, 6

Fed. R. Crim. P 12(d) 5

Fed. R. Crim. P 12(e) 3, 4, 5, 6, 7

OTHER AUTHORITIES

Sand, Modern Federal Jury Instruction—Criminal, Instruction 7-9(2013) 17

INTRODUCTION

The Government faults Mr. McDonnell for supporting his severance motion with "only vague statements and conclusory assertions." Resp. of the United States in Opp'n to Defs.' Mot. to Sever Joint Trial ("Opp'n"), Dkt. 143, at 1. At the same time, the Government strenuously opposes Mr. McDonnell's request that his severance motion be held in abeyance until a time when he will, consistent with his right to maintain the confidentiality of his trial strategy, be able to share key supporting materials with the Government.[1] The prosecution cannot have it both ways.

Mr. McDonnell has asked the Court, in light of its order denying permission to file supporting declarations ex parte for in camera review, to defer decision on his severance motion until a later date closer to trial. See Def. Robert F McDonnell's Notice of Non-Filing of Decls. Pursuant to the Court's Apr. 17, 2014 Order ("Notice of Non-Filing"), Dkt. 140. Mr. McDonnell now proposes 14 days before trial as an appropriate date. At that time, Mr. McDonnell will publicly file his supporting declarations with service on the Government, in keeping with the Court's order. See Mem. Order ("April 17th Order"), Dkt. 137. Mr. McDonnell submits that holding his severance motion in abeyance will safeguard his Sixth Amendment rights and give adequate time for the Court to receive further argument from the parties and decide the motion.

---

[1] To be clear, in light of the Court's order precluding ex parte submissions, Mr. McDonnell does not intend to file at any time any material containing confidential marital communications. Mrs. McDonnell has asserted her marital communications privilege. Any defense filing disclosing to the Government confidential communications between Mr. and Mrs. McDonnell would be inconsistent with the defense's ethical obligations relating to privileged materials. Accordingly, Mr. McDonnell will be unable to provide further factual support for his arguments that are based on the marital communications privilege. Should the Court reconsider this aspect of its ruling, however, Mr. McDonnell would welcome the opportunity to make an ex parte filing of such materials at the time that the Court considers his severance motion. See infra note 6.

The Government offers no valid reason for resisting this proposed deferral. Its claims of Rule 12 waiver are patent misreadings of the rule, and its various arguments that the equities do not favor abeyance are all either illogical or unfounded. As for the Government's merits arguments on the severance motion, if this Court grants Mr. McDonnell's request for abeyance, he will address those in full with the benefit of supporting declarations. But even at this stage, the Government's arguments fail, and severance is therefore warranted.

ARGUMENT

I. Mr. McDonnell Has Not Waived His Request For Severance.

The Government argues that Mr. McDonnell has waived his request for severance. Opp'n at 16-18. But it provides no authority whatsoever indicating that, where a defendant files a severance motion four months before trial in accordance with the court's scheduling order and then, in light of evolving circumstances, asks the court to defer ruling on that motion until a later date—also before trial—the defendant has waived that motion. The Government's contention not only contravenes Rule 12, it is also incompatible with any plausible definition of waiver.

Rule 12 establishes a clear framework for the filing and deciding of pretrial motions in federal criminal cases, and both Mr. McDonnell's severance motion and his request that his motion be held in abeyance comply fully with the rule's requirements. Rule 12(b)(3) provides that certain motions, including a Rule 14 motion to sever, "must be raised before trial." Under Rule 12(c), district courts have the authority to set a deadline for the parties to file pretrial motions. See Fed. R. Crim. P 12(c).

In keeping with these provisions, this Court entered an order requiring the parties to "file all dispositive and other motions pursuant to Fed. R. Crim. P 12 no later than March 25, 2014, unless for good cause shown." Order ("Scheduling Order"), Dkt. 55, at 1. Mr. McDonnell complied. He filed his motion to sever and supporting memorandum on that date, laying out at length his legal arguments for severance. Def. Robert F McDonnell's Mot. to Sever Joint Trial, Dkt. 114; Mem in Supp. of Def. Robert F McDonnell's Mot. to Sever Joint Trial ("McDonnell Br."), Dkt. 115. At the same time, he asked the Court to accept an ex parte, sealed filing of two declarations from counsel for the defendants providing crucial factual support for his severance motion. Def. Robert F McDonnell's Mot. for Leave to File Supporting Decls. Under Seal and for Ex Parte In Camera Review, Dkt. 116; Non-Confidential Mem. in Supp. of Def. Robert F McDonnell's Mot. for Leave to File Supporting Decls. Under Seal and for Ex Parte In Camera Review. Dkt. 117. This Court subsequently denied Mr. McDonnell's request to file the supporting declarations ex parte for in camera review, and it directed Mr. McDonnell to file them under seal within three days "if he so chooses." April 17th Order, at 3. In response, Mr. McDonnell timely notified the Court that, in light of the privileged information contained in the declarations and the defense's need to safeguard the confidentiality of its trial strategy, he would not file the declarations. Notice of Non-Filing. Instead, he asked the Court to consider delaying its ruling on his severance motion until a time closer to trial when he could disclose the content of the declarations without irreparably prejudicing his trial rights. Nothing about this course of conduct waived the accused's right to seek severance.

Rule 12(e), of course, makes clear that where a party fails to "raise[ ]" a Rule 12(b)(3) request by the deadline established by the district court "or by any extension the court provides," he waives that issue unless he can establish good cause for his failure. Mr. McDonnell does not dispute that the Fourth Circuit follows the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure by holding that issues are waived for purposes of appellate review where defendants entirely fail to make any pertinent 12(b)(3) filings in the district court. See Opp'n 17-18 (citing Fourth Circuit cases so holding). The rule requires a defendant only to "raise" the issue in question, however; it does not require him, in order to avoid waiver, to foresee the district court's rulings on all ancillary issues and take anticipatory action to address them.

Similarly, this Court's Scheduling Order directed the parties to "file all dispositive and other [pretrial] motions" by March 25, 2014. Scheduling Order at 1. Mr. McDonnell did so. When the Court denied his motion to file the supporting declarations ex parte for in camera review, Mr. McDonnell requested—in his very next filing and within the three-day window established by the Court—that the Court delay ruling on his severance motion until a later date. In sum, Mr. McDonnell has complied in good faith with all deadlines set by this Court. The Government is therefore wrong when it asserts he did not comply with the Scheduling Order in a manner that triggers a Rule 12(e) waiver.

The Government, unsurprisingly, cites no case in which a defendant who made a timely 12(b)(3) filing was subsequently found to have waived the issue in question. Indeed, it would be patently absurd to read Rule 12 as indicating that a party waives a given request when he files a motion making that request within the deadline established by the court. A waiver is, in the Supreme Court's well-known formulation, "the intentional relinquishment or abandonment of a known right." United States v. Olano, 507 U.S. 725, 733 (1993) (citation omitted). Mr. McDonnell's actions with regard to his severance motion constitute the opposite of waiver: he has consistently and explicitly asserted his right to seek severance.

Accordingly, the Government cannot mean what it says when it uses the word "waiver." Instead, the prosecution's real argument is that this Court should deny Mr. McDonnell's request that the Court hold his motion in abeyance. But as explained below, the Government's arguments on this front are deeply flawed. As an initial matter, the prosecution misunderstands Rule 12. Its substantive arguments, moreover, are largely unfounded and illogical. What little coherent argument the Government does offer disregards the vital interests at stake for Mr. McDonnell while at the same time overstating the prejudice that any delay would cause.

II. The Government Misreads Rule 12 And Misstates The Applicable Standard.

The prosecution incorrectly suggests that this Court lacks discretion under Rule 12 to hold Mr. McDonnell's severance motion in abeyance and then decide it at a later date before trial. It also misstates the standard applicable to Mr. McDonnell's request.

The Government first claims that "Fed R. Crim. P 12 does not permit" the course Mr. McDonnell has requested. Opp'n at 16. Rule 12, however, does not place such narrow restrictions on a district court's discretion to hear and rule on pretrial motions in a manner tailored to the particular circumstances of each case. Rule 12 establishes two basic timing requirements for pretrial motions: First, parties must "raise[]" certain issues before trial and in keeping with any deadline set by the district court.[2] See Fed. R. Crim. P 12(b)(3), (c), (e). Second, the district court must decide such motions before trial unless there is "good cause to defer a ruling" (and in any event in a manner that will not "adversely affect a party's right to appeal"). Fed. R. Crim. P 12(d). The rule makes clear, however, that so long as these boundaries are observed the district court retains discretion to revise the deadlines it sets, grant exceptions, and otherwise conduct pretrial proceedings in the manner it deems appropriate. The plain terms of Rule 12(e), for example, contemplate that the court may choose to provide extensions to the deadlines it sets in its 12(c) scheduling order. See Fed. R. Crim. P 12(e) (providing that "[a] party waives any 12(b)(3) defense, objection, or request not raised by the deadline the court sets under Rule 12(c) or by any extension the court provides" (emphasis added)). The rule does not require any specific showing before such an extension can be granted.[3] See id. And there is no general requirement that a 12(b) motion be raised or argued at a specified interval before trial, so long as the motion is filed and decided by the time trial begins.[4] [2] Rule 12(c) does not obligate district courts to set deadlines for filing pretrial motions; it states only that the district court "may" do so. The advisory committee note to Rule 12 suggests that setting early deadlines will "promote judicial economy," but at the same time the note acknowledges that Rule 12(c) "encourage[s]," rather than requires, district courts to set such deadlines. Fed. R. Crim. P 12 advisory committee's note.

---

There is therefore no basis for reading into Rule 12 any arbitrary and unnecessary strictures on "the power inherent in every court to control the disposition of the causes on its docket." Maryland v. Universal Elections, Inc., 729 F.3d 370, 379 (4th Cir. 2013); see also United States v. Grace, 526 F.3d 499, 512-13 (9th Cir. 2008) (discussing the district court's "inherent authority" to manage criminal pretrial proceedings). The two basic requirements of Rule 12 are satisfied here: Mr. McDonnell raised his request for severance in accordance with Rule 12 and the Court's scheduling order, and he seeks a ruling on his motion prior to trial. Within those boundaries, this Court plainly has discretion to grant Mr. McDonnell's request that his motion be held in abeyance.

---

[3] Courts have required parties to show "good cause" when they ask for an "extension" after missing the initial deadline set by the court, because under those circumstances Rule 12(e) is triggered. See, e.g., United States v. Salgado-Campos, 442 F.3d 684, 686 (8th Cir. 2006); United States v. Williams, No. 2:06-cr-100, 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 65996, at *6-10 & n.3 (E.D. Va. Sept. 15, 2006), aff'd, 254 Fed Appx. 945 (4th Cir. 2007). But if a party seeks an extension before the deadline has passed, the text of Rule 12 does not require any specific showing before the court can alter its deadline.

[4] The advisory committee's note states that courts have "discretion in setting a date for motion hearings." Fed. R. Crim. P 12 advisory committee's note. Local Criminal Rule 12(A) establishes a default deadline for pretrial motions of 11 days from the date of arraignment while granting the court discretion to alter this deadline to "such other time as may be fixed by the Court." See also, e.g., United States v. Johnston, 685 F.2d 934, 938 (5th Cir. 1982) (finding no error where "pretrial motions were not heard until the day of the trial and actually were heard immediately prior to the trial").

Next, the Government asserts that Mr. McDonnell must establish "good cause" before this Court can decide to hold his severance motion in abeyance. Opp'n at 19. Mr. McDonnell could readily meet the "good cause" standard if it were applicable. See infra Part III. But it is not. Rule 12(e) provides that if a party "waives" a 12(b)(3) issue by failing to "raise[]" it by the applicable deadline, the district court may "grant relief from the waiver" if it finds "good cause" to do so. But Mr. McDonnell's severance request has been timely "raise[d]." Where a party has met the court's deadline, Rule 12(e) is not triggered. Accordingly, all that the Court need find to postpone decision on Mr. McDonnell's severance motion is that it is appropriate to do so. There is ample reason to postpone a final decision.

III. It Is Equitable And Appropriate To Hold Mr. McDonnell's Severance Motion In Abeyance.

The argument for holding Mr. McDonnell's severance motion in abeyance is simple: maintaining the confidentiality of a defendant's trial strategy is a crucial aspect of the Sixth Amendment right to present a defense. See, e.g., United States v. Danielson, 325 F.3d 1054, 1066-67 (9th Cir. 2003). And it is appropriate for the district court to shape pretrial proceedings in a way that "minimize[s] any burdens on [the] defendant's Sixth Amendment right to prepare and present a full defense at trial," including the burden entailed in premature disclosure of that trial strategy.[5] United States v. Lindh, 198 F Supp. 2d 739, 744 (E.D. Va. 2002). Filing supporting declarations two weeks before trial would cause considerably less prejudice to the defense than filing them now, when the Government has months to develop its counterattack. Indeed, such an approach is eminently reasonable where, as here, the Government has refused to disclose Brady material included in witness interview reports and grand jury transcripts, as well as Jencks Act and Giglio materials, until 45 days before trial. It would be patently unfair to require Mr. McDonnell to increase the Government's advantage by compelling an early disclosure here. At the same time, if the Court grants Mr. McDonnell's request, it will obtain the benefit of adversary proceedings on his severance motion, in keeping with its April 17th Order. It is simply not necessary to sacrifice Mr. McDonnell's constitutionally protected interest in the confidentiality of his defense strategy in order to ensure an adversarial process. Both values can be well served. It is therefore both equitable and appropriate to hold Mr. McDonnell's severance motion in abeyance.

---

[5] To the extent that the Court is not currently satisfied that the supporting declarations contain elements of the defense's trial strategy, see April 17th Order at 3 n.2, Mr. McDonnell renews his offer to submit them under seal for ex parte review for the limited purpose of making this determination. See United States v. Abu Ali, 528 F.3d 210, 245 (4th Cir. 2008) (stating, in the criminal pretrial context, that "the validity of [evidentiary] privileges may be tested by in camera and ex parte proceedings before the court for the limited purpose of determining whether the asserted privilege is genuinely applicable" (internal quotation marks omitted)). The declarations describe exculpatory testimony Mr. and Mrs. McDonnell would give at severed trials that rebuts certain of the Government's key allegations. If the Government were to have premature access to the declarations, it would be able to tailor its trial preparations in anticipation

Even if Mr. McDonnell were required to show "good cause" for deferring a decision on his motion, he could certainly meet that standard. "Good cause is a flexible standard heavily dependent on the facts of the particular case as found and weighed by the district court in its equitable discretion." United States v. Walden, 625 F.3d 961, 965 (6th Cir. 2010). Courts applying the standard generally require, as an initial matter, a "legitimate explanation" from the party seeking to alter the court's deadline. Id. Mr. McDonnell's need to safeguard his Sixth Amendment rights certainly provides that. Courts will also consider whether the motion can be heard at a reasonable interval before trial; whether "counsel's tardiness was due to negligence, oversight, or laziness"; and whether there is any prejudice to the government. United States v. Chavez, 902 F.2d 259, 263-64 (4th Cir. 1990). All of these factors favor granting Mr. McDonnell's request for abeyance.

of this testimony and thereby gain an unfair strategic advantage over the defense. Mr. McDonnell is unable to make any further showing regarding the content of the declarations in his public filings without making disclosures that would jeopardize its confidentiality.

The two week interval before trial that Mr. McDonnell has requested gives more than adequate time to hear and decide his motion. See id. (finding 11 days sufficient). His motion is not tardy, and in light of Mr. McDonnell's timely filings and repeated assertion of his right to seek severance, the request for abeyance does not in any way reflect "negligence, oversight, or laziness" on the part of the defense. Finally, because 14 days before trial will give ample time for argument and disposition of the motion, the Government cannot claim prejudice to its ability to address the severance issue. The Government suggests that the parties will be so busy "on the eve of trial" that they will be effectively unable to provide meaningful argument, Opp'n at 19, an assertion that cannot be credited. The Government is already on notice of the substance of Mr. McDonnell's arguments for severance, and it has already set forth, in two separate filings, its initial counter arguments. See Resp. of the United States in Opp'n to Def. Robert F McDonnell's Mot. for Leave to File Supporting Decls. Under Seal and for Ex Parte In Camera Review, Dkt. 131; Resp. of the United States in Opp'n to Defs.' Mot. to Sever Joint Trial, Dkt. 143. There is no reason why it cannot efficiently review Mr. McDonnell's filings and adequately respond two full weeks prior to trial. Indeed, at that point both the parties and the Court will have the benefit of a fuller understanding of the factual issues that will be aired at trial, and that will enhance the efficiency of the proceedings.

To the extent the Government suggests that its trial preparations will be disrupted if severance is granted closer to trial, see Opp'n at 19, any such inconvenience is outweighed by Mr. McDonnell's interest in having his severance motion considered in a manner that does not irreparably damage his ability to present a defense. The Government strenuously opposed Mr. McDonnell's proposal that the Court allow ex parte filings in order to facilitate determination of the severance motion now. It cannot then turn around and argue that his severance motion must be considered now or never because of the alleged prejudice deferral would cause.

Beyond the Government's suggestion that it will be too busy to address severance at a later date, it does not meaningfully address the merits of Mr. McDonnell's request for abeyance. It simply asserts that there is "no justification" for deferring consideration of Mr. McDonnell's severance motion. Opp'n at 20. But nowhere does it explain why the defense's need to maintain the confidentiality of its trial strategy is not an important interest justifying abeyance.

The rest of the Government's argument amounts to a series of bewildering non sequiturs. For instance, the prosecution contends that deciding Mr. McDonnell's severance motion on a deferred schedule would amount to no adversarial process at all. Opp'n at 19. But it is simply nonsensical to equate full argument by both sides with the benefit of access to supporting materials with the absence of adversarial proceedings.

The Government faults Mr. McDonnell for suggesting, in his Notice of Non-Filing, that the Court grant severance now if it perceives prejudice to the defendants from a joint trial. In the Government's view, Mr. McDonnell is "seeking unilaterally to force this Court to adjudicate severance twice." Opp'n at 19. Mr. McDonnell does not, and could not, seek to "force" this Court to do anything. Rather, he asks the Court to hold his severance motion in abeyance until closer to trial. At the same time, the Supreme Court has stated that "the trial judge has a continuing duty at all stages of the trial to grant a severance if prejudice does appear." Schaffer v. United States, 362 U.S. 511, 516 (1960). Mr. McDonnell has set forth his legal arguments for severance, and if the Court were to determine, at this juncture, that a joint trial would prejudice the defendants, it would follow that the Court should order severance now. Absent such a finding, however, holding the motion in abeyance is appropriate so that the Court can make its ruling on a more complete record.

The Government also resorts to bald mischaracterizations. The Government charges that Mr. McDonnell's initial severance filing was "an unsupported placeholder motion" that only superficially conformed with the Scheduling Order but was in reality a manipulative attempt to circumvent the deadline established by this Court. Opp'n at 18. Given that Mr. McDonnell vociferously sought permission to submit supporting materials with the Court at the time he filed his severance motion, this allegation makes no sense at all. In light of the Court's ruling that Mr. McDonnell may not file those materials ex parte, Mr. McDonnell now asks the Court to hold his motion in abeyance until he may file declarations without suffering undue prejudice; but he has never asked the Court to decide his severance motion without the benefit of supporting materials.

The Government further claims that holding this motion in abeyance will inequitably enable Mr. McDonnell "to use secret pleadings as both sword and shield." Opp'n at 20. While Mr. McDonnell is cognizant of the Court's concern that in camera review of the Declarations would "allow Defendants to employ the marital communications privilege as both a sword and a shield," April 17th Order at 3 n.2, that concern is simply not implicated by holding the severance motion in abeyance. As things now stand, purportedly "secret pleadings" will not be used when the Court ultimately decides the motion; rather, all supporting material that Mr. McDonnell files will be shared with the Government.[6]

---

[6] To be sure, Mr. McDonnell asks the Court to revisit its decision to deny permission to make an ex parte filing of material containing privileged marital communications. See supra note 1. That does not make the Government's argument that abeyance alone will lead to the use of "secret pleadings" any less illogical. With regard to the Court's concern about using the

In sum, none of the Government's arguments against holding Mr. McDonnell's severance motion in abeyance are valid. At the same time, there are substantial reasons to defer decision on this motion.

IV. Mr. McDonnell's Substantive Arguments For Severance Are Meritorious.

For the reasons set forth above, if the Court does not believe it can grant severance without the benefit of the declarations, Mr. McDonnell asks to address the merits of the severance issue closer to trial. Many of the Government's present arguments against severance privilege as both sword and shield, Mr. McDonnell submits that in the context of his severance motion, it has less force than it might elsewhere possess. Mr. McDonnell has been accused by the Government of committing crimes in conspiracy with his wife and others known to the grand jury but unknown to the accused. He believes that he will be prejudiced by a joint trial, in part because Mrs. McDonnell intends to assert the marital communications privilege if the defendants are tried together, and this will prevent him from presenting key exculpatory evidence. He has therefore moved for severance—in the Court's terms, using the privilege as a "sword"—but it is not he who invokes the privilege as a "shield." As a criminally accused attempting to defend against the Government's charges, Mr. McDonnell should not be precluded from making valid arguments because his interests with regard to the marital communications privilege happen to diverge from his wife's. Other courts have allowed ex parte filings in support of severance in precisely analogous circumstances. See In Chambers Order, United States v. Carona, No. SACR-06-224(A)-AG (C.D. Cal. Apr. 8, 2008)) (Ex. A.).

---

Mr. McDonnell also reiterates that unless he is permitted to make an ex parte filing of privileged marital communications, he will effectively be barred from making any argument for severance based on the marital communications privilege. If he discloses privileged marital communications to the Government in order to obtain a severance based on those communications, he would waive the privilege and thus paradoxically defeat the basis for severance. Moreover, the Government acknowledges that severance may be granted where one spouse invokes the marital communications privilege to prevent the other spouse from disclosing confidential marital communications in the latter's defense. See Opp'n 15-16 (confirming that, according to United States v. Ammar, 714 F.2d 238, 257 (3rd Cir. 1983), severance "may" be granted to protect the marital communications privilege).

Again, if the Court is not at this time satisfied that the Brownlee-Asbill Declaration contains privileged marital communications, Mr. McDonnell is willing to submit it for ex parte review for the sole purpose of making this assessment. See supra note 5. But he reiterates that he is unable to make any further showing regarding the content of the Brownlee-Asbill Declaration in his public filings without improperly disclosing information as to which Mrs. McDonnell asserts the marital communications privilege.

are based on Mr. McDonnell's current inability to disclose his supporting declarations. Although Mr. McDonnell cannot disclose (now or in the future) any confidential communications with his wife without violating the marital communications privilege,[7] Mr. McDonnell will be able to disclose a summary of Mrs. McDonnell's exculpatory testimony two weeks before trial, when doing so will be less prejudicial to him. There will be no question at that point that severance is necessary. Even now, however, several major flaws in the Government's reasoning are evident such that granting Mr. McDonnell's motion for severance now would be entirely warranted.

1. The importance of Mrs. McDonnell's testimony cannot be overstated. Only three people have direct knowledge of the alleged quid pro quo between Jonnie Williams and the McDonnells. The Government has given Mr. Williams immunity in exchange for his testimony supporting the prosecution. That leaves Mrs. McDonnell as the only defense witness who can corroborate Mr. McDonnell's position that he never conspired to accept gifts or loans from Mr. Williams in exchange for Mr. McDonnell's promise to perform official action on behalf of Mr. Williams or his company. Mrs. McDonnell is also the only person who can corroborate Mr. McDonnell's position concerning what things he and his wife did not discuss.[8] She too is the only person who can dispute Mr. Williams' testimony about his private conversations with her. And she is the only person who can speak to her own actions. This is significant because most of the Government's narrative revolves around Mrs. McDonnell's activities. See McDonnell Br. at [7] Mrs. McDonnell has given no indication that she will waive the privilege on the eve of a joint trial. The Government is thus wrong to suggest that "Mrs. McDonnell is willing to allow the disclosure of the marital communications at issue in advance of trial." Opp'n at 13-14.

---

[8] As the Government points out, testimony about what a husband and wife do not discuss is not privileged because it does not reveal actual communications. See Opp'n at 15. But the Government is wrong to suggest that such testimony is an adequate substitute for actual marital communications that would detail, corroborate, and explain what specifically was known and unknown (and when).

11-12. Therefore, the Government's suggestion that "other witnesses or documents may be able to provide the same information that Mr. McDonnell seeks" from his wife is obviously wrong or is premised on Brady evidence that the Government has not yet disclosed. See Opp'n at 7-8. By trying the McDonnells together, the Government has sought for itself the strategic advantage of depriving Mr. McDonnell of the only other witness with direct knowledge of the alleged scheme who can challenge the testimony of the Government's immunized witness.

This case is not meaningfully different from United States v. Shuford, 454 F.2d 772 (4th Cir. 1971), which also involved a credibility dispute between the Government's witness and the defendant. See McDonnell Br. at 15-16. Resolving the dispute required, as it does here, the testimony of the co-defendant, who was the only other witness with direct knowledge of the disputed fact but who refused to testify unless the joint trial was severed. Id. The court held that denying a severance "so tipped the scales against [the defendant] that he failed to receive a fair trial" and that a "verdict based so heavily on less than the full available testimony, where the missing testimony could, with relative ease, have been procured, should not stand." Shuford, 454 F.2d at 777 The same rationale applies here.

The Government's only response is to say that Shuford is old, was decided by a 2-1 vote, preceded cases that did not overrule it, and is distinguishable from Parodi "in part due to the simplicity of the trial in Shuford and the extremely narrow focus of the codefendant's testimony that prompted the separate trials." See Opp'n at 10-12. But each of these reasons is irrelevant. That Shuford is distinguishable from Parodi in no way means that Shuford is distinguishable from this case or is somehow no longer enforceable precedent.[9] Parodi involved a narcotics conspiracy "built out of a large number of circumstances occurring over a substantial period of time at various locations" and with as many as ten defendants. United States v. Parodi, 703 F.2d 768, 781 (4th Cir. 1983). The scheme alleged here, by contrast, involves a bribery transaction between Mr. McDonnell and Mr. Williams, aided and abetted by Mrs. McDonnell. This scenario fits easily within the description of Shuford as set forth in Parodi:

---

[9] The Government characterizes Mr. McDonnell as contending that the right to a severance is obligatory so long as he "assert[s] that Mrs. McDonnell will not testify in a joint

> The Government's witness [Mr. Williams] [will give] one version of the [scheme]; [Mr. McDonnell] a contradictory one. If [Mr. McDonnell's] version [is] the true one, he is innocent; if the witness' version [is] accurate, the jury could find [Mr. McDonnell] guilty. The co-defendant [Mrs. McDonnell] [is] expected to testify, if severance [is] granted, that [Mr. McDonnell's] version [is] correct.

Id. "Plainly, the guilt or innocence of [Mr. McDonnell] hinge[s], in large measure, on the outcome of this credibility dispute." Shuford, 454 F.2d at 777 And because Mrs. McDonnell's testimony is necessary to help resolve that dispute, her trial must be severed so that Mr. McDonnell can call her to testify.

The Government attacks the exculpatory value of Mrs. McDonnell's testimony on two fronts. First, it speculates that her testimony will lack credibility because it will be "entirely self-serving" and will not contravene her own penal interest. Opp'n at 5. But this assertion makes no sense given that the Government charged Mrs. McDonnell with obstruction of justice. Mrs. McDonnell could reasonably believe that the testimony she will give to exonerate Mr. McDonnell on his corruption charges could be used to incriminate her on her obstruction trial because it would jeopardize her own defense." Opp'n at 10-11. Nothing could be further from the truth. The defense thoroughly analyzed the Parodi factors in its severance motion (and it intends to file a supporting declaration at the appropriate time) precisely because it acknowledges that the law requires more than a mere assertion that Mrs. McDonnell will not testify.

charge.[10] Far from self-serving, Mrs. McDonnell's testimony could cast her in a very negative light with the jury and thereby jeopardize her own chance of acquittal.[11]

Second, the Government contends that Mrs. McDonnell's testimony could be impeached because she has an incentive to exculpate Mr. McDonnell and because she allegedly attempted "to obstruct justice by lying to law enforcement officers and falsifying records to cover up the scheme." Opp'n at 9-10. The Government grossly overstates the strength of its impeachment evidence. But in any event, because Mrs. McDonnell has been charged with obstruction of justice and because her testimony in a severed trial could potentially be used against her in her own trial, she actually has a much greater incentive to remain quiet and not testify at all. That she is nevertheless willing to expose herself to potential liability by testifying suggests that the testimony she desires to give will be credible.

The same, of course, cannot be said for the Government's primary witness Mr. Williams, who is testifying for the Government in exchange for immunity. Mr. Williams has every incentive to give testimony that the Government wants to hear. See, e.g., Horton v. Mayle, 408

---

[10] Relatedly, the Government questions why Mrs. McDonnell would invoke her marital communications privilege to "prevent evidence from being presented to the jury at a joint trial that she apparently believes would inure to her benefit by exculpating her husband." Opp'n at 13. The reason is the same as above: the relevant marital communications—like Mrs. McDonnell's testimony generally—contain information that will exculpate Mr. McDonnell but also negatively impact her credibility in the eyes of the jury and implicate her obstruction charge. For this reason, United States v. Carona, No. SA CR 06-224-AG, 2008 WL 1970221 (C.D. Cal. May 2, 2008), is not distinguishable, as the Government suggests. See Opp'n at 15 n.5.

[11] The premise of the Government's argument is mistaken in any event. Although it might be true that a statement made against Mrs. McDonnell's penal interest might make her testimony more credible, it does not necessarily follow that a statement consistent with her penal interest is not credible. Mrs. McDonnell will be bound by oath to tell the truth (whether it is against her penal interest or not), and the truth is that the McDonnells did not conspire to accept gifts from Mr. Williams in exchange for official action. The presumption that Mrs. McDonnell must be lying because she is a defendant is at odds with the fundamental principle of criminal justice that the accused is innocent until proven guilty.

F.3d 570, 580 (9th Cir. 2005) ("Evidence that the prosecution promised immunity to induce [someone] to testify as its star witness is a wholly different kind of impeachment evidence, from which the jury reasonably could have inferred that [the witness] had an interest in fabricating his testimony.").[12] And while the Government will surely claim that Mr. Williams will only have immunity so long as he testifies truthfully, that is a hollow and meaningless threat because the Government has no way to verify whether Mr. Williams is telling the truth about the facts that matter most. Whether there was an illicit agreement or understanding between Mr. Williams and the McDonnells largely depends on what was said in their private conversations. The Government has no direct knowledge of those conversations, and so it has no way to know whether Mr. Williams' characterizations are accurate. To make matters worse, because the prosecution has prematurely decided that the McDonnells are guilty, it will think that Mr. Williams is untruthful if he ultimately testifies that there was no actual agreement or understanding between him and the McDonnells (which happens to be true). The Government has incentivized Mr. Williams to make the McDonnells look as guilty as he can.

It is precisely in situations like this, "where the elusive quality of credibility is of such importance," that severance is necessary so that "the jury [can] have the benefit of all relevant testimony likely to shed light on the situation." Shuford, 454 F.2d at 777. By charging Mrs. McDonnell with obstruction and then joining her trial with Mr. McDonnell's, the Government is depriving the jury of all the relevant testimony necessary to resolve what is, at bottom (assuming the prosecution has even stated a valid corruption claim), a contest of credibility between Mr. McDonnell and Mr. Williams. Because a joint trial would "prevent the jury from making a reliable judgment about guilt or innocence," Zafiro v. United States, 506 U.S. 534, 539 (1993), a severance is necessary.

---

[12] See also Sand, Modern Federal Jury Instructions—Criminal, Instruction 7-9 (2013). ("[T]he testimony of a witness who has been promised that he will not be prosecuted should be examined by you with greater care than the testimony of an ordinary witness. You should scrutinize it closely to determine whether or not it is colored in such a way as to place guilt upon the defendant in order to further the witness' own interests; for, such a witness, confronted with the realization that he can win his own freedom by helping to convict another, has a motive to falsify his testimony.")

2. Not only does the Government challenge the exculpatory value of Mrs. McDonnell's testimony, it also questions the likelihood that Mr. McDonnell will call her and that she will actually testify at a severed trial. See Opp'n at 6-7. The Government finds it "inexplicable" that "Mrs. McDonnell is likely to testify at a severed trial," but not at a joint trial, when her testimony from a severed trial could potentially be used against her in her own trial. Id. at 6. One possible explanation is that it is preferable for Mrs. McDonnell to testify on behalf of Mr. McDonnell in the presence of his jury, rather than before the jury that will adjudicate her guilt. Although it is possible that Mrs. McDonnell's testimony from the severed trial could potentially be used against her in some way, she can still invoke her Fifth Amendment right not to testify in her own trial, even if she had waived it in the severed trial. See, e.g., United States v. Cain, 544 F.2d 1113, 1117 (1st Cir. 1976) ("It is hornbook law that the waiver is limited to the particular proceeding in which the witness appears."). As a result, Mrs. McDonnell cannot be subjected to hostile cross-examination before her own jury. The Government's suggestion that there is no reason to testify in a severed trial but not in a joint trial is even more perplexing because, if accepted, it would eliminate the rationale for granting a severance based on a defendant's need for a co-defendant's testimony, which is predicated on the co-defendant's willingness to testify in a severed trial but not in a joint trial.[13] As the Fourth Circuit has made clear, however, a severance is appropriate "where one defendant's case rests heavily on the exculpatory testimony of his co-defendant, willing to give such testimony but for the fear that by taking the stand in the joint trial he would jeopardize his own defense." Shuford, 454 F.2d at 776.[14]

---

[13] The Government's reliance on United States v. Dawson, No. 5:12-cr-284-F2, 2013 WL 3381380, at *2 (E.D.N.C. July 8, 2013), is misleading. The court did not hold that a severance

The Government also accuses Mrs. McDonnell of being noncommittal about testifying, and it accuses Mr. McDonnell of being noncommittal about calling her. See Opp'n at 6-7 But it is well-established in this circuit that Mrs. McDonnell's agreement to testify in a severed trial need not be established to "an absolute certainty." Shuford, 454 F.2d at 778. Rather, Mr. McDonnell need only show a "reasonable probability that the proffered testimony would, in fact, materialize." Id. (emphasis added). Mr. McDonnell has easily made that showing. See McDonnell Br. at 10-11. Mr. McDonnell fully intends to call Mrs. McDonnell, but it would be unfair to require Mr. McDonnell to guarantee that he will call her no matter what the circumstances might be at the time of trial. As things stand now, however, the defense intends to call Mrs. McDonnell, whose testimony is needed to establish Mr. McDonnell's innocence.

---

based on the asserted need for a co-defendant's testimony is improper because there is no reason why a co-defendant would testify in a severed trial but not in a joint trial. Rather, the court denied severance because the defendant had failed to make a showing that the co-defendant would not condition his offer to testify on being tried first. See id. Here, Mrs. McDonnell has indicated that she would testify in a severed trial regardless of the order in which her case is tried. See McDonnell Br. at 11.

[14] Similarly, the Government claims to be "perplex[ed]" that "Mrs. McDonnell would invoke the marital communications privilege at a joint trial, but waive it at a separate trial." Opp'n at 13. Mrs. McDonnell presumably intends to invoke the marital communications privilege in a joint trial because the relevant communications contain potentially harmful evidence concerning her obstruction charge, and since she intends to invoke her Fifth Amendment right not to testify in her own trial, she would not be able to clarify or otherwise explain those communications from her point of view. But in Mr. McDonnell's severed trial, where she intends to offer exculpatory testimony on his behalf, she would be able to address those communications. Therefore, it is perfectly sensible for Mrs. McDonnell to invoke the marital communications privilege in a joint trial, where she will not testify, but to waive the privilege in a severed trial, where she will testify.

3. Although the Government parrots judicial language generally explaining the value of joint trials, see Opp'n at 8-9, it offers no support for why a joint trial is so important in this case that it should overcome Mr. McDonnell's right to obtain the exculpatory testimony of his wife. There is good reason for that—judicial economy is a relevant consideration only where "severance would necessitate a great number of otherwise unnecessary trials or the duplication of an unusually complex trial." Parodi, 703 F.2d at 780 (internal quotation marks omitted). And here, if severance is granted, there would be at most two trials, and there very well could be only one since it is not uncommon for the defendant in the second trial to plead depending on what happens in the first or for the Government to dismiss against the trailing defendant when it learns how mistaken its read of the evidence has been. Hence, severance in this case would not require "a great number of otherwise unnecessary trials." Id. Nor would it require the "duplication of an unusually complex trial." Id. As this Court has observed, the case has a "level of complexity," but "[i]t is not particularly complex." March 18, 2014 Hr'g Tr. at 19:14-16. And there is no certainty that a second trial would invariably "duplicate" the first as hope springs eternal that the parties would learn from the first and be more efficient in the second.

CONCLUSION

Mr. McDonnell would welcome the opportunity to further develop his merits arguments in favor of severance at a later date. The Government has offered no valid reason why the Court should deny Mr. McDonnell's request to defer consideration of the severance motion. Doing so will afford the Court the benefit of full adversarial process without burdening Mr. McDonnell's right to present a defense. Accordingly, if the Court does not believe severance can be granted on the present record, Mr. McDonnell respectfully requests that it hold the severance motion in abeyance until 14 days before trial.

Dated: May 5, 2014

Respectfully submitted,

/s/ Jonathan A. Berry
Henry W. Asbill (pro hac vice)
Mary Ellen Powers (pro hac vice)
Noel J. Francisco (pro hac vice)
Ryan D. Newman (pro hac vice)
James M. Burnham (pro hac vice)
Jonathan A. Berry (VSB No. 81864)
JONES DAY
51 Louisiana Avenue, N.W
Washington, D.C. 20001
Telephone: (202) 879-3939
Facsimile: (202) 626-1700

John L. Brownlee (VSB No. 37358)
Timothy J. Taylor (VSB No. 84529)
HOLLAND & KNIGHT LLP
800 17th Street, N.W., Suite 1100
Washington, D.C. 20006
Telephone: (202) 828-1854
Facsimile: (202) 955-5564

Counsel for Robert F. McDonnell

CERTIFICATE OF SERVICE

I, Jonathan A. Berry, am a member of the Bar of this Court. I hereby certify that on this 5th day of May, 2014, I caused the foregoing to be electronically filed with the Clerk of Court using the CM/ECF system, causing it to be served on all registered users.

Dated: May 5, 2014

Respectfully submitted,

/s/ Jonathan A. Berry

Jonathan A. Berry (VSB No. 81864)
JONES DAY
51 Louisiana Avenue, N.W
Washington, D.C. 20001
Telephone: (202) 879-3939
Facsimile: (202) 626-1700
Email: jberry@jonesday.com

Counsel for Robert F McDonnell

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
EASTERN DISTRICT OF VIRGINIA
RICHMOND DIVISION

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,

v.

ROBERT F. MCDONNELL,

and

MAUREEN G. MCDONNELL,

Defendants.

Action No. 3:14-CR-12

ORDER

THIS MATTER is before the Court on its own initiative. Defendants' Motion to Sever Joint Trial (ECF Nos. 114, 120) is currently pending before the Court and a hearing is scheduled for May 19, 2014. In the course of briefing the Motion to Sever, Defendants have requested that the Court delay resolution of the Motion to Sever until fourteen (14) days before trial. That request is DENIED. The Motion to Sever will be resolved in due course, and should either Defendant wish to submit additional materials in support of the Motion to Sever, he or she may do so under seal.

Let the Clerk send a copy of this Order to all counsel of record.

It is SO ORDERED.

/s/
James R. Spencer
Senior U. S. District Judge

ENTERED this 8th day of May 2014.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
FOR THE EASTERN DISTRICT OF VIRGINIA
RICHMOND DIVISION

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,	)
	)
v.	)	CRIMINAL NO. 3:14-CR-00012
	)
ROBERT F. MCDONNELL	)	JUDGE JAMES R. SPENCER
MAUREEN G. MCDONNELL	)

DEFENDANT ROBERT F. MCDONNELL'S NOTICE OF FILING OF DECLARATIONS PURSUANT TO THE COURT'S ORDERS

Per the Court's April 17, 2014 Order, Mr. McDonnell will today file two declarations in support of severance "ex parte under seal only for the purposes of preserving the record on appeal." April 17, 2014 Order at 3, Doc. 137.

Dated: May 14, 2014

Respectfully submitted,

/s/ Timothy J. Taylor

John L. Brownlee (VSB No. 37358)
Timothy J. Taylor (VSB No. 84529)
HOLLAND & KNIGHT LLP
800 17th Street, N.W., Suite 1100
Washington, D.C. 20006
Telephone: (202) 955-3000
Facsimile: (202) 955-5564
Email: john.brownlee@hkland.com

Henry W. Asbill (pro hac vice)
Mary Ellen Powers (pro hac vice)
Noel J. Francisco (pro hac vice)
Jonathan A. Berry (VSB No. 81864)
JONES DAY
51 Louisiana Avenue, N.W
Washington, D.C. 20001
Telephone: (202) 879-3939
Facsimile: (202) 626-1700
Email: hasbill@jonesday.com

Counsel for Robert F McDonnell

CERTIFICATE OF SERVICE

I, Timothy J. Taylor, am a member of the Bar of this Court. I hereby certify that on this 14th day of May, 2014, I caused the foregoing to be electronically filed with the Clerk of Court using the CM/ECF system, causing it to be served on all registered users.

Dated: May 14, 2014

Respectfully submitted,

/s/ Timothy J. Taylor

Timothy J. Taylor (VSB No. 84529)
HOLLAND & KNIGHT LLP
800 17th Street, N.W., Suite 1100
Washington, D.C. 20006
Telephone: (202) 955-3000
Facsimile: (202) 955-5564
Email: timothy.taylor@hklaw.com

Counsel for Robert F McDonnell

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
EASTERN DISTRICT OF VIRGINIA
RICHMOND DIVISION

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,

v.

ROBERT F. MCDONNELL,

and

MAUREEN G. MCDONNELL,

Defendants.

Action No. 3:14-CR-12

ORDER

THIS MATTER is before the Court on two Motions to Dismiss Counts 1-11 of the Indictment ("Motions to Dismiss") (ECF Nos. 105, 111) and two Motions for Discovery of Selected Grand Jury Communications ("Grand Jury Motions") (ECF Nos. 8, 25) filed by Defendants Robert McDonnell and Maureen McDonnell.

The Indictment sufficiently alleges each element of the charged offenses, fairly apprising Defendants of the charges against which they must defend and allowing Defendants to plead double jeopardy in the event of a future prosecution for the same offenses. See Hamling v. United States, 418 U.S. 87, 117 (1974); United States v. Kingrea, 573 F.3d 186, 191 (4th Cir. 2009) (quoting United States v. Darby, 37 F.3d 1059, 1062 (4th Cir. 1994)). It is well settled that the validity of an indictment is tested by its allegations, not by whether the government can prove its case. See Costello v. United States, 350 U.S. 359, 363 (1956). Defendants take issue with the Indictment primarily on the ground that it fails to allege Robert McDonnell performed or promised to perform any "official act" within the meaning of the federal bribery statutes. However, the Fourth Circuit has held that conduct analogous to that alleged in paragraphs 22 and 111(c) of the Indictment can, as a matter of law, "fall under the umbrella of [] 'official acts.'"

United States v. Jefferson, 674 F.3d 332, 358 (4th Cir. 2012) (enumerating among the defendant's official acts, "[a]ttempting to facilitate and promote ventures between foreign governments and the businesses who were paying"), cert. denied, 133 S. Ct. 648. Whether Defendants' conduct in fact constituted "the corruption of official positions through misuse of influence in governmental decision-making" is a question for the jury based on the evidence adduced at trial. United States v. Carson, 464 F.2d 424, 434 (2d Cir. 1972). Accordingly, the Motions to Dismiss are DENIED.

Federal Rule of Criminal Procedure 6(e) provides that a court may authorize disclosure of a grand-jury matter "at the request of a defendant who shows that a ground may exist to dismiss the indictment because of a matter that occurred before the grand jury." Fed. R. Crim. P 6(e)(3)(E)(ii). Having determined that the Indictment is facially valid and alleges conduct that may be found by a jury to constitute "official action" within the meaning of federal bribery statutes, no "particularized need" for the requested materials exists. Douglas Oil Co. v. Petrol Stops Nw., 441 U.S. 211, 222 (1979). Review of facially valid indictments either for insufficient evidentiary support or for the sufficiency of the prosecutor's presentation "would run counter to the whole history of the grand jury institution." United States v. Williams, 504 U.S. 36, 54-55 (1992) (quoting Costello, 350 U.S. at 364). Accordingly, the Grand Jury Motions are DENIED.

Let the Clerk send a copy of this Order to all counsel of record.

It is SO ORDERED.

/s/
James R. Spencer
Senior U. S. District Judge

ENTERED this 20th day of May 2014.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
EASTERN DISTRICT OF VIRGINIA
RICHMOND DIVISION

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,

v.

ROBERT F. MCDONNELL,

and

MAUREEN G. MCDONNELL,

Defendants.

Action No. 3:14-CR-12

ORDER

THIS MATTER is before the Court on two Motions to Sever Joint Trial ("Motions to Sever") (ECF Nos. 114, 120) filed by Defendants Robert McDonnell and Maureen McDonnell. For reasons that will be set out more fully in a forthcoming memorandum opinion, the Motions are DENIED.

Generally, defendants who are indicted together should be tried together, United States v. Clark, 928 F.2d 639, 644 (4th Cir. 1991), unless a joint trial "would be so unfairly prejudicial that a miscarriage of justice would result," United States v. Williams, 10 F.3d 1070, 1080 (4th Cir. 1993) (citing United States v. Brugman, 655 F.2d 540, 542 (4th Cir. 1981)). When a motion to sever is based on an asserted need for a co-defendant's testimony, the moving defendant bears the burden of demonstrating that severance is appropriate under a test established by the Fourth Circuit in United States v. Parodi, 703 F.2d 768, 779 (4th Cir. 1983). Analysis under the Parodi test is intrinsically fact-intensive, requiring a showing of the co-defendant's testimony that is sufficiently definite for the court to determine its exculpatory nature and effect. Parodi, 703 F.2d at 780.

Defendants have failed to meet their burden to show that a joint trial will result in a miscarriage of justice or prevent Robert McDonnell from receiving a fair trial. Defendants have limited their showing of Maureen McDonnell's potential testimony largely to vague and conclusory statements that "merely contradict[] part of the Government's proof." Id. (quoting United States v. West, 670 F.2d 675, 680 (7th Cir. 1982)). In light of the preference for joint trials of alleged co-conspirators, see United States v. Medford, 661 F.3d 746, 753 (4th Cir. 2011), and the importance of judicial economy, see Parodi, 703 F.2d at 780 (noting judicial economy as a "dominant judicial concern"), Defendants' showing is insufficient under the Parodi test. Accordingly, the Court declines to exercise its discretion to sever Defendants' joint trial. See United States v. Frazier, 394 F.2d 258, 260 (4th Cir. 1968).

Let the Clerk send a copy of this Order to all counsel of record.

It is SO ORDERED.

/s/
James R. Spencer
Senior U. S. District Judge

ENTERED this 20th day of May 2014.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
EASTERN DISTRICT OF VIRGINIA
RICHMOND DIVISION

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,

v.

ROBERT F MCDONNELL,

and

MAUREEN G. MCDONNELL,

Defendants.

Action No. 3:14-CR-12

ORDER

THIS MATTER is before the Court on two Motions for Omnibus Voir Dire Relief ("Motions") (ECF Nos. 109, 113) filed by Defendants Robert McDonnell and Maureen McDonnell. Upon due consideration and for the reasons that follow, the Court GRANTS IN PART and DENIES IN PART the Motions.

To the extent that Defendants request potential jurors to complete a joint written jury questionnaire at the courthouse, the Motions are DENIED. To the extent that Defendants request potential jurors to complete a written jury questionnaire, the Motions are GRANTED. Consistent with the Court's Order of February 18, 2014, the Parties shall submit to the Court both joint and disputed questions proposed for inclusion in a jury questionnaire. Objections to disputed questions shall be submitted to the Court on or before June 2, 2014. The Court will then draft a written jury questionnaire and will make copies available to the Parties. The Court's jury questionnaire will be mailed to potential jurors. Any proposed questions not included in the Court's jury questionnaire will be deemed rejected.

To the extent that Defendants request that the attorneys be allowed to conduct individual follow-up voir dire, the Motions are DENIED. The Parties are directed to contact the Courtroom Deputy to familiarize themselves with the Court's procedures for voir dire and jury selection. The Court will pose some questions to jurors individually and others will be asked of the full panel. During the course of the voir dire process, the Parties are permitted to request additional questions be posed to the jury venire or individual jurors.

To the extent that Defendants request additional peremptory challenges, the Motions are GRANTED IN PART and DENIED IN PART. Defendants together will be allowed sixteen (16) peremptory challenges. The Government will be allowed ten (10) peremptory challenges in total.

To the extent that Defendants request use of the "struck system" or other alternatives to the Court's customary procedures for exercising peremptory challenges, the Motions are DENIED.

To the extent that Defendants request provision of a neutral summary of the allegations to potential jurors with the written jury questionnaire, the Motions are DENIED as moot. The Court will not provide potential jurors either with a neutral summary of the allegations or with the Indictment itself.

To the extent that Defendants requests that jurors be permitted to take notes during trial, the Motions are GRANTED. This procedure is consistent with the Court's usual practice.

To the extent that Defendants request that alternate jurors be notified of their status immediately before the jury retires to deliberate, the Motions are DENIED.

Let the Clerk send a copy of this Order to all counsel of record.

It is SO ORDERED.

/s/
James R. Spencer
Senior U. S. District Judge

ENTERED this 20th day of May 2014.

JURY QUESTIONNAIRE

This questionnaire is designed to obtain information from you for the purpose of assisting the parties in selecting a fair and impartial jury in the case of United States of America v. Robert F McDonnell and Maureen G. McDonnell. Its use will substantially shorten the jury selection process.

The purpose of these questions is to encourage your full expression and candor so that all parties have a meaningful opportunity to select a fair and impartial jury to try the issues of this case. Your full written answers will save the parties, the Court, and yourself, a great deal of time. Do not discuss with anyone any question or answer you give on this questionnaire. You are expected to sign this questionnaire. Your answers will be considered statements under oath, and will only be used by the Court and counsel in selecting a jury in this case. As you know, juries are critical to our American system of justice and the Court is confident that you appreciate your duty as a citizen to serve as a juror if you are eligible. Your cooperation in completing and returning this questionnaire is a part of that duty

Please write your assigned juror number at the top of each page. Answer every question carefully, candidly, truthfully and completely and do not leave any questions blank. Your responses should reflect your own personal knowledge, beliefs, or opinions. Please keep in mind that there are no right or wrong answers. The judge and the lawyers know that every person has beliefs and biases concerning many things. You should answer with your true feelings, whatever they may be. Do not assume that any of your answers will qualify or disqualify you from serving on this or any other jury

If you do not understand a question, please write "Do not understand" and the question will be explained to you during the later questioning process. If a question is not relevant to you, please write "N/A" to indicate that it is not applicable to you in the space provided. If you cannot answer a question because you do not know the answer, write "Do not know" in the space after the question. If your answers or explanations to any question will not fit completely in the space provided, please complete your answer on the pages provided at the end of the questionnaire. Be sure to include the question number that corresponds to your answer on the explanation sheets. Do not write on the back of any page.

If you want your answer to a particular question kept private, please indicate that and then answer the question. If a question asks about your friends or family, you do not need to list the name if you do not want to; you can identify the person by relationship (spouse, son, neighbor, friend, etc.).

During another step in the jury selection process, the Judge will have an opportunity to follow up on these questions in court. At that time, you will be given an opportunity to explain or expand on any of your answers.

In addition, now that you are a prospective juror, you MUST follow the instructions listed below until you have been excused from further service in this case.

Juror Number: _______

DO NOT discuss this questionnaire or your answers with anyone, including family members, friends, co-workers, or other prospective members.

DO NOT read or listen to any media coverage of this case whether in the newspaper, on the television, on the Internet, on a blog, or on the radio.

DO NOT seek any related information on this case on the Internet or through search engines such as Google or Yahoo!

DO NOT discuss this case with anyone, including friends, family members, or other members of this jury panel, or allow anyone to discuss this case in your presence.

DO NOT let anyone, including friends, family members, court personnel, parties in this case, or persons involved in the case, talk to you about your views or any aspect of this case except officially in the courtroom.

The answers to these questions will be used by the court and the attorneys solely for the selection of the panel members in this case and for no other reason. The information contained within the questionnaire will become part of the court record.

I appreciate your time and attention to this important matter.

James R. Spencer
United States District Judge

Juror Number: ______

Preliminary Matters

1. The trial in this case will start July 28, 2014. The trial may last 5–6 weeks and could last longer or conclude sooner. Do you have any very serious personal, professional, or financial issues that would prevent you from being present in Court for the duration of the trial? In answering this question, you should know that it is unlawful for an employer to discharge, intimidate, or coerce any employee because of the employee's jury service.
[ ] Yes [ ] No

(a) If yes, please explain: ______________________________

____

____

____

2. Are you able to read, write, and understand the English language?
[ ] Yes [ ] With difficulty [ ] No

3. Is English your native language?
[ ] Yes [ ] No

(a) If no, what is your first language? ______________________

4. Do you feel that you are able to complete this questionnaire without another's assistance?
[ ] Yes [ ] No

If no, please complete the certification on the last page of the questionnaire without answering any additional questions and return your questionnaire to the Court.

5. Do you have any significant problems with your hearing or eyesight?
[ ] Yes [ ] No

(a) If yes, please explain: ______________________________

____

6. Do you suffer from any physical or mental condition(s) that would make it unusually difficult for you to serve as a juror or pay close and careful attention to the evidence presented for extended periods of time?
[ ] Yes [ ] No [ ] Unsure

(a) If yes or unsure, please explain: ______________________

____

____

7 Do you take any prescription medication that affects your thinking, attention, concentration, or might otherwise affect your service as a juror?
[ ] Yes [ ] No

(a) If yes, please state the name of the medication(s) and explain: ______________________________

8. Are you currently a student?
[ ] Yes, full-time [ ] Yes, part-time [ ] No

(a) If yes, where do you attend school? ______________________________

(b) If yes, will your class schedule in August interfere with your ability to serve as a juror in this trial?
[ ] Yes [ ] No

(c) If yes to #8(b) above, please explain: ______________________________

9. Are you the sole or primary caretaker of a minor child, or an elderly or disabled family member or dependent whose care would interfere with your ability to serve as a juror in this trial?
[ ] Yes [ ] No

(a) If yes, please explain: ______________________________

10. Prior to receiving this questionnaire, have you asked to be excused from this jury panel?
[ ] Yes [ ] No

(a) If yes, please explain: ______________________________

11. Do you have any personal, religious, philosophical or other beliefs that would make it difficult for you to sit in judgment of another person as a juror in a criminal case?
[ ] Yes [ ] No [ ] Unsure

(a) If yes or unsure, please explain: ______________________________

12. Is there any other reason [illegible]u could not be present in court and give your full attention every day for this trial?
[ ] Yes [ ] No

(a) If yes, please explain: ______________________________

Juror Number: _______

13. This case will receive media attention. It is important that this case be decided solely on the evidence presented in the courtroom and not on the basis of information obtained outside the courtroom. As a result, the jury will be instructed not to read, watch, view, or listen to any news accounts of this trial whatsoever, not to conduct any internet searches related to this case, and not to talk to or to communicate with anyone about the case, including through the use of the internet or social media such as Twitter, Facebook, Skype, YouTube, or other modes of electronic communication, until the case is over. Would you find it difficult to obey such an instruction for any reason?
[ ] Yes [ ] No [ ] Unsure

(a) If yes or unsure, please explain: ____________________________________
____
____

Personal Background

14. Full name: Last ________________ First ________________ Middle _______

15. Gender: [ ] Male [ ] Female

16. Age: ________ Date of birth: ____________________________

17. What is your current marital status?
[ ] Single and never married
[ ] Single, but living with non-marital partner for ____ years
[ ] Married, and have been for _____ years
[ ] Divorced, but married in the past for ____ years
[ ] Separated, but married in the past for ____ years
[ ] Widowed, but married in the past for ____ years
____ Number of marriages, if more than one
____ Number of divorces, if any

18. How long have you lived in the Commonwealth of Virginia (total years)? __________

19. If you have children or stepchildren, please list them:

Sex	Age	Live with you?	Educational level	Occupation
(a)
(b)
(c) (d)
(e)

20. Are you (check any and all that apply):
    - [ ] Self-employed
    - [ ] Employed full-time
    - [ ] Working part-time
    - [ ] A student
    - [ ] Disabled and unable to work
    - [ ] Unemployed, looking for work
    - [ ] Unemployed, not looking for work
    - [ ] Retired
    - [ ] Homemaker

21. If you are currently employed in any capacity, either full-time, or part-time, please state:

    (a) Occupation: ______________________________

    (b) Employer: ______________________________

    (c) Type of work: ______________________________

    (d) Location where you work (city/neighborhood): ______________________________

    (e) Years employed in present job: ______________________________

    (f) Explain your duties or responsibilities, including any supervisory responsibilities: ______________________________
    ____

    (g) Do you supervise others?
    [ ] Yes [ ] No

    (a) If yes, how many? _______

    (h) Do you have any responsibility for hiring or firing?
    [ ] Yes [ ] No

22. If you are not currently employed, please state:

    (a) Your last employer: ______________________________

    (b) For how long: ______________________________

    (c) Number of months since last employed: ______________________________

    (d) Your occupation: ______________________________

    (e) Your job responsibilities: ______________________________
    ____

    (f) Did you supervise others?

[ ] Yes [ ] No

If yes, how many? ________________________________

(g) Did you have any responsibilities for hiring or firing?
[ ] Yes [ ] No

(h) Reason(s) for leaving: ________________________________

23. If you are married or currently share a household with someone who is employed in any capacity, either full-time, or part-time, please state the following:

(a) Occupation: ________________________________

(b) Employer: ________________________________

(c) Type of work: ________________________________

(d) Location where s/he works (city/neighborhood): ________________________________

(e) Years employed in present job: ________________________________

(f) Explain his/her duties or responsibilities, including any supervisory responsibilities: ________________________________
____

(g) Does s/he supervise others?
[ ] Yes [ ] No

(a) If yes, how many? ________________________________

(h) Does s/he have any responsibility for hiring or firing?
[ ] Yes [ ] No

24. Do you now, or have you ever owned your own business?
[ ] Yes [ ] No

(a) If yes, what type of business? ________________________________
____

25. Have you or any member of your immediate family or any close personal friend ever served as a corporate officer or member of the Board of Directors in any business or corporation?
[ ] Yes [ ] No

(a) If yes, please explain: ________________________________

____

26. If you or your spouse or non-marital partner currently hold an additional job or have held any other job in the last ten years not addressed above, please describe that employment using the categories in the questions above: ________________________

____

____

____

____

27 Who makes the major financial decisions in your household? ________________

28. Check the highest level of education for you and your spouse/partner:

		You	Spouse / Partner
(a)	Grade school or less	☐	☐
(b)	Some high school	☐	☐
(c)	High school graduate / GED	☐	☐
(d)	Technical or vocational school	☐	☐
(e)	Some college	☐	☐
(f)	2-year college degree	☐	☐
(g)	4-year college degree	☐	☐
(h)	Some graduate work or study	☐	☐
(i)	Master's degree	☐	☐
(j)	Doctoral degree (or equivalent)	☐	☐
(k)	Other	☐	☐

If other, please explain: ________________________________

29. If you or your spouse/partner had any educational training beyond high school, please list all degrees you and/or your spouse/partner have received and the area of study.

Self

(a) Degree(s): ________________________________

(b) Field(s) of study: ________________________________

(c) Name of school(s): ________________________________

Spouse/Partner:

(d) Degree(s): ________________________________

(e) Field(s) of study: ________________________________

(f) Name of school(s): ________________________________

30. Have you or any of your family members (e.g., parents, siblings, a spouse, or children) served in any branch of the Armed Forces?

☐ Yes ☐ No

Juror Number: ______

(a) If yes, please list their relationship to you, dates of service, branch, and highest rank:

Relationship	Dates	Branch	Highest Rank	Type of Discharge

31. Do you or your family members have any education, training or employment experience in any of the following fields:

		You	Family
(a)	Accounting, auditing, or bookkeeping	☐	☐
(b)	Banking	☐	☐
(c)	Loans/mortgage / refinance agreements	☐	☐
(d)	Business / business planning	☐	☐
(e)	Finance / financial planning	☐	☐
(f)	Psychology, psychiatry, or counseling	☐	☐
(g)	Medicine, nursing, healthcare, medical research, or pharmaceuticals	☐	☐
(h)	Nutrition or physical fitness	☐	☐
(i)	Law or paralegal training	☐	☐
(j)	Law enforcement / private investigations	☐	☐
(k)	Corrections (work in prisons/jails) or security guard / private security	☐	☐
(l)	Criminal justice or criminology	☐	☐
(m)	Social work	☐	☐
(n)	Political science or government	☐	☐
(o)	Political fundraising / campaign finance rules	☐	☐
(p)	Politics / elections / political consulting / lobbying	☐	☐
(q)	Ethics, philosophy, sociology, or English	☐	☐
(r)	Engineering	☐	☐
(s)	Computer programming / networking	☐	☐
(t)	Corporate or other compliance with federal, state, or local government regulations	☐	☐
(u)	Compliance with federal, state, or local election laws/regulations	☐	☐
(v)	Journalism / media communications / public relations	☐	☐
(w)	Grant applications / grant writing	☐	☐
(x)	Human resources	☐	☐
(y)	Forensic sciences	☐	☐
(z)	Religion, ministry, or pastoral care	☐	☐

If yes, please explain who and the nature and extent of the education, training or employment experience:______________________________

____

____

32. Do you have any special certifications or licenses?
[ ] Yes [ ] No

(a) If yes, please explain: ______________________________

____

33. Do you have any special skills, training, or experience in note-taking?
[ ] Yes [ ] No

(a) If yes, please explain: ______________________________

____

34. If you are not an attorney, have you taken any law courses?
[ ] Yes [ ] No

If so, indicate the following:

	School	Date	Length of Course	Topic
(a)
(b)
(c)

35. Please list the organizations to which you or your spouse/partner belong or in which either of you participate, either now or in the recent past. (Include any civic, social, religious, charitable, volunteer, political, sporting, professional, business, union, fraternal and recreational groups, such as, but not limited to, Kiwanis, Rotary Club, Knights of Columbus, Veterans of Foreign Wars, American Legion, American Civil Liberties Union, National Rifle Association, League of Women Voters, the Innocence Project, the Virginia Public Access Project, Virginia Coalition for Open Government, or the Center for Public Integrity):

(a) Self: ______________________________

____

(b) Spouse/Partner: ______________________________

____

36. Have you ever held any office, title, or other leadership position in the organizations listed in the previous question?
[ ] Yes [ ] No

(a) If yes, briefly describe your office or title, and dates held: ________________

____

____

37. To what groups or organizations, if any, did you donate money, goods, or volunteered time to during the last five years? ________________________________

____

____

38. Have you taken (or do you take) dietary or nutritional supplements (excluding vitamins)? (Check all that apply)
[ ] Yes, currently do so [ ] Yes, in the past [ ] No

If either "yes" to current use or "yes" to past use, what was the kind(s) of products involved:

Current / past General product description

(a) ____
(b) ____
(c) ____

39 Have you or a family member or a close friend ever sold dietary or nutritional supplements?

Who When General product description

(a) ____
(b) ____
(c) ____

40. Have you or any member of your family ever been employed by the state government of Virginia or any Virginia state government agency, whether as an employee, contractor, or otherwise?
[ ] Yes [ ] No

(a) If yes, please explain who, when, what the job was, and your reason for leaving:

____

____

____

41. Have you or any member of your immediate family ever been employed by or had any business relationship with the University of Virginia, Virginia Commonwealth University, VCU Massey Cancer Center, UVa Medical Center, Eastern Virginia School Medical School, the Virginia Department of Health, the Virginia Department of Human Resource Management, or the Virginia Tobacco Indemnification and Community Revitalization Commission (the "Tobacco Commission")?
[ ] Yes [ ] No

(a) If yes, please explain: ____________________

____

____

42. Have you ever sought or been appointed to any non-elective local or State Board in Virginia?
☐ Yes ☐ No

(a) If yes, please explain when and what Board: ____________________

____

43. As a result of any job or position held, have you ever had to fill out or file a disclosure form listing any gifts or benefits received or any potential conflicts of interest?
☐ Yes ☐ No

(a) If yes, please explain when and what type of disclosure was required: __________

____

____

44. Have you ever received any training addressing local, State, and/or Federal rules concerning conflicts of interest (COI)?
☐ Yes ☐ No

(a) If yes, please explain when and what type of training: ____________________

____

____

45. Have you ever completed an application for a home mortgage or refinance of a home mortgage or signed as a co-applicant?
☐ Yes ☐ No

Legal System

46. Have you ever served as a juror before?
☐ Yes ☐ No

If yes, indicate for each:

Year	Civil/ Criminal	Federal/ State	Type of Case	Reach a verdict (yes/no)	If not, why?

Juror Number: ______

(a) Have you ever served as a juror on a grand jury?
[ ] Yes [ ] No

If yes, when and where: ______________________________

(b) Have you ever served as a jury or grand jury foreperson?
[ ] Yes [ ] No

(c) Was there anything about your experience as a juror or grand juror that left you disappointed or dissatisfied with our criminal justice system?
[ ] Yes [ ] No

Please explain: ______________________________
____
____

(d) Would anything about your jury or grand jury service make you want to or not want to serve again?
[ ] Yes [ ] No

If yes, please explain: ______________________________
____

47 Have you, or has any member of your family or close friend or relative, ever been the victim of, or witness to a crime, whether or not that crime was reported to law enforcement authorities?
[ ] Yes [ ] No

(a) If no, go to the next numbered question. If yes, please provide the following information for each person and incident:

Relationship (Self, sister, etc.)	Type of Crime	Victim or Witness	Reported to Police?	Was anyone Caught?	Outcome of the Case

(b) In what ways, if any, did any of these incidents that you, or a person close to you, experienced affect your attitudes about crime, in general, or certain crimes in particular? ______________________________
____
____

Juror Number: _______

(c) How do you feel about how the police or law enforcement authorities handled the above situation(s)? ______________________________

____

____

____

48. Have you, or, to your knowledge, any family members, or any close friends ever been:

(a) Any of the following:

- (1) Accused of a crime? [ ] Yes [ ] No
- (2) Questioned by police or law enforcement personnel, including military law enforcement? [ ] Yes [ ] No
- (3) Arrested or charged with a crime? [ ] Yes [ ] No
- (4) Convicted of a crime? [ ] Yes [ ] No

(b) If yes for any of the above, please provide the following:

Relationship of person charged (Self, Sister, etc.)	Crime(s) charged/investigated	Case outcome

(c) If yes to any of "a" above, please provide a brief description of the alleged crime(s) and the events leading up to the accusation, arrest or charge: __________

____

____

____

(e) What was your opinion of how fairly the individual(s) mentioned above was treated? ______________________________

____

____

____

(e) How, if at all, would this experience affect you if you served as a juror in this case? ______________________________

____

____

____

49. Other than what you have already explained, have you, a family member or a close friend ever been interviewed or asked to make a statement by the FBI, IRS or any other law enforcement agency?
[ ] Yes [ ] No

(a) If yes, please explain: ____
____

(b) If yes, how, if at all, would this affect you if you served as a juror in this case?
____
____

50. Other than what you have already explained, have you, any member of your immediate family, or any close personal friend ever been investigated for violating ethical rules by an employer, ethics committee, governmental agency, or other organization?
[ ] Yes [ ] No

(a) If yes, please explain: ____
____

(b) If yes, how, if at all, would this affect you if you served as a juror in this case?
____
____
____

51. Do you know of anyone who felt that he/she was falsely accused of a crime?
[ ] Yes [ ] No

(a) If yes, please explain: ____
____

(b) If yes, how, if at all, would this affect you if you served as a juror in this case?
____
____
____

52. Do you know anyone personally who is or has been in prison or jail?
[ ] Yes [ ] No

(a) If yes, please give the following details:

Relation to You	Charge

(b) If yes, how, if at all, would this affect you if you served as a juror in this case?

____

____

53. Other than what you have already explained, have you ever been involved in any legal proceeding, in any capacity, for example as a plaintiff, defendant, victim, lawyer, witness (whether in court or by deposition outside of court), or expert?
[ ] Yes [ ] No

(a) If yes, please explain: ______________________________

____

(b) Did the legal process in that instance operate fairly in your opinion? __________

____

(c) How, if at all, would that experience affect your jury service in this case? _____

____

54. Other than what you have already explained, has any family member or person with whom you have a close personal relationship ever testified in a grand jury or in court?
[ ] Yes [ ] No

(a) If yes, please provide the following details:

Type of Case	Relationship (if any)	Reason for Testifying

55. Have you, or any members of your family, ever been employed by any law enforcement agency, such as: a police department, sheriff's department, the Virginia State Police (VSP), the State Bureau of Investigation (SBI), the Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI), the Internal Revenue Service (IRS), the Drug Enforcement Administration (DEA), the Bureau of Alcohol Tobacco and Firearms (ATF), the United States Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS), the U.S. Marshal's Service, the U.S. Park Police, a United States Attorney's Office, the United States Department of Justice, a District/Commonwealth or State's Attorney's Office, a probation or parole office, the Bureau of Prisons, the state department of corrections, the court system, or any other local, state or federal law enforcement agency or private security force?
[ ] Yes [ ] No

(a) If yes, for each person (yourself or family member), please indicate the law enforcement office or agency, the period of time employed, if known, and a general description of the job duties: ______________________________

____

____

____

Juror Number: ______

56. Other than what you have already explained, have you, or has any close friend or relative, ever worked or been a volunteer in the legal profession either as a lawyer, paralegal, or in a law office, including a prosecutor's, criminal defense attorney's office, Legal Aid, public defender's office, or legal department for any private business or government agency?
[ ] Yes [ ] No

(a) If yes, please list their names, type of work they do, where they work, and their relationship to you: ______

57 Describe your general feelings about the following:

(a) Federal and state law enforcement officers: ______

(b) Federal prosecutors: ______

(c) Criminal defense lawyers: ______

(d) Judges: ______

58. Have you ever had a favorable or unfavorable experience with an attorney or a judge?
[ ] Yes [ ] No

(a) If yes, please explain: ______

(b) If yes, how, if at all, would this affect you if you served as a juror in this case?

______

59. Have you or a member of your family, either personally or in connection with a business, been involved in any claim, legal action or dispute with any local, state, or federal, governmental agency?
[ ] Yes [ ] No

(a) If yes, please describe: ____
____
____

Media and Activities

60. Do you watch NATIONAL news on any of the following television networks? (CHECK ALL THAT APPLY)

(a)	ABC	[ ]
(b)	CBS	[ ]
(c)	CNN	[ ]
(d)	FOX News channel (National)	[ ]
(e)	MSNBC	[ ]
(f)	NBC	[ ]
(g)	CNN	[ ]
(h)	Public Television	[ ]
(i)	Other	[ ]

If other, please list: ____

61. Do you watch any television talk shows or listen to radio talk shows or podcasts hosted by the following individuals? (CHECK ALL THAT APPLY)

(a)	Glenn Beck	[ ]
(b)	Wolf Blitzer	[ ]
(c)	Neal Boortz	[ ]
(d)	Lou Dobbs	[ ]
(e)	Ira Glass	[ ]
(f)	Nancy Grace	[ ]
(g)	Terry Gross	[ ]
(h)	Sean Hannity	[ ]
(i)	Steve Harvey	[ ]
(j)	Chris Hayes	[ ]
(k)	Rush Limbaugh	[ ]
(l)	Rachel Maddow	[ ]
(m)	Chris Matthews	[ ]
(n)	Ruth Marcus	[ ]
(o)	Lawrence O'Donnell	[ ]
(p)	Diane Rehm	[ ]
(q)	Bill O'Reilly	[ ]

(r) Rev. Al Sharpton ☐
(s) Other ☐

If other, please list: ______________________________

62. Please list any Internet web sites that you visit regularly, or any email lists or message services you subscribe to, for news/current events: ______________________________

63. How often do you watch investigative news programs (such as 60 Minutes, ABC 20/20, or Frontline), or television shows that deal with lawyers, the legal system, police work, prisons, politicians, or political life?
☐ Very often ☐ Often ☐ Not very often ☐ Not at all

(a) If very often or often, what are the names of the shows? ______________________________

64. Do you have (or have you ever had) a bumper sticker(s) or personalized license plate(s) on your vehicle(s)?
☐ Yes ☐ No

(a) If yes, please describe what it/they say: ______________________________

65. Do you regularly wear any hats, t-shirts, or carry bags that express views on any subject?
☐ Yes ☐ No

(a) If yes, please describe what it/they say: ______________________________

66. Do you or your spouse/partner maintain a blog or online journal?
☐ Yes ☐ No

(a) If yes, please describe: ______________________________

67. Have you ever written, posted comments, or been quoted in any paper, article, newsletter, news media report, book, or other published work, including online, print and other media sources?
☐ Yes ☐ No

(a) If yes, please describe the content and the source of publication: ______________

68. Have you ever written to any newspaper or magazine; or called in to any television or radio program; or posted a comment or a "like" on any website or to an online media story to express your opinion concerning the issue of corruption in politics?
[ ] Yes [ ] No

(a) If yes, please describe the view you expressed and in what manner: _________

69. Do you use any social networking web sites, such as Facebook, Google+, MySpace, LinkedIn, or Twitter?
[ ] Yes [ ] No

70. Do you currently "follow" or does anyone "follow" you on Twitter, blogs, or other social media platforms?
[ ] Yes [ ] No

(a) Please list any entities or accounts that you follow that are in any way related to politics, political figures / parties, political reporting, or current events: ________

Political Involvement

71. In politics today, do you consider yourself a: (CHECK ONLY ONE ANSWER)
[ ] Democrat
[ ] Independent-who leans more to the Democrat Party
[ ] Independent-who does not lean more toward either major party
[ ] Independent-who leans more to the Republican Party [ ] Republican
[ ] Libertarian
[ ] do not vote
[ ] other (PLEASE SPECIFY) ______________________________

72. In terms of your views on social issues, do you consider yourself to be:
[ ] Very conservative
[ ] Somewhat conservative
[ ] Moderate
[ ] Somewhat liberal
[ ] Very liberal

73. In terms of your views on economic issues, do you consider yourself to be:
[ ] Very conservative
[ ] Somewhat conservative
[ ] Moderate
[ ] Somewhat liberal
[ ] Very liberal

74. How often do you vote in federal elections?
[ ] Always [ ] Often [ ] Seldom [ ] Never

75. How often do you vote in state/local elections?
[ ] Always [ ] Often [ ] Seldom [ ] Never

76. How closely do you follow politics in Virginia?
[ ] Very closely
[ ] Somewhat closely
[ ] Not closely at all

77. Have you, your significant other, a family member, or a close friend ever run for, sought, or held a political office in the local, state, or federal government?
[ ] Yes [ ] No

(a) If yes, please provide their names, relationship to you and political office: ______
____
____

78. Have you, your significant other, a family member, or a close friend ever worked for, volunteered, or been on the staff of any elected public official or worked for a committee or subcommittee in Congress or a State legislature?
[ ] Yes [ ] No

(a) If yes, please explain: ______________________________________
____
____

79. Have you, your spouse/significant other, any family members or any close friends ever sought assistance from any elected public official?
[ ] Yes [ ] No

(a) If yes, please explain: ______________________________________
____
____

80. Do you or any member of your family or any close personal friend have any experience in lobbying any branch of the state, federal, or local government?
☐ Yes ☐ No

(a) If yes, please explain: ____
____
____

81. Do you or any member of your family or close personal friend have any experience being lobbied while you or they served in a position with any state, federal, or local government?
☐ Yes ☐ No

(a) If yes, please explain: ____
____
____

82. Overall, what is your general opinion of the elected public officials of the Commonwealth of Virginia?

____
____
____
____

83. With respect to any candidates for public office, political organizations, political committees, or political action committees (PACs) have you, your spouse/significant other, any family members or any close friends ever done any of the following: (Check all that apply)

		Self	Spouse/ sig. other	Family member	Close friend
(a)	Been paid to work for	☐	☐	☐	☐
(b)	Volunteer work	☐	☐	☐	☐
(c)	Canvassed neighborhoods	☐	☐	☐	☐
(d)	Attended meetings	☐	☐	☐	☐
(e)	Contributed money	☐	☐	☐	☐
(f)	Attended rallies	☐	☐	☐	☐
(g)	Attended events, e.g., cocktail parties and/or dinners	☐	☐	☐	☐
(h)	Displayed yard signs and/or bumper stickers	☐	☐	☐	☐
(i)	"Liked" any websites or Facebook pages associated with a party or political candidates	☐	☐	☐	☐
(j)	Other campaign activities	☐	☐	☐	☐

For any checked above, please explain: ______________________________

____

____

____

____

84. How often do you or your spouse/partner make financial contributions to any political campaigns or political action committees?
[ ] Often [ ] Sometimes [ ] Seldom [ ] Never

85. Do you have any knowledge, training or experience in the area of government ethics on a local, state, or federal level?
[ ] Yes [ ] No

(a) If yes, please explain: ______________________________

____

____

____

(b) If yes, how, if at all, would this affect you if you served as a juror in this case?

____

____

____

86. Do you have any knowledge, training or experience in the area of laws relating to the accepting and/or reporting of gifts and/or financial transactions involving government officials?
[ ] Yes [ ] No

(a) If yes, please explain: ______________________________

____

____

____

(b) If yes, how, if at all, would this affect you if you served as a juror in this case?

____

____

____

Juror Number: _______

General Opinions and Beliefs about the Criminal Justice System

87. The indictment in this case is merely an accusation and not evidence of guilt. Would you have any difficulty treating the indictment as an accusation and not evidence of guilt?
[ ] Yes [ ] No

(a) If yes, please explain: ____
____
____

88. A defendant in a criminal trial has no obligation to testify. Jurors cannot draw any conclusion from the fact that a defendant chooses not to testify. The fact that a defendant may choose not to testify cannot be a factor in reaching your verdict. Would you have any difficulty following these rules?
[ ] Yes [ ] No

(a) If yes, please explain: ____
____
____

89. A defendant is presumed innocent and cannot be convicted unless the jury, based on all the evidence, unanimously decides that his or her guilt has been proved beyond a reasonable doubt. The burden of proving guilt rests entirely on the government. A defendant has no obligation to prove his or her innocence. Would you have any difficulty following these rules?
[ ] Yes [ ] No [ ] Unsure

(a) If yes or unsure, please explain: ______________________________________
____
____

90. There are two defendants in this case. Each defendant and each charge must be considered separately. You cannot find a defendant guilty on any count unless the government proves his or her guilt beyond a reasonable doubt. Are you able to consider each defendant and each charge separately?
[ ] Yes [ ] No [ ] Unsure

(a) If no or unsure, please explain: ______________________________________
____
____

Juror Number: _______

91. The defendants in this case are well-known public figures. Would that affect your ability to follow the instructions given by the Court and reach a decision in this case?
[ ] Yes [ ] No [ ] Unsure

(a) If yes or unsure, please explain: ______________________________

92. Sometimes witnesses who testify are given immunity from prosecution or otherwise lenient treatment by the Government. As to such a witness, would that fact alone prevent you from believing that person, even before you have heard any of his or her testimony?
[ ] Yes [ ] No [ ] Unsure

(a) If yes or unsure, please explain: ______________________________

93. Have you followed any criminal cases involving alleged political corruption over the past 10 years?
[ ] Yes [ ] No

(a) If yes, please describe which case(s), your interest in each case, the outcome, and your reaction to the outcome: ______________________________

94. Have you followed any other criminal cases over the past 10 years?
[ ] Yes [ ] No

(a) If yes, please describe which case(s), your interest in each case, the outcome, and your reaction to the outcome: ______________________________

Connection to the Defendants

95. Have you ever been to an event or activity that Robert F McDonnell attended?
☐ Yes ☐ No

If yes,

(a) What event(s) or activity? ____________________________________

(b) When: ____________________________________

(c) Did you personally meet Mr. McDonnell?
☐ Yes ☐ No

96. Have you ever been to an event or activity that Maureen G. McDonnell attended?
☐ Yes ☐ No

If yes,

(a) What event(s) or activity? ____________________________________

(b) When: ____________________________________

(c) Did you personally meet Mrs. McDonnell?
☐ Yes ☐ No

97. Have you or someone you know ever had any connection to any of the following activities by the former First Lady of Virginia Maureen G. McDonnell: (Check all that apply)
☐ The "FLITE" (First Lady's Initiatives Team Effort) Program
☐ Virginia Wine Association or marketing efforts to promote Virginia wines
☐ The McGlothlin Foundation
☐ Other activities, please explain: ____________________________________

98. Do you, a family member, or any close friend know or have any connection (personal, political, and/or business) to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell, any member of their extended families, or any other person who has a close personal connection to the McDonnells (including but not limited to social interaction, Facebook friend status, and the like)?

(Check all that apply)	Self	Family member	Close friend
Know Mr. McDonnell	☐	☐	☐
Know Mrs. McDonnell	☐	☐	☐
Know McDonnells' families	☐	☐	☐
Know McDonnells' close personal connections	☐	☐	☐

Juror Number: ______

(a) If yes, please explain: ____________________

99 Do you or does anyone close to you know anyone who was has been a member of any staff or worked for Robert F McDonnell in any capacity during any of his positions in elected office?
[ ] Yes [ ] No

(a) If yes, please explain: ____________________

100. Do you or does anyone close to you know anyone who was has been appointed to any position, including State positions or jobs and Board or Commission appointments, by Robert F McDonnell?
[ ] Yes [ ] No

(a) If yes, please explain: ____________________

101. Do you or does anyone close to you know anyone who was has been a member of any staff or worked with in any other capacity (both paid or volunteer) former First Lady of Virginia Maureen G. McDonnell?
[ ] Yes [ ] No

(a) If yes, please explain: ____________________

102. Do you feel that there have been any actions by Robert F McDonnell or Maureen G. McDonnell while they were Governor and First Lady of Virginia, respectively, that have affected you in a personal way?
[ ] Yes [ ] No

(a) If yes, please explain: ____________________

Juror Number: ______

103. With respect to Robert F McDonnell's various political campaigns/political offices sought (i.e., House of Delegates, Virginia Attorney General, and Governor) have you, your spouse/significant other, any family members or any close friends ever done any of the following in support of or in opposition to any of Mr. McDonnell's campaigns: (Check all that apply)

		Self	Spouse/ sig. other	Family member	Close friend
(a)	Been paid to work for	☐	☐	☐	☐
(b)	Volunteer work	☐	☐	☐	☐
(c)	Canvassed neighborhoods	☐	☐	☐	☐
(d)	Attended meetings	☐	☐	☐	☐
(e)	Contributed money	☐	☐	☐	☐
(f)	Attended rallies	☐	☐	☐	☐
(g)	Attended events, e.g., cocktail parties and/or dinners	☐	☐	☐	☐
(h)	Displayed yard signs and/or bumper stickers	☐	☐	☐	☐
(i)	"Liked," "friended," or "followed" any websites, twitter feeds, or Facebook pages associated with Mr. McDonnell or his campaign opponents	☐	☐	☐	☐
(j)	Other campaign activities	☐	☐	☐	☐

For any checked above, please explain: ______________________________

____

____

____

____

104. Have you, your spouse/significant other, any family members or any close friends ever done any of the following in support of defense efforts concerning allegations of criminal wrongdoing by the defendants? (Check all that apply)

		Self	Spouse/ sig. other	Family member	Close friend
(a)	Wrote a letter to the editor	☐	☐	☐	☐
(b)	Signed a petition	☐	☐	☐	☐
(c)	Posted a comment online
(d)	Received an email or other communication seeking financial or other support	☐	☐	☐	☐
(e)	Visited a website (e.g., The Restoration Fund) seeking donations for the defense	☐	☐	☐	☐

(f)	Donated money to the defense, including funds solicited by The Restoration Fund website	☐	☐	☐	☐

For any checked above, please explain: ______________________________

105. Have you, your spouse/significant other, any family members or any close friends ever done any of the following in support of government efforts to investigate allegations of criminal wrongdoing by the defendants? (Check all that apply)

		Self	Spouse/ sig. other	Family member	Close friend
(a)	Wrote a letter to the editor	☐	☐	☐	☐
(b)	Signed a petition	☐	☐	☐	☐
(c)	Posted a comment online

For any checked above, please explain: ______________________________

106. Robert F McDonnell is currently on the faculty at Liberty University. Have you or a family member or a close friend ever had any contact or connection to Liberty University, including attending classes, employment, teaching courses, providing any financial support or donations, or being on any Liberty University mailing or email lists?
☐ Yes ☐ No

(a) If yes, please list who, the kind of contact or connection, and their relationship to you: ______________________________

107. In what way, if any, would the fact that Robert F McDonnell is employed by Liberty University affect how you would view his credibility or any of the charges against the defendants? ______________________________

Juror Number: _______

108. Other than what you have already explained, have you or any family member ever been employed, including as a contractor, by any U.S. federal government agency?
[ ] Yes [ ] No

(a) If yes, please list the person, job title, agency, and dates of employment: ______

____

____

____

Case Questions

109. The defendants, Robert F McDonnell and Maureen G. McDonnell, are charged with bribery, extortion, wire fraud, and making false statements, among other charges, and Maureen G. McDonnell is also charged with obstruction of justice. Have you seen, heard or read anything about this case?
[ ] Yes [ ] No

110. How closely have you followed the news about this case?
[ ] Very closely
[ ] Somewhat closely
[ ] Not very closely
[ ] Not at all

111. Please indicate from what source(s) you heard about the case. (Check all that apply.)

(a) [ ] Television
[ ] Newspapers [ ] Magazines
[ ] Radio [ ] Internet
[ ] Blog/chatroom
[ ] Personal knowledge of defendants or their family, friends or acquaintances
[ ] Personal knowledge of potential witnesses in this case
[ ] Personal conversations with others in the community
[ ] Overheard others discussing the case
[ ] Other sources of information (list):

____

(b) Please describe the sources for any of the options checked above: ____________

____

____

____

____

____

Juror Number: _______

112. Based on what you have read, heard, seen, and/or overheard in conversations, please tell us what opinions, if any, you have formed about the guilt or innocence of Robert F McDonnell: ____

113. Based on what you have read, heard, seen, and/or overheard in conversations, please tell us what opinions, if any, you have formed about the guilt or innocence of Maureen G. McDonnell: ____

114. Have you expressed an opinion about this case or about those involved to anyone, either through conversations or through writing to any newspaper, magazine, or publication; calling in to any television or radio program; or posting comments or likes on the Internet?
[ ] Yes [ ] No

(a) If yes, what were the circumstances and what opinion did you express? ________

115. Have you, a member of your family or a close friend participated in any legal research studies such as focus groups, mock trials, or surveys that addressed the case of United States of America v. Robert F McDonnell and Maureen G. McDonnell?
[ ] Yes [ ] No

116. Over the past two years, have you, a member of your family or a close friend participated in any legal research studies such as focus groups, mock trials, or surveys that addressed any other real or hypothetical criminal case?
[ ] Yes [ ] No

117 Do you or any member of your immediate family or close personal friend know anyone who has covered this case or investigation for any media outlet?
[ ] Yes [ ] No

(a) If yes, please explain: ____

Juror Number: ______

118. If, after hearing all of the evidence in this case, you concluded that the Government had proved beyond a reasonable doubt that Robert F McDonnell is guilty, would you have any reservations in voting guilty?
[ ] Yes [ ] No [ ] Unsure

(a) If yes or unsure, please explain: ____________________________________

119. If, after hearing all of the evidence in this case, you concluded that the Government had proved beyond a reasonable doubt that Maureen G. McDonnell is guilty, would you have any reservations in voting guilty?
[ ] Yes [ ] No [ ] Unsure

(a) If yes or unsure, please explain: ____________________________________

120. If, after hearing all of the evidence in this case, you concluded that the Government had not proved beyond a reasonable doubt that Robert F McDonnell is guilty, would you have any reservations in voting not guilty?
[ ] Yes [ ] No [ ] Unsure

(a) If yes or unsure, please explain: ____________________________________

121. If, after hearing all of the evidence in this case, you concluded that the Government had not proved beyond a reasonable doubt that Maureen G. McDonnell is guilty, would you have any reservations in voting not guilty?
[ ] Yes [ ] No [ ] Unsure

(a) If yes or unsure, please explain: ____________________________________

122. Two of the products that will be discussed in this case are Anatabloc, which is a dietary supplement produced by Star Scientific, and CigRx, a smoking cessation product produced by Star Scientific. Have you or a family member or a close friend ever used Anatabloc or CigRx?
[ ] Yes [ ] No [ ] Unsure

(a) If yes or unsure, please describe who used the product and when: ____________

____

____

____

123. Do you or any family member or close friend now own or ever owned any stock in Star Scientific?
[ ] Yes [ ] No [ ] Unsure

124. The judge presiding over this case is U.S. District Judge James R. Spencer. Do you, anyone in your family, or any close personal friend know Judge Spencer or anyone else who works in this courthouse?
[ ] Yes [ ] No

(a) If yes, please explain who you know and how: ____________________

____

____

125. The prosecutors in this case are Michael Dry, David Harbach, Jessica Aber, and Ryan Faulconer.

(a) Do you know, or have you had any contact, either social or professional, with any individuals listed above, or any other member of the United States Attorney's Office or Department of Justice?
[ ] Yes [ ] No [ ] Unsure

(b) If yes or unsure, please explain: ____________________________

____

____

126. The attorneys representing the defendants in this case and their respective law firms are listed below.

Robert F. McDonnell
John Brownlee, Christopher Iaquinto, Daniel Small, Timothy Taylor, William Gould
(Holland & Knight LLP)

Henry Asbill, Jonathan Berry, Charles Carberry, Hilary Perkins, James Burnham, Mary Ellen Powers, Noel Francisco, Owen Conroy, Ryan Newman
(Jones Day)

Maureen G. McDonnell
William Burck, Kaiyeu Chu, Heather Martin, Stephen Hauss
(Quinn Emanuel Urquhart & Sullivan LLP)

(a) Do you know, or have you had any contact, either social or professional, with any individuals listed above, or any other member of any of the law firms listed above?
[ ] Yes [ ] No [ ] Unsure

(b) If yes or unsure, please explain: ______

127. Please review the list attached to this questionnaire that provides the names of persons who may appear as witnesses during the trial. Do you, your spouse/partner, any members of your immediate family, or any of your close personal friends know or have any connection with, or have you ever seen, heard, or read anything about any of the individuals listed?
[ ] Yes [ ] No [ ] Unsure

(a) If yes or unsure, please list the names of each person and explain the connection or information you have seen, heard, or read: ______

128. Based on what you have read, heard, seen, and/or overheard in conversations, please tell us what opinions, if any, you have formed about the credibility of any potential witnesses in the case: ______

129. Other than what you have already explained, do you or any member of your immediate family or close personal friend know anyone who may be associate [illegible] any capacity with this case, its investigation, or its preparation for either the Government or the defendants?
[ ] Yes [ ] No

(a) If yes, please explain: ______

Juror Number: ______

Conclusion

130. Do you believe that if the law as given to you by the judge goes against your personal views of what the decision should be, you would tend to base your verdict on your personal views of the case?
[ ] Yes [ ] No

131. As a result of filling out this questionnaire, have you now formed any opinion about this case?
[ ] Yes [ ] No

(a) If yes, please explain: ______________________

132. Is there any reason that you believe you should not sit as a juror in this case?
[ ] Yes [ ] No

(a) If yes, please explain:

133. Other than civic duty, is there any reason that you would want to serve as a juror (or as foreperson of the jury) in this case?
[ ] Yes [ ] No

(a) If yes, please explain: ______________________

134. Is there any reason you have not already explained that you would not want to serve as a juror in this case?
[ ] Yes [ ] No

(a) If yes, please explain: ______________________

135. After being notified that you may serve as a juror in this case, did you discuss your possible service on this case with anyone, including family, friends, and co-workers, etc.?
[ ] Yes [ ] No

(a) If yes, please explain who and what you discussed: ______________________

Juror Number: _______

136. After receiving this questionnaire and thus being notified that you may serve as a juror in this case, did you follow or access any media coverage or view or search out any information on the Internet concerning this case?
[ ] Yes [ ] No

(a) If yes, please explain: ____
____
____
____

137. Is there anything else that you think the Court should know that might influence your ability to fairly and impartially judge the evidence in this case and to apply the law as instructed by the Court?
[ ] Yes [ ] No

(a) If yes, please explain: ____
____
____

138. Is there any matter you would prefer to discuss privately with the judge?
[ ] Yes [ ] No

(a) If yes, please explain: ____
____
____
____

139. Is there anything that was not asked that you believe is important to know about you?
____
____
____

Juror Number: _______

SIGNATURE

I, ____, hereby declare under (Print Your Name)
penalty of perjury that the foregoing answers set forth in this Jury Questionnaire are true and correct to the best of my knowledge and belief. I have not discussed my answers with others, or received assistance in completing the questionnaire. I have answered all of the above questions in this Jury Questionnaire myself.

I FURTHER UNDERSTAND THAT I AM NOT TO DISCUSS THIS CASE WITH ANYONE OR SEEK OUT, LISTEN TO, OR READ ANY MATERIAL ABOUT THIS CASE IN THE MEDIA, ON THE INTERNET OR ELSEWHERE UNTIL THE JUDGE IN THIS CASE HAS INSTRUCTED ME OTHERWISE.

Executed in the Eastern District of Virginia, on this _____ day of __________, 2014.

____
(Your Signature)

Juror Number: _______

EXPLANATION SHEET

Juror Number: ______

EXPLANATION SHEET, continued.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
FOR THE EASTERN DISTRICT OF VIRGINIA
RICHMOND DIVISION

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,	)
	)
v.	)	CRIMINAL NO. 3:14-CR-00012
	)
ROBERT F. MCDONNELL	)	JUDGE JAMES R. SPENCER
MAUREEN G. MCDONNELL	)

DEFENDANT ROBERT F. MCDONNELL'S
ADDITIONAL PROPOSED JUROR QUESTIONNAIRE ITEMS

Robert F McDonnell, by his attorneys, hereby requests that the following questions be included in the juror questionnaire to be sent to potential jurors. These are questions proposed by the defense, to which the Government has indicated it would object.

Personal Background

D1. Where were you born? ____

D2. What is your race/ethnicity? Do you consider yourself: (check one)

____Caucasian/White
____African-American/Black
____Hispanic/Latino
____Native American /American Indian
____Bi-racial
____Other (please specify) ____________________
____Prefer not to answer

D3. What is your religion preference, if any? (check one)

_____ Baptist _____ Non-denominational _____ Other Protestant _____Catholic

_____ Jewish _____ Muslim _____ Buddhist _____Other _____None

D4. How often do you attend church or other religious services?

a. _____ Never _____Rarely _____Several times a year _____Once a month

b. _____Several times a month _____Once a week _____Several times a week

D5. What is your approximate total annual household income? (optional)

____

Justification: Questions D1 through D5 are designed to ensure that a fair cross-section of the population is included in the jury pool and that there has been no systematic (albeit unintentional) exclusion of any distinctive group. See Duren v. Missouri, 439 U.S. 357 (1979) (confirming that a defendant has the right to a trial by a jury selected from a fair cross-section of the community). Moreover, there have been several "hot button" political issues involving race and religion that have divided Virginia citizens during Mr. McDonnell's tenure as Governor.

D6. Do you own your residence, rent your residence, or live with friends or relatives?

______ Own ______ Rent ______ Live with friends or relatives

a. How many people including yourself live in your household/residence? ______

Justification: Question D6 is an expansion on Joint Questionnaire # 19, intended to identify relevant additional housing and residential circumstances beyond individuals who live with family members.

D7 Have you or your employer ever done business, or sought to do commercial business, with any Virginia state, county, city, or other local government agency?

_____Yes ______ No

a. If yes, please explain when and for what purpose:

____

____

b. Was this experience (check one):

______Mainly Positive ______ Mainly Negative ______ Mixed

c. Were you and/or your employer treated fairly by the state agency?

______Yes ______ No

Please explain:

____

____

Justification: Question D7 is an important corollary to Joint Questionnaire # 40. The Government alleges that its primary witness, Jonnie Williams, attempted to improperly influence state personnel on behalf of Star Scientific, Inc. It is important to know whether a juror has similar experience dealing with the Commonwealth and its political subdivisions, and if so, whether the juror has strong feelings about state government.

D8. The Federal Government is the complainant in this case bringing charges against former Governor Robert F McDonnell and his wife former First Lady Maureen G. McDonnell. Would the fact that you or a family member currently work or have worked for the Federal Government cause you to favor the Government's side in this case regardless of any other evidence or testimony that might develop at trial? ______ Yes ______ No

If yes, please explain:

____

____

Justification: Question D8 would help identify individuals who may be impermissibly biased in favor of the Government because they worked for, or were close to someone who worked for, the Federal Government. It should follow Joint Questionnaire # 108.

D9. Please describe your hobbies, spare time activities, or special interests:

____

____

Justification: Question D9 is an important expansion on Joint Questionnaire # 35 because it prompts potential jurors to disclose activities and interests that are important to them beyond employment or formal membership in a defined organization. For many individuals, especially those who are retired or currently out of work, hobbies and interests take up a much larger portion of their time than does work.

D10. How would you describe yourself and your view of life in ten words or less?

D11. Which, if any, of the following words describe you? (Please check all that apply):

☐ Aggressive ☐ Analytical ☐ Articulate
☐ Assertive
☐ Business-minded
☐ Cautious ☐ Compulsive ☐ Creative ☐ Decisive ☐ Dedicated ☐ Detailed ☐ Emotional ☐ Entrepreneur ☐ Impulsive
☐ Independent ☐ Innovative ☐ Intelligent ☐ Judgmental ☐ Laid-back
☐ Law & Order ☐ Leader ☐ Logical ☐ Loyal ☐ Naïve ☐ Opinionated ☐ Outspoken ☐ Perceptive ☐ Practical ☐ Private ☐ Problem solver
☐ Pro-business
☐ Pro-Government
☐ Pro-worker ☐ Religious ☐ Skeptical
☐ Snap-decisions ☐ Strict ☐ Stubborn ☐ Technical ☐ Thoughtful ☐ Trusting ☐ Visual ☐ Other:______

Justification: Questions D10 and D11 are designed to elicit important information about each jurors' perception of their own character traits and to ensure that the jury includes persons with a variety of perspectives who will be assessing the evidence and determining the facts of the case.

Media Consumption

D12. Where do you get your news and information about current events? (Check all that apply):

a. _____ Newspaper _____TV/cable news _____ Radio _____ Magazines

b. _____ On-line/internet/social media _____Word of mouth, conversations

c. _____ Nowhere, I do not pay attention to current events.

D13. Check to indicate whether you regularly receive news and information from the following sources (including on-line):

The Richmond Times-Dispatch _____ Yes ____No If yes, how often? __________________
The Virginia-Pilot _____ Yes ____No If yes, how often? __________________
Other Virginia newspaper _____ Yes ____No If yes, how often? __________________
Specify: _________________________
The Washington Post _____ Yes ____No If yes, how often? __________________
The Washington Times ____ Yes ____No If yes, how often? __________________
The New York Times _____ Yes ____No If yes, how often? __________________
USA Today _____ Yes ____No If yes, how often? __________________
The Wall Street Journal _____ Yes ____No If yes, how often? __________________
Other National newspaper _____ Yes ____No If yes, how often? __________________
Specify: _______________
ABC News _____ Yes ____No If yes, how often? __________________
CBS News _____ Yes ____No If yes, how often? __________________
NBC News _____ Yes ____No If yes, how often? __________________

FOX News ____ Yes ____No If yes, how often? ________________
PBS /NPR News ____ Yes ____No If yes, how often? ________________
CNN ____ Yes ____No If yes, how often? ________________
MSNBC ____ Yes ____No If yes, how often? ________________
Other television/cable station ____ Yes ____No If yes, how often? ________________
Specify: ________________
On-line blogs, podcasts ____ Yes ____No If yes, how often? ________________
Specify: ________________
Social media ____ Yes ____No If yes, how often? ________________
Specify: ________________
News magazines ____ Yes ____No If yes, how often? ________________
Specify: ________________

D14. Which of the following categories best describes your opinion of the accuracy of the news media in general? (Check one):

_____Always accurate _____Generally accurate _____Sometimes accurate

_____Sometimes inaccurate _____Generally inaccurate _____Never accurate

Justification: Questions D12 through D14 are particularly important in this case because of the constant, voluminous, and highly prejudicial media coverage. While Joint Questionnaire # 60 through # 63 address some media coverage issues, the parties could not reach an agreement on whether the questionnaire should specifically list newspapers read by each juror, ask how frequently each juror views each media source, and inquire into the juror's perspective on the accuracy of the media. Understanding the types of media, the specific sources (particularly media sources in this jurisdiction) that a juror accesses, the frequency of that access, and juror attitudes toward the media will ensure a more accurate and comprehensive assessment of a potential juror's exposure to biased media accounts and the effect of that exposure on the juror.

D15. Check to indicate about how many media reports (from television, cable, newspaper, on-line, social media, radio or magazine) have you seen or heard about this case (check one):

___ None ___ less than 10 ___ 10 - 25 ___ 25 - 50 ___ 50 100 ___ More than 100

Justification: Question D15 is needed, in addition to Joint Questionnaire # 110, because it provides an objective basis for assessing the extent of each person's media exposure to this case, beyond vague and subjective assessments such as "very closely" or "somewhat closely."

D16. What television shows do you watch on a regular basis? Specifically, what are your favorite television programs?

____

____

D17. How many hours a day do you spend watching television?______________________

Justification: Questions D16 and D17 allow a potential juror to provide more expansive information on the types of media he or she accesses and the intensity of the exposure to that media. Knowing which television shows a potential juror prefers provides insight into how that person may approach the evidence in this case.

Case Questions

D18. What is your personal opinion of former Governor Robert F "Bob" McDonnell? (choose one):

_____Very favorable _____Favorable ____Mixed Opinion

_____Unfavorable _____ Very unfavorable _____ No opinion

a. Briefly explain: ____

____

b. Would your personal opinion of former Governor Robert F "Bob" McDonnell have any impact on your ability to fairly judge the evidence and testimony in this case?
_____ Yes _____ No _____ Maybe/unsure

D19. What is your personal opinion of former First Lady Maureen G. McDonnell? (choose one):

_____Very favorable _____Favorable ____Mixed Opinion

_____Unfavorable _____ Very unfavorable _____ No opinion

a. Briefly explain: ____

____

b. Would your personal opinion of former First Lady Maureen G. McDonnell have any impact on your ability to fairly judge the evidence and testimony in this case?
_____ Yes _____ No _____ Maybe/unsure

D20. Do you approve or disapprove of the way former Governor Robert F "Bob" McDonnell handled his job as Governor of the Commonwealth of Virginia?

_____Mainly approve _____ Mainly disapprove _____Neither _____ Both

D21. Are there any positions on social or political issues attributed to former Governor Robert F "Bob" McDonnell with which you strongly disagree? ______Yes ______ No

a. If yes, please explain:

____

____

Justification: Questions D18 through D21 directly address whether a person has a potentially impermissible pre-existing bias against Robert F. McDonnell or Maureen G. McDonnell. This is obviously important in a case involving the former Governor and First Lady of Virginia, about whom nearly every juror will have some knowledge and opinions. This is especially true because the jury pool will be selected from among Virginia voters, who are particularly likely to have pre-existing opinions about the State's elected officials. Moreover, Mr. McDonnell took high profile positions on a variety of hotly contested political issues during his term as Governor, and any of those positions could have influenced potential jurors' views of Mr. and Mrs. McDonnell.

D22. Do you or any member of your immediate family or close personal friend know, or have you or they ever had any connection with any of the following individuals or entities:

Star Scientific, Inc	______ Yes	______No
Rock Creek Pharmaceuticals, Inc.	______ Yes	______No
Star Scientific CEO Jonnie R Williams	______ Yes	______No
Roskamp Institute	______ Yes	______No
Seasonings Fine Catering & Event Planning	______ Yes	______No
Chef Todd Schneider	______ Yes	______No

a. If yes, please explain your knowledge or connection with each:

____

____

____

Justification: Question D22 solicits information about prior connections to entities that play a significant role in this case. If a juror has a connection with any of the above entities, particularly given the substantial local media coverage of them, that is a potential source of impermissible bias.

D23. Have you or any member of your family or household expressed any opinion about Virginia laws regarding the issue of limits and reporting requirements for gifts given to elected state officials ("gift law")? ______ Yes ______ No

a. If Yes, please describe:

____

____

____

____

D24. Have you ever formed or expressed any opinion about the gift laws of the Commonwealth of Virginia? ______Yes ______No _____ Don't know

a. If yes, please explain:

____

____

D25. At the time of the events in this case, any elected politician in the Commonwealth of Virginia was permitted by law to accept gifts of any amount so long as he or she reported the gifts on the annual Statement of Economic Interest (SOEI) form in accordance with the instructions on the form. Do you have any strong reaction or opinion about that law? _____Yes _____No

a. If so, what is it?

____

____

D26. At any time, have you ever formed or expressed any opinion about this case, or any of the people involved? ______Yes ______No

a. If yes, what was that opinion or opinions?

____

____

D27. Have you formed any opinion about the truth or falsity of the charges filed against former Governor Robert F "Bob" McDonnell? ______Yes ____No _____ Maybe

D28. Based on what you have read, seen or heard expressed about the case, the charges, or the individuals involved, indicate which of the following best describes your current belief about whether former Governor Robert F "Bob" McDonnell is guilty or not guilty of these charges (check one):

_____ Definitely guilty _____ Probably guilty _____ Not sure

_____Probably not guilty _____ Definitely not guilty _____ No opinion

D29. Will you be able to presume the defendant former Governor Robert F "Bob" McDonnell is innocent of these charges and to require the Government to prove his guilt beyond a reasonable doubt, OR would you require Mr. McDonnell to present evidence or proof of his innocence in order to convince you that he is not guilty of these charges? (check one):

_____ I would presume the defendant is innocent and would require the Government to prove his guilt beyond a reasonable doubt.

_____ I would require the defense to present evidence or proof of the defendant's innocence.

_____ Not sure

D30. Have you formed any opinion about the truth or falsity of the charges filed against former First Lady Maureen G. McDonnell? ______Yes ____No _____ Maybe

D31. Based on what you have read, seen or heard expressed about the case, the charges, or the individuals involved, indicate which of the following best describes your current belief about whether former First Lady Maureen G. McDonnell is guilty or not guilty of these charges (check one):

_____ Definitely guilty _____ Probably guilty _____ Not sure

_____Probably not guilty _____ Definitely not guilty _____ No opinion

D32. Will you be able to presume former first Lady Maureen G. McDonnell is innocent of these charges and to require the Government to prove her guilt beyond a reasonable doubt, OR would you require the defense to present evidence or proof of her innocence in order to convince you that she is not guilty of these charges? (check one):

_____ I would presume the defendant is innocent and would require the Government to prove her guilt beyond a reasonable doubt.

_____ I would require the defense to present evidence or proof of the defendant's innocence.

_____ Not sure

__Justification__: Questions D23 through D32 comprehensively address whether a potential juror has any pre-existing and potentially impermissible biases, opinions, or conclusions about either Mr. or Mrs. McDonnell, the issues, and the facts in the case. These questions are particularly important given that most jurors are likely to have had some exposure through the widespread negative media coverage. It is essential that the parties and the Court know whether each juror has made up his or her mind about Mr. or Mrs. McDonnell as a result of the media coverage. These questions also address important burden-of-proof issues.

D33. Which of the following best describes how active you are politically? (check one):

_____ Very active _____ Active _____Occasionally involved _____ Rarely/never involved

__Justification__: Question D33 elicits information about the intensity of a person's political involvement. It is a necessary corollary to Joint Questionnaire # 83, which simply identifies the type of political activities a potential juror may have participated in. This is important information because a juror who is more intensely involved in political activities is more likely to have pre-existing opinions about Mr. and Mrs. McDonnell.

D34. How concerned are you about the honesty and ethics of politicians?

____

____

D35. How would you rate the honesty and ethics of most public officials?

_____ Very high _____High _____Average _____ Low _____ Very low

D36. How would you rate the honesty and ethics of most public officials for the Commonwealth of Virginia?

_____ Very high _____High _____Average _____ Low _____ Very low _____Not sure

D37. Are you especially concerned with corruption in American politics, or in the Commonwealth of Virginia? ______Yes ____No

a. If yes, please explain:

____

____

Justification: Questions D34 through D37 are important because many citizens have very negative opinions about politicians generally and may have broadly formed views about the ethical standards of public officials that could bias them in this case. It is important to determine whether a potential juror has a pre-existing bias against Robert F. McDonnell simply because he is a politician.

D38. How would you rate the honesty and ethical standards of former Governor Robert F "Bob" McDonnell?

_____ Very high _____High _____Average _____ Low _____ Very low _____ Not sure

Justification: Question D38 addresses whether a potential juror has a pre-existing and potentially impermissible bias, opinion, or conclusion about Mr. McDonnell's character and standards as a result of his public position and media coverage of this case.

D39. Do you believe that elected public officials should be held to a higher standard of personal and moral conduct than the average citizen? _____Yes _____No

a. If yes, please explain:

____

____

D40. Should a defendant who is a lawyer or had legal training be held to a different legal or ethical standard than any other defendant? Yes _____ No _____ Unsure _____

a. Please explain:

____

____

Justification: Questions D39 and D40 address whether a juror may impermissibly hold Robert F. McDonnell to a different standard than another similarly situated defendant, simply due to his prior role as a public official or the fact that he is an attorney.

D41. In choosing between two courses of action, do you believe it is more important for a public official to follow the letter of the law, or to follow the spirit of the law?

_____ Follow the letter of the law _____ Follow the spirit of the law _____ Not sure

a. Please explain:

____

____

Justification: Question D41 is intended to elicit important information about how a potential juror might apply the Court's instructions to the evidence presented at trial.

D42. If you have served on a grand jury, did you ever vote against returning an indictment?

______Yes ______No

D43. If you served on a jury and the jury reached a verdict, what was the verdict?

____

Justification: Questions D42 and D43 should be included as subparts to Joint Questionnaire # 46 in order to fully capture a person's prior experience as a juror, including whether that juror has a tendency to agree with the Government's position. Further, with respect to jurors in federal cases, the Government has unilateral access to records about indictments and verdicts.

D44. What opinions do you hold about juries and the jury system?

____

____

Justification: Question D44 should be included because it is important to know whether potential jurors hold strong opinions about the jury system or would be likely to disregard the Court's instructions.

D45. Do you have any plans to go to law school or to study law?

______Yes ______No

a. If yes, please explain:

____

____

D46. Do you have any plans to go into law enforcement or to study police science or criminal justice? _____Yes _____No

a. If yes, please explain:

____

____

Justification: Questions D45 and D46 elicit information not gained in Joint Questionnaire # 31, which only covers past experiences.

D47. Compared to other witnesses, do you believe that the testimony of a police officer or law enforcement officer is (check one):

_____ Always believable _____ More believable _____ Equally believable

_____ Less believable _____ Not believable at all _____ No opinion

D48. Do you have any opinions about the government's use of witnesses who claim they participated with the defendants in some of the crimes charged here and who have received immunity from prosecution from the government in exchange for their cooperation?

______Yes ______No _______Unsure

a Please explain:

____

____

Justification: Questions D47 and D48 elicit whether a potential juror may have an impermissible pre-existing bias or opinion regarding the testimony of a witness based solely on the witness's background.

D49. You must not find one defendant guilty simply by reason of your finding another defendant guilty. Would you have any difficulty following this rule? _____Yes _____ No

a. If yes, please explain:

____

____

Justification: Mr. and Mrs. McDonnell are being tried jointly over their objection. It is essential to know whether a juror would have any difficulty assessing the evidence against each defendant individually.

D50. If you are selected to serve as a juror on this case, would you be concerned about reactions to the verdict by:

Friends	______Yes	______No
Relatives	______Yes	______No
Co-workers	______Yes	______No
Neighbors	______Yes	______No
The media	______Yes	______No
People in this community	______Yes	______No

a. If yes, what kind of concern(s) do you have? Please explain:

____

____

Justification: Question D50 is important because of the high-profile nature of this case and possible juror perception that they are under substantial public pressure to reach a certain verdict.

Dated: May 30, 2014

Respectfully submitted,

/s/ Jonathan A. Berry

Henry W Asbill (pro hac vice)
Ryan D. Newman (pro hac vice)
Owen T Conroy (pro hac vice)
Jonathan A. Berry (VSB No. 81864)
JONES DAY
51 Louisiana Avenue, N.W
Washington, DC 20001
Telephone: (202) 879-3939
Facsimile: (202) 626-1700

John L. Brownlee (VSB No. 37358)
Timothy J. Taylor (VSB No. 84529)
HOLLAND & KNIGHT LLP
800 17th Street N.W
Suite 1100
Washington, DC 20006
Telephone: (202) 828-1854
Facsimile: (202) 955-5564

Counsel for Robert F McDonnell

Government's Proposed Additions to Jury Questionnaire

United States v. Robert F McDonnell and Maureen G. McDonnell, No 3:14cr12

G-A. Would you be able to put to one side everything you have seen, read, or heard about this case, not consider that information at all as a juror, and decide the case fairly and impartially based solely on the evidence presented and the Court's instructions on the law?

[ ] Yes [ ] No

(a) If no, please explain: ______________________________

____

____

____

Rationale: This is a standard question that the Government believes the Court should ask of all prospective jurors in order to ensure that the individual does not feel that other information on the questionnaire hinders his or her ability to render a fair and impartial verdict. Indeed, the Government proposed this question nearly verbatim from the same question asked in United States v. Jefferson. See No. 1:07cr209, Docket No. 421-1 (E.D. Va. June 3, 2009). To the extent the parties or the Court have questions or concerns about a juror's affirmative response to this question, the Court can follow up if necessary at the time of jury selection.

Placement: The Government requests that this question be inserted after Question 129 in the joint questionnaire.

G-B. Although a jury must find proof beyond a reasonable doubt to convict a defendant, it need not find proof beyond all possible doubt. That means that the government must remove from your mind any "reasonable" doubt that a defendant committed the alleged crime. However, the government is not required to remove all possible doubt or prove its case to an absolute certainty before you can convict the defendant. Would you have any difficulty following this rule?

[ ] Yes [ ] No [ ] Unsure

(a) If yes or unsure, please explain: ______________________________

____

____

G-C. The law makes no distinction between direct and circumstantial evidence. That means that the government may rely on circumstantial evidence and argue inferences based on that circumstantial evidence about the meaning of particular facts, such as what a person's intent may have been. For example, to prove an agreement between two or more people, the government need not show a document or present a recording; it may rely on inferences from a course of conduct over time. Would you have any difficulty following this rule?

[ ] Yes [ ] No [ ] Unsure

(a) If yes or unsure, please explain: ______________________________

____

____

Rationale: The Government requests inclusion of these two questions, which are similar in nature to Questions 87 through 92 in the joint questionnaire, in order to determine whether prospective jurors would impose a higher standard of proof or more stringent rules of proof than the law imposes on the Government. The Government agreed with the defendants' similar request to include Questions 88 (about Fifth Amendment privileges) or 90 (about joint defendants), and the Government requests these questions for the same reason.

Placement: The Government requests that these questions be inserted after Question 89 in the joint questionnaire.

G-D. What newspaper(s), including tabloids, do you most often read? (Both print and online)

____

____

____

Rationale: The Government requests inclusion of this question as a corollary to Questions 60 and 61 in the joint questionnaire. The Government's understanding of the defendants' objection to this question is that the defendants prefer a question that lists out selected newspapers rather than asking jurors to list those that they most often read. The Government requests inclusion of this question both because it shortens the questionnaire and because current trends in people's consumption of newspaper media necessarily renders any list of specific newspapers underinclusive and unhelpful.

Placement: The Government requests that this question be inserted after Question 61 in the combined questionnaire.

G-E. How much have you heard about this case?
[ ] A lot [ ] Some [ ] Very little

Rationale: The Government requests inclusion of this question as a corollary to Question 110, which asks about how closely prospective jurors have followed news about this case. The Government's understanding of the defendants' objection to this question is that the defendants prefer a question that asks prospective jurors to attempt to quantify the number of news articles to which they have been exposed. Because any categorization by number of stories is inherently arbitrary and is not an accurate gauge of any potential partiality, the Government instead requests this question.

Placement: The Government requests that this question be inserted after Question 109 in the joint questionnaire.

G-F Based on what you have read, heard, seen, and/or overheard in conversations, do you feel that the alleged activities in this case are similar to what other Virginia politicians have done in the past and, therefore, the defendants should not be charged with any crimes?

[ ] Yes [ ] No [ ] Unsure

(a) If yes or unsure, please explain: ____

____

____

____

Rationale: The Government requests inclusion of this question as a corollary to Questions 112 and 113 in the joint questionnaire. Those questions ask about prospective jurors' opinions about the defendants' respective guilt or innocence based on their media consumption, which the Government believes is an appropriate gauge of whether a prospective juror's media consumption may be a pathway to a strike for cause. Similarly, given the defendants' attempts in publicly filed pleadings to compare the allegations in this case to the conduct of other, uncharged politicians—conduct that will not be relevant at trial—the Government requests inclusion of this question to determine whether any prospective juror may decide the case based on information not presented at trial.

Placement: The Government requests that this question be inserted after Question 113 in the joint questionnaire.

G-G. Do you believe that the Department of Justice sometimes brings charges against high ranking elected officials that are politically motivated and not warranted by the nature of the facts of the case?

[ ] Yes [ ] No [ ] Unsure

(a) If yes or unsure, please give examples of politically motivated cases: _________

____

____

Rationale: The Government requests inclusion of this question as a follow-up to Question 93 in the joint questionnaire. Given the defendants' allegations in publicly filed pleadings that this prosecution is politically motivated—an allegation that the Government disputes but that is nonetheless wholly irrelevant at trial—the Government requests inclusion of this question to determine whether any prospective juror may decide the case based on information not presented at trial.

Placement: The Government requests that this question be inserted after Question 93 in the joint questionnaire.

G-H. How important do you feel it is to be truthful in the financial information provided on bank loan applications?

[ ] Very important [ ] Somewhat important [ ] Not at all important

Rationale: The Government requests inclusion of this question as a follow-up to Question 45 in the joint questionnaire, which asks whether prospective jurors have completed applications for home mortgage or refinancing. Given that the defendants are charged with false statements in such documents in Counts 12 and 13, this question will help determine whether any juror is likely to nullify the Court's legal instructions.

Placement: The Government requests that this question be inserted after Question 45 in the joint questionnaire.

General Opinions and Beliefs about the Criminal Justice System – after Q86

G-I. How important do you feel it is for elected officials to accurately disclose money and gifts they receive while in office?
[ ] Very important [ ] Somewhat important [ ] Not at all important

G-J. Do you believe that the current Federal laws concerning elected officials accepting gifts and/or money in exchange for political favors?
[ ] Do not go far enough [ ] Are about right [ ] Go too far

Rationale: The Government requests inclusion of these questions as follow-ups to Questions 71 through 86 in the joint questionnaire, which ask about prospective jurors' political involvement generally. Questions 85 and 86 ask about prospective jurors' potential knowledge, training, or experience about government ethics and reporting obligations, and these modest, narrow follow-up questions inquire about prospective jurors who may be likely to nullify the Court's legal instructions.

Placement: The Government requests that these questions be inserted after Question 86 in the joint questionnaire.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
FOR THE EASTERN DISTRICT OF VIRGINIA
RICHMOND DIVISION

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,)
)
v.) CRIMINAL NO. 3:14-CR-00012
)
ROBERT F. MCDONNELL) JUDGE JAMES R. SPENCER
MAUREEN G. MCDONNELL)

DEFENDANT ROBERT F. MCDONNELL'S OBJECTIONS TO GOVERNMENT'S PROPOSED ADDITIONS TO JUROR QUESTIONNAIRE

Pursuant to the Court's May 20, 2014 Order (ECF No. 180), Robert F McDonnell, through his attorneys, hereby objects to the following jury questionnaire additions proposed by the Government.

Question G-A: Would you be able to put to one side everything you have seen, read, or heard about this case, not consider that information at all as a juror, and decide the case fairly and impartially based solely on the evidence presented and the Court's instructions on the law?

[ ] Yes [ ] No

(a) If no, please explain: ____________________

Objection: This question is inappropriate for inclusion in a written questionnaire. It should be asked orally after full exploration of all the jurors' written and verbal answers about exposure to prejudicial publicity. Asking this question in court will allow the Court, counsel, and parties to see and hear the jurors' responses and assess demeanor as well as content.

Question G-B: Although a jury must find proof beyond a reasonable doubt to convict a defendant, it need not find proof beyond all possible doubt. That means that the government must remove from your mind any "reasonable" doubt that a defendant committed the alleged crime. However, the government is not required to remove all possible doubt or prove its case to an absolute certainty before you can convict the defendant. Would you have any difficulty following this rule?

[ ] Yes [ ] No [ ] Unsure

(a) If yes or unsure, please explain: ______________________

Question G-C: The law makes no distinction between direct and circumstantial evidence. That means that the government may rely on circumstantial evidence and argue inferences based on that circumstantial evidence about the meaning of particular facts, such as what a person's intent may have been. For example, to prove an agreement between two or more people, the government need not show a document or present a recording; it may rely on inferences from a course of conduct over time. Would you have any difficulty following this rule?

[ ] Yes [ ] No [ ] Unsure

(a) If yes or unsure, please explain: _____

Objection: Both questions G-B and G-C are one-sided, incomplete, and are designed factually to promote the Government's closing arguments in a context that prematurely predicts what the Court's actual jury instructions may be. Question G-B defines what reasonable doubt is not, without explaining what reasonable doubt is. Question G-C contains the Government's theory of the case about what constitutes an official act – i.e., a "course of conduct over time." It too prematurely predicts the Court's jury instructions and gives a one-sided example in an attempt to indoctrinate the jury.

Question G-D: What newspaper(s), including tabloids, do you most often read? (Both print and online)

Objection: Question D13 from the Defense's additional proposed questions should be used instead of Question G-D because D13 lists the specific newspapers that have carried particularly negative stories about the defendants on a frequent basis. A very modest shortening of the questionnaire is not a basis for failing to elicit the detail that would necessarily have to be explored orally during voir dire. By failing to elicit that detail, the answer to this question will provide no useful information. Further, the Government cites no empirical support for its statement about "current trends in people's consumption of newspaper media," much less that supposed "trends" render the list in D13 "unhelpful." It is also essential to know how often the potential jurors have been exposed to the newspapers that have most heavily covered this case, and D13 asks that follow-up question. Moreover, Question D13 includes space for a juror to list "other" Virginia and national newspapers he or she reads, which addresses the Government's concerns.

Question G-E: How much have you heard about this case?

[ ] A lot [ ] Some [ ] Very little

Objection: Question D15 from the Defense's additional proposed questions should be used instead of Question G-E, which is ambiguous and subjective. There is nothing arbitrary about asking jurors for a numerical estimate of the number of media reports they have heard or read about this case. That is a much more accurate gauge of interest and potential bias than the vague terms the government proposes. Moreover, Question G-E would necessitate further detailed exploration that will quantify the amount of each juror's exposure. Finally, quantifying the exposure to certain publications is in itself telling about whether jurors could put aside any pre-existing bias.

Question G-F: Based on what you have read, heard, seen, and/or overheard in conversations, do you feel that the alleged activities in this case are similar to what other Virginia politicians have done in the past and, therefore, the defendants should not be charged with any crimes?

[ ] Yes [ ] No [ ] Unsure

(a) If yes or unsure, please explain: _______

Objection: This question is too complicated and misstates the facts of the case and the defense theories. It is also a compound question, which makes it unlikely that the parties will obtain any useful responses. If a juror answers "yes," it is not clear if that means that he or she thinks the alleged activities are similar to what other Virginia politicians have done, or that the defendants should not be charged, or both. This question also confusingly treats the defendants as one entity who collectively "should" or "should not" have been charged, when jurors must evaluate the charges against each defendant separately.

Question G-G: Do you believe that the Department of Justice sometimes brings charges against high ranking elected officials that are politically motivated and not warranted by the nature of the facts of the case?

[ ] Yes [ ] No [ ] Unsure

(a) If yes or unsure, please give examples of politically motivated cases: ______

Objection: This question is ambiguous. We do not know what "the nature of the facts of the case" means. Moreover, asking jurors to provide "examples of [other] politically motivated cases" provides no useful information about a juror's potential bias in this case.

Question G-H: How important do you feel it is to be truthful in the financial information provided on bank loan applications?

[ ] Very important [ ] Somewhat important [ ] Not at all important

Objection: This question is highly prejudicial to the defense. It will not provide any useful information, because all potential jurors will almost certainly affirm that it is important to be truthful on bank loan applications. The only people who will answer this question "somewhat" or "not at all" will be individuals who want to avoid serving on the jury. As a result, this question serves only to bias jurors against the defendants and will unfairly preview the Government's case for the jurors.

Question G-I: How important do you feel it is for elected officials to accurately disclose money and gifts they receive while in office?

[ ] Very important [ ] Somewhat important [ ] Not at all important

Objection: This question is highly prejudicial to the defense. It will not provide any useful information, because all potential jurors will almost certainly affirm that it is important for elected officials to accurately disclose money and gifts. Rather, this question serves only to bias jurors against the defendants and will unfairly preview the Government's case for the jurors.

Question G-J: Do you believe that the current Federal laws concerning elected officials accepting gifts and/or money in exchange for political favors?

[ ] Do not go far enough [ ] Are about right [ ] Go too far

Objection: This question applies to a range of circumstances not relevant here. It is also ambiguous and confusing because it fails to distinguish between Federal and state ethics laws and Federal and state criminal laws. The question is also potentially misleading. Most jurors are unlikely to know much about Federal laws concerning gifts and money, and those jurors have no option but to pick one of the Government's set choices. It therefore provides little, if any, useful additional information, and given the limited available responses, the question could potentially distort what the prospective jurors actually think on the subject of Federal policy. For example, a prospective juror who believes that Federal anti-corruption laws go too far in some respects but not far enough in others has no way to accurately reflect that view based on the available responses.

Dated: June 2, 2014

Respectfully submitted,

/s/ Jonathan A. Berry
Henry W Asbill (pro hac vice)
Ryan D. Newman (pro hac vice)
Owen T. Conroy (pro hac vice)
Jonathan A. Berry (VSB No. 81864)
JONES DAY
51 Louisiana Avenue, N.W
Washington, DC 20001
Telephone: (202) 879-3939
Facsimile: (202) 626-1700

John L. Brownlee (VSB No. 37358)
Timothy J. Taylor (VSB No. 84529)
HOLLAND & KNIGHT LLP
800 17th Street N.W
Suite 1100
Washington, DC 20006
Telephone: (202) 828-1854
Facsimile: (202) 955-5564

Counsel for Robert F. McDonnell

IN THE UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
FOR THE EASTERN DISTRICT OF VIRGINIA
Richmond Division

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA)
)
v.)
) No. 3:14cr12-JRS
ROBERT F MCDONNELL and)
MAUREEN G. MCDONNELL,)
Defendants.)

GOVERNMENT'S OBJECTIONS TO DEFENDANTS' PROPOSED ADDITIONS TO JURY QUESTIONNAIRE

The United States of America, by undersigned counsel, respectfully submits its objections to the defendants' proposed additions to the joint jury questionnaire. As a threshold matter, the Government objects to the defendants' proposed additions as generally invasive and unnecessary for selecting a fair and impartial jury The parties' negotiations produced a joint questionnaire that spanned 36 pages and 139 questions. The Government proposed 10 additional questions. Those include four that require no follow-up explanation (G-E, G-H, G-I, and G-J), two that are narrower versions of questions the defendants have proposed (G-D and G-E), two that address prospective jurors' ability to follow standard legal principles (G-B and G-C), one that will significantly reduce the amount of in-court voir dire that is necessary (G-A), and two questions that seek to identify jurors who may have been exposed to public defense filings that are immaterial to the guilt or innocence phase in this case (G-G and G-H).

The defendants, by contrast, have submitted 50 additional questions, including many that are redundant and others that further invade the privacy of prospective jurors for reasons that the defendants do not even attempt to argue could lead to a strike for cause. Accordingly, the Court should reject the defendants' proposed additional questions. A question-by-question explanation of the Government's objections follows.

Government's Specific Objection Rationales for Proposed Defense Additions

D1 The birthplace of a prospective juror is wholly irrelevant to that individual's ability to serve fairly and impartially, and there is no constitutional right to a cross-section of birthplaces in a jury venire.

D2. A prospective juror's race and ethnicity is legally irrelevant on an individual level. To the extent the Court's standard inquiry of prospective jurors asks jurors a similar question to ensure a fair cross-section of the community is represented in the venire with respect to those areas, the Government defers to the Court on the appropriate manner in which to do so. The defendants' proposed question, however, is underinclusive, and their inclusion of the "[p]refer not to answer" option defeats the claimed rationale of ensuring that the venire represents a fair cross-section of the population. Moreover, the defendants' alternative argument in support of this question that "there have been several 'hot button' political issues involving race that have divided Virginia citizens during Mr. McDonnell's tenure as Governor" raises serious questions about the potential use of impermissibly race-based peremptory challenges.

D3. A prospective juror's religious preference is irrelevant to that person's ability to serve fairly and impartially. To the extent aspects of a person's religious beliefs may even arguably affect that person's ability to serve as a juror in this case, any such potential bias is more than adequately addressed by the narrower questions in the proposed joint questionnaire.

D4. The frequency of a prospective juror's religious worship is not relevant to that person's ability to serve fairly and impartially, and there is no constitutional right to a cross-section of frequency of religious worship in a jury venire.

D5. A prospective juror's income is irrelevant to that person's ability to serve fairly and impartially. In addition, the optional nature of the defendants' proposed question defeats their claimed rationale of asking this question to ensure a fair cross-section of the population. In any event, there is no constitutional right to a cross-section of incomes in a jury venire.

D6. This question is irrelevant, and the defendants' claimed rationale—essentially, that it provides information about a prospective juror's housing situation (for no apparent purpose)—is insufficient to warrant its additional invasion of prospective jurors' privacy.

D7. This question is unnecessarily overbroad. It would in theory require any juror who has had any interaction with any state agency at any time to disclose that interaction (presumably including any request for a permit, or arguably, for a driver's license). Questions 40 through 44 already ask a number of questions about more specific aspects of a prospective juror's interactions with state government—including, importantly, Question 41's specific focus on the entities that are most at issue in this case. Moreover, the defendants' proposed rationale ignores Question 59, which asks about any legal actions or disputes with state agencies; Questions 79–81, which ask about seeking assistance from or lobbying state government; and Question 108, which asks about any employment with the federal government, including as a contractor, by a prospective juror or family member.

D8. This question is one-sided and argumentative in that it focuses solely on a prospective juror's relationship to the federal government as a basis for asking whether a juror would favor the Government. The more appropriate question to address any such concern is the Government's proposed G-A, which asks more generally about whether a juror could put to one side any prior experience and decide the case solely on the basis of the facts and the Court's instructions. Moreover, the Government objects to the characterization of it as "the complainant" in a criminal case as misleading because it was the grand jury that charged the defendants.

D9 It is difficult to imagine how a prospective juror's "hobbies, spare time activities, or special interests"—particularly those not otherwise reflected in the existing 139-question joint questionnaire—could possibly be relevant to an ability to serve fairly and impartially Such areas are already adequately addressed by Question 35's inquiry into organizational membership and Questions 71–86's inquiries into political involvement.

D10. A citizen should not be required to describe herself or himself in ten words or less as a precondition to jury service.

D11. See objection to D10 above. The defendants' proposed list of adjectives is facially irrelevant to prospective jurors' ability to serve fairly and impartially, and many of the defendants' proposed adjectives (including "naïve," "judgmental," "impulsive," "religious," "pro-government," and "compulsive") are invasive, otherwise addressed elsewhere in the joint questionnaire, or highly unlikely to lead to accurate self-reporting. There is no constitutional right to a "variety of perspectives," to the extent D10 even aids such an effort, in a jury venire.

D12. This question is unnecessary, and prospective jurors' media consumption habits are adequately addressed by Questions 60–70 in the joint questionnaire.

D13. The defendants' proposed list of sources is duplicative of many sources already listed in the joint questionnaire (e.g., Questions 60–62), and the defendants' proposed list is underinclusive. The Government's proposed addition of G-D more narrowly and accurately seeks this same information.

D14. The joint questionnaire already asks whether a prospective juror has formed an opinion as to either defendant's guilt or innocence based on prior media consumption. See Questions 112–13. This additional question about general views of the news media is unnecessary.

D15. The defendants' proposal to ask jurors to attempt to quantify the number of media reports they have seen or heard unlikely to lead to meaningful information because it conflates the number of stories to which a person has been exposed with whether that person has closely followed media reports or is otherwise likely to have formed an opinion about the defendants' guilt or innocence. The Government instead proposes that the Court include G-E for the reasons stated in the Government's rationale for that question.

D16. This question is unduly invasive. A prospective juror should not be required to disclose her or his favorite television shows as a precondition to jury service. The joint questionnaire (Question 63) already asks about particular types of programs that might arguably bear some relevance on the issues in this case, and whether a prospective juror prefers one sitcom over another is irrelevant.

D17 The number of hours a day a prospective juror watches television is irrelevant to potential jury service.

D18. This question is overbroad, and to the extent it bears any arguable relevance to prospective jurors' impartiality, it is duplicative of Questions 95–104, 106–07, and 112–13, which collectively and adequately address jurors' prior exposure to the defendants and any effect of that exposure on potential jury service. The mere fact that a prospective juror may have an opinion about his or her former governor should not affect that juror's ability to serve if it does not rise to the level of requiring an answer to one of the other questions on the joint questionnaire. The parties should not attempt to or be able to handpick jurors on the basis of the answer to this question. The more appropriate inquiry is whether a juror can set aside any preexisting opinions about this case and decide it based solely on the evidence and the Court's legal instructions. As such, the Government's proposed G-A should be asked instead.

D19. See objection to D18 above.

D20. See objection to D18 above. A prospective juror's general opinion of Mr. McDonnell's job performance is irrelevant to jury service if that opinion does not otherwise trigger an answer to one of the myriad other questions in the joint questionnaire. The Government understands and acknowledges that the jury will inevitably have a mix of jurors who will set aside such opinions and decide the case based on the evidence presented at trial. Proposed Government Question G-A is the appropriate and more focused inquiry

D21. See objections to D18 and D20 above. A prospective juror's disagreement (or agreement) with one of Mr. McDonnell's policy positions on issues irrelevant to this case should not be a pathway for either party to strike a juror for cause. The joint questionnaire already asks about political involvement that could be sufficiently extensive to lead to concerns about partiality, but the juror questionnaire should not endorse the view that mere agreement or disagreement with particular policy positions is a necessary inquiry for voir dire.

D22. This question is already adequately addressed by Question 128, which asks about potential witnesses, and Questions 122–23, which ask about Star Scientific. Any further inquiry is unnecessary.

D23. This question is overbroad insofar as it asks for any opinion that a prospective juror (or even a household or family member of a prospective juror) has ever expressed about Virginia gift laws that are irrelevant to the federal laws that apply to this case. To the extent such prior knowledge is an appropriate area of inquiry, it is already adequately addressed by Questions 43–44, 50, and 85–86 in the joint questionnaire.

D24. See objection to D23 above.

D25. This question is misleading and legally inaccurate. The Government disagrees that at the time of the events in this case, any elected Virginia politician "was permitted by law to accept gifts of any amount so long as he or she reported the gifts on the annual Statement of Economic Interest (SOEI) form in accordance with the instructions on the form." While such conduct may have avoided a violation of state reporting requirements, acceptance of a thing of value in exchange for official actions is a bribe whether that thing of value doubles as a gift or not, and Virginia law does not provide a loophole in federal bribery laws that apply to state officials.

D26. This question is overbroad and otherwise adequately addressed by Questions 112–113 (which ask about preexisting opinions on the defendants' guilt or innocence), 114 (which asks about jurors who have strong enough opinions about this case to have expressed them to others), and 128 (which asks about preexisting opinions about witnesses' credibility) in the joint questionnaire.

D27 This question is duplicative of Question 112 in the joint questionnaire and is unfair to prospective jurors in its failure to ask jurors to explain.

D28. See objection to D27 above.

D29 This question is duplicative Questions 89 and 118–121 in the joint questionnaire and is unfair to prospective jurors in its failure to ask jurors to explain.

D30. See objection to D27 above.

D31. See objection to D27 above.

D32. See objection to D29 above.

D33. This question is unnecessary in light of Questions 71–86 in the joint questionnaire, which already adequately inquire about the frequency and intensity of prospective jurors' political involvement.

D34. This question is overbroad and is otherwise adequately addressed by Question 82 in the joint questionnaire, which asks about prospective jurors' opinions about elected public officials in the Commonwealth of Virginia.

D35. See objection to D34 above.

D36. See objection to D34 above.

D37. See objection to D34 above.

D38. See objection to D18 above. Forcing prospective jurors to take a position on Mr. McDonnell's honesty and ethical standards before hearing the evidence in this trial is unnecessary. The appropriate inquiry, into preexisting opinions of guilt or innocence, is set forth in Questions 112–13 in the joint questionnaire.

D39. This question is overbroad and otherwise addressed by Questions 112–13 in the joint questionnaire. In addition, it is misleading insofar as the law does treat public officials to whom bribery laws apply differently from private citizens to whom those laws do not necessarily apply.

D40. This question is unnecessary, will be addressed by the Court's jury instructions, and is misleading insofar as it suggests that a defendant's prior knowledge might be irrelevant to understanding that defendant's conduct (or, should a defendant choose to testify, that defendant's credibility). The question also conflates "legal" and "ethical" standards, and the only standard the jury will have to apply in this case is the legal one as explained by the Court.

D41 This question is unnecessary, and it is improper insofar as it suggests that following "the spirit of the law" is a defense where conduct violates the letter of the law.

D42. Whether a grand juror previously voted against returning an indictment is protected by Fed. R. Crim. P 6(e)'s secrecy provisions. Contrary to the defendants' assertions, the Government does not have access to records that reflect individual grand jurors votes or deliberations.

D43. The verdict reached by a juror in a prior case is not relevant to that individual's ability to serve fairly and impartially in a subsequent case.

D44. This question is unnecessary and otherwise adequately addressed by Questions 46(c)–(d) in the joint questionnaire, which already ask about whether prior jury service left a prospective juror disappointed, dissatisfied, or particularly wanting or not wanting to serve as a juror again. To the extent this question asks for opinions of prospective jurors who have not previously served on a trial or grand jury, it is unnecessary

D45. This question is unnecessarily overbroad. Future training or knowledge that a prospective juror does not yet have is not relevant.

D46. See objection to D45 above.

D47. This question is confusing insofar as it does not provide a point of comparison—in other words, it asks whether testimony of a police officer is "more believable" or "less believable" without providing explaining as compared to whom. The question is otherwise adequately addressed by Question 128 in the joint questionnaire, which asks about preexisting opinions of witness credibility, and the Government's proposed G-A, which asks about a prospective juror's ability to decide the case solely based on the evidence and the Court's instructions. Moreover, a specific question on law enforcement credibility is unnecessary when other questions already adequately explore prospective jurors connections to and thoughts about law enforcement. See United States v.

Lancaster, 96 F.3d 734, 742 (4th Cir. 1996). Here, Questions 31(j), 47(c), 49, 55–56, and 57(a) adequately explore such areas in the joint questionnaire.

D48. This question is duplicative of Question 92 in the joint questionnaire. To the extent it is different at all, it is argumentative and overbroad in asking for jurors' general opinions (as opposed to Question 92's focus on effect on a prospective juror's service in this case).

D49. This question is entirely duplicative of Question 90 in the joint questionnaire.

D50. This question is irrelevant and is otherwise adequately addressed by Questions 118–21 and 130–139 in the joint questionnaire. Specifically, Questions 118–21 specifically ask about reservations prospective jurors may have about voting based on the evidence presented, and Questions 137–39 ask for any other potential sources of concern in at least three different ways.

Respectfully submitted,

DANA J. BOENTE
United States Attorney

By: /s/
Ryan S. Faulconer
Michael S. Dry
Jessica D. Aber
Counsel for the United States
U.S. Attorney's Office
600 E. Main Street, Suite 1800
Richmond, VA 23219
Phone: 804-819-5400
Fax: 804-771-2316
Email: ryan.faulconer2@usdoj.gov
michael.s.dry@usdoj.gov
jessica.d.aber@usdoj.gov

JACK SMITH
Chief, Public Integrity Section
Criminal Division
U.S. Department of Justice

By: /s/
David V Harbach, II
Counsel for the United States
U.S. Department of Justice
Criminal Division
Public Integrity Section
1400 New York Ave., N.W., Ste 12100
Washington, D.C. 20005
Phone: 202-514-1412
Fax: 202-514-3003
Email: david.harbach@usdoj.gov

JURY QUESTIONNAIRE

This questionnaire is designed to obtain information from you for the purpose of assisting the Court in selecting a fair and impartial jury in the case of United States of America v. Robert F McDonnell and Maureen G. McDonnell. Its use will substantially shorten the jury selection process.

The purpose of these questions is to encourage your full expression and candor so that a fair and impartial jury may be selected to try the issues of this case. Your full written answers will save the parties, the Court, and yourself, a great deal of time. Do not discuss with anyone any question or answer you give on this questionnaire. You are expected to sign this questionnaire. Your answers will be considered statements under oath, and will only be used by the Court and counsel in selecting a jury in this case. As you know, juries are critical to our American system of justice and the Court is confident that you appreciate your duty as a citizen to serve as a juror if you are eligible. Your cooperation in completing and returning this questionnaire is a part of that duty.

Please write your assigned juror number at the top of each page. Answer every question carefully, truthfully and completely and do not leave any questions blank. Your responses should reflect your own personal knowledge, beliefs, or opinions. Please keep in mind that there are no right or wrong answers. You should answer with your true feelings, whatever they may be. Do not assume that any of your answers will qualify or disqualify you from serving on this or any other jury.

If you do not understand a question, please write "Do not understand" and the question will be explained to you during the later questioning process. If a question is not relevant to you, please write "N/A" to indicate that it is not applicable to you in the space provided. If you cannot answer a question because you do not know the answer, write "Do not know" in the space after the question. If your answers or explanations to any question will not fit completely in the space provided, please complete your answer on the pages provided at the end of the questionnaire. Be sure to include the question number that corresponds to your answer on the explanation sheets. Do not write on the back of any page.

If a question asks about your friends or family, you do not need to list the name if you do not want to; you can identify the person by relationship (spouse, son, neighbor, friend, etc.).

During another step in the jury selection process, the Judge will have an opportunity to follow up on these questions in court. At that time, you will be given an opportunity to explain or expand on any of your answers.

In addition, now that you are a prospective juror, you MUST follow the instructions listed below until you have been excused from further service in this case.

> DO NOT discuss this questionnaire or your answers with anyone, including family members, friends, co-workers, or other prospective members.

Juror Number: ___________

DO NOT read or listen to any media coverage of this case whether in the newspaper, on the television, on the Internet, on a blog, or on the radio.

DO NOT seek any related information on this case on the Internet or through search engines such as Google or Yahoo!

DO NOT discuss this case with anyone, including friends, family members, or other members of this jury panel, or allow anyone to discuss this case in your presence.

DO NOT let anyone, including friends, family members, court personnel, parties in this case, or persons involved in the case, talk to you about your views or any aspect of this case except officially in the courtroom.

The answers to these questions will be used by the court and the attorneys solely for the selection of the panel members in this case and for no other reason.

Please return the completed Questionnaire in the provided, postage-paid envelope within seven (7) days of receipt and no later than Friday, June 13, 2014.

I appreciate your time and attention to this important matter.

/s/
James R. Spencer
Senior U. S. District Judge

Eastern District of Virginia
Richmond Division

Juror Number: ____________

Preliminary Matters

1. The trial in this case will start July 28, 2014. The trial may last 5–6 weeks and could last longer or conclude sooner. Do you have any very serious personal, professional, or financial issues that would prevent you from being present in Court for the duration of the trial? In answering this question, you should know that it is unlawful for an employer to discharge, intimidate, or coerce any employee because of the employee's jury service.
[ ] Yes [ ] No

(a) If yes, please explain: ____
____
____
____

2. Are you able to read, write, and understand the English language?
[ ] Yes [ ] With difficulty [ ] No

3. Is English your native language?
[ ] Yes [ ] No

(a) If no, what is your first language? ____________________________

4. Do you have any significant problems with your hearing or eyesight?
[ ] Yes [ ] No

(a) If yes, please explain: ____
____

5. Do you suffer from any physical or mental condition(s) that would make it difficult for you to serve as a juror or pay close and careful attention to the evidence presented for extended periods of time?
[ ] Yes [ ] No [ ] Unsure

(a) If yes or unsure, please explain: ______________________________
____
____

6. Do you take any prescription medication that affects your thinking, attention, concentration, or might otherwise affect your service as a juror?
[ ] Yes [ ] No

(a) If yes, please state the name of the medication(s) and explain: ______________
____
____

Juror Number ____________

7 Are you currently a student?
[ ] Yes, full-time [ ] Yes, part-time [ ] No

(a) If yes, where do you attend school? ____________________

(b) If yes, will your class schedule in August interfere with your ability to serve as a juror in this trial?
[ ] Yes [ ] No

(c) If yes to #7(b) above, please explain: ____________________

8. Are you the sole or primary caretaker of a minor child, or an elderly or disabled family member or dependent whose care would interfere with your ability to serve as a juror in this trial?
[ ] Yes [ ] No

(a) If yes, please explain: ____________________

9 Do you have any personal, religious, philosophical or other beliefs that would make it difficult for you to sit in judgment of another person as a juror in a criminal case?
[ ] Yes [ ] No [ ] Unsure

(a) If yes or unsure, please explain: ____________________

10. Is there any other reason why you could not be present in court and give your full attention every day for this trial?
[ ] Yes [ ] No

(a) If yes, please explain: ____________________

11 This case will receive media attention. It is important that this case be decided solely on the evidence presented in the courtroom and not on the basis of information obtained outside the courtroom. As a result, the jury will be instructed not to read, watch, view, or listen to any news accounts of this trial whatsoever, not to conduct any internet searches related to this case, and not to talk to or to communicate with anyone about the case, including through the use of the internet or social media such as Twitter, Facebook, Skype, YouTube, or other modes of electronic communication, until the case is over. Would you find it difficult to obey such an instruction for any reason?

☐ Yes ☐ No ☐ Unsure

(a) If yes or unsure, please explain: ______________________________
____
____

Personal Background

12. Gender: ☐ Male ☐ Female

13. Age: ________

14. What is your current marital status?
   - ☐ Single
   - ☐ Married
   - ☐ Divorced
   - ☐ Separated
   - ☐ Widowed

15. How long have you lived in the Commonwealth of Virginia (total years)? __________

16. Do you have children?

☐ Yes ☐ No

17 Are you (check any and all that apply):
   - ☐ Self-employed
   - ☐ Employed full-time
   - ☐ Working part-time
   - ☐ A student
   - ☐ Unemployed
   - ☐ Retired
   - ☐ Homemaker
   - ☐ Disabled and unable to work

18. If you are currently employed in any capacity, either full-time, or part-time, please state:

(a) Occupation: ______________________________

(b) Employer: ______________________________

(c) Type of work: ______________________________

(d) Do you supervise others?
[ ] Yes [ ] No

(a) If yes, how many?_______

(e) Do you have any responsibility for hiring or firing?
[ ] Yes [ ] No

19. If you are not currently employed, please state:

(a) Your last employer: ____________________

(b) Your occupation: ____________________

(c) Your job responsibilities: ____________________
____

(d) Did you supervise others?
[ ] Yes [ ] No

If yes, how many? ____________________

(e) Did you have any responsibilities for hiring or firing?
[ ] Yes [ ] No

20. If you are married or currently share a household with someone who is employed in any capacity, either full-time, or part-time, please state the following:

(a) Occupation:____________________

(b) Employer:____________________

(c) Type of work:____________________

21. Do you now, or have you ever owned your own business?
[ ] Yes [ ] No

(a) If yes, what type of business? ____________________
____

Juror Number: ____________

22. Have you or any member of your immediate family or any close personal friend ever served as a corporate officer or member of the Board of Directors in any business or corporation?
☐ Yes ☐ No

(a) If yes, please explain: ____
____

23. Who makes the major financial decisions in your household? ________________

24. Check the highest level of education you completed:

(a)	Grade school or less	☐
(b)	Some high school	☐
(c)	High school graduate / GED	☐
(d)	Technical or vocational school	☐
(e)	Some college	☐
(f)	2-year college degree	☐
(g)	4-year college degree	☐
(h)	Some graduate work or study	☐
(i)	Master's degree	☐
(j)	Doctoral degree (or equivalent)	☐
(k)	Other	☐

If other, please explain: ____

25. If you had any educational training beyond high school, please list all degrees you have received and the area of study.

(a) Degree(s): ____
(b) Field(s) of study: ____
(c) Name of school(s): _______________________________________

26. Have you or any of your family members (e.g., parents, siblings, a spouse, or children) served in any branch of the Armed Forces?
☐ Yes ☐ No

(a) If yes, please list their relationship to you, branch, and highest rank:

Relationship	Branch	Highest Rank

27 Do you or your family members have any education, training or employment experience in any of the following fields:

		You	Family
(a)	Accounting, auditing, or bookkeeping	☐	☐
(b)	Banking	☐	☐
(c)	Loans/mortgage / refinance agreements	☐	☐
(d)	Business / business planning	☐	☐
(e)	Finance / financial planning	☐	☐
(f)	Psychology, psychiatry, or counseling	☐	☐
(g)	Medicine, nursing, healthcare, medical research, or pharmaceuticals	☐	☐
(h)	Nutrition or physical fitness	☐	☐
(i)	Law or paralegal training	☐	☐
(j)	Law enforcement / private investigations	☐	☐
(k)	Corrections (work in prisons/jails) or security guard / private security	☐	☐
(l)	Criminal justice or criminology	☐	☐
(m)	Social work	☐	☐
(n)	Political science or government	☐	☐
(o)	Political fundraising / campaign finance rules	☐	☐
(p)	Politics / elections / political consulting / lobbying	☐	☐
(q)	Ethics, philosophy, sociology, or English	☐	☐
(r)	Engineering	☐	☐
(s)	Computer programming / networking	☐	☐
(t)	Corporate or other compliance with federal, state, or local government regulations	☐	☐
(u)	Compliance with federal, state, or local election laws/regulations	☐	☐
(v)	Journalism / media communications / public relations	☐	☐
(w)	Grant applications / grant writing	☐	☐
(x)	Human resources	☐	☐
(y)	Forensic sciences	☐	☐
(z)	Religion, ministry, or pastoral care	☐	☐

28. Do you have any special certifications or licenses?

☐ Yes ☐ No

(a) If yes, please explain: ____

____

Juror Number: __________

29. If you are not an attorney, have you taken any law courses?
☐ Yes ☐ No

If so, indicate the following:

School	Date	Topic
(a)
(b)
(c)

30. Please list the organizations to which you or your spouse/partner belong or in which either of you participate, either now or in the recent past. (Include any civic, social, religious, charitable, volunteer, political, sporting, professional, business, union, fraternal and recreational groups, such as, but not limited to, Kiwanis, Rotary Club, Knights of Columbus, Veterans of Foreign Wars, American Legion, American Civil Liberties Union, National Rifle Association, League of Women Voters, the Innocence Project, the Virginia Public Access Project, Virginia Coalition for Open Government, or the Center for Public Integrity):

(a) Self: ____

(b) Spouse/Partner: ____

31. Have you ever held any office, title, or other leadership position in the organizations listed in the previous question?
☐ Yes ☐ No

(a) If yes, briefly describe your office or title, and dates held: ____________________

32. Have you taken (or do you take) dietary or nutritional supplements (excluding vitamins)? (Check all that apply)
☐ Yes, currently do so ☐ Yes, in the past ☐ No

If either "yes" to current use or "yes" to past use, what was the kind(s) of products involved:

Current / past	General product description
(a)
(b)
(c)

33. Have you or a family member or a close friend ever sold dietary or nutritional supplements?

	Who	When	General product description
(a)
(b)
(c)

34. Have you or any member of your family ever been employed by the state government of Virginia or any Virginia state government agency, whether as an employee, contractor, or otherwise?
[ ] Yes [ ] No

(a) If yes, please explain who, when, what the job was, and your reason for leaving:
____
____
____

35. Have you or any member of your immediate family ever been employed by or had any business relationship with the University of Virginia, Virginia Commonwealth University, VCU Massey Cancer Center, UVa Medical Center, Eastern Virginia School Medical School, the Virginia Department of Health, the Virginia Department of Human Resource Management, or the Virginia Tobacco Indemnification and Community Revitalization Commission (the "Tobacco Commission")?
[ ] Yes [ ] No

(a) If yes, please explain: ____
____
____

36. Have you ever sought or been appointed to any non-elective local or State Board in Virginia?
[ ] Yes [ ] No

(a) If yes, please explain when and what Board: ____________________
____

37. As a result of any job or position held, have you ever had to fill out or file a disclosure form listing any gifts or benefits received or any potential conflicts of interest?
[ ] Yes [ ] No

(a) If yes, please explain when and what type of disclosure was required: ________
____
____

Juror Number: __________

38. Have you ever received any training addressing local. State, and/or Federal rules concerning conflicts of interest (COI)?
[ ] Yes [ ] No

(a) If yes. please explain when and what type of training: ____________________
____
____

39. Have you ever completed an application for a home mortgage or refinance of a home mortgage or signed as a co-applicant?
[ ] Yes [ ] No

Legal System

40. Have you ever served as a juror before?
[ ] Yes [ ] No

If yes, indicate for each:

Year	Civil/ Criminal	Federal/ State	Type of Case

(a) Have you ever served as a juror on a grand jury?
[ ] Yes [ ] No

If yes, when and where: ____________________

(b) Have you ever served as a jury or grand jury foreperson?
[ ] Yes [ ] No

(c) Was there anything about your experience as a juror or grand juror that left you disappointed or dissatisfied with our criminal justice system?
[ ] Yes [ ] No

Please explain: ____________________
____
____

41. Have you, or, to your knowledge, any family members, or any close friends ever been:
    (a) Convicted of a crime? [ ] Yes [ ] No

    (b) If yes, please provide the following:

Relationship of person convicted (Self, Sister, etc.)	Crime(s) involved

42. Have you, any member of your immediate family, or any close personal friend ever been investigated for violating ethical rules by an employer, ethics committee, governmental agency, or other organization?
    [ ] Yes [ ] No

    (a) If yes, please explain: ____
    ____

43. Has any family member or person with whom you have a close personal relationship ever testified in a grand jury or in court?
    [ ] Yes [ ] No

    (a) If yes, please provide the following details:

    Type of Case   Relationship (if any)
    ____
    ____

Juror Number __________

44. Have you, or any members of your family, ever been employed by any law enforcement agency, such as: a police department, sheriff's department, the Virginia State Police (VSP), the State Bureau of Investigation (SBI), the Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI), the Internal Revenue Service (IRS), the Drug Enforcement Administration (DEA), the Bureau of Alcohol Tobacco and Firearms (ATF), the United States Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS), the U.S. Marshal's Service, the U.S. Park Police, a United States Attorney s Office, the United States Department of Justice, a District/Commonwealth or State's Attorney's Office, a probation or parole office, the Bureau of Prisons, the state department of corrections, the court system, or any other local, state or federal law enforcement agency or private security force?
[ ] Yes [ ] No

(a) If yes, for each person (yourself or family member), please indicate the law enforcement office or agency: ______________________________

____

____

____

45. Other than what you have already explained, have you, or has any close friend or relative, ever worked or been a volunteer in the legal profession either as a lawyer, paralegal, or in a law office, including a prosecutor's, criminal defense attorney's office, Legal Aid, public defender s office, or legal department for any private business or government agency?
[ ] Yes [ ] No

(a) If yes, please list their names, type of work they do, where they work, and their relationship to you: ______________________________

____

____

____

46. Have you or a member of your family, either personally or in connection with a business, been involved in any claim, legal action or dispute with any local, state, or federal, governmental agency?
[ ] Yes [ ] No

(a) If yes, please describe: ______________________________

____

Media and Activities

47 Do you watch NATIONAL news on any of the following television networks? (CHECK ALL THAT APPLY)

(a) ABC ☐
(b) CBS ☐
(c) CNN ☐
(d) FOX News channel (National) ☐
(e) MSNBC ☐
(f) NBC ☐
(g) CNN ☐
(h) Public Television ☐
(i) Other ☐

If other, please list: ______________________________

48. What newspapers(s), including tabloids, do you most often read? (Both print and online)

____

____

____

49. Please list any Internet web sites that you visit regularly, or any email lists or message services you subscribe to, for news/current events: ______________________________

____

____

____

50. How often do you watch investigative news programs (such as 60 Minutes, ABC 20/20, or Frontline), or television shows that deal with lawyers, the legal system, police work, prisons, politicians, or political life?
☐ Very often ☐ Often ☐ Not very often ☐ Not at all

(a) If very often or often, what are the names of the shows? ______________________________

____

____

51 Do you or your spouse/partner maintain a blog or online journal?
☐ Yes ☐ No

(a) If yes, please describe: ______________________________

____

52. Have you ever written, posted comments, or been quoted in any paper, article, newsletter, news media report, book, or other published work, including online, print and other media sources?
[ ] Yes [ ] No

(a) If yes, please describe the content and the source of publication: __________

____

____

____

53. Have you ever written to any newspaper or magazine; or called in to any television or radio program; or posted a comment or a "like" on any website or to an online media story to express your opinion concerning the issue of corruption in politics?
[ ] Yes [ ] No

(a) If yes, please describe the view you expressed and in what manner: __________

____

____

____

54. Do you use any social networking web sites, such as Facebook, Google+, MySpace, LinkedIn, or Twitter?
[ ] Yes [ ] No

55. Do you currently "follow" or does anyone "follow" you on Twitter, blogs, or other social media platforms?
[ ] Yes [ ] No

(a) Please list any entities or accounts that you follow that are in any way related to politics, political figures / parties, political reporting, or current events: __________

____

____

Political Involvement

56. In politics today, do you consider yourself a: (CHECK ONLY ONE ANSWER)
[ ] Democrat
[ ] Independent [ ] Republican
[ ] Libertarian
[ ] other (PLEASE SPECIFY) ____________________

57 How often do you vote in federal elections?
[ ] Always [ ] Often [ ] Seldom [ ] Never

Juror Number: ___________

58. How often do you vote in state/local elections?
[ ] Always [ ] Often [ ] Seldom [ ] Never

59. How closely do you follow politics in Virginia?
[ ] Very closely
[ ] Somewhat closely
[ ] Not closely at all

60. Have you, your significant other, a family member, or a close friend ever run for, sought, or held a political office in the local, state, or federal government?
[ ] Yes [ ] No

(a) If yes, please provide their names, relationship to you and political office: _____
____
____

61 Have you, your significant other, a family member, or a close friend ever worked for, volunteered, or been on the staff of any elected public official or worked for a committee or subcommittee in Congress or a State legislature?
[ ] Yes [ ] No

(a) If yes, please explain: ______________________________
____
____

62. Have you, your spouse/significant other, any family members or any close friends ever sought assistance from any elected public official?
[ ] Yes [ ] No

(a) If yes, please explain: ______________________________
____
____

63. Do you or any member of your family or any close personal friend have any experience in lobbying any branch of the state, federal, or local government?
[ ] Yes [ ] No

(a) If yes, please explain: ______________________________
____
____

64. Do you or any member of your family or close personal friend have any experience being lobbied while you or they served in a position with any state, federal, or local government?
☐ Yes ☐ No

(a) If yes, please explain: ______________________________
____
____

65. With respect to any candidates for public office, political organizations, political committees, or political action committees (PACs) have you, your spouse/significant other, any family members or any close friends ever done any of the following: (Check all that apply)

		Self	Spouse/ sig. other	Family member	Close friend
(a)	Been paid to work for	☐	☐	☐	☐
(b)	Volunteer work	☐	☐	☐	☐
(c)	Canvassed neighborhoods	☐	☐	☐	☐
(d)	Attended meetings	☐	☐	☐	☐
(e)	Contributed money	☐	☐	☐	☐
(f)	Attended rallies	☐	☐	☐	☐
(g)	Attended events, e.g., cocktail parties and/or dinners	☐	☐	☐	☐
(h)	Displayed yard signs and/or bumper stickers	☐	☐	☐	☐
(i)	"Liked" any websites or Facebook pages associated with a party or political candidates	☐	☐	☐	☐
(j)	Other campaign activities	☐	☐	☐	☐

66. How often do you or your spouse/partner make financial contributions to any political campaigns or political action committees?
☐ Often ☐ Sometimes ☐ Seldom ☐ Never

67. Do you have any knowledge, training or experience in the area of laws relating to the accepting and/or reporting of gifts and/or financial transactions involving government officials?
☐ Yes ☐ No

(a) If yes, please explain: ______________________________
____
____
____

General Opinions and Beliefs about the Criminal Justice System

68. The indictment in this case is merely an accusation and not evidence of guilt. Would you have any difficulty treating the indictment as an accusation and not evidence of guilt?
[ ] Yes [ ] No

(a) If yes, please explain: ______________________________
____
____

69. The defendants in this case are well-known public figures. Would that affect your ability to follow the instructions given by the Court and reach a decision in this case?
[ ] Yes [ ] No [ ] Unsure

(a) If yes or unsure, please explain: ______________________________
____
____

Connection to the Defendants

70. Have you ever been to an event or activity that Robert F McDonnell attended?
[ ] Yes [ ] No

If yes,

(a) What event(s) or activity? ______________________________
____

(b) When: ______________________________

(c) Did you personally meet Mr. McDonnell?
[ ] Yes [ ] No

71. Have you ever been to an event or activity that Maureen G. McDonnell attended?
[ ] Yes [ ] No

If yes,

(a) What event(s) or activity? ______________________________
____

(b) When: ______________________________

(c) Did you personally meet Mrs. McDonnell?
[ ] Yes [ ] No

Juror Number: __________

72. Have you or someone you know ever had any connection to any of the following activities by the former First Lady of Virginia Maureen G. McDonnell: (Check all that apply)

☐ The "FLITE" (First Lady's Initiatives Team Effort) Program
☐ Virginia Wine Association or marketing efforts to promote Virginia wines
☐ The McGlothlin Foundation
☐ Other activities, please explain: ______________________________

73. Do you, a family member, or any close friend know or have any connection (personal, political, and/or business) to Robert F McDonnell, Maureen G. McDonnell, any member of their extended families, or any other person who has a close personal connection to the McDonnells (including but not limited to social interaction, Facebook friend status, and the like)?

(Check all that apply)	Self	Family member	Close friend
Know Mr. McDonnell	☐	☐	☐
Know Mrs. McDonnell	☐	☐	☐
Know McDonnells' families	☐	☐	☐

(a) If yes, please explain: ______________________________
____
____

74. Do you or does anyone close to you know anyone who was has been a member of any staff or worked for Robert F McDonnell in any capacity during any of his positions in elected office?

☐ Yes ☐ No

(a) If yes, please explain: ______________________________
____
____

75. Do you or does anyone close to you know anyone who was has been appointed to any position, including State positions or jobs and Board or Commission appointments, by Robert F McDonnell?

☐ Yes ☐ No

(a) If yes, please explain: ______________________________
____
____

76. Do you or does anyone close to you know anyone who was has been a member of any staff or worked with in any other capacity (both paid or volunteer) former First Lady of Virginia Maureen G. McDonnell?
☐ Yes ☐ No

(a) If yes, please explain: ______________________________

____

____

77 Do you feel that there have been any actions by Robert F McDonnell or Maureen G. McDonnell while they were Governor and First Lady of Virginia, respectively, that have affected you in a personal way?
☐ Yes ☐ No

(a) If yes, please explain: ______________________________

____

____

78. With respect to Robert F McDonnell's various political campaigns/political offices sought (i.e., House of Delegates, Virginia Attorney General, and Governor) have you, your spouse/significant other, any family members or any close friends ever done any of the following in support of or in opposition to any of Mr. McDonnell's campaigns: (Check all that apply)

		Self	Spouse/ sig. other	Family member	Close friend
(a)	Been paid to work for	☐	☐	☐	☐
(b)	Volunteer work	☐	☐	☐	☐
(c)	Canvassed neighborhoods	☐	☐	☐	☐
(d)	Attended meetings	☐	☐	☐	☐
(e)	Contributed money	☐	☐	☐	☐
(f)	Attended rallies	☐	☐	☐	☐
(g)	Attended events, e.g., cocktail parties and/or dinners	☐	☐	☐	☐
(h)	Displayed yard signs and/or bumper stickers	☐	☐	☐	☐
(i)	"Liked," "friended," or "followed" any websites, twitter feeds, or Facebook pages associated with Mr. McDonnell or his campaign opponents	☐	☐	☐	☐
(j)	Other campaign activities	☐	☐	☐	☐

For any checked above, please explain: ______________________________

____

____

79. Have you, your spouse/significant other, or any family members ever done any of the following in support of defense efforts concerning allegations of criminal wrongdoing by the defendants, Robert F McDonnell and Maureen G. McDonnell? (Check all that apply)

		Self	Spouse/ sig. other	Family member
(a)	Wrote a letter to the editor	☐	☐	☐
(b)	Signed a petition	☐	☐	☐
(c)	Posted a comment online
(d)	Received an email or other communication seeking financial or other support	☐	☐	☐
(e)	Visited a website (e.g., The Restoration Fund) seeking donations for the defense	☐	☐	☐
(f)	Donated money to the defense, including funds solicited by The Restoration Fund website	☐	☐	☐

For any checked above, please explain: ____

____

____

____

80. Have you, your spouse/significant other, any family members or any close friends ever done any of the following in support of government efforts to investigate allegations of criminal wrongdoing by the defendants, Robert F McDonnell and Maureen G. McDonnell? (Check all that apply)

		Self	Spouse/ sig. other	Family member	Close friend
(a)	Wrote a letter to the editor	☐	☐	☐	☐
(b)	Signed a petition	☐	☐	☐	☐
(c)	Posted a comment online

For any checked above, please explain: ____

____

____

____

81 Robert F McDonnell is currently on the faculty at Liberty University. Have you or a family member or a close friend ever had any contact or connection to Liberty University, including attending classes, employment, teaching courses, providing any financial support or donations, or being on any Liberty University mailing or email lists?
[ ] Yes [ ] No

(a) If yes, please list who, the kind of contact or connection, and their relationship to you: ____

____

____

____

82. Other than what you have already explained, have you or any family member ever been employed, including as a contractor, by any U.S. federal government agency?
[ ] Yes [ ] No

(a) If yes, please list the person, job title, agency, and dates of employment: ______

____

____

____

Case Questions

83. The defendants, Robert F McDonnell and Maureen G. McDonnell, are charged with bribery, extortion, wire fraud, and making false statements, among other charges, and Maureen G. McDonnell is also charged with obstruction of justice. Have you seen, heard or read anything about this case?
[ ] Yes [ ] No

84. How closely have you followed the news about this case?
[ ] Very closely
[ ] Somewhat closely
[ ] Not very closely
[ ] Not at all

85. Please indicate from what source(s) you heard about the case. (Check all that apply.)

[ ] Television
[ ] Newspapers [ ] Magazines
[ ] Radio [ ] Internet
[ ] Blog/chatroom
[ ] Personal knowledge of defendants or their family, friends or acquaintances
[ ] Personal knowledge of potential witnesses in this case
[ ] Personal conversations with others in the community
[ ] Overheard others discussing the case
[ ] Other sources of information (list):

____

86. Have you expressed an opinion about this case or about those involved to anyone, either through conversations or through writing to any newspaper, magazine, or publication; calling in to any television or radio program; or posting comments or likes on the Internet?

[ ] Yes [ ] No

(a) If yes, what were the circumstances and what opinion did you express? ________

____

____

____

87. Have you, a member of your family or a close friend participated in any legal research studies such as focus groups, mock trials, or surveys that addressed the case of United States of America v. Robert F. McDonnell and Maureen G. McDonnell?

[ ] Yes [ ] No

88. Over the past two years, have you, a member of your family or a close friend participated in any legal research studies such as focus groups, mock trials, or surveys that addressed any other real or hypothetical criminal case?

[ ] Yes [ ] No

89. Do you or any member of your immediate family or close personal friend know anyone who has covered this case or investigation for any media outlet?

[ ] Yes [ ] No

(a) If yes, please explain: ______________________________________

____

____

90. Two of the products that will be discussed in this case are Anatabloc, which is a dietary supplement produced by Star Scientific, and CigRx, a smoking cessation product produced by Star Scientific. Have you or a family member or a close friend ever used Anatabloc or CigRx?
[ ] Yes [ ] No [ ] Unsure

(a) If yes or unsure, please describe who used the product and when: ____________

91. Do you or any family member or close friend now own or ever owned any stock in Star Scientific?
[ ] Yes [ ] No [ ] Unsure

92. The judge presiding over this case is U.S. District Judge James R. Spencer. Do you, anyone in your family, or any close personal friend know Judge Spencer or anyone else who works in this courthouse?
[ ] Yes [ ] No

(a) If yes, please explain who you know and how: ____________

93. The prosecutors in this case are Michael Dry, David Harbach, Jessica Aber, and Ryan Faulconer.

(a) Do you know, or have you had any contact, either social or professional, with any individuals listed above, or any other member of the United States Attorney's Office or Department of Justice?
[ ] Yes [ ] No [ ] Unsure

(b) If yes or unsure, please explain: ____________

94. The attorneys representing the defendants in this case and their respective law firms are listed below

Robert F McDonnell
John Brownlee, Christopher Iaquinto, Daniel Small, Timothy Taylor, William Gould
(Holland & Knight LLP)

Henry Asbill, Jonathan Berry, Charles Carberry, Hilary Perkins, James Burnham, Mary Ellen Powers, Noel Francisco, Owen Conroy, Ryan Newman
(Jones Day)

Maureen G. McDonnell
William Burck, Kaiyeu Chu, Heather Martin, Stephen Hauss
(Quinn Emanuel Urquhart & Sullivan LLP)

(a) Do you know, or have you had any contact, either social or professional, with any individuals listed above, or any other member of any of the law firms listed above?
[ ] Yes [ ] No [ ] Unsure

(b) If yes or unsure, please explain: ____________________
____
____

95. Please review the list attached to this questionnaire that provides the names of persons who may appear as witnesses during the trial. Do you, your spouse/partner, any members of your immediate family, or any of your close personal friends know or have any connection with the individuals listed?
[ ] Yes [ ] No [ ] Unsure

(a) If yes or unsure, please list the names of each person and explain the connection:
____
____
____

96. Other than what you have already explained, do you or any member of your immediate family or close personal friend know anyone who may be associated in any capacity with this case, its investigation, or its preparation for either the Government or the defendants?
[ ] Yes [ ] No

(a) If yes, please explain: ____________________
____
____
____

Conclusion

97 Is there any reason that you believe you should not sit as a juror in this case?
[ ] Yes [ ] No

(a) If yes, please explain:
____
____

Juror Number: ___________

98. Is there anything else that you think the Court should know that might influence your ability to fairly and impartially judge the evidence in this case and to apply the law as instructed by the Court?

[ ] Yes [ ] No

(a) If yes, please explain: ____

____

____

99. Is there any matter you would prefer to discuss privately with the judge?

[ ] Yes [ ] No

Juror Number ___________

SIGNATURE

I, ____, hereby declare under (Print Your Name)
penalty of perjury that the foregoing answers set forth in this Jury Questionnaire are true and correct to the best of my knowledge and belief. I have not discussed my answers with others, or received assistance in completing the questionnaire. I have answered all of the above questions in this Jury Questionnaire myself.

I FURTHER UNDERSTAND THAT I AM NOT TO DISCUSS THIS CASE WITH ANYONE OR SEEK OUT, LISTEN TO, OR READ ANY MATERIAL ABOUT THIS CASE IN THE MEDIA, ON THE INTERNET OR ELSEWHERE UNTIL THE JUDGE IN THIS CASE HAS INSTRUCTED ME OTHERWISE.

Executed in the Eastern District of Virginia, on this _____ day of __________, 2014.

____
(Your Signature)

Juror Number: ___________

EXPLANATION SHEET

Juror Number ____________

EXPLANATION SHEET, continued.

United States v. Robert F. McDonnell and Maureen G. McDonnell Potential Witnesses

Abbate, Antonio
Abbe, Colman
Abel, James
Allen, Dave
Anderson, Jamie
Anderson, Steve Auer, Barbara
Barker, David
Barrett, Robert
Bedrosian, Patty
Benedetti, Thomas
Benjamin, Mike
Birgmann, Caroline
Blake, Lawrence
Blank, Jeffrey
Block, Monica
Bolt, Nanette
Bolyard Jr., Larry
Burn, Celine
Caldwell, Jeff
Cantrell, Carrie (Roth)
Caturegli, Patrizio
Chamberlain, Brenda Jo
Christin, Charlotte
Claiborne, Todd
Clark, Chris
Clark, Kon
Clemente, Juliann
Ciore, John
Cobb, Matt
Cole, Sarita
Collie, Sarah
Conrad, Matthew
Coody, Gary
Cook, Daniel
Cox, Patrick
Cox, Phil
Craig, Stewart
Crantz, Frank
Crawford, Fiona
Creekmore, Jeffrey
Cromwell, Payton
Crowder, Maryann
Crowell, Wriston Mark
Csoke, Steve Cuccinelli II, Ken

Cullen, Richard
Damico, Joe
Dean, David
de Graaf, Brandon
Dean, David
DeKosky, Steven
DePriest, Jeffrey
DiChrisoni, Chad Anthony
Dunlap, Joel
Earley, Mark L.
Eige, Jacob Jasen
Faessel, John
Farrance, Robert
Frank, William
Fleming, Dan
Fletcher, Terry
Floyd, George
Fontaine, Dorrie
Forbes, Shirley
Fulghum, Joy
Fulkerson, Jerri
Gagne, Scott
Galanti, Paul
Ginder, Gordon
Gomez De Pitts, Luz ("Juliana")
Goodwin Jr., William
Greer, Ryan
Haas, Leslie
Hagan, Charles
Hahn, Paige
Hancock, Christopher
Hare, Keith
Harris, Katherine
Haymore, Todd
Hazel, William
Helderman, Rosalind
Helton, Nancy
Hicks-Thomas, Lisa
Howell, Ed
Huff, Timothy
Huffstetler, Molly
Hulser, David
Hunter, Matthew
Johnson, Dennis
Jones, Robert
Kaine, Timothy M.

Kao, Peter
Kaplan, Kristen Paynter
Keller, Heather
Kelly, Janet (Polarek)
Kennedy, Tyler
Kent, Martin
Kilby, Ken
Kilgore, Jerry
Kosowsky, J. Allen
Kroenig, Bradley
Krueger, Sharon
Ladenson, Paul
Lamar, Andrew
Lanier, Ryan
Lazo, John
LeFevre, William ("Brian")
Leonnig, Carol
Lewis, Bob
Lockridge, Robert
Lowell, Abbe
Lubumba, Eric
Lyons, James
Machir, Sara
Macrina, Francis
Mancano, Elizabeth
Martin, Tucker
Mayfield, Patrick
McDonnell, Bobby
McDonnell, Maureen (Uncapher)
McDonnell, Rachel
McDonnell, Sean
McGlothlin, Fran
McGlothlin, James
McKeon, John
McNulty, Steven
Meola, Olympia
Merhige, Robert
Mirabelli, Mario
Mitchell, Caresse
Morris, Abby (Claud)
Mullan, Michael
Naisawald, Nancy
Naylor, Deborah Ames
Noble, David
Nolen, Christopher
Noyes, Neal

Oken, Marc
O'Neill, William
Palmore, Jeffrey
Parrish, Phillip
Perito, Paul
Perkinson, William
Perry, Alanda
Pfeifer, Elizabeth
Pfohl, Tim
Pike, Steven
Pillow, Richard
Piper, Chris
Piscitelli, John
Pokusa, Robert
Pollack, Frank
Poole, Albert
Pugh, Kenneth
Putnam, Mary Ellen
Rabbitt, Emily
Raines, Brannon
Ramadan, David
Rangarajan, Satya
Ravensbergen, Ron
Reinaman, Eileen
Remley Karen
Retchin, Sheldon
Richardson, David
Robinson, Latasha
Rogers, Abigail Farris
Romero, Cynthia
Rubin, Mark
Sadler, John ("Tim")
Sanford, Kelly
Saul, Jeff
Savage, Sherri
Scarbrough, Alaina
Scarbrough, Sarah
Schatz, Rob
Schiele, Jeffrey
Schneider, Todd
Schramm, Elaina
Schwarz, Joseph
Scott, Kathleen
Scully, Tim
Sessoms Jr., William
Shoolroy, Christopher
Shupnik, Margaret
Skalak, Thomas
Stanley, Alexandra
Sterling, Richard
Strauss, Jerome
Sutherland, Mary Shea
Talbert, William
Thomas, Norman A.
Thompson, Bruce L.
Thompson, Elaine
Tierney, Barbara
Tonkin, Leo
Townes, Martin ("Tutti")
Trussell, Audrey
Tuck, Talhia
Turner, Ronald Uncapher, Michael
Vetrovec, George
Vick Jr., Howard C.
Vozella, Laura
Walden, Alfred J.
Walker, Julian
Ware, Keith
Warner, Mark R.
Watkins, Ronald
Watts, Pamelia
Weber, Kathryn
Weingarten, Reid
White, Peter H.
Whitt, Debbie
Wiley, Marc
Williams Jr., Jonnie
Williams Sr., Jonnie
Williams, Caroline
Williams, Celeste
Williams, Donnie
Williams, Rachel
Wilson, Sara
Wortham, Jane
Wright, Curtis
Xu, James
Xu, Ting
Young, Cailin McDonnell
Young, Christopher
Zubowsky, Adam
Zubowsky, Jeanine McDonnell

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
FOR THE EASTERN DISTRICT OF VIRGINIA
RICHMOND DIVISION

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,	)
	)	CRIMINAL NO. 3:14-CR-00012
v.	)
	)	JUDGE JAMES R. SPENCER
ROBERT F. MCDONNELL	)
MAUREEN G. MCDONNELL	)	FILED UNDER SEAL

DEFENDANT ROBERT F. MCDONNELL'S SEALED MOTION FOR CLARIFICATION

MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT

RECEIVED
MAY 19 2014
CLERK, U.S. DISTRICT COURT
RICHMOND, VA

INTRODUCTION AND BACKGROUND

Defendant Robert F. McDonnell seeks clarification from the Court and guidance about a discovery dispute. Over the weekend, counsel for Jonnie Williams asserted that an Order this Court issued in March—in a proceeding that transpired under seal and ex parte from both defendants—requires the defendants to surrender an image of Mr. Williams' iPhone in their possession that Mr. Williams voluntarily produced to the Government and that the Government voluntarily produced to the defendants. The Order does not, however, direct either defendant to comply with any order and neither defendant was party to the proceeding which preceded it or had an opportunity to object to Mr. Williams' request. The Order appears, rather, to instruct only the Government to take certain steps on Mr. Williams' behalf (indeed, it is not clear whether the Government even opposed Mr. Williams' request, such that the underlying proceeding was adversarial). See Order at 1, Ex. A. By its terms, however, the Order does not direct any third party to do anything. Given that the Order does not bind the defendants, the defense has repeatedly asked Mr. Williams' counsel to explain their legal basis for the surrender of this evidence or for some explanation of what happened in March that leads Mr. Williams' counsel to believe that the Court has adjudicated this vital evidentiary issue as to all concerned parties. Those attorneys refused. Because counsel to Mr. Williams has declined to explain their legal and factual justification for demanding the surrender of this relevant, potentially highly exculpatory, non-privileged evidence produced pursuant to Rule 16, the defense can only guess at their arguments, but none appear to have merit. The defense takes its obligation to follow this Court's Orders extremely seriously and thus respectfully asks that the Court clarify whether we must surrender this crucial evidence or whether we are permitted to use it in investigating and defending against the many serious allegations at issue or, at a minimum, be provided an opportunity to be heard on this issue.[1]

There is substantial basis to believe that Mr. Williams' iPhone contains a great deal of highly exculpatory information. Through a Rule 17(c) subpoena, the defense recently uncovered the attached draft letter from Mary-Shea Sutherland, the former Chief of Staff to Mrs. McDonnell. Ms. Sutherland's draft letter provides a detailed account of an agreement between her and Mr. Williams. Ms. Sutherland wrote to Mr. Williams approximately 110 days after she left her position with the McDonnells:

> In June, following the trip to Florida where I accompanied the First Lady; you called me to say that I was the type of person you wanted working for you and that you would pay me outside of my job with the state to help you. I remember the day clearly, I was in a dressing room with my niece when you called. We arranged to meet for breakfast, the first of several.
>
> At breakfast we had a very honest conversation. You zeroed in on my unhappiness, to paraphrase, you said "you can't fool an old southern boy." I explained that I was looking to leave but in order to do so needed an anchor client to take back to Benedetti and Farris in order to cover my salary. At that time you were not interested in that plan but suggested that we should talk to Jerry Kilgore about having McGuire Woods put me on staff and he would just charge you extra. Again, you reiterated that I was the type of person you wanted working for you, not just on Anatabloc but for you personally. You specifically mentioned that you didn't have time to organize your own life and with the work going on at your home in Richmond and all of your travel you saw me as the person to manage all of that for you.

January 20, 2012 Sutherland Draft Letter to Williams at 1, Ex. B. The two apparently planned for Ms. Sutherland to leave the First Lady's office and return to private consulting, with Mr. Williams as the anchor client for her at a consulting firm. Mr. Williams was, however, apparently "insistent that [Ms. Sutherland] not tell the Governor's Office [she] was leaving until after the luncheon at the Mansion for the doctors." Id. at 2. Ms. Sutherland's letter recounts many of her interactions with Mr. Williams and his lobbyist (Mr. Kilgore)—e.g.: "We met again with Jerry Kilgore over lunch at the Berkley. It was decided at that time that it would not work to have McGuire Woods hire me and that it made more sense for me to return to Benedetti and Farris and you would be the anchor client," id. at 1—and then she wrote the following: "Every communication you and I had was via text, I do have copies of all of them but did not keep them at the office. If I had kept those copies in my desk [Mrs. McDonnell] would have had quite an eyeful." Id. at 2 (emphasis added); see also id. at 3 ("At no time did I ever reveal any of our meetings, conversation[s] or your sentiments on the First Lady. I never told anyone about your calls to me asking me to get you out of the trip to Maine, I never told anyone about you guiding me in my resignation process – I kept every confidence you ever shared with me.").

---

[1] No person affiliated with the defense has accessed the image or attempted to access it, nor will any person affiliated with the defense attempt to access this information until the issue is fully resolved by the Court.

The defense has scoured the Government's document production and has been unable to find a single one of the text messages that Ms. Sutherland describes keeping "copies" of. Those messages may, however, be on the iPhone image that Mr. Williams' counsel has demanded the defense (and Government) surrender without reviewing it. In addition, Ms. Sutherland's letter demonstrates that Mr. Williams had a practice of engaging in secret communications via text message, which means that the information on his iPhone is potentially the most important exculpatory evidence in the entire case other than the defendant's personal denials or wrongdoing. Ms. Sutherland's letter outlines a detailed campaign by Mr. Williams to deceive the McDonnells, to manipulate one of their senior staff members into secretly serving his interests, and to hide his conduct and future plans from Mr. and Mrs. McDonnell—facts that directly rebut the Government's allegation that Mr. McDonnell knowingly entered a corrupt bargain with Mr. Williams. It is therefore possible that the information on Mr. Williams' iPhone will directly exonerate Mr. McDonnell.[2]

Based on the facts as the defense currently understands them, there is no legal basis for requiring the defense to surrender this critical evidence. As we understand the facts, Mr. Williams willingly provided an image of his entire iPhone to the Government with a production letter that did not purport to limit the Government's access to that iPhone's contents, see June 24, 2013 Bentley McCray Letter to Dry at 1, Ex. C, and waited three full months to do anything that might safeguard the materials therein, see September 24, 2013 Vick Letter to Dry at 1, Ex. D, thus setting in motion the course of events that led to the Government producing copies of the iPhone to each defendant as part of its Rule 16 production. Nobody even alerted the defense to any possible privilege issues until weeks after the iPhone had been produced; only technological problems and sheer coincidence prevented the defense from reviewing the iPhone's contents before we knew about any potential claw-back or privilege issues. Further, if Mr. Williams used his iPhone consistent with Ms. Sutherland's description, most of the communications on it will likely not be privileged at all, such that privilege law would provide no basis for clawing them back. (We know for sure from Ms. Sutherland's letter that Mr. Williams had many non-privileged communications with people like Ms. Sutherland on his iPhone.) Here, such communications potentially include text messages with Ms. Sutherland before or after she left the Commonwealth's employ, communications about Ms. Sutherland or the McDonnells with people who are not Mrs. Williams or one of Mr. Williams' attorneys, communications with Mr. Williams' lobbyist, Mr. Kilgore, about non-legal, lobbying-related topics (such as hiring Ms. Sutherland to work at his law firm), and so on. And as for the limited universe of information that might have been privileged before Mr. Williams produced his iPhone, our understanding of the facts establishes a straightforward waiver. Mr. Williams produced his iPhone to the Government in toto without any safeguards to protect the privileged information thereon. Whatever informal understanding Mr. Williams and the Government might have had, the Government apparently possessed this information for many months before Mr. Williams did anything to get the information back. Privilege is waived where, as here, "the party claiming the privilege has made any disclosure of a confidential communication to any individual who is not embraced by the privilege." Hawkins v. Stables, 148 F.3d 379, 384 (4th Cir. 1998). That rule seems to be dispositive here.

---

[2] There are multiple categories of potentially exonerating documents that are likely to exist on the iPhone but that the Government did not subpoena, such that Mr. McDonnell will not receive them as part of the Government's Rule 16 and Brady productions. For example, the Government did not subpoena from Mr. Williams communications about elected officials and employees of the Commonwealth (as opposed to to or from them)—such as about the McDonnells or Ms. Sutherland—nor did it subpoena communications between Ms. Sutherland and Mr. Williams after Ms. Sutherland left the Commonwealth's employ. (The Government thus would not have received the attached letter from Ms. Sutherland, for example, which was produced in response to the defense Rule 17(c) subpoena to Benedetti and Farris, and which is obviously a highly exculpatory document.)

The defense thus respectfully requests that the Court make clear that neither its March Order nor any other principle of law bars the defense from reviewing the evidence on Mr. Williams' iPhone that the Government produced pursuant to Rule 16, following Mr. Williams' production of that evidence to the Government.[3] [3] As an alternative, the defense requests permission to submit the forensic image to an internal "taint team" that will review the information and segregate the materials possibly protected by the attorney-client, work-product, or marital privileges. That team would then prepare a privilege log and submit it to Mr. Williams' attorneys for their review. This will allow counsel for defendants to begin its review of the non-privileged information and would provide an opportunity for Mr. Williams' counsel to object to our current conclusion that all privileges have been waived.

---

ARGUMENT

I. The Court's Order Does Not Appear To Bind Either Defendant.

On its face, the Court's Order does not bind either defendant or direct either defendant to do anything: "[T]he Government is hereby DIRECTED to return to Williams any copies of the forensic image of Williams's iPhone in its possession. The Government is further DIRECTED to seek the return of said forensic image from any third parties to which it may have been provided or disclosed." Order at 1, Ex. A. The Court's Order makes sense, since the defendants were not parties to the litigation that yielded this Order and the law generally "presume[es] that nonparties are not bound by a judgment"; a principle that "has been stated in many cases" and that "draws from the due process right to be heard, and in criminal proceedings draws support from the right of confrontation as well." 18A Charles Alan Wright et al., Fed. Prac. & Proc. Juris. § 4449 (2d ed. 2014) (footnotes omitted). Numerous cases reiterate as much, holding that "[i]t is a violation of due process for a judgment to be binding on a litigant who was not a party or a privy and therefore has never had an opportunity to be heard." Parklane Hosiery Co., Inc. v. Shore, 439 U.S. 322, 327 n.7 (1979); see also, e.g., Taylor v. Sturgell, 553 U.S. 880, 884 (2008) ("It is a principle of general application in Anglo–American jurisprudence that one is not bound by a judgment in personam in a litigation in which he is not designated as a party or to which he has not been made a party by service of process." (quoting Hansberry v. Lee, 311 U.S. 32, 40 (1940)).

Because counsel to Mr. Williams has refused to explain what happened in March before this Court, the defense has only the Order to rely upon. And that Order does not bind the defendants, perhaps because the Court did not intend to issue directives against non-parties without providing those parties an opportunity to be heard. Were the Court's intentions otherwise—such that it did intend to bind Mr. McDonnell—the defense respectfully requests that the Court clarify as much, as well as provide us with an opportunity to be heard on these issues.

II. There Is No Legal Basis For Confiscating Non-Privileged, Potentially Exculpatory Evidence From The Defense.

Assuming that the Court has not already resolved this issue as to the defendants, the Court should not extend its Order to Mr. McDonnell. For one thing, counsel for Mr. Williams voluntarily produced the contents of Mr. Williams' iPhone to the Government, and the Government, in turn, voluntarily produced those contents to the defense. Because Mr. McDonnell is the innocent recipient of this potentially exculpatory evidence, there is no legal basis—and it would be unfair—to compel him to relinquish possession and control of that lawfully obtained evidence.

It would also violate Mr. McDonnell's right to discovery under Rule 16 to command him to return the evidence. The Government has an obligation to permit defendants to inspect and copy evidence that is "material to preparing [a] defense" and that "is within the government's possession, custody, or control." Fed. R. Crim. P. 16(a)(1)(E). As explained above, the contents of Mr. Williams' iPhone are potentially extremely relevant to Mr. McDonnell's defense and were in the Government's possession, which is why the Government produced them in its Rule 16 production. The Government had an obligation to produce that evidence, which it fulfilled. Ordering Mr. McDonnell to return the evidence now would defeat his legal rights under Rule 16.

The same logic applies to the Government's Brady obligations. Under Brady, a prosecutor must disclose material "in the Government's possession that is favorable to an accused." Monroe v. Angelone, 323 F.3d 286, 293 n.5 (4th Cir. 2003). In light of Ms. Sutherland's letter to Mr. Williams, see supra at 2-3, there is little question that Mr. Williams' iPhone is likely to contain evidence that is exculpatory for Mr. McDonnell, which the Government is obligated to disclose (and did disclose). Requiring Mr. McDonnell to return that evidence would violate his Brady rights. The Government cannot claim, of course, that Brady does not apply to evidence that it possessed but did not review, since the Government's "willfulness or inadvertence" in failing to disclose Brady material "is inconsequential to [the] Brady analysis." Wolfe* v. *Clarke, 691 F.3d 410, 423 (4th Cir. 2012).

Finally, counsel for Mr. Williams has offered no legal basis for its position other than to passingly suggest that Mr. McDonnell is not entitled to review this evidence because he could not independently obtain a complete image of Mr. Williams' iPhone via Rule 17(c) subpoena. But even if that were true, Rule 17 is merely a device for the criminally accused to compel evidence from a witness. See Fed. R. Crim. P. 17(c)(1) (providing that a "subpoena may order the witness to produce" various listed items (emphasis added)). It is not a substantive constraint on the universe of evidence the accused are permitted to possess. And it certainly does not apply here, where the relevant witness voluntarily disclosed the evidence. A witness can always voluntarily produce more evidence than Rule 17(c) might require, and that is precisely what has happened here. The fact that Mr. Williams now wants this evidence back should not alter the analysis.

III. The Intentional Production Of The iPhone To The Government Waived Whatever Privileges Once Existed Over Any Of The Communications Therein.

Based on the facts as we presently understand them, Mr. Williams waived all privileges over the iPhone image when he turned it over to the Government on June 24, 2013. See Ex. C. In particular, he appears to have disclosed the image voluntarily, not inadvertently, which conclusively waives any otherwise-applicable privileges. But even if the disclosures can be characterized as inadvertent, simple inadvertence would suffice to defeat any privilege claim.

A. Attorney-Client Privilege: Waived by Disclosure to the Government

Mr. Williams waived any attorney-client privilege over documents in the iPhone image when he willingly handed the image over to the Government on June 24, 2013. He cannot carry his burden to show "the absence of any waiver." United States v. Bolander, 722 F.3d 199, 222 (4th Cir.), cert. denied, 134 S. Ct. 549 (2013).

Voluntary disclosure of a privileged document to a third party waives privilege over that document. See Hawkins v. Stables, 148 F.3d 379, 384 (4th Cir. 1998) (citations omitted) ("As a general rule, implied waiver occurs when the party claiming the privilege has made any disclosure of a confidential communication to any individual who is not embraced by the privilege.") Any claim that Mr. Williams did not knowingly disclose the specific documents within the image would fail because "if a client wishes to preserve the privilege under such circumstances, he must take some affirmative action to preserve confidentiality. . . Taking or failing to take precautions may be considered as bearing on intent." FDIC v. Marine Midland Realty Credit Corp., 138 F.R.D. 479, 482 (E.D. Va. 1991) (quoting In re Grand Jury Proceedings, 727 F.2d 1352, 1356 (4th Cir. 1984)). Mr. Williams's apparent failure to review the image before turning it over betokens "such extreme or gross negligence as to warrant deeming the act of disclosure [of all documents within the image] to be intentional." Id.; see also United States v. Lentz, 419 F. Supp. 2d 820, 827 (E.D. Va. 2005) ("Waiver need not be explicit; the client waives the privilege by conduct which implies a waiver of the privilege or a consent to disclosure.") (internal quotation marks omitted).

Even if Mr. Williams could somehow characterize the disclosure as inadvertent, however, the privilege is still gone. Under Federal Rule of Evidence 502(b), inadvertent disclosures will waive privilege unless "the holder of the privilege or protection took reasonable steps to prevent disclosure" and "promptly took reasonable steps to rectify the error." See also Maxtena, Inc. v. Marks, 289 F.R.D. 427, 444 (D. Md. 2012) (magistrate judge) ("The party seeking the protection of Rule 502(b) bears the burden of proving that each of its elements have been met."). Mr. Williams cannot argue that turning over an iPhone image with no apparent review or safeguards constituted "reasonable steps to prevent disclosure," particularly given that he apparently waited months before trying to get any supposedly privileged information back.

B. Work-Product Protection: Waived by Disclosure that Substantially Increased Chances of Disclosure to Adversary

Mr. Williams also waived the work-product protection over any documents in the image because their disclosure to the Government substantially increased the risk that the documents would fall into the hands of an adversary (if indeed the Government itself did not constitute an adversary as of June 24, 2013).

The Fourth Circuit holds work-product protection waived when its invoker "substantially and freely increased the possibility of disclosure to, and use by, anyone the [recipient] desired." In re Doe, 662 F.2d 1073, 1082 (4th Cir. 1981); Green v. Sauder Mouldings, Inc., 223 F.R.D. 304, 307 (E.D. Va. 2004) ("Waiver of the privilege occurs when materials that are otherwise protected work-product are disclosed to someone with interests adverse to the party asserting the privilege.") (citing Doe, 662 F.2d at 1081). Given the facts as understood here, it would be hard to argue that disclosure to the Government did not substantially increase the chances of the image falling into an adversary's hands. And again, characterizing the disclosure as inadvertent will not negate waiver.

C. Marital Communications Privilege: Waived by Disclosure to the Government

Mr. Williams's voluntary disclosure of the image waived the marital communications privilege as well: "[T]o be covered by the privilege, a communication between spouses must be confidential; 'voluntary disclosure' of a communication waives the privilege." United States v. Hamilton, 701 F.3d 404, 407 (4th Cir. 2012) (quoting Wolfle v. United States, 291 U.S. 7, 14–15 (1934)), cert. denied, 133 S. Ct. 1838 (2013). Once again, characterizing the disclosure as inadvertent would not negate waiver.

CONCLUSION

The defense is fully committed to complying with this Court's directives, to respecting any valid privileges, and to mounting a zealous defense. The defense thus respectfully requests an order clarifying that the Court's March Order does not require the defense to forfeit all evidence contained in the image of Mr. Williams' iPhone and confirming that the defense is entitled to make use of those materials to the same extent the defense is entitled to make use of all other materials it lawfully obtains through the discovery process or other legitimate mechanisms.

Given the importance of this issue, the defense respectfully requests a hearing at the Court's convenience.

Dated: May 19, 2014

Respectfully submitted,

/s/ John L. Brownlee

John L. Brownlee (VSB No. 37358)
Timothy J. Taylor (VSB No. 84529)
HOLLAND & KNIGHT LLP
800 17th Street N.W.
Suite 1100
Washington, DC 20006
Telephone: (202) 828-1854
Facsimile: (202) 955-5564

Henry W. Asbill (pro hac vice)
Mary Ellen Powers (pro hac vice)
Noel J. Francisco (pro hac vice)
Ryan D. Newman (pro hac vice)
James M. Burnham (pro hac vice)
Jonathan A. Berry (VSB No. 81864)
JONES DAY
51 Louisiana Avenue, N.W.
Washington, DC 20001
Telephone: (202) 879-3939
Facsimile: (202) 626-1700

Counsel for Robert F. McDonnell

CERTIFICATE OF SERVICE

I certify that on May 19, 2014, I caused to be served a true copy of the foregoing via electronic email on the following individuals:

Michael S. Dry
David V. Harbach II
Jessica D. Aber
Ryan S. Faulconer
United States Attorney's Office
600 E. Main Street, Suite 1800
Richmond, Virginia 23219-2447
Phone: (804) 819-5400
Facsimile: (804) 771-2316
michael.s.dry@usdoj.gov

William A. Burck
Stephen M. Hauss
Heather H. Martin (VSB No. 65694)
QUINN EMANUEL URQUHART & SULLIVAN, LLP
777 Sixth Street NW, 11th Floor
Washington, DC 20001
Telephone: (202) 538-8000
Facsimile: (202) 538-8100
williamburck@quinnemanuel.com

Dated: May 19, 2014

Respectfully submitted,

/s/ John L. Brownlee
John L. Brownlee (VSB No. 37358)
HOLLAND & KNIGHT LLP
800 17th Street N.W.
Suite 1100
Washington, DC 20006
Telephone: (202) 828-1854
Facsimile: (202) 955-5564

Counsel for Robert F McDonnell

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
EASTERN DISTRICT OF VIRGINIA
RICHMOND DIVISION

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,

v.

ROBERT F. MCDONNELL,

and

MAUREEN G. MCDONNELL,

Defendants.

Action No. 3:14-CR-12

SEALED ORDER

THIS MATTER is before the Court on two sealed Motions for Clarification (ECF Nos. 203, 204) filed by Mr. McDonnell and by Mrs. McDonnell, who adopts the arguments made by Mr. McDonnell. To the extent that this Sealed Order does so, the Motions for Clarification are GRANTED. The Court dispenses with oral argument because the facts and legal contentions are adequately presented in the materials before the Court and oral argument would not aid in the decisional process. E.D. Va. Loc. Crim. R. 47(J).

The Order that Defendants seek to clarify ("Order of March 13") speaks for itself. The Order of March 13 was filed under seal in a separate case, In re Grand Jury Subpoenas, No. 3:14-ms-67, (E.D. Va. 2014). Defendants are not a party to the case in which the Order of March 13 was filed, and the Order of March 13 does not purport to direct Defendants in any way.

Let the Clerk send a copy of this Order to all counsel of record.

It is SO ORDERED.

/s/
James R. Spencer
Senior U. S. District Judge

ENTERED this 4th day of June 2014.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
EASTERN DISTRICT OF VIRGINIA
RICHMOND DIVISION

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,

v.

ROBERT F. MCDONNELL,

and

MAUREEN G. MCDONNELL,

Defendants.

Action No. 3:14-CR-12

ORDER

THIS MATTER is before the Court on two Motions for Issuance of Rule 17(c) Subpoenas Duces Tecum ("Motions") (ECF Nos. 210, 212) filed by Defendants. Upon due consideration, the Motions are GRANTED IN PART and DENIED IN PART.

Defendants move the Court to issue three subpoenas duces tecum pursuant to Federal Rule of Criminal Procedure 17(c) addressed to Jonnie Williams, Sr., Mary-Shea Sutherland, and Verizon Wireless. Defendants bear the burden to demonstrate that their requests meet each of three requirements: specificity, relevancy, and admissibility. United States v. Nixon, 418 U.S. 683, 700 (1974). Based on the inferences that may reasonably be drawn from the draft letter underlying the Motions, the Court finds that the Nixon requirements have only been satisfied as to those records described below.

Accordingly, pursuant to Federal Rule of Criminal Procedure 17(c), the Clerk is DIRECTED to issue three subpoenas duces tecum to the entities and persons listed as follows:

1. To Jonnie Williams, Sr., c/o Richard Cullen, McGuire Woods LLP, One James Center, 901 East Cary Street, Richmond, VA 23219-4030:
    a. Any text messages, emails, or other documents exchanged with Mary-Shea Sutherland between June 1, 2011 and the present; and
    b. Any draft communications to Mary-Shea Sutherland that were never sent;

  c. Any documents, or drafts of documents, related to Ms. Sutherland;
  d. Any text messages, emails, or other documents (or drafts of the same) exchanged with Jerry Kilgore concerning Mary-Shea Sutherland.

2. To Mary-Shea Sutherland, c/o Theodore D. Bruns, Blackburn, Conte, Schilling & Click P.C., 300 W. Main St., Richmond, VA 23220:
   a. Any text messages, emails, or other documents exchanged with Jonnie Williams between June 1, 2011 and the present; and
   b. Any draft communications to Jonnie Williams that were never sent;
   c. Any documents, or drafts of documents, related to Mr. Williams; and
   d. Any text messages, emails, or other documents (or drafts of the same) exchanged with Jerry Kilgore concerning Jonnie Williams.
3. To Verizon Wireless, c/o Verizon Subpoena, 180 Washington Valley Rd., Bedminster, NJ 07921: all text messages and records related to text messages and phone calls for the time period June 1, 2011 through January 1, 2013 for the following numbers:
   a. [REDACTED] (relevant phone number as previously requested by Defendants); and
   b. [REDACTED] (relevant phone number as previously requested by Defendants).

The requested information should be produced at the office of Holland & Knight c/o Timothy J. Taylor, 1600 Tysons Boulevard, Suite 700, Tysons Corner, VA 22102, on or before Wednesday, June 18, 2014, at 12:00 p.m.

Let the Clerk send a copy of this Order to all counsel of record.

It is SO ORDERED.

/s/
James R. Spencer
Senior U. S. District Judge

ENTERED this 6th day of June 2014.

IN THE UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT FOR THE
EASTERN DISTRICT OF VIRGINIA
Richmond Division

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA	)
	)
v	)
	)	No. 3:14cr12-JRS
ROBERT F MCDONNELL and	)
MAUREEN G. MCDONNELL,	)
Defendants.	)

GOVERNMENT'S MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT OF MOTION TO EXCLUDE EXPERT TESTIMONY

The United States respectfully moves to exclude purported expert testimony from five sources that defendant Robert F McDonnell has identified in his expert disclosure. According to that disclosure, Mr. McDonnell intends to call three attorneys, a forensic accountant, and an unidentified expert on medical or Food and Drug Administration ("FDA") practices. Mr. McDonnell claims that those individuals will give various expert opinions on, among other things, witness credibility, Mr. McDonnell's mental state, the legality of Mr. McDonnell's conduct, and the legal advice they would have given Mr. McDonnell had he asked for it.

As explained in greater detail below, the testimony of each of Mr. McDonnell's purported experts is inadmissible under the Federal Rules of Evidence for several reasons. First, expert testimony from criminal defense attorneys about the financial value of Jonnie Williams's immunity agreement and other factors that they claim affect Williams's credibility is precluded by settled Fourth Circuit precedent and common sense. Second, any proposed expert testimony about Mr. McDonnell's various mental states is inadmissible under Fed. R. Evid. 704(b). Third, the legal opinions of Mr. McDonnell's proposed experts do no more than tell the jury what verdict to reach, and the proffered legal opinions do not satisfy the requirements of Fed. R. Evid. 702. Fourth, testimony about what lawyers would have told Mr. McDonnell to do had he asked is irrelevant when Mr. McDonnell concedes he did not seek those lawyers' advice before engaging in the conduct at issue. And finally, each of Mr. McDonnell's disclosures is facially insufficient under Fed. R. Crim. P 16(b)(1)(C). For these and the other reasons set forth below, the proposed expert testimony should be excluded.

Because the deadline for the United States to notice any expert testimony in anticipation of or in response to Mr. McDonnell's expert disclosures is June 28, 2014, the United States respectfully requests expedited briefing and ruling from the Court on this matter before that deadline.

I. The Legal Standards for Expert Testimony

Under Rule 702, to be admissible expert testimony must be (a) helpful, (b) based on sufficient facts, and (c) the product of reliable principles and methods that were (d) reliably applied to the facts of the case.[1] These requirements "impose[] a special obligation upon a trial judge to ensure than any and all scientific testimony is not only relevant, but reliable." Kumho Tire Co. v. Carmichael, 526 U.S. 137, 147 (1999), quoted in United States v. Hassan, 742 F.3d 104, 130 (4th Cir. 2014). And in the Fourth Circuit, it is well-settled that "expert opinions that constitute evaluations of witness credibility, even when such evaluations are rooted in scientific or other technical expertise, are inadmissible under Rule 702." Nimely v. City of New York, 414 F.3d 381, 398 (2d Cir. 2005), quoted in United States v. Allen, 716 F.3d 98, 106 (4th Cir. 2013). Moreover, "when a witness gives an opinion about the meaning of a specialized legal term, the witness is giving a legal conclusion that is better handled by the judge and, coming from the witness, will be of little assistance to the jury." United States v. Offill, 666 F.3d 168, 175 (4th Cir. 2011). Thus, expert testimony proffering legal conclusions is inadmissible under Rule 702 because "it does not help the jury for an expert to give testimony that states a legal conclusion or draws a legal conclusion by applying law to the facts." Id. (internal citations and quotations omitted).

---

[1] Rule 702 reads as follows:

A witness who is qualified as an expert by knowledge, skill, experience, training, or education may testify in the form of an opinion or otherwise if:

(a) the expert's scientific, technical, or other specialized knowledge will help the trier of fact to understand the evidence or to determine a fact in issue;

(b) the testimony is based on sufficient facts or data;

(c) the testimony is the product of reliable principles and methods;

(d) the expert has reliably applied the principles and methods to the facts of the case.

In addition, even when proposed expert testimony meets Rule 702's threshold requirements, Rule 704(b) further restricts its use. That rule provides, "In a criminal case, an expert witness must not state an opinion about whether the defendant did or did not have a mental state or condition that constitutes an element of the crime charged or a defense. Those matters are for the trier of fact alone." And as with all evidence, proposed expert testimony must not violate Fed. R. Evid. 608(b)'s preclusion of "extrinsic evidence to prove specific instances of a witness's conduct in order to attack the witness's character for truthfulness" or Fed. R. Evid. 403's bar against evidence that "confus[es] the issues" or "mislead[s] the jury."

Finally under Rule 16(b)(1)(C), a defendant seeking to introduce expert testimony must provide pretrial notice that explains his experts' "opinions, the bases and reasons for those opinions, and the witness's qualifications." At the request of the parties, the Court set the deadline for such disclosures 60 days before trial, or May 29, 2014. See Docket No. 100, at 3. The agreed discovery order further permits any party to notice an expert responsive to any expert noticed by the other party no later than June 28, 2014. Id.

II. Mr. McDonnell's Expert Disclosures

On May 29, 2014, Mr. McDonnell provided the United States with a seven-page notice of his intent to call five purported experts in his case-in-chief at trial. That notice is attached as Exhibit A. On June 12, 2014, Mr. McDonnell provided a two-page supplemental notice, which is attached as Exhibit B.

First, Mr. McDonnell proposes to have Mark L. Earley, Esq., a former Virginia Attorney General whose amicus brief on legal issues was previously rejected by this Court, see Doc. No. 135, provide expert testimony. According to Mr. McDonnell's notice, Earley will (1) testify that the official actions charged in the Indictment "have never been understood by Virginia officials to be 'official acts,'" and that "government officials only engage in official action when they attempt to influence specific decisions that such agencies or officials actually make," Exh. A at 2 (emphasis added); (2) "opine that the conduct alleged here is consistent with Mr. McDonnell not having a corrupt intent to defraud the people of Virginia of his honest services," id. at 3; (3) "testify that if he [as Attorney General] had been presented with a request by a Governor to act in accordance with the allegations set forth in paragraph 111(c) of the Indictment, he would have concluded that" such conduct was legal, id., and (4) testify "that neither the Governor nor the [Virginia] Department of Health had jurisdiction or control over decisions to be conducted by [state university] researchers" and that an attempt to exert influence over such researchers would thus be "undermine the integrity of the results and be counterproductive," id.

Second, Mr. McDonnell proposes to have a criminal defense attorney, Peter H. White, Esq., testify about Jonnie Williams's immunity agreement and other factors that White will contend affect Williams's credibility.

Third, Mr. McDonnell seeks to introduce testimony from an accountant, J. Allen Kosowsky. Mr. McDonnell states that Kosowsky, like White, will address the purported "financial benefits that the Government has conferred on Mr. Williams, including the financial value of immunity for the company in which he is the primary shareholder, as well as the value of the Government's assistance in litigation against him and his company." Id. at 5–6. Mr. McDonnell also seeks to have Kosowsky testify "about various questionable transactions involving Mr. Williams or Star Scientific" to show the alleged "financial benefits conferred on Mr. Williams and Star Scientific" by the United States. Exh. B at 2. Moreover, Kosowsky, an accountant, also purports to offer an opinion on whether Mr. McDonnell's omissions on loan applications were "were intentional, fraudulent, or even material." Exh. A at 5.

Fourth, Mr. McDonnell proposes to offer testimony from Norman A. Thomas, Esq., a lawyer and former judge on the Fourth Judicial Circuit of Virginia, who will testify that the Statement of Economic Interests ("SOEI") form that Mr. McDonnell filled out is "vague" and "that reasonable public officials could vary in their interpretation of [the form's] instructions." Id. at 6. Mr. McDonnell also proposes to have Thomas testify that "the forms submitted by Mr. McDonnell reflect a reasonable understanding of the SOEI's vague requirements governing the disclosure of loans, securities, and gifts, including those loans, securities, and gifts related to Mr. Williams and Star Scientific." Id.

Finally, Mr. McDonnell proposes to offer a presently unidentified expert who will either testify about the FDA's investigation of Star Scientific, Inc. or contend that Williams has made medically unsupported claims about Star Scientific's products. Exh. A at 1–2.

III. Argument

The reasons for excluding the expert testimony described above are explained more fully below.

I. The proposed testimony of former Virginia Attorney General Mark L. Earley is inadmissible on multiple grounds.

As an overall matter, it appears that Earley's proposed testimony is little more than an attempt to rehash purely legal arguments advanced in the amicus brief he attempted to file—namely, his views about how the Hobbs Act applies to campaign contributions, his arguments about how the First Amendment applies to quid pro quo payments that a governor receives, his arguments based on the rule of lenity, his position that federalism should limit the scope of "official acts," and his arguments on statutory interpretation. But as explained below, these are all "legal conclusion[s] that [are] better handled by the judge and, coming from the witness, will be of little assistance to the jury." Offill, 666 F.3d at 175. And to the extent Earley's proposed testimony attempts to circumvent the bar on naked legal conclusions, it does so in ways that otherwise violate Rules 704(b) and 403.

A. Earley's proposed testimony constitutes an inadmissible legal conclusion.

First, Mr. McDonnell proposes to have Earley offer an opinion on whether the conduct charged in the Indictment (and the evidence introduced at trial) satisfies the definition of an "official act," the exact statutory term used in 18 U.S.C. § 201(a)(3) and an element of the charged public corruption offenses. According to Mr. McDonnell's expert notice, Earley will testify that the official acts charged in the Indictment "have never been understood by Virginia officials to be 'official acts.'" Exh. A at 2 (emphasis added). He will also testify that "government officials only engage in official action when they attempt to influence specific decisions that such agencies or officials actually make." Id. (emphasis added). This testimony is inadmissible because it simply tells the jury what verdict to reach, using the specific statutory language at issue. It is therefore unhelpful under Rule 702 and should be excluded.

Under Fed. R. Evid. 704(a), an expert's opinion is not automatically inadmissible because it addresses an ultimate issue in the case (other than a defendant's intent, which is addressed in Rule 704(b)). Rule 704(a) provides, "An opinion is not objectionable just because it embraces an ultimate issue." But the Advisory Committee Notes to Rule 704 explain that Rule 704(a) "does not lower the bars so as to admit all opinions," for "opinions must be helpful to the trier of fact," which is an express requirement of Rule 702. United States v. Barile, 286 F.3d 749, 759 (4th Cir. 2002) (quoting 1972 Advisory Committee Notes). The helpfulness requirement bars admission of "opinions which would merely tell the jury what result to reach, somewhat in the manner of the oath-helpers of an earlier day." Id. at 759–60. Thus, "opinion testimony that states a legal standard or draws a legal conclusion by applying law to the facts is generally inadmissible." United States v. McIver, 470 F.3d 550, 562 (4th Cir. 2006) (citing Barile, 286 F.3d at 760); see also Offill, 666 F.3d at 175 (same).

The Fourth Circuit has noted that one important way of determining whether an expert is giving an unhelpful opinion that simply states a legal conclusion is whether the expert testifies using legal terms of art that have a specified meaning. Barile, 286 F.3d at 756, 761. Thus, in a case where a key issue was whether an officer used excessive force, and the legal standard was whether the officer's use of force was "objectively unreasonable," the Fourth Circuit explained that "Rule 704 justifies differentiating between the officers' testimony that they saw no 'law enforcement' or 'legitimate' reason for Perkins's kicks and testimony that Perkins's actions were 'objectively unreasonable.'" United States v. Perkins, 470 F.3d 150, 160 (4th Cir. 2006).

Here, Earley's proposed testimony that actions alleged as quo in this case "have never been understood by Virginia officials to be 'official acts,'" Exh. A at 2 (emphasis added), clearly falls within the latter, impermissible category of a purely legal conclusion using legal terms of art. For example, in addition to using the legal term of art "official act," Earley will purportedly testify that the acts in question "are not actions or decisions on matters brought before Governors in their official capacity." Id. This phrase is nearly identical to § 201(a)(3)'s statutory text, which defines an official act as "any decision or action on any question, matter, cause, suit, proceeding or controversy, which may at any time be pending, or which may by law be brought before any public official, in such official's official capacity." Moreover, Earley's proposed testimony that the alleged official acts "are not understood by Virginia officials and their legal advisors as exerting influence on government decisions," Exh. A at 2, is nearly verbatim what Mr. McDonnell's counsel stated repeatedly in their legal arguments in support of his motion to dismiss. See, e.g., Doc. No. 148, at 18 (arguing that "official acts" are "limited to acts that exert inappropriate influence over an actual governmental decision"). Setting aside the fact that state government officials' understanding (or misunderstanding) of federal bribery laws is no defense (assuming Earley's opinion even accurately reflects those officials' understandings), Earley's testimony about what is or is not an official act is an inadmissible legal conclusion.[2]

Once the legal conclusion that no official acts are charged in this case is stripped away from Earley's opinion, the remaining content of his testimony directly undercuts the bottom line of his opinion and actually supports the Indictment's allegations. Specifically, Mr. McDonnell's expert notice for Earley states that he acknowledges that "arranging meetings with other government officials for constituents," "hosting events at the Governor's Mansion," "promoting Virginia businesses," and "other similar activities" are "a routine part of any Governor's activities." Exh. A at 2. This testimony, however, appears to be little more than common-sense fact testimony that governors customarily do engage in the types of conduct alleged to be official acts here. Indeed, if the bottom line of Earley's opinion were not phrased in terms of what constitutes an "official act"—and instead were put in terms of what are "settled practices" of a Virginia governor—his opinion is that actions that are "a routine part of any Governor's activities" are not "settled practices" of a governor—an internal inconsistency that the expert notice never explains and provide no basis for explaining.

---

[2] Indeed, the inadmissibly legal nature of Earley's opinions is easy to understand by considering how an effective cross-examination of those opinions might unfold. For example, it would undercut Earley's opinion to point out his failure to consider the Fourth Circuit's holding in United States v. Jefferson, 674 F.3d 332, 357 (4th Cir. 2012), in which it found sufficient evidence at trial "that African trade issues were 'matters' or 'causes' that were pending" before former Congressman Jefferson. Similarly, it would undercut Earley's opinion to bring to his attention this Court's invocation of Jefferson in denying Mr. McDonnell's motion to dismiss. See Doc. No. 175, at 2 (citing Jefferson as "enumerating among the defendant's official acts, '[a]ttemping to facilitate and promote ventures between foreign governments and the businesses who were paying'"). But as this Court has already ruled, whether the alleged official acts "in fact constituted 'the corruption of official positions through misuse of influence in governmental decision-making' is a question for the jury based on the evidence adduced at trial." Id. (quoting United States v. Carson, 464 F.2d 424, 434 (2d Cir. 1972)).

Mr. McDonnell's brief expert notice for Earley fails to show how he is applying any expertise beyond stating a legal conclusion—based on factual admissions that directly undermine those conclusions. Because his opinion is bereft of any identifiable, or permissible, methodology, his testimony should be excluded. See, e.g., United States v. Johnson, 617 F.3d 286, 294 (4th Cir. 2010) ("Although Agent Smith repeatedly indicated that he had the expertise to testify regarding drug jargon and the drug trade generally, he provided virtually no methodology or guiding principles that would enable him to decode the wiretapped phone calls in this case.").

In seeking to admit Earley's testimony, Mr. McDonnell's counsel have told the United States[3] that they are relying on the ruling admitting testimony by former Congressman McHugh in the trial of William Jefferson. See United States v. Jefferson, 623 F Supp. 2d 683 (E.D. Va. 2009). But that case is distinguishable on two important grounds.

---

[3] During a conference call with counsel for the defendants on June 5, 2014, the United States raised its concerns regarding the admissibility of the defense experts' proposed

First, the opinion in Jefferson never endorsed having an expert tell the jury whether something was or was not an "official act." The district court concluded that "it is clear that Mr. McHugh's proposed testimony that certain activities are 'routinely performed' by congressmen neither tracks the language of the applicable statute, nor arguably states a legal conclusion." Jefferson, 623 F Supp. 2d at 687. Earley's proposed testimony, in contrast, is phrased using the specific statutory language of an "official act" and tells the jury what conclusion to reach on offense elements.

Second, and relatedly, McHugh was informing the jury about what members of Congress routinely do and the types of issues and matters that they routinely address. His testimony had a straightforward factual content that was not expressed by simply telling the jury what is or is not an official act under § 201(a)(3). Because of the straightforward factual content of McHugh's testimony, grounded in his experience as a member of Congress, his testimony did not run afoul of the requirement that an expert have a discernable methodology. But the identifiable factual content of Earley's testimony is directly at odds with his opinion, and his opinion rests on legal conclusions stated directly in the language of the statute and that rely on legal arguments not properly addressed in testimony to the jury.

On Mr. McDonnell's view, a public official in a corruption case may take the stand as an expert and simply define certain regularly performed activities as falling outside the definition of an "official act" because officials in that position claim that the actions fall outside the scope of the bribery laws. Such an approach cannot be squared with the law, and it is perhaps especially testimony in an attempt to resolve the issues raised in this memorandum without resorting to court intervention. That attempt was unsuccessful.

---

easy to see that this is an incorrect approach when it is applied to a lower-level government official.

For example, under the Hobbs Act, a prosecutor could not receive a secret payment for the prosecutor's own financial enrichment, do so with corrupt intent, and take the funds in exchange for arranging a meeting with a supervisor overseeing a prosecution. In a trial of that prosecutor under § 201, another prosecutor could not take the stand as an expert and simply tell the jury that such meetings are not official acts or that prosecutors generally regard such meetings as not being covered by the bribery laws, clearing the way for prosecutors corruptly to take payments for the meetings. Even if no formal job description for the prosecutor listed such meetings as being necessarily part of the job, even if there was no statute, regulation, or even employee handbook that required such a meeting, and even if the meeting was not itself a direct exercise of state power, a jury could find that the meeting was an official act after receiving evidence that such meetings were, to use Mr. Earley's words, "a routine part of any [prosecutor's] activities." A jury could conclude that the meeting was an official act simply through the fact that the meetings were routinely held and that the subject matter of the meeting involved "a pending question, matter, or cause that was before him." Jefferson, 674 F.3d at 357 ("Inasmuch as the trial court gave its 'settled practice' instruction in tandem with the statutory definition of 'official act,' the jury was not authorized to ignore the directive that Jefferson's official acts must pertain to a pending question, matter, or cause that was before him. In other words, the jury could not rely exclusively on Jefferson's settled practices.").

Essentially, Mr. McDonnell adopts a view of both federal corruption laws and the law on the admissibility of expert testimony that allows public officials to take the witness stand and define for themselves what constitutes prohibited corruption. But such an approach cannot be squared with the Fourth Circuit's approach in Jefferson and invites self-dealing by public officials. Mr. McDonnell's approach to expert testimony about what is an "official act" also violates the Fourth Circuit's law on experts generally. See, e.g., Barile, 286 F.3d at 761 (testimony by former director of Food and Drug Administration's Office of Device that defendant's submissions to FDA did not contain "materially misleading statements" properly excluded); United States v. Wilson, 133 F.3d 251, 265 (4th Cir. 1997) (testimony of two former state Assistant Attorneys General about scope of Clean Water Act properly excluded).

B. Earley's proposed testimony also violates Rule 704(b).

Next, Earley's proposed testimony also violates Rules 704 and 702 by giving an improper opinion on a defendant's mental state. According to Mr. McDonnell's expert notice, Earley will "opine that the conduct alleged here is consistent with Mr. McDonnell not having a corrupt intent to defraud the people of Virginia of his honest services or to otherwise engage in official action." Exh. A at 3. As noted above, Rule 704(b) prohibits expert testimony on a defendant's mental state. See, e.g., United States v. Fowler, 932 F.2d 306, 315 (4th Cir. 1991) (The jury "need[ed] no expert witnesses to speculate about a defendant's state of mind. The expert could not testify that Fowler was confused, not culpable."). Similarly, the Fourth Circuit has agreed with courts that "have held inadmissible testimony that a defendant's actions constituted 'extortion.'" McIver, 470 F.3d at 562 (citing DiBella v. Hopkins, 403 F.3d 102, 121 (2d Cir. 2005)). See also United States v. Valverde, 846 F.2d 513, 517 (8th Cir. 1998) ("Valverde essentially wanted to ask the expert to tell the jury whether his conversations with the guards were in fact bribery attempts. This was precisely the issue before the jury. We thus hold that the district court's restriction of the proffered testimony was within its discretion."). Moreover, even if it were possible to present expert testimony on whether Mr. McDonnell had the requisite corrupt intent, Earley has no expertise, beyond that possessed by every person including jurors, in evaluating other people's mental states.

C. Earley's proposed testimony attempts to inject an inadmissible advice-of-counsel defense.

Mr. McDonnell's expert notice also attempts impermissibly to inject an advice-of-counsel defense into the case. The notice states, "Mr. Earley will testify that if he had been presented with a request by a Governor to act in accordance with the allegations set forth in paragraph 111(c) of the Indictment, he would have concluded that such activities are not actions or decisions on matters before the Governor in his official capacity, which would corroborate the evidence showing that Mr. McDonnell did not act with the requisite specific intent." Exh. A at 3. An advice-of-counsel defense requires "'(a) full disclosure of all pertinent facts to an expert and (b) good faith reliance on the expert's advice.'" United States v. Butler, 211 F.3d 826, 833 (4th Cir. 2000) (quoting United States v. Miller, 658 F.2d 235, 237 (4th Cir. 1981)). Earley did not provide advice to Mr. McDonnell before he acted, making both requirements impossible to satisfy.

D. Earley's proposed testimony about the Tobacco Commission and state universities is unreliable under Rule 702 and inadmissible under Rule 403.

Finally, Mr. McDonnell also claims that Earley will provide testimony that "will demonstrate that Mr. McDonnell did not have any meaningful influence over the Tobacco Commission" and that his administration lacked "jurisdiction or control over decisions on research to be conducted by researchers" at state medical schools. Exh. A at 3. Earley's testimony on these points fails to satisfy Rule 702, and it is likely to confuse and mislead the jury in any event.

First, a governor has multiple ways to influence decisions by the Tobacco Commission and state universities, and Earley's opinions to the contrary fail to satisfy Rule 702's reliability requirements. For example, under Va. Code § 3.2-3102(A), the Tobacco Commission has 31 members. The statute provides that, of those 31 members, a governor or his cabinet members ultimately selects 21 of the members. Id. Of the remaining 10, the statute specifies that 6 will be members of the House of Delegates and 4 are members of the Senate. Id. Earley offers no reliable method for explaining how, under this statutory scheme, a governor cannot influence the Tobacco Commission's decisions. Similarly, under Va. Code §§ 23-50.6 and 23-70, the governor appoints all 16 members of the Board of Visitors that governs Virginia Commonwealth University and all 17 members of the Board of Visitors that governs the University of Virginia. Indeed, it is common sense that any actions by a governor towards a commission or university whose leaders that governor appoints is capable of having influence. And presumably, that is why Mr. McDonnell previously has attempted to use that influence in other contexts. See, e.g., June 22, 2012, Ltr. from Robert F. McDonnell to Board Members of the University of Virginia ("But let me be absolutely clear: I want final action by the Board on Tuesday. If you fail to do so, I will ask for the resignation of the entire Board on Wednesday.").[4]

What is more, Earley's proposed testimony about a governor's lack of total control over the Tobacco Commission or state universities is beside the point, as it is well-settled that to support a bribery charge "the government . . . need not show that the 'question, matter,' etc. at issue was or could have been pending before defendant pursuant to any responsibilities explicitly assigned by law, nor is the government required to prove that the defendant had the authority to resolve the question, matter, cause, [etc.] . . . at issue." United States v. Jefferson, 634 F. Supp.

---

[4] Available at http://www.scribd.com/doc/97968146/Gov-Bob-McDonnell-Letter-to-U-Va-Board (last accessed June 15, 2014).

2d 595, 603 (E.D. Va. 2009). As a result, it would be misleading and confusing for an expert to testify that conduct is not an official act because a public official does not have de jure authority to carry out that act, as the law only requires that the bribe payor reasonably believe the public official had the power to do so or even merely influence in the process. See, e.g., United States v. Bencivengo, __ F 3d __, 2014 WL 1613315, at *6, (3d Cir. Apr. 23, 2014); United States v. Mazzei, 521 F.2d 639, 643 (3d Cir. 1975) (en banc) (citing United States v. Price, 507 F.2d 1349 (4th Cir. 1974)). And in any event, the United States need not prove that Mr. McDonnell actually influenced the Tobacco Commission or the state universities to establish an improper quid pro quo, as "fulfillment of the quid pro quo is not an element" of a bribery offense. Evans v. United States, 504 U.S. 255, 268 (1992). Thus, Earley's proposed expert opinion that a governor's influence over the Tobacco Commission or a state university would not be "meaningful" or would be "counterproductive" should be excluded.

2. The proposed testimony from Peter H. White is inadmissible on multiple grounds.

Mr. McDonnell also proposes to offer expert testimony from White, a criminal defense attorney, about (1) an immunity agreement between Mr. Williams and the United States, (2) the purported value to Williams of the government's stay of civil litigation involving Star Scientific and Williams, and (3) purported government failures to investigate Williams and Star Scientific for violations of 21 U.S.C. § 331(a). This testimony is flatly inadmissible for multiple reasons.

A. The Fourth Circuit flatly prohibits expert testimony on witnesses' credibility.

First, countless cases have concluded that "expert opinions that constitute evaluations of witness credibility, even when such evaluations are rooted in scientific or technical expertise, are inadmissible under Rule 702." Nimely, 414 F.3d at 398, quoted in Allen, 716 F.3d at 106. This rule bars not only expert testimony by, for example, a psychologist who purports to be able to tell which witnesses are telling the truth, see, e.g., United States v. Cecil, 836 F.2d 1431, 1441–43 (4th Cir. 1988), but also an expert witness who seeks to establish bias in other witnesses and testifies about agreements with prosecutors. For example in Allen, the expert whose testimony was excluded intended to discuss "§ 5K1.1 letters, § 3553(e) motions, and 21 U.S.C. § 851 notices—all of which entail the government asking for a lesser sentence in light of a defendant's substantial cooperation." Allen, 716 F.3d at 105. But the Fourth Circuit held that testimony inadmissible. See also United States v. Davis, 63 F App'x 76, 80 (4th Cir. 2003) (affirming exclusion of testimony by "an experienced criminal defense attorney who would have testified that granting sentence reductions for cooperating witnesses affected their truthfulness").

To take another example, the Fourth Circuit has affirmed the exclusion of an expert who would have testified about sleep deprivation's effect on a defendant when he made an earlier statement to law enforcement. Such expert testimony, the Fourth Circuit explained, would improperly intrude on the jury's role in deciding credibility. United States v. Lespier, 725 F.3d 437, 449 (4th Cir. 2013) ("Simply put, the trial court did not abuse its discretion in excluding Lespier's expert on the basis that his testimony would 'intrude[] on the jury's role regarding the assessment of the credibility of witnesses."). Similarly, the Fourth Circuit upheld the exclusion of expert testimony from forensic anthropologists who were not commenting directly on witness credibility but were comparing bank surveillance photographs to the defendant's appearance. As the Fourth Circuit explained, "the evaluation of a witness's credibility is a determination usually within the jury's exclusive purview." United States v. Dorsey, 45 F.3d 809, 815 (4th Cir. 1995) ("Because in this case, the expert testimony was introduced largely to cast doubt on the positive identifications of Dorsey by both bank tellers involved in the robberies, the evidence was properly excluded.").

Other circuits agree. As the Eighth Circuit held in one case, "[a] jury d[oes] not need expert testimony explaining the details of sentencing procedures to understand that the government's witnesses might have an incentive to incriminate [the defendant]. 'Expert testimony is appropriate when it relates to issues that are beyond the ken of people of ordinary intelligence. Where the subject matter is within the knowledge and experience of laymen, expert testimony is superfluous.'" United States v. Davis, 457 F.3d 817, 824 (8th Cir. 2006) (quoting United States v. French, 12 F.3d 114, 116 (8th Cir. 1993)). Similarly, in recently reversing a defendant's convictions under the plain error standard after the government introduced expert testimony on witness credibility, the Tenth Circuit noted three reasons for the prohibition. "Such testimony: (1) usurps a critical function of the jury; (2) is not helpful to the jury, which can make its own determination of credibility; and (3) when provided by impressively qualified experts on the credibility of other witnesses is prejudicial and unduly influences the jury." United States v. Hill, __ F.3d __, 2014 WL 1663084, at *8 (10th Cir. Apr. 28, 2014) (internal quotation marks and citation omitted). In collecting authority from a total of eight circuits, the Tenth Circuit concluded that it "appears our sibling circuits that have considered this issue have uniformly agreed" that expert testimony on witness credibility is improper. Id. at *10.

The rule against expert testimony on witness credibility reflects in part a fundamental feature of American criminal law. "Our legal system," the Supreme Court has explained, "is built on the premise that it is the province of the jury to weigh the credibility of competing witnesses." Perry v. New Hampshire, 132 S. Ct. 716, 723 (2012) (quoting Kansas v. Ventris, 556 U.S. 586, 594 n* (2009)).

Of course, the defendants will be permitted to ask Williams himself about his immunity agreement during his examination, and indeed, Williams's understanding of the agreement is what matters, not a third party's view of the agreement. The defendants may also argue to the jury in closing argument about factors affecting Mr. Williams's credibility—provided that argument does not devolve into calling witnesses liars. See, e.g., United States v. Woods, 710 F.3d 195, 202–03 (4th Cir. 2013) (noting restriction on prosecutors calling witnesses liars in closing argument); United States v. Ollivierre, 378 F.3d 412, 423 (4th Cir. 2004) ("Because the prosecutor's rebuttal argument was permissibly responsive to [defense counsel's] accusations that Caldwell had lied, the invited reply rule is implicated."), remanded on other grounds, 543 U.S. 1112 (2005). See also United States v. Young, 470 U.S. 1, 8–9 (1985) ("Defense counsel, like the prosecutor, must refrain from interjecting personal beliefs into the presentation of his case."). The defendants may also request a jury instruction on witness credibility. But parties may not "introduce expert testimony solely for the purpose of undermining the credibility of" witnesses because that "is not the function of an expert." Allen, 716 F.3d at 105–06.

B. White's testimony is also unreliable and violates Fed. R. Evid. 702.

Although the United States does not dispute White's ability to explain an immunity agreement, his opinion goes beyond that and fails to satisfy Fed. R. Evid. 702, even apart from the rule prohibiting expert testimony about witness credibility. White's opinion fails to satisfy Rule 702 when he opines on the purported value to Williams of the government's stay of civil litigation involving Star Scientific and Williams, and the purported government failures to investigate Williams and Star Scientific for violations of 21 U.S.C. § 331(a).

Nothing in White's resume or Mr. McDonnell's expert disclosure reveals that he has expertise in assigning a value to short stays in two civil lawsuits—particularly in cases where neither the plaintiffs nor defendants opposed the stays. The strategic reasoning of the parties in those cases is shielded by privileges, and it is easy to see ways in which both sides in the civil litigation could benefit from the brief stays. Rational civil plaintiffs in those lawsuits would benefit, for example, from reviewing the trial transcripts of witnesses in the criminal case before conducting further civil discovery; the relatively brief delay at issue here might matter little to the plaintiffs; and the plaintiffs might conclude that a jury's finding in this criminal case that the defendants committed crimes in receiving payments from Williams could strengthen the civil plaintiffs' hands. These points underscore the more fundamental point that White lacks a factual basis (and describes no reliable method or even any method at all) for drawing conclusions about the value of the civil litigation generally and hence how the brief stays might affect that litigation.

As stated previously, under Rule 702 expert testimony must be (a) helpful, (b) based on sufficient facts, and (c) the product of reliable principles and methods that were (d) reliably applied to the facts of the case. And in evaluating the reliability of expert testimony, the Supreme Court identified five factors in Daubert v. Merrell Dow Pharmaceuticals, Inc., 509 U.S. 579 (1993). Those factors are "(1) whether the particular scientific theory can be (and has been) tested; (2) whether the theory has been subjected to peer review and publication; (3) the known or potential rate of error; (4) the existence and maintenance of standards controlling the technique's operation; and (5) whether the technique has achieved 'general acceptance' in the relevant scientific or expert community." Hassan, 742 F.3d at 130 (internal quotation marks and citations omitted). This test is flexible when applied to nonscientific experts. See, e.g., United States v. Bynum, 604 F.3d 161, 167 (4th Cir. 2010) ("[A]though experiential expert testimony does not rely on anything like a scientific method, such testimony is admissible under Rule 702 so long as an experiential witness explains how his experience leads to the conclusion reached, why his experience is a sufficient basis for the opinion, and how his experience is reliably applied to the facts." (internal brackets and quotation marks omitted)).

White's opinion that the civil stays or the immunity has some benefit to Williams that cause him to be biased is not "helpful" under Rule 702 because the jury can make its own assessment of credibility, and the defendants can ask Williams on cross-examination about his sources of bias.

But White's opinion is also unreliable. The valuation of litigation is complex. To take a more ordinary example than is presented here, determining reasonable settlement values of a civil lawsuit depends on a very wide range of factors – the applicable legal principles, the strength of available evidence including witness testimony, the resources available on each side to litigate the case, the strength of the evidence showing damages if there is liability, the ability of the defendants to pay damages if damages are ordered, and so on. Here, White proposes to opine on the value of a short stay or brief delay in civil litigation. But White's opinion is not "based on sufficient facts" under Rule 702(b) because it is apparent that he lacks the necessary information to determine the value of the stay to the respective parties. His opinion likewise cannot be "the product of reliable principles and methods" under Rule 702(c). He identifies no body of recognized, reliable expertise that assigns value to a stay like this, and regardless it would be impossible to say given the facts presented here that the stay will ultimately benefit Williams and Star Scientific more than the plaintiffs. Finally, given that White has identified no set of reliable principles that he is using, he could not have reliably applied those principles to the relevant facts, which again he does not possess. Thus, his opinion also fails Rule 702(d). Cf. Johnson, 617 F.3d at 294. In sum, the failure of White's opinion to satisfy any of the criteria in Daubert weighs against the reliability of his opinion. "A witness who invokes 'my expertise' rather than analytical strategies widely used by specialists is not an expert as Rule 702 defines that term. As we so often reiterate: An expert who supplies nothing but a bottom line supplies nothing of value to the judicial process." Zenith Electronics Corp. v. WH-TV Broadcasting Corp., 395 F.3d 416, 419 (7th Cir. 2005) (quotation omitted).

The Supreme Court has observed that "nothing in either Daubert or the Federal Rules of Evidence requires a district court to admit opinion evidence that is connected to existing data only by the ipse dixit of the expert. A court may conclude that there is simply too great an analytical gap between the data and the opinion proffered." General Elec. Co. v. Joiner, 522 U.S. 136, 146 (1997). In this case, White has offered neither data nor reliable method. Indeed, his opinion is worse than the ipse dixit of an expert because even the bottom line of the opinion that he will give remains opaque.

Moreover, White lacks the requisite facts for drawing conclusion about either whether Williams and Star Scientific violated § 331(a) or the government's evaluation of Williams's and Star Scientific's conduct. But even if White had detailed knowledge of an FDA offense, it also would be improper for White to tell the jury that, in his opinion, Williams is guilty of an offense under § 331(a), a topic addressed next.

C. Portions of White's testimony violate Fed. R. Evid. 608(b).

Under Fed. R. Evid. 608(b), "extrinsic evidence is not admissible to prove specific instances of a witness's conduct in order to attack or support the witness's character for truthfulness." White's opinion positing that Williams and Star Scientific are guilty of violations of § 331(a) both violates Rule 608(b) and illustrates perfectly why the restriction in Rule 608(b) exists. Rule 608(b) exists so that trials are not bogged down on collateral issues by incorporating mini trials about whether or not a witness committed some crime not charged in the current trial.

See, e.g., United States v. Day, 700 F.3d 713, 728 (4th Cir. 2012) (district court properly excluded report under Rule 608(b) that described how lead investigator mishandled evidence in case; report was extrinsic evidence that is inadmissible under Rule 608(b)); United States v. Myers, 589 F.3d 117, 124 (4th Cir. 2009) (trial court did not abuse its discretion in excluding evidence about whether witness committed criminal conduct that could affect his truthfulness). White's opinion illustrates why this rule exists; this trial would be greatly lengthened if a trial about public corruption could suddenly be sidetracked into a debate about whether the person from whom the defendants corruptly took payments separately committed FDA offenses.

D. White's testimony should be excluded under Fed. R. Evid. 403.

Even if White's testimony were admissible under Rule 702 and not prohibited by Rule 608(b), or some part of it were, it still should be excluded. Under Rule 403, a court "may exclude relevant evidence if its probative value is substantially outweighed by a danger of one or more of the following: unfair prejudice, confusing the issues, misleading the jury, undue delay, wasting time, or needlessly presenting cumulative evidence." Every one of the reasons listed in Rule 403 for excluding testimony applies in this case. White's speculation about the value of brief stays in civil litigation, his speculation about possible charges under § 331(a), and his discussion of immunity agreements on points that can be covered in cross-examination of Williams are a waste of time, would delay what is likely to be an already lengthy trial, could confuse the jury about the issues before them, and would cause unfair prejudice. And because White's testimony is simultaneously speculative and cumulative of cross-examination, it follows that the probative value of White's testimony is not great. In short, his testimony should be excluded under Rule 403—even setting aside the flat inadmissibility of expert testimony on credibility and the prohibition in Rule 608(b).

E. Mr. McDonnell's expert disclosures for White's testimony violate Fed. R. Crim. P. 16(b)(1)(C).

If this Court does not exclude all of White's testimony outright, Mr. McDonnell should be ordered to supplement his expert disclosure. More specifically, Mr. McDonnell's expert notice is deficient because it fails to state what White believes the value actually is of the stay of the civil litigation and the immunity agreement, and the notice provides no bases or reasons supporting his unexplained conclusions. Thus, rather than comply with Rule 16(b)(1)(C)'s notice requirements, Mr. McDonnell's notice improperly provides at best an insufficient "list of topics," United States v. Rettenberger, 344 F.3d 702, 706 (7th Cir. 2003), and not the "bases and reasons for [the experts'] opinions" as the plain language of Rule 16(b)(1)(C) requires. Before filing this motion, the United States requested greater disclosure from Mr. McDonnell, but he declined to provide any further details.

3. The proposed testimony of J. Allen Kosowsky is inadmissible on multiple grounds.

Mr. McDonnell's third proposed expert is Kosowsky, an accountant. As explained below, Kosowsky's proposed testimony, like White's, attempts to proffer impermissible opinions on credibility and otherwise violates Rule 608(b). In addition, Kosowksy's proposed testimony also violates Rule 704(b) and Rule 403, and it is inadequately noticed under Rule 16(b)(1)(C).

A. Kosowksy's proposed testimony impermissibly opines on witness credibility. does not satisfy Rule 702, and otherwise violates Rule 608(b)

First, Mr. McDonnell reports that J. Allen Kosowsky will "outline, explain, and quantify the various financial benefits that the Government has conferred on Mr. Williams, including the financial value of immunity for the company in which he is the primary shareholder, as well as the value of the Government's assistance in litigation against him and his company. These issues go directly to the credibility of Mr. Williams and other witnesses affiliated with him." Exh. A at 5–6. Again, expert testimony on "the credibility of Mr. Williams and other witnesses affiliated with him" is not permitted. Cf. United States v. Williams, 133 F.3d 1048, 1053 (7th Cir. 1998) ("Williams denied that he participated in the robbery, yet Special Agent Johnson purports to be a human lie detector in observing Williams' demeanor. These observations are improper characterizations of the defendant and useless in the determination of innocence or guilt, and in fact, they tend to prejudice the jury.").

Moreover, Mr. Kosowsky's resume fails to demonstrate that he is able to satisfy Rule 702's requirements for evaluating federal criminal immunity agreements. He has even less of a basis than White for evaluating immunity agreements and stays in civil litigation. Cf. Dura Automotive Systems of Indiana, Inc. v. CTS Corp., 285 F.3d 609, 614 (7th Cir. 2002) ("The Daubert test must be applied with due regard for the specialization of modern science. A scientist, however well credentialed he may be, is not permitted to be a mouthpiece of a scientist in a different specialty."). Moreover, contrary to what Mr. McDonnell's expert notice says, the United States has not conferred "immunity for the company in which [Mr. Williams] is the primary shareholder" and has not provided "assistance in litigation against him and his company" beyond requesting a brief stay. Thus, Kosowsky's opinion is based on false premises.

In a supplemental expert disclosure, Mr. McDonnell states that Kosowsky "will also testify about various questionable transactions involving Mr. Williams or Star Scientific" and lists four categories of transactions. Exh. B at 2. Mr. McDonnell explains that this testimony is being offered to "assist the jury in evaluating the credibility of Mr. Williams and other witnesses affiliated with" Williams's businesses. Id. Again, this testimony constitutes improper expert testimony on credibility and violates Rule 608(b) by offering extrinsic evidence on a witness's character for truthfulness. The testimony also appears to exceed Kosowsky's expertise, relies on unexplained methods, and possibly involves unhelpful opinions on the legality of conduct.

B. Kosowsky's proposed testimony about Mr. McDonnell's mental state and the loan applications at issue violates Rules 704(b), 702, and 403.

Next, Mr. McDonnell's attempt to offer Kosowsky, an accountant, as an expert on Mr. McDonnell's intent violates the rules of evidence on multiple grounds. As stated above, under Fed. R. Evid. 704(b), "[i]n a criminal case, an expert witness must not state an opinion about whether the defendant did or did not have a mental state or condition that constitutes an element of the crime charged or of a defense. Those matters are for the trier of fact." In keeping with this rule, the Fourth Circuit has upheld the exclusion of two experts who would have testified in a prosecution for conversion of federal property under 18 U.S.C. § 641 that the relevant "regulations were confusing, vague, and uncertain" and that a defendant's "interpretation of them was 'at least arguably correct.'" Fowler, 932 F.2d at 315. As the Fourth Circuit noted, "The expert's proffered testimony differed little from the closing arguments of Fowler's counsel," and under Rule 704(b), the jury "need[ed] no expert witnesses to speculate about a defendant's state of mind. The expert could not testify that Fowler was confused, not culpable." Id.

Here, Mr. McDonnell's expert notice states that Kosowsky will "explain the mechanics of applying for bank loans and a bank's consideration of loan documents, thereby rebutting the Government's allegations that any omissions from preliminary loan documents were intentional, fraudulent, or even material." Exh. A at 5. This testimony violates Rule 704(b) and cannot be squared with Fowler. Indeed, not only is the proposed testimony on Mr. McDonnell's state of mind improper, but also the testimony on materiality is improper. As a threshold matter, proof of materiality is not required to prove a violation of 18 U.S.C. § 1014, the statute charged here. In this regard, the Supreme Court "has concluded that, under § 1014, a false statement need not be material to a financial institution's decision to advance or loan funds." Elliott v. United States, 332 F.3d 753, 759, 764 (4th Cir. 2003) (citing United States v. Wells, 519 U.S. 482, 490 (1997) ("Nowhere does [§ 1014] say that a material fact must be the subject of the false statement or so much as mention materiality.")). Rather, § 1014 only requires proof with respect to a false statement to a covered institution that "the speaker knows the falsity of what he says and intends it to influence the institution." Wells, 519 U.S. at 499 (emphasis added). And proof of the intent to influence does not require proof of an intent to deceive, defraud, or cheat the financial institution. See United States v. Sparks, 67 F.3d 1145, 1151–52 (4th Cir. 1995) ("[T]he presence or absence of an intent to deceive is simply irrelevant to the defendant's guilt; the only specific intent that matters for purposes of § 1014 is the intent to influence the bank's actions.").

And even if evidence of materiality in the abstract were relevant—which, as stated above, it is not—as the Fourth Circuit said in Barile, "Sheridan's conclusion that the 510(k) submissions did not contain 'materially misleading statements' arguably constitutes a legal conclusion because materiality has a specialized legal meaning, and it is therefore within the district court's discretion to exclude such testimony." 286 F.3d at 761. The same applies to the use of the term "fraudulent." See, e.g., Perkins, 470 F.3d at 158 ("[C]onclusory testimony that an investment house engaged in a 'fraudulent and manipulative scheme' involves the use of terms with considerable legal baggage; such testimony nearly always invades the province of the jury.").

Moreover, even if Rule 704(b) did not prohibit expert testimony on a defendant's state of mind in filling out bank loan applications, an accountant whose resume reveals no particular expertise in bank loan applications—much less expertise in a defendant's motivations for omitting facts from an application—could not satisfy the standards for expert testimony under Fed. R. Evid. 702. Compounding these flaws, Kosowsky's testimony about what the bank application requested calls for fact—not expert—testimony, and Mr. McDonnell should not be permitted to bolster garden-variety fact testimony by presenting it through a witness labeled as an expert. See, e.g., United States v. Garcia, __ F.3d __, 2014 WL 1924857 (4th Cir. May 15, 2014). It is also far from clear that Kosowsky has the requisite personal knowledge to testify under Fed. R. Evid. 701 as a fact witness about the loan applications at issue here.

C. Kosowksy's proposed testimony about the defendnats' finances is inadequately noticed under Rule 16(b)(1)(C).

Although Kosowsky appears at first glance qualified to testify about the defendants' finances, Mr. McDonnell's expert notice fails to provide any meaningful way to evaluate his conclusions about the defendants' finances. Again, Rule 16(b)(1)(C) requires the defendants to provide the "opinions, the bases and reasons for those opinions, and the witness's qualifications." As the 1993 Advisory Committee Notes for Rule 16 explain, the expert disclosures required by the rule are "intended to minimize surprise that often results from unexpected expert testimony, reduce the need for continuances, and to provide the opponent with a fair opportunity to test the merit of the expert's testimony through focused cross-examination." It is impossible for the United States to evaluate Kosowsky's conclusions about the defendants' finances from an expert disclosure that says a little as Mr. McDonnell's has said here.

If the deficiencies in the expert notice are not remedied and cause prejudice to the United States, Kosowsky's testimony on the defendants' finances should be excluded. See, e.g., Barile, 286 F.3d at 758 ("Because the summary of Sheridan's testimony in the letter did not describe Sheridan's opinions beyond stating the conclusions he had reached and did not give the reasons for those opinions as required under Rule 16(b)(1)(C), we concluded, as the district court did, that the letter did not satisfy the rule."). When a district court finds a violation of Rule 16(b)(1)(C), the court has discretion under Fed. R. Crim. P 16(d)(2) in choosing a remedy. Barile, 286 F.3d at 758.

Disclosure is particularly important because there is little reason to have confidence in the admissibility of his testimony; other parts of Kosowsky's opinion are on their face improper. He cannot serve as a credibility expert, and nothing in his resume reflects genuine expertise in evaluating criminal immunity provisions or a several-month long, uncontested stay in two civil lawsuits. And just as an accountant cannot serve as an expert on witness credibility, an accountant likewise cannot testify about a defendant's intent in filling out bank applications, which, according to Mr. McDonnell's expert notice, Kosowsky will seek to do.

4. The proposed testimony of Norman Thomas violates the Federal Rules of Evidence.

According to Mr. McDonnell's expert notice, Norman Thomas "will testify that the SOEI [Statement of Economic Interests] contains many vague instructions and that reasonable public officials could vary in their interpretation of those instructions." Exh. A at 6. Mr. McDonnell's expert notice continues that Thomas will address specifically the forms that Mr. McDonnell submitted. "Mr. Thomas will explain that the forms submitted by Mr. McDonnell reflect a reasonable understanding of the SOEI's vague requirements governing the disclosure of loans, securities, and gifts, including those loans, securities and gifts related to Mr. Williams and Star Scientific." Id.

This proposed testimony is objectionable for reasons already discussed above. The opinion violates Rule 704(b) and draws conclusions that are unhelpful to the jury. For example, as noted above, the Fourth Circuit has upheld the exclusion of two experts who would have testified in a prosecution for conversion of federal property under 18 U.S.C. § 641 that the relevant "regulations were confusing, vague, and uncertain" and that the defendant's "interpretation of them was 'at least arguably correct.'" Fowler, 932 F.2d at 315. As the Fourth Circuit noted, "The expert's proffered testimony differed little from the closing arguments of Fowler's counsel," and under Rule 704(b), the jury "need[ed] no expert witnesses to speculate about a defendant's state of mind. The expert could not testify that Fowler was confused, not culpable." Id. The SOEI that Mr. McDonnell filled out in this case is written in plain English, and the jury can read them (and counsel argue about their meaning) without expert testimony. Moreover, Mr. McDonnell should not be able to present an expert who will testify effectively as if giving an advice-of-counsel defense when Mr. McDonnell never received the advice and considered it before acting. Such testimony would violate Rule 403.

5. All of the proposed testimony from an expert on FDA enforcement practices and from a medical expert are inadmissible for essentially the same reasons that White's and Kosowsky's testimony about Williams's credibility is inadmissible.

In Mr. McDonnell's expert disclosure, he mentions two possible experts that he has not identified but may seek to call at trial. Although the disclosures for these experts are insufficient, the small amount of information that Mr. McDonnell has provided is sufficient to demonstrate the inadmissibility of the proposed testimony.

All that the notice says about these two experts is the following: "In addition, Mr. McDonnell intends to call either an expert on Food and Drug Administration ('FDA') enforcement practices who can testify about the FDA's investigation of Star Scientific, Inc. ('Star Scientific') for introducing adulterated and misbranded products into interstate commerce or, alternatively, a medical expert who can testify that Mr. Williams' claims about Star Scientific's products are not supported by medical science." Exh. A at 1. To explain the deficient expert notice, Mr. McDonnell states, "At this time, the defense does not have sufficient information to identify the expert and summarize the potential testimony, but will provide notice of the expert's identity and expected testimony no later than 15 days after the defendant has received all relevant information from Mr. McDonnell's outstanding and potentially forthcoming Rule 17(c) subpoenas and other discovery." Id. at 1–2.

Although Mr. McDonnell has not disclosed much about either of these proposed experts' opinions, the limited disclosures that he has made already demonstrate that the testimony should be excluded. As discussed above, neither medical testimony about Star Scientific's products nor testimony about possible FDA violations are admissible in a trial about the defendants' offenses. The proposed testimony violates Rule 608(b), should be excluded under Rule 403, and appears once again to be improper expert testimony about Williams's credibility.

IV. Conclusion

For the reasons stated above, the testimony of each of Mr. McDonnell's proposed experts should be excluded.

Respectfully submitted,

DANA J. BOENTE
United States Attorney

JACK SMITH
Chief, Public Integrity Section
Criminal Division
U.S. Department of Justice

By: /s/
Richard Cooke
Michael S. Dry
Jessica D. Aber
Ryan S. Faulconer
Counsel for the United States
U.S. Attorney's Office
600 E. Main Street, Suite 1800
Richmond, Va. 23219
Phone: 804-819-5400
Fax: 804-771-2316
Email: richard.cooke@usdoj.gov
michael.s.dry@usdoj.gov
jessica.d.aber@usdoj.gov
ryan.faulconer2@usdoj.gov

By: /s/
David V Harbach, II
Counsel for the United States
U.S. Department of Justice
Criminal Division
Public Integrity Section
1400 New York Ave., N.W., Ste 12100
Washington, D.C. 20005
Phone: 202-514-1412
Fax: 202-514-3003
Email: david.harbach@usdoj.gov

CERTIFICATE OF SERVICE

I hereby certify that on June 16, 2014, I will electronically file the foregoing with the Clerk of Court using the CM/ECF system, which will then send a notification of such filing ("NEF") to all counsel of record.

By: /s/

Ryan S. Faulconer
Counsel for the United States
U.S. Attorney's Office
600 E. Main Street, Suite 1800
Richmond, VA 23219
Phone: 804-819-5400
Fax: 804-771-2316
Email: ryan.faulconer2@usdoj.gov

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
FOR THE EASTERN DISTRICT OF VIRGINIA
RICHMOND DIVISION

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,	)
	)
v.	)	CRIMINAL NO. 3:14-CR-00012
	)
ROBERT F. MCDONNELL MAUREEN G. MCDONNELL	))	JUDGE JAMES R. SPENCER

MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT OF DEFENDANT ROBERT F. MCDONNELL'S MOTION # 27 – MOTION IN LIMINE TO EXCLUDE EVIDENCE RELATING TO STATEMENTS OF ECONOMIC INTEREST

INTRODUCTION

Defendant and former Virginia Governor Robert F McDonnell stands accused of violating federal anti-bribery laws—not of violating Virginia ethics laws. The Government, however, proposes to introduce into evidence financial disclosure forms—known as Statements of Economic Interest ("SOEIs"), see Va. Code § 2.2-3117—that Mr. McDonnell filed while in office, in keeping with his obligations as a Virginia public official. The Government's apparent strategy with regard to the SOEIs is to point to every thing of value that Mr. McDonnell received from Mr. Williams or a third party and did not report on his annual disclosure form, and then spin the omission into evidence of corrupt intent. See Indictment ¶ 111(b); Ex. A, Letter from Dana J. Boente to Henry W Asbill et al. dated May 29, 2014 ("Expert Notice and 404(b) Disclosure"), at 3. This approach is impermissible under Rule 403. First, evidence that Mr. McDonnell did not report gifts and loans that he was not obligated to report is simply not sufficiently probative of any alleged corrupt intent to outweigh the potential prejudice and jury confusion such evidence would cause. Second, to the extent that the Government intends to argue that Mr. McDonnell improperly failed to report certain gifts or loans, it has not noticed an expert who could assist the jury in evaluating this truth or falsity of this claim by explaining the complex legal framework surrounding the SOEIs. In the absence of expert testimony showing that Mr. McDonnell failed to comply with his SOEI obligations, it is not clear how his treatment of the SOEI will even be relevant. There is no question, though, that innuendo about Mr. McDonnell omitting information from his SOEI will confuse the jury and unduly prejudice Mr. McDonnell. Evidence pertaining to Mr. McDonnell's reporting of gifts received from third parties is also excludable because it is extrinsic character evidence that is inadmissible under Rule 404(b). Furthermore, the Government's vague notice of its plan to introduce nondisclosures of "things of value from individuals other than Mr. Williams" is inadequate under Rule 404(b). Accordingly, Mr. McDonnell moves to exclude from evidence at trial all of his SOEIs and draft SOEIs as well as any other evidence pertaining to the preparation or submission of these forms.

ARGUMENT

I. Admission of Mr. McDonnell's SOEIs To Show His Alleged Attempt To Conceal Gifts and Loans from Mr. Williams Will Be Confusing To the Jury And More Prejudicial Than Probative.

According to the Government, Mr. McDonnell "[took] steps to conceal from the citizens of Virginia the things of value received from [Mr. Williams] and Star Scientific in order to hide the nature and scope of [his] dealings with [Mr. Williams]." Indictment ¶ 111(b). The Government does not directly allege, however, that Mr. McDonnell violated Virginia's reporting requirements for public officials. (This is not surprising, because Mr. McDonnell's SOEIs are compliant with Virginia law.) Instead, the Government's theory with regard to most of the gifts and loans from Mr. Williams appears to be that Mr. McDonnell deliberately received them in forms that he did not have to report, and that the jury can infer corrupt intent from that fact. See, e.g., Indictment ¶¶ 86, 111(b). Introducing the SOEIs for the purpose of supporting this inference, however, contravenes Rule 403. The mere fact that gifts and loans from Mr. Williams took forms that Mr. McDonnell was not required to report is not probative of an intent to deceive the citizens of Virginia. The Supreme Court flatly rejected this proposition in Ratzlaf v. United States, where the government argued that "[s]tructuring [of monetary transactions] is not the kind of activity that an ordinary person would engage in innocently." 510 U.S. 135, 144 (1994). "[A] person who structures a currency transaction [is not] invariably motivated by a desire to keep the Government in the dark," the Court explained. Id. at 145. Even if this evidence did have some slight probative value, this value is clearly outweighed by the prejudice its admission would cause to Mr. McDonnell and the risk it would pose of confusing the jury. A jury presented with evidence of a gift or loan on the one hand, and an SOEI that does not report the gift or loan on the other, may leap to the conclusion that there was wrongdoing without understanding the valid reasons that disclosure was not required.

This problem is exacerbated by the fact that the Government has not noticed an expert witness who could offer an opinion regarding the actual requirements of Virginia public officials' reporting obligations.[1] Where a set of regulations is complex, admitting them into evidence "without any expert testimony [will] be misleading and confusing to the jury[,] outweighing their probative value." Levinson v. Westport Nat'l Bank, No.3:09-cv-1955(VLB), 2013 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 71208, at *29 (D. Conn. May 20, 2013). See also, e.g., In re Gadolinium-Based Contrast Agents Prods. Liab. Litig., 956 F. Supp. 2d 809, 818 (N.D. Ohio 2013) (holding that evidence was properly excluded because "admitting the medical bills unaccompanied by expert testimony would have risked confusing and misleading the jury"). The reporting requirements for SOEIs are intricate and full of legal jargon. The form itself includes twelve separate schedules and calls upon the filer to make determinations of such ambiguous issues as when "hospitality" has "monetary value," Ex. B, SOEI Form, Definitions and Explanatory Material (definition of "Gift"); when the filer "shares significant financial involvement with [another] individual," SOEI Form, Definitions and Explanatory Material (definition of "Close financial association"); and what a friend's reasons may have been for giving the filer a particular gift, see SOEI Form, Sched. E (stating, "Do not list gifts or other things of value given by a relative or personal friend for reasons clearly unrelated to your public position"). The Government, however, eschews any intention to lay a proper foundation for the admission of the SOEIs; it asserts that the "jury can read [the SOEIs]" itself and assess the significance of Mr. McDonnell's disclosures on this lengthy and complicated form without expert assistance. Govt's Mem. in Supp. of Mot. to Exclude Expert Test., Dkt. 222, at 29. This contention is implausible.

---

[1] In anticipation of the Government's attempt to introduce the SOEIs into evidence, Mr. McDonnell noticed an expert witness, Norman Thomas, who can provide competent testimony about the complex and ambiguous requirements of Virginia disclosure law. See Deft. Robert F. McDonnell's Notice of Intent to Use Expert Test. at Trial, Ex. A to Govt's Mem. in Supp. of Mot. to Exclude Expert Test., Dkt. 222. The Government has challenged the admissibility of Mr. Thomas's testimony under Rule 704(b). See Govt's Mem. in Supp. of Mot. to Exclude Expert Test., Dkt. 222, at 28-29. In a separate filing, Mr. McDonnell addresses the Government's 704(b) arguments with regard to Mr. Thomas. See Deft. Robert F. McDonnell's Memorandum in Opposition to the Govt's Mot. to Exclude Expert Test. Should the Court grant Mr. McDonnell's motion in limine to exclude all references to the SOEIs, of course, Mr. McDonnell will not seek to introduce Mr. Thomas's testimony.

To take but one example, the Indictment focuses on the fact that Mr. McDonnell, after a family vacation at Mr. Williams' lake house, disclosed on his SOEI a gift of $2,268 for "Lodging and entertainment," which represented "the amount [Mr. Williams] paid for the boat rental for the defendants' use during their private family vacation at [Mr. Williams'] multimillion-dollar home." Indictment ¶ 70. The Indictment does not spell out the significance of this fact, but if the Government means to suggest that Mr. McDonnell underreported or misreported the value of the family's vacation at Mr. Williams' "multimillion-dollar home," then its insinuation begs a host of technical questions of Virginia ethics law.[2] These questions include whether Mr. McDonnell was obligated to estimate and report the use value of a house that Mr. Williams owns and pays to keep up regardless of who stays in it; if so, what metric should Mr. McDonnell have used (the market value for a rental? some prorated share of the annual upkeep costs for Mr.

---

[2] If the Government does not contend that Mr. McDonnell improperly reported the value of the vacation, then its purpose in submitting this fact must be simply to smear Mr. McDonnell as a man who receives lavish gifts. Such use of the SOEIs is obviously more prejudicial than probative; it also violates Rule 404's restrictions on the admission of character evidence as explained infra at Part II.

Williams?); whether any provision of law or policy suggests or mandates such a metric; and whether the boat rental should have been described otherwise than as "Lodging and entertainment." Without expert testimony, the jury will be ill-equipped to answer such questions. The SOEI evidence will inevitably produce confusion. See Aldridge v. Baltimore & O. R. Co., 789 F.2d 1061, 1068 (4th Cir. 1986), vacated on other grounds by Chesapeake & O. R. Co. v. Aldridge, 108 S. Ct. 2812 (1988) ("We think it would have been extremely confusing to the jury to ask it to make these economic adjustments without an explanation by experts as to how such calculations could be made."); United States v. Naegele, 471 F Supp. 2d 152, 162 (D.D.C. 2007) (holding that where the jury was required to determine "whether the defendant knowingly made false statements on his [b]ankruptcy [s]chedules, the jury might well be confused without the aid of experts").

Moreover, if the Government is allowed to introduce Mr. McDonnell's SOEIs in support of an argument that he deliberately evaded Virginia ethics laws, the focus of the trial will shift away from the federal-law questions that should be at its heart to an ancillary dispute over the obligations imposed on public officials by Virginia ethics law. Courts have repeatedly held that evidence of a party's compliance or non-compliance with ethical or professional standards that are unrelated to the alleged crime at issue is irrelevant, likely to confuse the jury, and therefore excludable. See, e.g., United States v. Terry, No. 1.10-CR-390, 2011 WL 2149361, at *4 (N.D. Ohio May 31, 2011) (excluding evidence of bribery defendant's judicial code violations, including failure to make required disclosures, as likely to confuse jury, "run[ning] the risk that the defendant would be convicted for violating ethical rules, instead of engaging in a bribery scheme"); United States ex rel. El-Amin v. George Washington Univ., 533 F Supp. 2d 12, 23-24 (D.D.C. 2008) (holding that evidence of standard of care for doctors was irrelevant and likely to confuse the jury where the issue at trial was whether the defendants had made false statements under a separate federal regulatory scheme); In re Welding Fume Prods. Liab. Litig., No. 1:03-CV-17000, 2010 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 146067, at *141 n.123 (N.D. Ohio June 4, 2010) (excluding from the plaintiffs' case-in-chief expert testimony that corporations should, as an ethical matter, "do more than comply with applicable laws and regulations" because it was likely to confuse the jury). The question at issue for the jury is whether Mr. McDonnell violated federal anti-corruption law; the Government should not be allowed to mislead the jury with prejudicial evidence purporting to show that Mr. McDonnell violated or sidestepped distinct state legal requirements.

II. Admission Of Mr. McDonnell's SOEIs To Show His Alleged Attempt To Conceal Gifts And Loans From Individuals Other Than Mr. Williams Is Also Improper.

The Government has also noticed its intention to introduce at trial "evidence regarding the defendants' concealment of things of value received from individuals other than Mr. Williams" by omitting them from Mr. McDonnell's SOEIs. Ex. A, Expert Notice and 404(b) Disclosure at 3. The Government states that it believes this alleged "concealment" represents intrinsic evidence of the crimes with which Mr. McDonnell has been charged; in the alternative, the Government states, the SOEIs are admissible under Fed. R. Evid. 404(b). Id. It is wrong on both counts.

Evidence purporting to show that Mr. McDonnell concealed things of value from third parties cannot be intrinsic evidence of his alleged conspiracy with Mr. Williams. "Other acts are intrinsic when they are inextricably intertwined or both acts are part of a single criminal episode or the other acts were necessary preliminaries to the crime charged." United States v. Lipford, 203 F.3d 259, 268 (4th Cir. 2000) (internal quotation marks omitted). Even if it were true that Mr. McDonnell improperly failed to report gifts or loans from third parties, such evidence would not be "inextricably intertwined with," "part of," or a "necessary preliminary to" any supposed corrupt agreement with Mr. Williams, for two important reasons. First, Mr. McDonnell is charged with violating federal anti-bribery law by agreeing to a quid pro quo with Mr. Williams—not with any other individual. It is simply illogical to contend that any alleged avoidance of reporting requirements with respect to gifts from third parties was part of a scheme "to conceal from the citizens of Virginia the things of value received from [Mr. Williams] and Star Scientific in order to hide the nature and scope of [his] dealings with Mr. Williams." Indictment ¶ 111(b) (emphasis added). Second, the federal crimes charged do not consist of accepting things of value; they consist of accepting bribes in exchange for some benefit that the government official can confer by virtue of his public office. There is no allegation that Mr. McDonnell offered to trade favors for any of the third-party gifts or loans that the Government claims he improperly failed to report. This third-party evidence therefore cannot be part of the same criminal episode as his alleged corrupt agreement with Mr. Williams; it remains extrinsic evidence of unrelated, alleged bad acts.

Because evidence relating to Mr. McDonnell's nondisclosure of third party gifts on his SOEIs is extrinsic evidence of alleged bad acts, it is only admissible if it is "(1) relevant to an issue other than the general character of the defendant; (2) necessary to prove an element of the charged offense; and (3) reliable." United States v. Hodge, 354 F.3d 305, 312 (4th Cir. 2004) (citation omitted). It also must pass muster under Rule 403. Id. The third-party SOEI evidence fails on the first prong: relevance to an issue other than character.

The Government will likely contend that the evidence shows Mr. McDonnell's alleged corrupt intent, an essential element of the bribery charges against him. But that is incorrect. "[B]ecause of the complex and difficult distinction between evidence of character and evidence of intent," courts must use extra care when considering the admission of evidence of intent under Rule 404(b). United States v. Queen, 132 F.3d 991, 995 (4th Cir. 1997). It is important to distinguish "between the kinds of evidence that are introduced to show a particular intent and those that are introduced only to show a much more generalized intent (and therefore propensity to commit crime in general)." Id. at 996 (citation omitted). Here, what the Government must prove is that when Mr. McDonnell accepted gifts and loans from Mr. Williams, he intended to trade official acts for these payments. See United States v. Bailey, 990 F.2d 119, 124 (4th Cir. 1993) (stating, in a public corruption case, that "the government was required to prove beyond a reasonable doubt that [the defendant] intended to accept the money as a bribe or in payment for his legislative services in order to secure a conviction" (emphasis added)). The Government's proposed use of the SOEIs (assuming the Government could establish any actual impropriety related to them) would tend to prove a different intent—that Mr. McDonnell intended not to comply fully with the requirements of Virginia ethics law in general. In this regard, this case is analogous to United States v. Wright, 665 F.3d 560, 576 (3d Cir. 2012) where the Third Circuit explained that evidence pertaining to motive in a trial for honest services fraud would be inadmissible under Rules 403 and 404 at a trial for "traditional" wire fraud. Not only would such evidence likely amount to inadmissible character evidence, the Third Circuit explained, but "[a]lso, insofar as the evidence portrays [the defendants] as corrupt, any probative value on motive could be outweighed by its danger of unfair prejudice." Id. The same is true here. A jury that believed Mr. McDonnell concealed gifts or loans from unrelated parties might conclude that he is generally corrupt and improperly convict him on that basis.

Nor is evidence pertaining to Mr. McDonnell's treatment of third-party gifts or loans on his SOEIs admissible "to show knowledge, common scheme or plan." United States v. Rawle, 845 F.2d 1244, 1247 (4th Cir. 1988). Because there is no allegation that Mr. McDonnell accepted a bribe from any party other than Mr. Williams, there is no sense in which his SOEI filings pertaining to other parties could be evidence of a scheme or plan similar to that he is charged with in this case. And even if this evidence were arguably relevant on the ground that it goes to Mr. McDonnell's supposed familiarity with the means of concealment he allegedly used to cover up his arrangement with Mr. Williams, for the reasons stated above the risk of prejudice far outweighs this minimal probative value.

Moreover, the Government's proposed use of the SOEIs to show "concealment" of third-party gifts suffers from additional Rule 403 problems similar to those detailed in Part I. If the Government attempts to show that Mr. McDonnell violated the requirements of Virginia ethics law without introducing any expert testimony on the requirements of Virginia ethics law, its use of the SOEIs will surely cause prejudice and jury confusion. And if the Government attempts to show that Mr. McDonnell deliberately structured any given transaction to avoid state-law reporting requirements, such evidence would be even less probative of his alleged corrupt intent than the supposed structuring evidence pertaining to gifts and loans from Mr. Williams. Not only is structuring itself not probative of intent to evade the law, but structuring of transactions with third parties cannot be relevant to any alleged attempt to conceal benefits obtained from Mr. Williams. These shortcomings provide an independent basis for exclusion of this evidence. See United States v. Basham, 561 F.3d 302, 326 (4th Cir. 2009) (noting that "[e]vidence sought to be admitted under Rule 404(b) must also satisfy Rule 403's requirement").

III. The Government's Letter Fails To Give Reasonable Notice Under Rule 404(b).

In addition to the problems outlined supra, the Government's May 29 letter violates Rule 404(b) by failing to give "reasonable notice of the general nature of any [404(b)] evidence that the prosecutor intends to offer at trial." Fed. R. Evid. 404(b)(2)(A). It states merely that the McDonnells "received things of value from individuals other than Mr. Williams and failed to report them on Mr. McDonnell's Statement of Economic Interest." Ex. A, Expert Notice and 404(b) Disclosure at 3. But the SOEI did not require Mr. McDonnell to disclose "gifts or other things of value given by a relative or personal friend for reasons clearly unrelated to your public position." SOEI Form, Sched. E. To the extent this ancillary issue is relevant, then, to defend himself Mr. McDonnell must know who gave what; knowing that "individuals other than Mr. Williams" gave "things of value" gives Mr. McDonnell no way to prepare for trial on this issue. This failure is highlighted by the one example the Government supplies, a vacation paid for by William Goodwin. That example gives the "who" and the "what" Mr. McDonnell needs to prepare his defense, and does not violate the reasonable-notice requirement. But the Government has not given reasonable notice of any other 404(b) evidence.[3]

CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons, the Court should exclude from evidence at trial all of Mr. McDonnell's SOEIs and draft SOEIs as well as any other evidence pertaining to the preparation or submission of these forms.

---

[3] On a meet and confer call, counsel for the Government represented to Mr. McDonnell's counsel that the Goodwin vacation was the only evidence it sought to include under Rule 404(b). The Expert Notice and 404(b) Disclosure, however, only cites the Goodwin vacation as an example. See Ex. A at 3. If the Government confirms its representation in writing, however, Mr. McDonnell will withdraw his argument on reasonable notice.

Dated: June 20, 2014

Respectfully submitted,

/s/ Jonathan A. Berry
Henry W Asbill (pro hac vice)
Mary Ellen Powers (pro hac vice)
Noel J. Francisco (pro hac vice)
Ryan D. Newman (pro hac vice)
James M. Burnham (pro hac vice)
Jonathan A. Berry (VSB No. 81864)
JONES DAY
51 Louisiana Avenue, N.W
Washington, D.C. 20001
Telephone: (202) 879-3939
Facsimile: (202) 626-1700

John L. Brownlee (VSB No. 37358)
Timothy J. Taylor (VSB No. 84529)
HOLLAND & KNIGHT LLP
800 17th Street, N.W
Suite 1100
Washington, D.C. 20006
Telephone: (202) 828-1854
Facsimile: (202) 955-5564

Counsel for Robert F. McDonnell

CERTIFICATE OF SERVICE

I, Jonathan A. Berry, am a member of the Bar of this Court. I hereby certify that on this 20th day of June, 2014, I caused the foregoing to be electronically filed with the Clerk of Court using the CM/ECF system, causing it to be served on all registered users.

Dated: June 20, 2014

Respectfully submitted,

/s/ Jonathan A. Berry

Jonathan A. Berry (VSB No. 81864)
JONES DAY
51 Louisiana Avenue, N.W
Washington, D.C. 20001
Telephone: (202) 879-3939
Facsimile: (202) 626-1700
Email: jberry@jonesday.com

Counsel for Robert F McDonnell

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
FOR THE EASTERN DISTRICT OF VIRGINIA
RICHMOND DIVISION

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,	)
	)	CRIMINAL NO. 3:14-CR-00012
v.	)
	)	JUDGE JAMES R. SPENCER
ROBERT F. MCDONNELL	)
MAUREEN G. MCDONNELL	)

ROBERT F. MCDONNELL'S MEMORANDUM IN OPPOSITION TO THE GOVERNMENT'S MOTION TO EXCLUDE EXPERT TESTIMONY

INTRODUCTION

The Government has charged Mr. McDonnell with bribery on the basis of what is, by any objective measure, a novel understanding of the federal bribery laws. Mr. McDonnell has a right to defend himself against those charges. The Government may, of course, vigorously cross-examine Mr. McDonnell's witnesses and present its own evidence. It will then be up to the jury to decide the outcome. But the Government should not be able to bring such charges and also stop Mr. McDonnell from presenting relevant, admissible evidence in his defense.

The Government offers a wide range of reasons for precluding Mr. McDonnell from presenting expert testimony in his defense. Those various attacks fail. The expert testimony that Mr. McDonnell seeks to introduce is indistinguishable from expert testimony that the Government itself regularly presents and that the courts of this district and others routinely admit. Each of Mr. McDonnell's proposed experts will be helpful to the jury because each will provide testimony that elucidates factual issues beyond the ken of the average person. Few laypeople are well-versed in, for example, the nuances of Virginia's disclosure laws, the settled-practices of elected officials for dealing with the crush of donors and benefactors that all but self-funded politicians must cultivate, or the value to a large civil defendant in obtaining a lengthy stay of civil discovery despite having been sued in a "rocket docket" jurisdiction.

It is the Government—not Mr. McDonnell—that seeks to confuse the jury by throwing a pile of wide-ranging evidence in the jury's lap without any guidance on that evidence's broader context. As this Court explained in denying the Motion to Dismiss, "[w]hether Defendants' conduct in fact constituted 'the corruption of official positions through misuse of influence in governmental decision-making' is a question for the jury based on the evidence adduced at trial." Order on Mot. to Dismiss, Dkt. 175, at 2 (quoting United States v. Carson, 464 F.2d 424, 434 (2d Cir. 1972)). The expert witnesses that Mr. McDonnell has noticed are a critical component of answering that question. The Government's Motion should therefore be denied.[1]

ARGUMENT

Federal Rule of Evidence 702 allows opinion testimony by a qualified expert if (a) "the expert's scientific, technical, or other specialized knowledge will help the trier of fact to understand the evidence or to determine a fact in issue"; (b) "the testimony is based on sufficient facts or data"; (c) "the testimony is the product of reliable principles and methods"; and (d) "the expert has reliably applied the principles and methods to the facts of the case." This rule "embodies a liberal standard of admissibility for expert opinions." Nimely v. City of New York, 414 F.3d 381, 395 (2d Cir. 2005). Nevertheless, the Government challenges each of the experts that Mr. McDonnell has noticed in whole or in part. Those challenges should be rejected.

I. The Government's Complaints About The Sufficiency Of The Disclosure Are Meritless.

The Government repeatedly criticizes the sufficiency of Mr. McDonnell's expert notice, but those criticisms are meritless. The defense's expert disclosure—supported by detailed CVs summarizing each expert's qualifications—amply satisfies Rule 16's requirement that the notice "must describe the witness's opinions, the bases and reasons for those opinions, and the witness's qualifications." Fed. R. Crim. P 16(a)(1)(G). Mr. McDonnell's disclosure explains each expert witness's opinion, provides the bases for that opinion, and the attached CVs make each expert's qualifications clear. That disclosure, particularly considered alongside the defense's supplemental disclosures and this brief, amply satisfies Rule 16(a)(1)(G).

---

[1] As Mr. McDonnell's Notice explains, he does not yet have sufficient information to determine whether he will be calling an FDA expert and, if so, what precisely that expert would say. Mr. McDonnell therefore respectfully requests that the Court delay consideration of the proposed FDA expert until such time that the defense has adequate information to make a final determination, makes that final determination, and provides proper notice to the Government of his intentions and the scope of the proposed testimony.

Indeed, the sufficiency of these disclosures is confirmed by simply comparing them to the disclosures the Government provides when calling experts. For example, in its prosecution of former Congressman William Jefferson, the Government noticed three expert witnesses, including "Abner J. Mikva," a former congressman who would "testify as an expert concerning a general description of the activities of a Member of the U.S. House of Representatives and its various Caucuses and Committees," and would provide:

> his opinion that constituent services are routinely performed by Members and that settled practice dictates that constituent services are matters and decisions routinely brought before Members in their official capacity. Judge Mikva is also expected to testify about his opinion that the types of official acts alleged to have been performed by Defendant Jefferson in the Indictment, including paragraphs 49 and 149 of the Indictment, are among the constituent services that are routinely performed by Members and that settled practice dictates are matters and decisions routinely brought before Members in their official capacity.

Gov't Notice, United States v. Jefferson, Case No. 1:07-cr-00209, pp. 1-2, Dkt. 100 (E.D.Va. November 16, 2007) (Ex. A). The Government's notice when it replaced Mr. Mikva with a different former Congressman is materially identical. See id. at Dkt. 299 (E.D.Va. February 12, 2009) (Ex. B). The notices that the Government customarily provides in other cases are similarly succinct. See, e.g., United States v. Yu, Case No. 1:08-cr-00196, Dkt. 16 (E.D.Va. January 16, 2009) (Ex. C); United States v. Waddell, Case No. 1:09-cr-00435, Dkt. 27 (E.D. Va. November 19, 2009) (Ex. D). Review of these standard expert notices makes clear that Mr. McDonnell's are more than sufficient to satisfy his obligations under Rule 16(b)(1)(C).

Finally, to the extent that the Government has specific requests for additional information—information beyond what this Memorandum and the defense's supplemental disclosures provide—the defense will work diligently to provide answers. Prior to filing its Motion to Exclude, the Government had requested additional specifics about Mr. Kosowsky, which the defense promptly provided on June 12. See Mem. at Exhibit B. The defense has today further supplemented its disclosure regarding each expert to address the issues the Government raises in its Motion. See Def. Robert F McDonnell's Second Supp. Expert Notice (June 20, 2014) (Ex. E). That is in addition, of course, to the detail this filing provides.[2]

II. The Government's Various Objections To Mr. McDonnell's Expert Testimony Are Meritless.

The Government makes wide-ranging arguments for excluding most of Mr. McDonnell's expert testimony, but its objections focus almost entirely on testimony nobody has proposed. Once the straw men are brushed away, the Government's objections collapse. Mr. McDonnell's expert testimony is standard fare that he is fully entitled to present.

A. Former Attorney General Mark Earley Will Assist The Jury In Understanding The Practices Of Virginia Governors.

Mr. Earley's testimony in Mr. McDonnell's defense—indistinguishable in many respects from expert testimony the Government presented when it prosecuted William Jefferson—will help the jury understand the broader context for the Government's allegations. Mr. Earley served as the top legal official in the Commonwealth of Virginia. He is experienced in advising Virginia's Governor and other Commonwealth officials on their legal obligations. Mr. Earley is thus qualified to opine on the settled practices and general conduct of Virginia officials. The Government does not seem to dispute Mr. Earley's qualifications, instead training its fire on excluding that qualified testimony. Those arguments fail.

---

[2] The Government claims that "Before filing this motion, the United States requested greater disclosure from Mr. McDonnell, but he declined to provide any further details." Mem. at 23. It is not clear what "request" the Government is referencing, as the only expert witness about whom the Government specifically requested additional information about prior to its Monday filing was Mr. Kosowsky.

1. Mr. Earley's Proposed Testimony Does Not Offer A Legal Conclusion.

The Government is wrong to claim that Mr. Earley proposes to testify about what constitutes an "official act" under federal law. Mem. at 6. Nothing in Mr. Earley's expert notice says that he intends to opine on what constitutes an "official act" and the defense specifically disavows any intention of eliciting such testimony. (And to the extent that any of Mr. Earley's answers would testify as to a legal conclusion—which they will not—the Government can object to that testimony in real time at trial.) In reality, Mr. Earley will simply explain the factual context of Mr. McDonnell's allegedly criminal conduct. That context will enable the jury to assess the plausibility of the alleged scheme and the many inferences the Government will ask the jury to draw. The Fourth Circuit—and the Government itself—have routinely recognized the propriety of such testimony provided it is phrased appropriately.

(a) Courts routinely permit expert testimony about common practices in a specialized field.

Mr. Earley will first testify about the common practices of elected officials in Virginia when they are interacting with the donors and benefactors every politician must cultivate. He will explain that politicians rely on a variety of mechanisms to interact with their beseechers without running afoul of legal and ethical obligations. These tactics involve many of the practices the Government has objected to here, including directing a subordinate to take a meeting with a supporter from which both the politician and the subordinate know nothing will result. They also involve declining to make specific commitments on behalf of the government to one's supporters; instead opting to route any requests for governmental assistance through the subordinate most qualified to assess the legitimacy of those requests and make an independent decision that is based entirely on the merits. Mr. Earley will further explain that politicians frequently deploy these practices as defensive mechanisms—relying on their staff to turn back requests from a supporter. The average person has not been a high-level politician, of course, and thus will not be familiar with the dance that politicians must perform daily to avoid offending the thousands of donors and benefactors that electoral politics requires cultivating.

The need for the jury to understand these issues is especially acute in this case, because Virginia has decided to permit its elected officials to take unlimited gifts from their benefactors. The Government's central argument will be that the jury should infer criminality from evidence showing that Mr. Williams provided gifts and loans to Mr. McDonnell. As the Government itself has argued, that inference is completely dependent on the context in which Mr. McDonnell acted: "[W]hat matters here is the context in which a particular meeting or particular event or any particular action by a government official, the context in which that occurs." May 19, 2014 Hr'g Tr. at 26; see also, e.g., id. at 29 (conduct depends on "the particular context"); id. at 30 (courts say "it depends on the context"); id. at 31 ("they can be in context"); id. (you have to "put it in context"); id. ("the question is the context in which that meeting occurs"). If this case will turn on context, then the jury must hear sufficient evidence to understand the entire context. The Government cannot argue context and then confine the jury to some warped, piecemeal version of that context. Mr. Earley—and any counter-expert the Government chooses to designate—will be essential in supplying that general context.

The Government routinely uses precisely this type of expert witness, as it did, for example, in United States v. Jefferson, where the court found "that Mr. McHugh's proposed testimony, which will be based on his specialized knowledge as a former congressman, will assist the jury to understand the evidence and determine the facts in issue in this case without merely telling the jury what result to reach." 623 F Supp. 2d 683, 687 (E.D. Va. 2009). At trial, Congressman McHugh testified in the same way as Mr. Earley is expected to testify here. For example, Congressman McHugh opined that requests for assistance are "matters routinely brought before members of Congress in their official capacity," that it is a "customary and settled practice" for "members of Congress to intercede with governmental agencies on behalf of the individuals and businesses that request their assistance," and that requests for assistance from individuals or businesses outside of a member's district "are matters properly pending before the member in his official capacity." Hr'g Tr. at 177:20-178:4, 178:18-179:2, 185:9-18, United States v. Jefferson, Case No. 1:07-cr-00209 (E.D.Va. July 16, 2009) (Ex. F). The Court also relied on the fact that the Government "does not intend to ask Mr. McHugh to give an expert opinion regarding whether any of defendant's alleged acts constituted 'official acts.'" 623 F Supp. 2d at 686. The defense provides a similar pledge here, as noted above. There, like here, "Mr. McHugh's proposed testimony that certain activities are 'routinely performed' by congressmen neither tracks the language of the applicable statute, nor arguably states a legal conclusion." Id. Mr. McHugh's testimony was thus properly admissible, as is Mr. Earley's.

Courts in other contexts have made similar points. For example, the district court in Jefferson analogized to the use of expert witnesses in prosecuting doctors who allegedly unlawfully distribute medications. See 623 F Supp. 2d at 688. In United States v. McIver, the Fourth Circuit held that the district court had properly admitted the expert testimony of an anesthesiologist who testified that the defendant's treatments were "illegitimate," "inappropriate," and "outside the course of legitimate medical practice." 470 F.3d 550, 556, 562 (4th Cir. 2006); see also id. at 562 n.15 (citing United States v. Alerre, 430 F.3d 681, 686 (4th Cir. 2005) and United States v. Tran Trong Cuong, 18 F.3d 1132, 1135 (4th Cir. 1994), both of which allowed similar testimony). The court explained that although the doctor "used terms similar to that which this court has employed to express the underlying issue, none is sufficiently specialized to render his testimony inadmissible"; to the contrary, "the language [ ] employed falls within the limited vernacular that is available to express whether a doctor acted outside the bounds of his professional practice." McIver, 470 F.3d at 562. The Government's own authorities confirm this commonsense distinction. See Mem. at 7 ("Rule 704 justifies differentiating between the officers' testimony that they saw no 'law enforcement' or 'legitimate' reason for [ ] kicks and testimony that [those kicks] were 'objectively unreasonable.'" (quoting United States v. Perkins, 470 F.3d 150, 160 (4th Cir. 2006)).

The Government claims that Mr. Earley's testimony is different from Mr. McHugh's in Jefferson because Mr. Earley's testimony does not consist of "straightforward factual content." Mem. at 10. That, however, is plainly wrong. Mr. Earley's testimony about how politicians interact with their supporters and what strategies politicians use to avoid offending benefactors is entirely factual. It is indistinguishable in this respect from Mr. McHugh testifying that "Jefferson's obligations as a congressman included constituent services, which 'involves people who live in your own congressional district coming to you or to your staff, asking for assistance on matters which relate to the Federal Government.'" United States v. Jefferson, 674 F.3d 332, 357 (4th Cir. 2012). There is nothing "legal" about testimony concerning the transactional nature of politics or the ways that Virginia politicians interact with persistent benefactors.

In short, Mr. Earley will not be opining on whether Mr. McDonnell undertook an "official act" or on how that term ought to be defined. Mr. Earley will, rather, testify about the overall context of the Government's allegations—precisely "what matters here." Transcript of May 19, 2014 Hearing at p. 26 (Government). That testimony does not present an inadmissible legal conclusion and should therefore be admitted.[3]

---

[3] Should the Court have doubts, the Government's Opposition to excluding Mr. McHugh

(b) Courts routinely permit expert testimony about the common practices of criminals.

Mr. Earley will next opine on what sorts of practices would be consistent with the absence of fraudulent intent. Mr. Earley has no knowledge of Mr. McDonnell's actual beliefs or intentions—a point the defense will make clear—but he is amply qualified to opine about the common practices of Virginia politicians. Such testimony will plainly be helpful and factual.

As the Government recognizes, the corruption charges it has leveled against Mr. McDonnell are "specific intent" crimes. Gov't Opp. to Mot. to Dismiss, Dkt. 146, at 29 (April 24, 2014). That means the Government must prove either a specific "intent to defraud" or the receipt of benefits "knowing that the payment was made in return for official acts." Id. (emphasis in original). If Mr. McDonnell was operating in good faith, then he did not possess the requisite specific intent and is innocent of the charges. At trial, the Government will seek to prove Mr. McDonnell's criminal intent (and lack of good faith) by asking the jury to draw inferences from Mr. McDonnell's objective conduct. Because the Government has no direct evidence of intent—e.g., a confession, wiretap evidence, or other direct admissions—inferences from Mr. McDonnell's conduct will be central to the Government's case.

Where the jury will have to make inferences about a defendant's subjective intent from that defendant's objective conduct, it is proper for expert witnesses to opine about the general significance (or lack of significance) of similar conduct. For example, if the Government is going to argue to the jury—as it surely will—that Mr. McDonnell arranging a meeting for Mr. Williams supports an inference of Mr. McDonnell's subjective "intent to defraud," then Mr.

(continued...)

in Jefferson—which makes similar arguments for admissibility of such testimony—should dispel them. See Opp'n to Mot. to Exclude, United States v. Jefferson, Case No. 1:07-cr-00209, Dkt. 334 (E.D. Va. March 6, 2009) (Ex. G).

McDonnell is entitled to present evidence rebutting that inference via expert testimony about the general significance to politicians of arranging meetings for benefactors. For example, Mr. Earley will testify that arranging meetings is a common way that politicians avoid performing favors for benefactors—by referring them to officials who will reject the benefactors' request, or, at a minimum, ensuring that if a benefactor receives a benefit, it is only through the independent decision of the government official charged with that area of responsibility. It will be for the jury to decide, however, whether the evidence concerning Mr. McDonnell supports an inference of criminal intent (as the Government will argue) or innocent intent (as the defense will contend). Since the average juror will be unfamiliar with how politicians and supporters interact, expert testimony on this topic will clearly help it "to understand the evidence." Fed. R. Evid. 702(a).

Such testimony does not offer legal conclusions. The Fourth Circuit has explained that the legal conclusions analysis depends on (1) "whether the question tracks the language of the legal principle at issue or of the applicable statute," and (2) "whether any terms employed have specialized legal meaning." United States v. Barile, 286 F.3d 749, 760 (4th Cir. 2002). Mr. Earley will take care to avoid using "the language of the legal principle at issue." As the Government itself recognizes, an expert could permissibly testify that a police officer's use of force was not "legitimate," so long as the expert did not use the phrase "excessive force." Mem. at 7 Mr. Earley can likewise testify that referring a benefactor for a meeting shortly after receiving a gift is consistent with a politician who believes he is acting appropriately, so long as he does use the phrases "intent to defraud" or "official act." Compare, e.g., Barile, 286 F.3d at 761 ("An example of a question that should be excluded is: 'Did T have capacity to make a will?'" (emphasis added)), with id. ("[Q]uestions that need not be excluded are: 'Did T have sufficient mental capacity to know the nature and extent of his property?' or 'Did T have sufficient mental capacity to know the natural objects of his bounty?'" (emphasis added)).[4]

The Government offers two other arguments, neither of which have anything to do with whether Mr. Earley's opinions state legal conclusions. First, the Government attacks Mr. Earley's opinions as being "undercut" by the Fourth Circuit's opinion in Jefferson, Mem. at 8 n.2, and argues that his opinion actually "supports" the Government's allegations, id. at 9. But those are just jury arguments about the correctness of Mr. Earley's opinions. They have nothing to do with whether those opinions state "legal" conclusions. Second, the Government argues that "misunderstanding" the "federal bribery laws is no defense." Id. at 8. That, however, is irrelevant. Even assuming that the conduct Mr. McDonnell allegedly engaged in constitutes "official action," the Government still must prove that he acted with the specific intent to defraud. If Mr. McDonnell acted in good faith, then he is innocent. Mr. Earley's testimony will relate solely to whether certain practices are consistent with innocent intentions.

(c) Testimony about the settled practices of Virginia Governors is exactly what the Government provided expert testimony about in Jefferson.

Finally, Mr. Earley will also testify that several of the actions the Government has alleged Mr. McDonnell undertook in exchange for benefits are not "settled practices" of Virginia Governors. Specifically, he will opine that it is not a settled practice of Virginia Governors to lobby university professors to conduct specific clinical research. He will further opine that it is not a settled practice of Virginia Governors to try to persuade the Tobacco Commission—an independent agency—to fund particular research projects. This is precisely the sort of testimony the Government presented in Jefferson, which the Fourth Circuit cited approvingly. 674 F.3d at 357 ("[T]he government presented expert testimony on the nature of congressional duties.").

---

[4] The Government disagrees, offering a hypothetical about a prosecutor arranging a meeting with his supervisor in exchange for a bribe. See Mem. at 11. But that hypothetical proves Mr. McDonnell's point. The Government's hypothetical prosecutor must have acted with "corrupt intent," which means the prosecutor was innocent if he had innocent intent. Such a prosecutor could call an expert to testify that prosecutors often set up meetings with supervisors in exchange for gifts as part of the routine discharge of their duties. (That testimony might be implausible, of course, but plausibility is not part of the "legal conclusions" analysis.) Such testimony does not "clear[] the way for prosecutors corruptly to take payments for meetings," id., any more than a criminal defendant's testimony that he acted in good faith "clear[s] the way" for the same. That is because the jury is always free to reject a witness's testimony.

The Government does not appear to object to this testimony on Rule 704(a) grounds, confining its argument to the claim that Mr. Earley's notice is internally inconsistent. See Mem. at 9-10. The Government is wrong. While Mr. Earley correctly notes that Governors routinely arrange meetings, the expert notice never suggests that it is a settled practice for Governors to attempt to influence the research decisions of university professors or decisions by the Tobacco Commission to fund medical research. And that testimony is directly relevant and admissible. After all, the Government's theory is that Mr. Williams and Mr. McDonnell schemed together "to advance [Mr. Williams'] effort to obtain research studies and other assistance from state government." Opp'n to Mot. Dismiss, Dkt. 146, at 3. Mr. Earley's testimony that the critical steps in this supposed plan fall outside the "settled practices" of a Virginia Governor is a permissible component of Mr. McDonnell's defense.

2. Mr. Earley's Testimony Does Not Violate Rule 704(b) Because He Will Not Testify About Mr. McDonnell's Mental State.

The Government next argues that Mr. Earley's testimony about whether certain conduct is consistent with innocent intent would violate Rule 704(b). The Government is mistaken. Such testimony is commonplace in the context of specific intent crimes. It complies with Rule 704(b) because it does not opine on the defendant's state of mind during the alleged incident (as would psychiatric evidence, the Rule's real focus), but is, rather, confined to assisting the jury in assessing the significance of certain conduct. Mr. Earley has not examined Mr. McDonnell, does not purport to know whether Mr. McDonnell acted with innocent intent, and will not speculate about what Mr. McDonnell personally believed. What Mr. Earley does know, however, having advised a wide range of Virginia elected officials over his years as Attorney General, is what sort of conduct by a Virginia politician would be consistent with innocent intentions.

Courts routinely admit this sort of expert testimony when specific intent crimes are at issue. For example, in cases charging possession of drugs with the intent to distribute, courts have consistently permitted expert witnesses to opine on whether "the circumstances indicated that this crack probably would be distributed rather than used by [the defendant]." United States v. Brown, 7 F.3d 648, 653 (7th Cir. 1993). As Brown explained, such testimony "merely explained [the expert's] analysis of the facts supporting the inference of an intention to distribute, without directly addressing the issue of [the defendant's] actual mental state." Id. (emphasis added). Or as the Fourth Circuit has held, "the officer's testimony here did not offer an opinion as to [ ] intent" because he "testified only that the evidence presented was inconsistent with personal use." United States v. Alexander, 87 F App'x 889, 890 (4th Cir. 2004) (unpublished). The Fourth Circuit has likewise approved of this sort of testimony via hypothetical questions, such as whether conduct constitutes "a scheme to evade the registration requirements" of securities law. United States v. Offill, 666 F.3d 168, 176-77 (4th Cir. 2011). The only restriction is that the expert not opine on the defendant's subjective intent. Id. at 177

The Government's contrary authorities are easily distinguished. First, the quotation the Government lifts from McIver relates solely to whether the word "extortion" states a "legal conclusion"; that case had nothing to do with Rule 704(b). 470 F.3d at 562. The court's opinion did not even mention Rule 704(b). Second, the proposed experts in United States v. Fowler would have testified about what that defendant personally believed. 932 F.2d 306, 315 (4th Cir. 1991) ("The witnesses would have testified that [the defendant's] interpretation was 'at least arguably correct.'")). The Court's ruling was thus limited to precluding experts from opining that the defendant personally "did not have the mental state constituting an element of the crime." Id. It said nothing about general testimony concerning whether certain conduct is consistent with innocent intentions. Finally, the Eighth Circuit's decision in United States v. Valverde involved an expert who would "tell the jury whether [the defendant's] conversations with the guards were in fact bribery attempts," 846 F.2d 513, 517 (8th Cir. 1988)—thus directly opining about that defendant's subjective intent and, indeed, the ultimate issue in the case.

3. Mr. McDonnell Is Not Calling Mr. Earley To Support An "Advice Of Counsel" Defense.

The Government also objects to the portion of Mr. Earley's testimony concerning intent and common practices (addressed in Section I.A.1.b) on the ground that it "attempts to inject an inadmissible advice-of-counsel defense." Mem. at 13. Mr. McDonnell, however, is not asserting an "advice of counsel" defense. He is, rather, merely seeking to show the jury that he is innocent because he acted in good faith. Admissible expert testimony—which Mr. Earley's is—does not become inadmissible because it fails to satisfy the requirements of an affirmative defense that the defendant has never invoked.

4. Mr. Earley's Testimony About The Tobacco Commission And State Universities Is Reliable And Admissible.

Mr. Earley was the top legal official in the Commonwealth of Virginia. He is intimately familiar with the inner-workings of the Commonwealth's government and is an expert on how the legal entities that comprise Virginia interact with each other. He is likewise an expert on the legal authority that each of Virginia's elected officials possess (or do not possess) over each other and over Virginia's institutions. His testimony on these issues is thus supported by sufficient specialized knowledge and will be helpful for lay jurors attempting to understand the intricacies of Virginia state government.

The Government's chief counter-argument has nothing to do with this opinion's "reliability" (as the Government claims) and is, rather, couched entirely in the Government's contrary factual opinion. The Government has apparently reviewed the Virginia code and concluded that Mr. Earley is wrong when he says that Virginia's Governor lacks "meaningful influence" over the Tobacco Commission or "control" over what research professors at UVA and VCU decide to undertake. That is an argument the Government is free to make to the jury. Should the Government wish to designate a counter-expert who will opine that Virginia's Governor does have "meaningful influence" over the Tobacco Commission and does exercise "control" over each UVA professor's research agenda, it is welcome to do that. Disagreement with an expert's opinion does not make that opinion unreliable and the Government cites no cases suggesting it does. The Government should not be permitted to argue that Mr. McDonnell exerted influence over the Commission and researchers while excluding contrary evidence.

The Government also argues that the Court should forbid Mr. Earley from testifying about the Virginia Governor's ability to influence the Tobacco Commission or UVA and VCU on Rule 403 grounds. But Rule 403 warrants excluding testimony only if that testimony's "probative value is substantially outweighed by a danger of confusing the issues" or "misleading the jury." Fed. R. Evid. 403 (emphasis added). That is not the case here. Mr. McDonnell's ability to obtain the research studies and tobacco commission funding is central to the plausibility of the Government's alleged scheme. If Mr. McDonnell had no ability to obtain these things for Mr. Williams, then it makes no sense that Mr. Williams was bribing Mr. McDonnell to get them. Just imagine that the Government claimed Mr. Williams bribed Mr. McDonnell for assistance with obtaining tenure at Harvard. The fact that Mr. McDonnell has no influence over tenure decisions at Harvard would obviously be relevant to the jury's decision about whether such a scheme existed, since it would make no sense to bribe Mr. McDonnell in order to influence those decisions. Mr. Earley's testimony about the Virginia Governor's lack of "meaningful influence" over the Tobacco Commission and inability to "control" the decisions of university professors is no different. Such evidence will not "confuse" or "mislead" the jury; rather, it will enable the jury to evaluate the Government's evidence in "context," which is, after all, "what matters." May 19, 2014 Hr'g Tr. at 26.

The Government's other arguments should be rejected out of hand. First, the Government's objection that Mr. Earley's testimony cannot inform what constitutes an "official act" misrepresents Mr. Earley's proposed testimony. His testimony has nothing to do with whether Mr. McDonnell's actions were "official"; it has to do with whether the alleged scheme is plausible. This testimony "will rebut the Government's allegation that Mr. McDonnell schemed with Mr. Williams to obtain grants from the Commission." Mem. Ex. A at 3. Second, the fact that Mr. Williams' understanding—and Mr. McDonnell's understanding of what Williams believed—is what matters, Mem. at 15, makes no difference. Mr. Williams was a sophisticated person drawing on the assistance of a team of lobbyists at McGuireWoods, including former Attorney General Jerry Kilgore, whose brother (Terry Kilgore) serves as Chairman of the Tobacco Commission. Testimony about whether Mr. McDonnell had the ability to actually help Mr. Williams achieve his supposed objectives is essential to evaluating the evidence. The same is true for the Government's oft-repeated statement that it need not prove fulfillment of the quid pro quo. Id. True enough, but if the supposed scheme's objective was utterly implausible—as, in Mr. McDonnell's view, this so-called scheme was—then that severely undermines the conclusion that such a scheme existed, regardless of whether its alleged objective was realized.

B. Peter White's Testimony Will Assist The Jury In Evaluating The Benefits The Government Has Provided To Mr. Williams.

In return for Mr. Williams' testimony against Mr. McDonnell, the Government has entered into a transactional immunity agreement with Mr. Williams. Unbeknownst to the defense until recently, the Government and Mr. Williams superseded their original July 1, 2013 agreement with an even more extraordinary agreement, dated May 30, 2014, that extends transactional immunity to Mr. Williams not only for his allegedly unlawful dealings with the McDonnells, but also for completely unrelated conduct involving loans that Mr. Williams received from 2009 to 2012 in exchange for his pledge of Star Scientific stock, and gifts of Star Scientific stock that he made to certain trusts from 2009 to 2012. In addition to this unusual immunity deal, the Government has obtained stays of discovery in multiple civil suits against Star Scientific and Mr. Williams in which neither the Government nor Mr. McDonnell are parties, and has also apparently declined to investigate FDA warnings that Mr. Williams' company introduced misbranded drugs into interstate commerce in violation of 21 U.S.C. § 331(a). See Dec. 20, 2013 FDA Warning Letter to J. Williams Re: Case # 410094, available at http://tinyurl.com/kfuun9d.

The Government's decisions to not prosecute Mr. Williams for conduct that is both related and unrelated to this case, to stay unrelated civil litigation against Star Scientific and Mr. Williams, and to not investigate FDA findings of misconduct by Mr. Williams' company each conferred benefits on Mr. Williams and Star Scientific that the average juror will have difficulty evaluating without the assistance of an expert. Given Mr. White's extensive experience as a federal prosecutor in the E.D.Va. and as an attorney in private practice, his testimony will aid the jury in understanding the intricacies of complex litigation and the full scope of the benefits that the Government has conferred on Mr. Williams and the company in which he is a major shareholder.

1. Mr. White Will Not Opine On Witness Credibility.

The Government's chief objection to Mr. White's testimony is that it will "'constitute [an] evaluation[] of witness credibility.'" Mem. at 15 (quoting Nimely v. City of New York, 414 F.3d 381, 398 (2d Cir. 2005)). This is false. Mr. White will not be opining about Mr. Williams or his credibility, as was the case in Nimely. See 414 F.3d at 398 (explaining that the expert's "direct testimony stated that he 'rejected' the possibility that [witnesses] had lied" and that the expert "reiterated his conclusion that the police officers were 'telling the truth as they perceived it'"); see also United States v. Hill, No. 12-5154, 2014 BL 118278, at *14 (10th Cir. Apr. 28, 2014) (rejecting testimony where the expert "testified flatly and repeatedly that, in his expert opinion, [the defendant] was dishonest during his interview"). His testimony will, rather, be limited to explaining the nature and scope of the benefits Mr. Williams received. The jury will then be able to consider that evidence in deciding for itself whether Mr. Williams is credible.

Mr. White will not be testifying—as the Government seems to believe—about what effect these benefits had on Mr. Williams or his testimony. That is a matter to be explored on cross-examination of Mr. Williams. Nothing in Rule 702 prohibits experts from elucidating facts merely relevant to a witness's credibility, so long as those facts are beyond "the ken of people of ordinary intelligence." United States v. French, 12 F.3d 114, 116 (8th Cir. 1993); see also, e.g., United States v. Davis, 269 F. Supp. 2d 1077, 1083 (S.D. Iowa 2003) ("[I]t is not so likely that an average juror, with little or no exposure to the criminal court system, could adequately visualize the fervor surrounding criminal proceedings in Polk County.").

The Government disagrees, but its authorities all involve expert testimony about facts that jurors could easily understand on their own. These included a garden-variety plea agreement, United States v. Allen, 716 F.3d 98, 105-06 (4th Cir. 2013), straightforward sentence reductions, United States v. Davis, 63 Fed. App'x 76, 80 (4th Cir. 2003) (unpublished); United States v. Davis, 457 F.3d 817, 824 (8th Cir. 2006), the impact that sleep deprivation (an all-too-common problem for average Americans) could have on reliability, Lespier, 725 F.3d at 449, and a comparison among various photographs, Dorsey, 45 F.3d at 815. Each of these topics are ones that the average person can easily comprehend. It is not difficult for a regular person to assess, for example, the difference between 10 years in prison and 5 years in prison (or the hope for such a reduction). That is a far cry, however, from asking an average person to assess (1) the significance of transactional immunity (as opposed to use immunity) for related and unrelated offenses, (2) the significance of an indefinite stay of civil discovery in a "rocket docket" jurisdiction, and (3) the value of one's company getting to avoid a costly FDA investigation.

The Government also claims that an expert is unnecessary because the defense can simply cross-examine Mr. Williams about the various benefits he has received. See Mem. at 17-18. But that response has at least two problems. First, Mr. McDonnell should not be required to rely solely on the very witness whose credibility is at issue to testify honestly about the benefits he has received. Mr. Williams will undoubtedly downplay those benefits and the jury will not be able to fairly asses that minimization unless it understands the benefits being discussed. Second, much of Mr. Williams' understanding of his complex arrangement with the Government may be shielded by attorney-client privilege. The defense will not be able to elicit what Mr. Williams' lawyers told him about these exotic benefits, making cross-examination inadequate.

2. Mr. White's Expert Testimony Is Reliable.

Even though Mr. White has yet to present his testimony, the Government challenges its reliability.[5] First, the Government claims that nothing in Mr. White's resume or in the defense's expert disclosure "reveals that he has expertise in assigning a value to short stays in two civil lawsuits." Mem. at 18. While this objection would be more appropriate when the defense attempts to qualify Mr. White, it is clear from Mr. White's resume that he has years of experience in litigating civil cases and he will testify that he also has experience seeking and opposing stays of civil litigation, including in situations analogous to this one. The Government also errs in claiming that Mr. White will opine about the "value" of stays, as if to suggest that Mr. White will attempt to assign a precise monetary value to stays of indefinite length in two lawsuits. See id. at 18-20. To the contrary, Mr. White will explain why civil defendants like Star Scientific and Mr. Williams benefit from a stay, especially where, as here, the litigation might be affected by a parallel case. Such testimony does not require a particular dollar amount. And contrary to the Government's insinuation that it is relevant whether the civil defendants benefited more than the civil plaintiffs, see id. at 20, Mr. White will explain that Star Scientific and Mr. Williams benefit regardless of what the plaintiffs prefer. The fundamental point, which the Government has effectively conceded, see id. at 18-19, and which Mr. White will explain, is that both Star Scientific and Mr. Williams benefited from the Government's intervention.

Second, the Government complains that Mr. White lacks a factual basis for his opinion because the "strategic reasoning of the parties is shielded by privileges." Id. at 18. But that only underscores the need for expert testimony. The average juror will have no idea why a defendant would want a stay, and Mr. McDonnell has no right to compel the civil defendants to disclose their reasons for wanting a stay. An expert therefore needs to explain the issue.

---

[5] The Government's complaint about Mr. White's notice is also wrong. See Mem. at 23. The summary provided was more than just a list of topics, but even if it were such a list, it would be sufficient since Mr. White will in large part be testifying generally. See United States v. Verges, No. 1:13cr222 (JCC), 2014 BL 37955, at *5 (E.D. Va. Feb. 12, 2014) (confirming that a "disclosure need only contain general information" when the expert "plans to testify about several topics generally").

Finally, the Government contends that Mr. White has identified "no body or recognized, reliable expertise that assigns value to a stay" and "no set of reliable principles" that he will apply to the "facts." Id. at 20. Again, the Government mischaracterizes Mr. White's testimony, which is experiential in nature and "does not rely on anything like a scientific method." United States v. Wilson, 484 F.3d 267, 274 (4th Cir. 2007). To the contrary, courts regularly admit the experiential testimony of attorneys. See, e.g., Kitchen v. Ballard, No. 2:10-cv-01264, 2011 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 116364, at *28-29 (S.D. W Va. Sept. 2, 2011); McShane v. Cate, No. ED CV 09-01243-CAS (VBK), 2011 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 153978, at *72-77 (C.D. Cal. Dec. 22, 2011).

To establish the reliability of his testimony, Mr. White must "explain how his experience leads to the conclusion reached, why his experience is a sufficient basis for the opinion, and how his experience is reliably applied to the facts." Wilson, 484 F.3d at 274. Mr. White will easily make this showing. He has litigated complex cases for over 20 years. Drawing on this experience and assessing the available information about the lawsuits against Star Scientific and Mr. Williams, Mr. White will explain that the Government's efforts to obtain stays in those lawsuits benefited Star Scientific and Mr. Williams by, among other things, deferring the heavy costs of discovery until later and delaying litigation of the dispute until the conclusion of Mr. McDonnell's criminal case, at which point Star Scientific and Mr. Williams will have more information with which to litigate their civil cases. Therefore, Mr. White's testimony is not speculative but is based on his extensive experience reliably applied to the facts, and for that reason, it is admissible under Rule 702 and not unduly prejudicial or confusing under Rule 403.[6]

---

[6] The Government also argues that Mr. White has insufficient information about whether Star Scientific and Mr. Williams were guilty of misbranding their products in violation of 21 U.S.C. § 331(a) and that any testimony attempting to establish their guilt would violate Federal

C. J. Allen Kosowsky's Testimony Will Assist The Jury In Understanding The McDonnells' Finances, The Mechanics Of Processing A Bank Loan, And The Benefits That Mr. Williams Has Received.

Mr. Kosowsky's testimony will address three critical areas. First, Mr. Kosowski will testify that the McDonnells' finances were fundamentally sound at the time of the alleged conspiracy. The Government does not object to the substance of this testimony, but rather contends only that the defense's notice was insufficient because it did not set forth the bases and reasons for Mr. Kosowski's conclusion. Second, Mr. Kosowsky will testify that, given the complexity of the loan application process, applicants often innocently omit information, as well as that the McDonnells' omissions were not objectively material to their qualifications. The Government contends that this testimony is an improper attempt to opine on Mr. McDonnell's mental state. Finally, Mr. Kosowsky will testify about the financial benefits that Mr. Williams and Star Scientific have received by virtue of both the Government's immunity agreement with Mr. Williams and the Government's assistance in staying two civil lawsuits against Star Scientific and Mr. Williams. The Government contends that this testimony is an improper attempt to opine on witness credibility. Each of the Government's objections is unfounded.

1. Mr. Kosowsky's Testimony About The McDonnells' Finances Is Adequately Noticed.

The Government does not dispute that Mr. Kosowsky's testimony about the McDonnells' finances is admissible under Rule 702. It instead claims that the defense provided inadequate notice of his testimony because it did not include the bases and reasons for his opinion that their

---

(continued...)

Rule of Evidence 608(b) and would be unduly prejudicial under Rule 403. See Mem. at 21-22. This argument misses the point. Mr. White does not intend to prove that Star Scientific and Mr. Williams misbranded their products. Mr. White only seeks to testify about the benefits to Star Scientific and Mr. Williams of not being investigated for those alleged violations.

finances were sound. See Mem. at 27. But the notice did identify the bases for Mr. Kosowsky's opinion. Specifically, it noted that Mr. Kosowsky's opinions are based on "analyses of Mr. McDonnell's bank applications , balance sheets for rental projects, summaries of taxable income, [and] cash flow analyses." Def. Robert F McDonnell Expert Notice (May 29, 2014) at 5, Mem. at Ex. A. It also noted that his opinions are based on "a comprehensive examination of the McDonnells' financial records, including bank accounts, credit cards, investments, loans, and other financial data." Id. at 6. This is plainly adequate notice. In the case cited by the Government, see Mem. at 27, the notice was found to be inadequate because it "did not describe [the expert's] opinions beyond stating the conclusion." Barile, 286 F.3d at 758. The notice there, unlike here, did not identify any support for the expert's conclusion.

To eliminate any doubt about notice, the defense has provided two supplemental disclosures concerning Mr. Kosowsky's testimony and will provide early next week a copy of every document Mr. Kosowsky has considered in forming his opinions. Among other things, the defense provides the following bases for Mr. Kosowsky's opinion:

(1) The completed financial statements that the McDonnells submitted to the Pentagon Federal Credit Union ("PenFed") show that they had a positive net worth. That PenFed approved their loan application indicates in and of itself that the McDonnells' financial condition was sound.

(2) Mr. McDonnell had access to considerable liquid assets such that he could meet his financial obligations as they became due.

(3) Mr. McDonnell had access to a portion of the proceeds of his father's estate, which was considerable. He also had the right to significant executor's fees.

(4) Taken together, Mr. McDonnell and his sister, as the two partners in MoBo, had sufficient assets and cash flow to meet the obligations of the partnership.

(5) Mr. McDonnell actively took steps to minimize his credit card debt by obtaining the lowest credit card interest rates.

(6) Mr. McDonnell's future earning power was substantial as demonstrated by the multi-million-dollar salaries commanded by retired high-level public officials.

Particularly with this supplementary information, the notice for Mr. Kosowsky is more than sufficient. See, e.g., United States v. Verges, No. 1.13cr222 (JCC), 2014 BL 37955, at *5-*6 (E.D. Va. Feb. 12, 2014); United States v. King, 703 F Supp. 2d 1063, 1077 (D. Haw. 2010).

2. Mr. Kosowsky's Testimony Does Not Violate Rule 704(b) Because He Will Not Testify About Mr. McDonnell's Mental State.

Mr. Kosowsky will also testify that bank loan applicants often innocently omit information due to the complexity of the application process and that the McDonnells' omissions were not, by any objective standard, material to their qualifications for a loan. The Government contends that this testimony amounts to an improper opinion on Mr. McDonnell's mental state. See Mem. at 25-26.[7] Rule 704(b) forbids expert witnesses from testifying "about whether the defendant did or did not have a mental state or condition that constitutes an element of the crime charged or of a defense." This rule does not forbid experts from testifying about facts otherwise incomprehensible to the average juror from which the jury could draw an inference about the defendant's mental state. "It is only as to the last step in the inferential process—a conclusion as to the defendant's actual mental state—that Rule 704(b) commands the expert to be silent." United States v. Dunn, 846 F.2d 761, 762 (D.C. Cir. 1988) (emphasis added); see also United States v. Morales, 108 F.3d 1031, 1037 (9th Cir. 1997) (Rule 704(b) does not bar expert testimony "from which the factfinder might infer a defendant's mental state"). So long as the expert does not opine on the defendant's actual mental state, the expert's testimony will not run afoul of Rule 704(b). See, e.g., United States v. Owens, 301 F.3d 521, 527 (7th Cir. 2002)

---

[7] The Government also asserts that Mr. Kosowsky's "resume reveals no particular expertise in bank loan applications." Mem. at 26. But this is clearly wrong. Mr. Kosowsky's resume shows that he has served on the board of two banking institutions and is currently on the board of a publicly traded bank.

(expert witness permitted to testify that appraisal reports defendant prepared were "misleading and fraudulent" since he never directly commented on defendant's state of mind); United States v. Speer, 30 F.3d 605, 610 (5th Cir. 1994) ("Rule 704(b) is not strictly construed and prohibits only a direct statement of the defendant's intent."); United States v. Chin, 981 F.2d 1275, 1279 (D.C. Cir. 1992) (policeman's testimony about why drug traffickers enlist juveniles permissible because those "observations never purported to describe [the defendant's] own mental state").

Mr. Kosowsky will not be discussing or opining about Mr. McDonnell's mental state. Instead, Mr. Kosowsky will explain how the loan application process generally works and explain that applicants often make innocent mistakes on early drafts of their loan papers. This testimony stops well short of "the last step in the inferential process." Dunn, 846 F.2d at 762. In the Government's principal contrary authority, by contrast, the experts proposed to take that last leap by actually opining that the defendant's "interpretation" of the regulations he was charged with violating "was 'at least arguably correct.'" Fowler, 932 F.2d at 315. Because those experts proposed to testify about what the defendant personally understood, the court was rightly concerned about their testifying that the defendant himself "was confused, not culpable." See id. The court therefore refused to admit the proffered expert testimony. No similar concern exists here, because Mr. Kosowsky's testimony will not opine about Mr. McDonnell's mental state.

The same is true for Mr. Kosowsky's testimony that the McDonnells' initial omissions on their loan applications were not, by any objective standard, material to their qualifications for a loan. The Government responds that the materiality of the omissions is not relevant because materiality is not an element of 18 U.S.C. § 1014, the charged crime. See Mem. at 25-26. But while it is true that the Government need only prove that Mr. McDonnell intended to influence the bank, see United States v. Wells, 519 U.S. 482, 499 (1997), the materiality of a particular omission is plainly relevant to the jury's determination of Mr. McDonnell's intent. After all, had Mr. McDonnell omitted the $10 he borrowed from a friend to buy lunch from his loan application, the obvious immateriality of that omission would negate any inference of corrupt intent. That is because materiality is powerful circumstantial evidence of intent. Mr. McDonnell is therefore plainly entitled to present evidence of materiality in defending these charges.

The Government is also wrong to argue that Mr. Kosowsky's opinion on materiality states a legal conclusion. See Mem. at 26. As the Government itself acknowledges, materiality is not an element of the relevant crime, so Mr. Kosowsky's opinion will not usurp the Court's duty to instruct the jury on the law. In any event, Mr. Kosowsky does not use the word "materiality" in its legal sense. Rather, Mr. Kosowsky simply means that the McDonnells' omissions would not have influenced a typical bank to withhold a loan from them.

3. Mr. Kosowsky Will Not Opine On Witness Credibility.

The Government also challenges Mr. Kosowsky's testimony about the financial benefits Mr. Williams and Star Scientific have received by virtue of the Government's decisions to (1) not prosecute Mr. Williams for the alleged crimes in this case, (2) stay two civil lawsuits against Mr. Williams and Star Scientific, and (3) not investigate allegations that Mr. Williams engaged in self-dealing as Star Scientific's Chief Executive Officer and that he exercised improper control and access over a family trust. The Government contends that this is improper expert testimony on credibility. See Mem. at 23-24. But for the same reasons that apply to Mr. White's testimony, this testimony is proper. Mr. Kosowsky will not be opining on the credibility of Mr. Williams or any other witness. Nor will he opine about the effect any financial benefits had on any witness's credibility. Rather, his testimony will be limited to quantifying the value of the financial benefits the Government has conferred on Mr. Williams and Star Scientific. It will then be for the jury alone to decide how those benefits might impact credibility.

Finally, the Government attacks Mr. Kosowsky's qualifications by claiming that his resume "fails to demonstrate" that he has expertise in "evaluating federal criminal immunity agreements." Mem. at 24. But the purpose of Mr. Kosowsky's testimony is not to "evaluate" Mr. Williams' immunity agreement; rather it is to value his exposure absent the agreement. Avoiding investigations and legal proceedings have an economic value, and as a Certified Valuation Analyst and Accredited Business Valuator, Mr. Kosowsky is more than qualified to opine on the financial benefits that flow from immunization, a stay of discovery in civil proceedings, and forgoing investigations of other potential misconduct.

D. Norman Thomas Will Assist The Jury In Understanding Mr. McDonnell's Statements of Economic Interest ("SOEIs").

Mr. Thomas will provide critical testimony about the state legal regime in which Mr. McDonnell's official disclosures occurred. While this issue is collateral to the actual charges, the Government has made clear that it intends to use Mr. McDonnell's treatment of his SOEI as evidence of his supposed intent to defraud or conceal his relationship with Mr. Williams. Mr. McDonnell objects to the injection of this side issue into this case, as one of his Motions in Limine makes clear. Should the Court deny that Motion in Limine, however, then Mr. McDonnell must be permitted to introduce expert testimony explaining Virginia's disclosure laws to the jury. By making Mr. McDonnell's compliance with those laws an issue in this case, the Government invites the jury to make legal determinations without the benefit of any jury instructions, since this Court will not, of course, be instructing the jury on Virginia's disclosure law. In the absence of definitive legal guidance, expert testimony is essential.

The Government alleges in the Indictment that Mr. McDonnell took steps "to hide the nature and scope of [his] dealings with [Mr. Williams] by routing things of value through family members and corporate entities controlled by [Mr. McDonnell] in an effort to avoid annual disclosure requirements on [Mr. McDonnell's] SOEIs." Indictment ¶ 111(b). The Government recently doubled down on this theory in notifying the defense that it may introduce Rule 404(b) evidence that Mr. McDonnell received things of value from individuals other than Mr. Williams and failed to report them on his SOEI. See May 29, 2014 Letter from D. Boente to H. Asbill et al. ("Expert Notice and 404(b) Disclosure"), at 3 (Ex. H). The Government apparently believes Mr. McDonnell evinced corrupt intent whenever he failed to record a gift on his SOEI. But if Mr. McDonnell was not required to disclose a particular gift, then the fact that he failed to do so is substantially less probative of criminal intent. The Government's theory makes sense only if the Government can prove that Mr. McDonnell knowingly violated those reporting requirements. But the Government has failed to notice an expert who could explain that, which is why Mr. McDonnell has moved to exclude this evidence. Without an expert, SOEI evidence will only confuse the jury and prejudice Mr. McDonnell.

Notwithstanding the clear need for expert testimony on this issue, the Government opposes Mr. Thomas' testimony on the ground that it would Rule 704(b)'s prohibition against expert testimony on "whether the defendant did or did not have a mental state or condition that constitutes an element of the crime charged." Mem. at 28. But nothing in Mr. Thomas' proposed testimony speaks to Mr. McDonnell's mental state with respect to the crimes charged. His testimony is limited, rather to his analysis of relevant SOEI requirements and his opinion that Mr. McDonnell's SOEI submissions reasonably applied those requirements. Mr. Thomas will not opine on whether Mr. McDonnell's mental state satisfied the elements of the charges at issue.

The Government also relies on Fowler, which excluded expert testimony "that the regulations were confusing, vague, and uncertain, [and] that Fowler's interpretation of them was 'at least arguably correct.'" See 932 F.2d at 315. But Fowler concerned expert testimony that the defendant's interpretation of regulations intrinsic to the charged crimes established that the defendant lacked criminal intent. Here, Virginia's disclosure laws are not intrinsic to the federal bribery laws and it is the Government—not Mr. McDonnell—that seeks to make affirmative use of Virginia law in its case at trial. Fowler is therefore irrelevant. Because Mr. Thomas' testimony focuses solely on rebutting the Government's suggestion that Mr. McDonnell violated Virginia's disclosure laws, there is no risk, as there was in Fowler, that Mr. Thomas will render an opinion on Mr. McDonnell's mental state with respect to his criminal charges. Mr. Thomas' testimony is, rather, just like the testimony of an accounting expert who testifies about compliance (or non-compliance) with accounting principles that are not directly at issue. See, e.g., Malone v. Microdyne Corp., 26 F.3d 471, 477-78 (4th Cir. 1994) (expert testimony establishing that the defendant company repeatedly violated a financial accounting standard "provided a legally sufficient evidentiary basis" for violation of the Securities Exchange Act).

III. Should The Court Have Doubts About The Admissibility Of Any Expert Witnesses, It Should Conduct An Evidentiary Hearing Or Resolve These Issues At Trial.

For all these reasons, Mr. McDonnell is entitled to present the expert testimony he has noticed. To the extent doubt remains, however, Mr. McDonnell requests that the Court hold a Daubert hearing—in accord with its typical practice[8]—or, in the alternative, simply defer qualification and admissibility of defense experts until trial. This Court will be more capable of assessing the admissibility of defense experts at trial, since it could then make those assessments in light of the evidence the Government presents during its case-in-chief.

---

[8] See, e.g., United States v. Baylor, 3:11-CR-64, 2011 WL 5910061 (E.D. Va. Nov. 28, 2011) (held Daubert hearing); United States v. Council, 777 F. Supp. 2d 1006, 1007 (E.D. Va. 2011) (same); Sanders v. UDR, Inc., 3:10-CV-459, 2011 WL 864336 (E.D. Va. Mar. 10, 2011) (same); PBM Products, LLC v. Mead Johnson Nutrition Co., 3:09-CV-269, 2010 WL 56072 (E.D. Va. Jan. 4, 2010) (same); United States v. Willard, 3:10-CR-154, 2010 WL 3784944 (E.D. Va. Sept. 20, 2010) (same); DNT, LLC v. Sprint Spectrum, LP, CIV.A. 3:09CV21, 2010 WL 582164 (E.D. Va. Feb. 12, 2010) (same).

Moreover, many of the Government's objections go to reliability—a factually intensive issue that is best resolved via live examination of the experts rather than through lawyers' argument in legal briefs. Those sorts of objections would be most easily adjudicated at trial since "the key question is not the expert's general qualifications in some field, but whether the precise question on which he will be asked to opine is within his field of expertise or meets some other test." Berry v. City of Detroit, 25 F.3d 1342, 1351 (6th Cir. 1994); see also 29 CHARLES A. WRIGHT ET AL., FED. PRAC. & PROC. EVID. § 6265 (1st ed. 1997) ("[U]ntil specific questions are posed to the witness, the court cannot know if the witness is qualified as an expert in the area of inquiry."). Voir dire of Mr. McDonnell's experts either at trial or at a pre-trial Daubert hearing would be the most effective way to dispel any lingering doubts the Court harbors about the reliability and soundness of those experts' testimony.[9] And to the extent the Government has objections to specific questions or specific answers Mr. McDonnell's experts might give, it should "object during trial." Offill, 666 F.3d at 174. This Court can then resolve objections in the context of actual questions rather than speculation about what certain questions might elicit.

CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons, the Government's Motion to Exclude Mr. McDonnell's Expert Witnesses should be denied.

---

[9] See, e.g., United States v. Alatorre, 222 F.3d 1098, 1104 (9th Cir. 2000) (commending as "practical" the district court's having "allowed [the defendant] to explore [the prosecution witness's] qualifications and the basis for his testimony at trial via voir dire and then, following voir dire, rejected his renewed objections to the testimony"); United States v. Conn, 297 F.3d 548, 557 (7th Cir. 2002) ("Had the defense had concerns about the quality of [the prosecution witness's] training, the quantity of his experience, or the methodology that he employed in reaching his assessment , it could have raised those questions during voir dire."); El Aguila Food Prods., Inc. v. Gruma Corp., 131 F. App'x 450, 452 (5th Cir. 2005) ("After plaintiffs presented their fact witnesses, they offered their damages expert [Defendant] renewed its Daubert objection, and after a complete proffer and extended voir dire examination, the court sustained the objection and excluded [the expert] from testifying.").

Dated: June 20, 2014

Respectfully submitted,

/s/ Jonathan A. Berry
Henry W. Asbill (pro hac vice)
Mary Ellen Powers (pro hac vice)
Noel J. Francisco (pro hac vice)
Ryan D. Newman (pro hac vice)
James M. Burnham (pro hac vice)
Jonathan A. Berry (VSB No. 81864)
JONES DAY
51 Louisiana Avenue, N.W
Washington, DC 20001
Telephone: (202) 879-3939
Facsimile: (202) 626-1700

John L. Brownlee (VSB No. 37358)
Timothy J. Taylor (VSB No. 84529)
HOLLAND & KNIGHT LLP
800 17th Street N.W
Suite 1100
Washington, DC 20006
Telephone: (202) 828-1854
Facsimile: (202) 955-5564

Counsel for Robert F. McDonnell

CERTIFICATE OF SERVICE

I, Jonathan A. Berry, am a member of the Bar of this Court. I hereby certify that on this 20th day of June, 2014, I caused the foregoing to be electronically filed with the Clerk of Court using the CM/ECF system, causing it to be served on all registered users.

Dated: June 20, 2014

Respectfully submitted,

/s/ Jonathan A. Berry
Jonathan A. Berry (VSB No. 81864)
JONES DAY
51 Louisiana Avenue, N.W
Washington, DC 20001
Telephone: (202) 879-3939
Facsimile: (202) 626-1700

Counsel for Robert F. McDonnell

IN THE UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT FOR THE
EASTERN DISTRICT OF VIRGINIA
Richmond Division

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA	)
	)
v.	)
	)	No. 3:14cr12-JRS
ROBERT F MCDONNELL and	)
MAUREEN G. MCDONNELL,	)
Defendants.	)

GOVERNMENT'S REPLY IN SUPPORT OF MOTION TO EXCLUDE EXPERT TESTIMONY

The United States of America, by undersigned counsel, respectfully files this reply in support of its Motion to Exclude Expert Testimony, Doc. No. 221. In his response in opposition, Doc. No. 241 ("Def. Mem."), and an accompanying second supplemental expert notice, Doc. No. 241-5 ("2nd Supp. Notice"), defendant Robert F McDonnell attempts to recast his proffered expert testimony as "indistinguishable from expert testimony that the Government itself regularly presents and that the courts of this district and others routinely admit." Def. Mem. at 1. Nothing in Mr. McDonnell's response or his supplemental notice, however, remedies the fundamental flaws in his effort to have three criminal attorneys, a forensic accountant, and an unidentified individual testify to witness credibility, criminal intent, and the legality of Mr. McDonnell's conduct.

To be sure, Mr. McDonnell points out certain, limited factual (and perhaps expert) testimony that may be admissible at trial from individuals with appropriate knowledge and with sufficient foundation, such as testimony about the McDonnells' finances or testimony about whether governors routinely arrange [illegible]gs, host events, and interact with other state government officials. But Mr. McDonnell's proposed expert testimony goes much further. Indeed, his supplemental notice confirms that he seeks to have, for example, a criminal attorney claim that other politicians engage in conduct like Mr. McDonnell's "without running afoul of legal and ethical obligations" and "consistent with the absence of fraudulent intent." 2nd Supp. Notice at 1, 2. Similarly, Mr. McDonnell has confirmed that he intends to have another criminal attorney "explain the type and value of the benefits" that the defense claims Jonnie R. Williams, Sr. received in this case, as well as a forensic accountant to "opine on the financial value" of the same. Id. at 2, 3. And Mr. McDonnell seeks to have a third criminal attorney "offer his opinion that the [state disclosure] forms filed by Mr. McDonnell from 2010 to 2013 evidence a reasonable understanding of which items were required to be disclosed." Id. at 7.

In short, Mr. McDonnell's response and supplemental expert notices only confirm his intent to solicit various inadmissible opinions from his proposed experts, and this Court should preclude him from doing so. Thus, as explained in greater detail below, this Court should exclude three of Mr. McDonnell's proposed experts in their entirety, exclude the vast majority of the remaining two experts' testimony, and strictly police Mr. McDonnell's remaining proposed factual and expert testimony to prevent him from calling a series of lawyers to testify that the jury should not convict him.

I. Argument

A. Former Virginia Attorney General Earley should not be permitted to testify that conduct like Mr. McDonnell's did not violate his legal obligations or was inconsistent with fraudulent intent.

Mr. McDonnell's first proposed expert, former Attorney General Mark L. Earley, has repackaged his opinion three times in this case, but his opinion has remained the same each time he has related it. His opinion has always boiled down to a legal conclusion about Mr. McDonnell's guilt. But the Fourth Circuit has held that expert testimony is unhelpful and inadmissible when an expert offers "to give testimony that 'states a legal conclusion or draws a legal conclusion by applying law to the facts.'" United States v. Offill, 666 F.3d 168, 175 (4th Cir. 2011) (quoting United States v. McIver, 470 F.3d 550, 562 (4th Cir. 2006)). As explained below, small portions of Earley's testimony may be admissible, but overwhelmingly his testimony remains unchanged and must be excluded.

1. Earley's proposed testimony still includes inadmissible legal opinions.

After first attempting to offer through an amicus brief a legal opinion that this Court should dismiss the corruption charges out of hand, as a matter of law—a legal conclusion contrary to this Court's ruling—the first notice of Earley's testimony again offered legal conclusions rather than address factual questions that require expertise. That notice unambiguously used the language that defines the offense and asserted that Mr. McDonnell's conduct charged in the Indictment did not involve "official acts," the specific term defined in 18 U.S.C. § 201(a)(3). Specifically, the first notice asserted that the activities charged in the Indictment, "while a routine part of any Governor's activities, are not actions or decisions on matters brought before Governors in their official capacity and thus have never been understood by Virginia officials to be 'official acts.'" Doc. No. 222-1 ("Notice"), at 2 (emphasis added). This word choice does not appear to be an accident. Rather, the essence of Earley's opinion is a legal position about the scope of federal bribery law. That Earley's opinion rests on his view of the law is obvious from its factual incoherence. If Earley were making a mere factual claim about what governors do, his opinion ought to survive being rephrased in terms of "settled practices." But if the phrase "official acts" that appears in Mr. McDonnell's first expert notice were replaced with "settled practices," Earley would have asserted that acts that governors routinely perform in office are not settled practices. This opinion makes no sense, and Earley did not offer—and still has not offered—any defensible method for explaining why that assertion makes sense. All that he is offering is a bald legal conclusion.

In Mr. McDonnell's second supplemental expert notice for Earley, Mr. McDonnell claims that he has solved the problems that made the opinions described in the first notice inadmissible, but he is wrong. The supplemental notice still asserts impermissible legal conclusions and shows, again, that Earley is applying no method at all. First, the latest expert notice asserts that Earley "does not plan to testify about what constitutes an 'official act' under federal law." 2nd Supp. Notice at 1. But then, on the same page, the notice quickly shifts away from fact testimony about what governors typically do and instead says that Earley will tell the jurors what governors may do "without running afoul of legal and ethical obligations." Id. (emphasis added). Again, Earley's opinion does not help the jury to decide a contested factual question. What Earley offers is an opinion that Mr. McDonnell's conduct alleged in the indictment does not "run[] afoul" of his "legal obligations."

By shifting from using the term of art "official act" to an opinion that Mr. McDonnell's actions satisfied his "legal and ethical obligations," Earley has not made his testimony admissible. If anything, his opinion has become even more clearly inadmissible. Now, he is simply stating a legal conclusion in the most expansive sense possible—that particular conduct is legal, full stop. Obviously, the United States could not present testimony from a former Attorney General—of Virginia or the United States—to opine that conduct like Mr. McDonnell's ran "afoul of [Mr. McDonnell's] legal and ethical obligations," because such testimony would do no more than tell the jury what verdict to reach. See United States v. Barile, 286 F.3d 749, 759–60 (4th Cir. 2002). The testimony that Mr. McDonnell seeks to offer through Earley—in either notice—is no different and should be excluded.

Mr. McDonnell argues that Earley's testimony simply mirrors the testimony of former Congressman McHugh in United States v. Jefferson. But McHugh's testimony addressed questions of fact about what members of Congress routinely do. Crucially, McHugh did not draw conclusions about what was legal for Jefferson to do; he did not attempt to imbue terms like "settled practice" with a legal meaning that only he knew and understood as an expert politician (much less a former Attorney General); and he did not offer an opinion about the scope of federal bribery law. The United States' opposition to the motion to exclude McHugh's testimony makes clear that the difference between McHugh's testimony and Earley's is substantial and dispositive for admissibility:

> Here, the expected expert testimony of Congressman McHugh embraces common terms with common meanings such as "decisions" and "matters" that are "routinely performed" or "routinely brought before Members." The average layman would understand these words and would ascribe to them the same meaning as that suggested by the law. Congressman McHugh is not going to be asked whether he believes the assistance provided by Defendant Jefferson to constituents amounted to "official acts" as defined by the statute. Clearly, that would call for an improper legal conclusion from the expert.

Doc. No. 241-7, at 7

The jury is fully capable of applying this Court's jury instructions in evaluating the facts of what governors routinely do when the jury decides what action by a governor constitutes an official act. But the jury does not need an expert to tell them that Mr. McDonnell's actions (or some thinly disguised hypothetical that represents Mr. McDonnell's actions) are legal and ethical. The bribery laws do not have a built-in mechanism for public officials to define for themselves through expert testimony which acts they may be secretly paid to perform.

Fact witnesses and qualified experts may, with proper foundation, testify about what a given type of public official routinely does. Do they regularly promote businesses within the state by arranging for meetings with public officials and holding events promoting businesses? The jury can then easily apply this Court's jury instructions and determine for itself whether arranging a given meeting or hosting a given event was action on a question, matter, cause, suit, proceeding, or controversy. As this Court has previously explained, at bottom, the question of what constitutes an "official act" is not that complicated, and a jury can decide it without being told by an former Attorney General what is "legal and ethical" and what is not.[1]

Moreover, to the extent that Mr. McDonnell is claiming that Earley's testimony is admissible because Earley is vague about the legal standards that he is using to say that Mr. McDonnell's conduct is "legal and ethical" (or, again, that some hypothetical set of facts identical to Mr. McDonnell's conduct is legal), the testimony lacks any method. "An expert who supplies nothing but a bottom line supplies nothing of value to the judicial process," Zenith Electronics Corp. v. WH-TV Broadcasting Corp., 395 F.3d 416, 419 (7th Cir. 2005) (quotation omitted), and courts may exclude testimony that rests on "the ipse dixit of the expert," General Elec. Co. v. Joiner, 522 U.S. 136, 146 (1997). And at bottom, that is all Earley's proposed testimony is. For example, Mr. McDonnell's brief states that Earley's testimony should be admissible because "[t]he average person has not been a high-level politician and thus will not be familiar with the dance that politicians must perform daily to avoid offending the thousands of donors and benefactors that electoral politics requires cultivating." Def. Mem. at 6 (emphasis added). But no governor "must" drive Ferraris, accept free golf at an exclusive club, take $15,000 for his child's wedding, or accept $120,000 in balloon loans that require no interim payments. And no matter how many times Mr. McDonnell tries to change the facts of this case, not one penny of the graft charged here was a campaign contribution. Thus, whatever "electoral politics requires" is irrelevant, and Earley's testimony that is premised on equating the quid charged here to a campaign contribution should be excluded.

---

[1] In defending the admissibility of Earley's testimony, Mr. McDonnell also ignores what his own supplemental expert notice says. For example, Mr. McDonnell's opposition to the motion to exclude insists that Earley's testimony is actually just factual: "The Government claims that Mr. Earley's testimony is different from Mr. McHugh's in Jefferson because Mr. Earley's testimony does not consist of 'straightforward factual content.' That is plainly wrong." Def. Mem. at 8. But again, the supplemental notice filed with that brief says that Earley will tell the jurors what governors may do "without running afoul of legal and ethical obligations." 2nd Supp. Notice at 1 (emphasis added). Opinions about what one former gubernatorial candidate thinks governors may legally and ethically do in secretly accepting personal financial benefits in exchange for promoting a Virginia business is not straightforward factual testimony, much less admissible expert testimony.

2. Earley's proposed testimony about fraudulent intent is unqualified and unhelpful to a jury.

Earley also improperly seeks to give his opinion that the United States cannot show that Mr. McDonnell acted with corrupt intent. The first expert notice said that Mr. Earley's opinion is that "the conduct alleged here is consistent with Mr. McDonnell not having a corrupt intent to defraud the people of Virginia of his honest services or to otherwise engage in official action." Notice at 3. Implicitly acknowledging the impropriety of this opinion, Mr. McDonnell's supplemental notice describes Earley's proposed testimony in slightly more veiled terms: "Mr. Earley will also opine about whether certain conduct by Virginia politicians is consistent with the absence of fraudulent intent." 2nd Supp. Notice at 2. This testimony should be excluded. A former state attorney general has no expertise beyond a juror's on when others intend to deceive and defraud. Cf. United States v. Williams, 133 F.3d 1048, 1053 (7th Cir. 1998) (holding inadmissible testimony from an agent who "purports to be a human lie detector").

Criminal trials for corruption and fraud do not—and should not—feature lawyers with no personal knowledge of the events giving opinions about whether the defendant acted with a fraudulent intent or even acted "consistent" with an absence of fraudulent intent. The problem here is essentially the same as courts have identified for expert testimony on credibility. First, juries can make those determinations themselves, making expert testimony unhelpful, and second, no one genuinely has expertise on fraudulent intent.

Again, if the United States offered an expert who claimed expertise in knowing when people intend to defraud or deceive others and planned to testify that "the conduct alleged here is consistent with Mr. McDonnell corruptly intending to defraud the people of Virginia," that would be obviously improper. That inadmissible evidence does not become admissible because the defendant is offering it. Likewise, the United States could not present an expert to say that "certain conduct by Virginia politicians" that matches Mr. McDonnell's "is consistent with having a fraudulent intent." In other words, Mr. McDonnell's slight circumlocution to the "consistent with" language in his supplemental expert notice does not help him. The distinctions governing expert testimony may sometimes be fine, but they turn on substance, not camouflage.

In defending his proposed expert testimony on fraudulent intent, Mr. McDonnell invokes Offill. But the expert in Offill did not offer any opinion about whether the defendant had a particular intent or even whether certain conduct was "consistent" with a particular intent. Rather, the expert was asked to explain the effect under certain securities law of a hypothetical where an investor intended to pass on a promissory note when the investor transfers related stock. The expert also addressed the effect under the securities law of a hypothetical where the investor did not intend to pass on a promissory note when transferring related stock. 666 F.3d at 176–77. This testimony bears no resemblance to an expert telling the jury what a defendant's intent is or how to determine whether the defendant had a particular intent.[2] It should be excluded.

---

[2] Mr. McDonnell also cites drug trafficking cases in which experts testify that baggies, scales, razor blades, and digital scales are used to distribute drugs and that people who simply consume drugs do not need these items. Testimony of that sort bears no resemblance to expert

3. Earley's testimony about what actions governors routinely perform may be admissible provided that Mr. McDonnell provides sufficient foundation before offering it.

Finally, Earley—like many other potential witnesses in this case—could likely offer, with proper foundation, factual testimony about what governors in Virginia routinely do, as a factual matter, without commenting on the legality of that conduct. To track Mr. McDonnell's first expert notice, Earley could testify, assuming appropriate foundation were laid, "that arranging meetings with other government officials for constituents, attending receptions and ribbon-cutting events, hosting events at the Governor's Mansion, inviting constituents to receptions, taking pictures with constituents, promoting Virginia businesses, and other similar activities" are "a routine part of any Governor's activities." Notice at 2. Whether that factual testimony may permissibly extend to an expert opinion, of course, depends on whether Mr. McDonnell lays adequate foundation that Earley's testimony meets Fed. R. Evid. 702's requirements.

And there is reason to doubt that it will. For example, Earley's sole proffered qualification for proffering an expert opinion on what constitutes "a routine part of any Governor's activities" appears to be his legal training. See Def. Mem. at 4 ("Mr. Earley served as the top legal official in the Commonwealth of Virginia. He is experienced in advising Virginia's Governor and other Commonwealth officials on their legal obligations."). This expertise, which appears to be limited to the experience of a law enforcement official who by definition is somewhat removed from politics (and indeed is elected independently and directly, testimony on fraudulent intent. Mr. McDonnell cites no case that has said that the drug trafficking cases authorize lawyers to testify as experts in fraud cases about what is consistent with an intent to defraud because no such case exists. Drug distribution, like securities regulations, may in some cases be subject areas beyond the understanding of an average juror. But fraudulent intent—or put differently, lying—is not.

---

unlike other Virginia cabinet officials) contrasts starkly with former Congressman McHugh's testimony in Jefferson about what members of Congress routinely do.

In any event, assuming Earley can avoid offering what amounts to a legal opinion as a former Attorney General, he may be able to offer, with adequate foundation, fact (and possibly expert) testimony about whether governors routinely arrange meetings, host events, and promote businesses. And he may also be able to testify, assuming adequate foundation is laid, that in his experience, he has no knowledge of those meetings, events, and business promotion involving state universities or the Virginia Tobacco Indemnification and Revitalization Commission. Whether he is able to provide a sufficient foundation for this testimony (and whether it should be considered factual or expert based on that foundation) could be determined by the Court at trial before Earley takes the stand and testifies before the jury. Regardless, this Court should rule now that Earley may not (i) give the legal opinions described in Mr. McDonnell's expert notices thus far about "official acts," what runs "afoul of legal and ethical obligations," and what politicians "must" do or what "electoral politics requires"; (ii) opine about fraudulent intent, whether for Mr. McDonnell or for anyone else; or (iii) testify using any other legal terminology that will be in the Court's jury instructions. In sum, Earley's opinions about legality, ethics, and fraudulent intent have no place in this trial, and they should be excluded now.

B. White's testimony is inadmissible because juries do not need expert testimony about immunity agreements or brief stays in civil litigation to evaluate credibility.

Next, Mr. McDonnell's proposed expert testimony from criminal defense attorney Peter White is foreclosed by United States v. Allen, 716 F.3d 98 (4th Cir. 2013). In Allen, the defendant "wanted to use an expert criminal defense attorney to explain the legal significance of § 5K1.1 letters, § 3553(e) motions, and 21 U.S.C. § 851 notices—all of which entail the government asking for a lesser sentence in light of a defendant's substantial cooperation—in order to show that the codefendants called to testify against him may be biased." 716 F.3d at 105 (emphasis added). The Fourth Circuit held that "[e]xpert testimony of this nature is not permitted under the Federal Rules of Evidence." Id. at 106. Mr. McDonnell claims that White's testimony is admissible, notwithstanding Allen, because White "will not be opining about Mr. Williams or his credibility." Def. Mem. at 18. According to Mr. McDonnell, White's testimony is admissible because it "will be limited to explaining the nature and scope of the benefits Mr. Williams received. The jury will then be able to consider that evidence in deciding for itself whether Mr. Williams is credible." Id.

Mr. McDonnell's argument elevates form over substance. Although the cases make clear that it is especially objectionable for an expert to express an opinion on whether a witness is credible, the law's prohibition on expert testimony on witness credibility is broader than that. Allen itself made this clear. In Allen, the expert would have "explain[ed] the legal significance" of cooperation agreements and the statutory mechanisms governing reductions below mandatory minimums for substantial assistance, just as White proposes to explain immunity agreements. But just as the expert's testimony in Allen was inadmissible, White's testimony is too. "A juror can connect the dots," the Fourth Circuit explained, "and understand the implications that a plea agreement might have on a codefendant's testimony." Allen, 716 F.3d at 106. Similarly, the Fourth Circuit has upheld the exclusion of expert testimony even where the analysis did not turn on whether the expert was directly stating an opinion about a witness's credibility. United States v. Lespier, 725 F.3d 437, 449 (4th Cir. 2013) (expert testimony on effects of sleep deprivation); United States v. Dorsey, 45 F.3d 809, 815 (4th Cir. 1995) (expert testimony by forensic anthropologists used to cast doubt on eyewitness identifications).

Mr. McDonnell argues that cases like Allen, Lespier, and Dorsey "all involve expert testimony about facts that jurors could easily understand on their own." Def. Mem. at 18. But the same is true of the topics that White seeks to address. The concept of immunity—agreeing not to prosecute someone—can be understood by the jurors and does not require expert testimony. The same is true of an unopposed pause in civil litigation. And what matters in any event is Williams's understanding, not some expert's, for it is Williams's understanding that is relevant to what could affect his behavior. The McDonnells' lawyers can thus ask Williams about his understanding of the immunity agreement or the unopposed stay, and expert testimony is unnecessary.[3]

C. Mr. McDonnell's proposed expert testimony from a forensic accountant should be limited to testimony about the McDonnells' financial condition, and Mr. McDonnell should be required to provide supplemental expert notice for that testimony.

Next, Mr. McDonnell intends to call J. Allen Kosowsky, a forensic accountant, to testify essentially to four different opinions. First, Mr. McDonnell intends to have Kosowsky "opine on the financial value of the broad transactional immunity the Government has conferred on Mr. Williams." 2nd Supp. Notice at 3. Second, Mr. McDonnell intends to have Kosowsky "testify about various questionable transactions involving Mr. Williams or Star Scientific." Doc. No. 222-2 ("Supp. Notice"), at 2. Third, Mr. McDonnell intends to have Kosowsky opine that the allegedly false statements charged in Counts 12 and 13 "were not, by any objective standard, material to their qualifications for a loan." Def. Mem. at 24. And finally, Mr. McDonnell intends to have Kosowsky opine about the McDonnells' financial condition generally. See 2nd Supp. Notice at 4. For the reasons below, this Court should exclude the first three opinions in their entirety and require Mr. McDonnell to provide additional information regarding the fourth.

---

[3] Moreover, White's opinion about the value of the stay is unreliable and a waste of time under Fed. R. Evid. 403. The jury does not need to hear from an expert who can say no more than that an unopposed stay, supervised and approved by a court, both hurts and helps Williams. White's opinion about possible violations of 21 U.S.C. § 331(a) is likewise speculative and unreliable under Rule 702, a waste of time under Rule 403, and improper under Fed. R. Evid. 608(b).

1. Kosowsky's proposed testimony about the financial value of immunity agreements and stays in civil litigation impermissibly comments on matters of witness credibility that the jury is equipped to evaluate without expert testimony.

First, Mr. McDonnell argues that Kosowsky's proposed expert testimony "about the financial benefits Mr. Williams and Star Scientific have received" is admissible "for the same reasons that apply to Mr. White's testimony." Def. Mem. at 26. But as explained above, the Fourth Circuit's opinion in Allen forecloses White's proposed testimony, and Kosowsky's proposed opinion is no different.

Moreover, although Mr. McDonnell protests that Kosowsky's testimony "will be limited to quantifying the value of the financial benefits the Government has conferred on Mr. Williams," id. at 26, Mr. McDonnell has nonetheless still refused to disclose what value Kosowsky places on those alleged financial benefits. Thus, whether Koswosky is a "Certified Valuation Analyst and Accredited Business Valuator," id. at 27, is beside the point if whatever valuation method he purports to apply results in no quantifiable value at all. Indeed, it is apparent from the McDonnells' inability to actually provide Kosowsky's opinion in this regard that his opinion amounts to little more than an attempt to have an accountant tell the jury that Mr. Williams should not be believed. This Court should exclude that opinion.

2. Kosowsky's proposed testimony about Mr. Williams's financial transactions is inadmissible testimony regarding witness credibility and is otherwise precluded by Rule 608(b).

Kosowsky should also not be permitted to testify about what the defense claims are "various questionable transactions involving Mr. Williams or Star Scientific." Supp. Notice at 2.

In its opening memorandum, the United States explained that this proposed testimony, which Mr. McDonnell provided in his first supplemental notice, both impermissibly opines on witness credibility and otherwise violates Rule 608(b)'s bar on extrinsic evidence regarding a witness's character for truthfulness. See Doc. No. 222, Gov't Mem., at 24. In his response, Mr. McDonnell does not appear to respond to this argument; indeed, his only mention of Rule 608 is relegated to a footnote about White, not Kosowsky. See Def. Mem. at 22 n.6. Thus, this Court should exclude the proposed testimony from Kosowsky outlined in Mr. McDonnell's first supplemental notice for the reasons already stated.

3. Kosowsky's proposed testimony about the objective materiality of the false statements charged in Counts 12 and 13 is irrelevant, unhelpful to the jury, and confuses the issues.

Mr. McDonnell also intends to have Kosowsky opine that the false statements alleged in Counts 12 and 13 "were not, by any objective standard, material to their qualifications for a loan." Id. at 24. But as the defense concedes, "materiality is not an element of 18 U.S.C. § 1014, the charged crime." Id. at 25. Mr. McDonnell nonetheless asserts that "the materiality of a particular omission is plainly relevant to the jury's determination of Mr. McDonnell's intent." Id. at 25–26. But this Court has already disagreed with that blanket statement. See, e.g., United States v. Elliott, No. 3:01cr227-JRS, Doc. No. 22, Memorandum Opinion at 14 (E.D. Va. Mar. 12, 2002) (attached as Exh. A to Doc. No. 230). Indeed, the only materiality evidence that is even arguably relevant in a § 1014 prosecution is evidence of materiality "relating to the state of mind of [charged] defendants at the time the loan documents were submitted." United States v. Henderson, 676 F. Supp. 176, 178 (S.D. Ill. 1987); see also United States v. Lane, 323 F.3d 568, 582–84 (7th Cir. 2003) (excluding objective materiality evidence and evidence of post-statement conversations with bank officials). Thus, as explained in the United States' recently filed motion to exclude such evidence generally, see Doc. No. 230, Kosowsky's proposed expert testimony about "the obvious immateriality," Def. Mem. at 26, of the false statements charged in Counts 12 and 13 should be excluded.

4. Kosowsky's proposed testimony about the McDonnells' finances may be admissible but requires supplemental notice.

Finally, the defense claims that Kosowsky will give various opinions about the McDonnells' finances. See Def. Mem. at 23–24; 2nd Supp. Notice at 4. Mr. McDonnell further represents that in an effort to satisfy his notice obligations, he "will provide early next week [of June 23] a copy of every document Mr. Kosowsky has considered in forming his opinions." Def. Mem. at 23. Setting aside Mr. McDonnell's failure to provide any such underlying bases for Kosowsky's opinion in compliance with the original disclosure deadline, it is not sufficient for Mr. McDonnell merely to provide the United States with the documents Kosowsky has reviewed. Similarly, it is not sufficient for Mr. McDonnell to provide the United States with generalized statements about Kosowsky's opinions, such as his opinion that "the McDonnells' financial condition was sound," that "they had a positive net worth," that they "had access to considerable liquid assets," or that the Mr. McDonnell and his sister "had sufficient assets and cash flow to meet the obligations of the[ir] partnership." Def. Mem. at 23. Rather, Mr. McDonnell should be required to explain what Kosowsky concluded to be the McDonnells' net worth, what Kosowsky considers to be a "sound" financial condition, what "considerable liquid assets" Mr. McDonnell could access, and what constituted "sufficient assets and cash flow" for Mr. McDonnell's real estate partnership with his sister. It is only after receiving additional disclosure in that regard from Mr. McDonnell that the United States can adequately address the admissibility of Kosowsky's proposed testimony, particularly in light of the other, inadmissible opinions that Mr. McDonnell seeks to have Kosowsky offer.[4]

D. Mr. McDonnell should be precluded from calling a criminal defense lawyer to opine that Mr. McDonnell complied with state law disclosure requirements.

Next, Mr. McDonnell seeks to have a criminal defense attorney, Norman A. Thomas, testify about the Statement of Economic Interests ("SOEI") disclosure form that Mr. McDonnell filled out on an annual basis during the time period of the alleged crimes. According to Mr. McDonnell's second supplemental notice, Thomas "will explain that, to his knowledge, only two elected Virginia officials have ever been prosecuted for violating the requirements of the SOEI" but that "[n]either was convicted." 2nd Supp. Notice at 5. In addition, Mr. McDonnell seeks to have Thomas "opine, on the basis of his experience as Assistant Attorney General and as Opinions Counsel in the Office of the Attorney General [of Virginia], that various public officials approach the SOEI very differently." Id. at 6. And based on that experience, Mr. McDonnell seeks to have Thomas opine to the jury that the SOEI "is complex and vague." Id. at 7. Moreover, Mr. McDonnell seeks to have Thomas "offer his opinion that the SOEI forms filed by Mr. McDonnell from 2010 to 2013 evidence a reasonable understanding of which items were required to be disclosed." Id. Thus, Thomas will allegedly opine that "each item related to Jonnie Williams or Star Scientific, Inc., as well as items related to other persons and companies, had an appropriate basis for disclosure or non-disclosure." Id.

---

[4] It is also worth noting that to date, Mr. McDonnell has refused to provide any reciprocal discovery pursuant to Fed. R. Crim. P 16(b)(1)(A) or (B), claiming that because the United States is producing additional materials as they are received and processed, the United States will never have complied with its obligations under Fed. R. Crim. P 16(a)(1)(E) and (F) until discovery essentially ceases. The Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure should not be read to treat the Government's honoring its continuing duty to disclose as a forfeiture of its right to reciprocal discovery.

None of Thomas's proposed expert opinions are admissible. First, it is difficult to imagine testimony more violative of Rule 403 and less helpful to the jury under Rule 702 than testimony about how many Virginia officials have been prosecuted for SOEI violations—much less the results of those prosecutions. Such testimony is no more admissible to suggest Mr. McDonnell's innocence than testimony about other public officials taking bribes or concealing bribes from disclosure forms would be for suggesting his guilt. Similarly, expert testimony is not necessary to explain a disclosure form that is written in plain English and that requires disclosure of "gifts" from "a business, government, or individual other than a relative or personal friend." Exh. A at 4 (blank SOEI). Jurors are well-equipped to evaluate what constitutes a "gift" and whether an individual can plausibly be considered a public official's "friend." Though the average juror may not typically receive thousands of dollars in golf for free or serve in a public office that causes mere acquaintances or even strangers to lavish gifts on him or her, the average juror does not require expert testimony to understand what a "gift" or a "friend" is (and is not).[5]

To be sure, Mr. McDonnell may offer evidence, either through other witnesses who had conversations with him or by choosing to take the stand himself, as to why he thought Mr. Williams was a friend for purposes of some gifts but not a friend for purposes of other gifts, and Mr. McDonnell may offer similar evidence that he, despite being a former Attorney General, found terms such as "gift" and "friend" to be "complex and vague," 2nd Supp. Notice at 7 But what matters is not what other public officials believed or what Thomas would have advised Mr. McDonnell; what matters is what Mr. McDonnell's SOEIs say about his state of mind. Such is not an appropriate area for expert testimony, and Thomas's opinions should thus be excluded under Rules 403, 702, and 704(b). See United States v. Fowler, 932 F.2d 306, 315 (4th Cir. 1991) (The jury "need[ed] no expert witnesses to speculate about a defendant's state of mind. The expert witnesses could not testify that Fowler was confused, not culpable.").

---

[5] In this regard, Mr. McDonnell's attempts to analogize the plain language of the SOEI to "accounting principles," Def. Mem. at 29, fails. At its core, evaluating whether Mr. McDonnell lied on his SOEI or structured financial transactions to avoid having to report them on his SOEI requires little more than a credibility determination of the implicit statements on that SOEI that Mr. Williams was Mr. McDonnell's friend or that unreported things of value were not given to Mr. McDonnell.

E. Mr. McDonnell has shown no good cause for his failure to provide adequate notice for an FDA or medical expert, and any such testimony should be excluded at trial.

Finally, this Court should reject Mr. McDonnell's request to "delay consideration" of his proposed expert on Food and Drug Administration ("FDA") practices "until such time that the defense has adequate information to make a final determination, makes that final determination, and provides proper notice to the Government of his intentions and the scope of the proposed testimony." Def. Mem. at 2 n.1. Mr. McDonnell protests that he needs more time, yet on the day the grand jury returned the Indictment, he asserted the relevance to this case of an alleged FDA investigation into claims by Star Scientific. See Doc. No. 9, at 7–8. Mr. McDonnell has had more than five months since then to "make a final determination," but he has not done so. For that reason alone, this Court should exclude any proposed FDA "expert."

Moreover, Mr. McDonnell did not even attempt in his response to explain why such an FDA "expert" would not be barred by Rule 608(b), and for the reasons already discussed with respect to White and Kosowsky, such testimony would be impermissible commentary on Mr. Williams's credibility that is inadmissible under Rules 403 and 702.

II. Conclusion

For the reasons stated above, this Court should exclude (i) all of Earley's proposed testimony other than factual (or adequately foundationed opinion) testimony about whether arranging meetings, hosting events, and interacting with government officials is routine for a governor; (ii) all of Kosowsky's proposed testimony other than factual (or adequately foundationed opinion) testimony about the McDonnells' financial condition; and (iii) all of White's, Thomas's, and the unidentified FDA or medical expert's proposed testimony. With respect to the potentially admissible expert testimony from Earley and Kosowsky, the Court should require Mr. McDonnell to provide a more fulsome summary of those witnesses' actual opinions and the reasons and bases for those opinions, and if necessary, this Court should hold a hearing (either before trial or at trial before those witnesses testify) to determine whether Mr. McDonnell can lay sufficient foundation for those opinions to be admissible.[6]

Respectfully submitted,

DANA J. BOENTE
United States Attorney

By: /s/
Richard Cooke
Ryan S. Faulconer
Michael S. Dry
Jessica D. Aber
Counsel for the United States
U.S. Attorney's Office
600 E. Main Street, Suite 1800
Richmond, Va. 23219
Phone: 804-819-5400
Fax: 804-771-2316
Email: richard.cooke@usdoj.gov
ryan.faulconer2@usdoj.gov
michael.s.dry@usdoj.gov
jessica.d.aber@usdoj.gov

JACK SMITH
Chief, Public Integrity Section
Criminal Division
U.S. Department of Justice

By: /s/
David V Harbach, II
Counsel for the United States
U.S. Department of Justice
Criminal Division
Public Integrity Section
1400 New York Ave., N.W., Ste 12100
Washington, D.C. 20005
Phone: 202-514-1412
Fax: 202-514-3003
Email: david.harbach@usdoj.gov

---

[6] The current deadline for the United States to notice any expert testimony in anticipation of or in response to Mr. McDonnell's expert disclosures is thirty days before trial, or June 28, 2014, unless "for good cause shown." Doc. No. 100. Depending on the Court's ruling and any supplemental disclosures provided by Mr. McDonnell at the Court's direction, the United States may ask for such a good-cause extension of the June 28 deadline.

CERTIFICATE OF SERVICE

I hereby certify that on June 24, 2014, I will electronically file the foregoing with the Clerk of Court using the CM/ECF system, which will then send a notification of such filing ("NEF") to all counsel of record.

By: /s/

Ryan S. Faulconer
Counsel for the United States
U.S. Attorney's Office
600 E. Main Street, Suite 1800
Richmond, VA 23219
Phone: 804-819-5400
Fax: 804-771-2316
Email: ryan.faulconer2@usdoj.gov

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
EASTERN DISTRICT OF VIRGINIA
RICHMOND DIVISION

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,

v.

ROBERT F. MCDONNELL,

and

MAUREEN G. MCDONNELL,

Defendants.

Action No. 3:14-CR-12

MEMORANDUM OPINION

THIS MATTER is before the Court on the Government's Motion to Exclude Expert Testimony ("Motion") (ECF No. 221). Upon due consideration, the Court will GRANT IN PART and DENY IN PART the Motion. With regard to each of the five expert witnesses proposed by Defendant Robert F. McDonnell ("McDonnell"), testimony will be excluded as follows:

1. Mark L. Early

McDonnell intends to call Mr. Early to give expert testimony on four topics. This testimony will be excluded in its entirety.

First, Mr. Early proposes to testify that certain conduct has never been understood to constitute official acts, to exert influence on governmental decisions, or to run afoul of the law. Mr. Early's opinion that McDonnell did not violate the law invades and usurps the function of the Court. United States v. Offill, 666 F.3d 168, 174-75 (4th Cir. 2011). It "does not help the jury" and, therefore, is not admissible as expert testimony. See id. at 175; Fed. R. Evid. 702.

Second, Mr. Early proposes to testify that the conduct alleged in the indictment—whether performed by McDonnell or other Virginia politicians—is consistent with innocent intent. Mr. Early proposes to answer hypothetical questions that mirror McDonnell's conduct and to suggest special knowledge of mental state. Such testimony is not admissible as expert testimony. See Fed. R. Evid. 704(b); Offill, 666 F.3d at 177 (citing United States v. Watson, 171 F.3d 695, 703 (D.C. Cir. 1999); United States v. Bilzerian, 926 F.2d 1285, 1294 (2d Cir. 1991)). Further, Mr. Early is no more qualified as an expert in assessing fraudulent intent than lay persons, making his proposed testimony unhelpful and inadmissible. See Fed. R. Evid. 702.

Third, Mr. Early proposes to testify as to the hypothetical legal advice he would have offered if McDonnell had sought advice from him. Such hypothetical advice constitutes no more than unreliable speculation and "supplies the jury with no information other than [Mr. Early's] view of how the verdict should read." Offill, 666 F.3d at 175. This testimony is inadmissible as expert testimony under Rule 702.

Fourth, Mr. Early proposes to testify that the Governor of Virginia lacks legal authority over the Virginia Tobacco Indemnification and Community Revitalization Commission and over certain decisions of Virginia's universities. Such testimony is neither helpful nor rational because legal authority does not equate to influence and is not an element of the charged crimes. See United States v. Jefferson, 634 F. Supp. 2d 595, 603 (E.D. Va. 2009). For the same reasons, Mr. Early's proposed testimony is highly likely to confuse the issues and mislead the jury, rendering it unhelpful. This testimony is inadmissible as expert testimony under Rule 702.

2. Peter H. White, Esq.

McDonnell intends to call Mr. White to give expert testimony on three topics. First, Mr. White proposes to testify generally as to the value of the transactional immunity offered to Jonnie Williams, Sr. ("Williams") in exchange for his testimony. Expert testimony intended solely to explain the implications of a plea agreement on a witness's testimony "is not the function of an expert." United States v. Allen, 716 F.3d 98, 105 (4th Cir. 2013) (citing Nimely v. City of New York, 414 F.3d 381, 398 (2d Cir. 2005)) (holding that the legal significance of substantial assistance agreements need not be explained by an expert for a jury to understand its potential to create bias). This testimony is inadmissible as expert testimony because it is an impermissible credibility evaluation and would not be helpful to the jury. See id.; Fed. R. Evid. 702.

Second, Mr. White proposes to testify generally about the costs and obligations that Williams and Star Scientific, Incorporated ("Star") would have incurred in the event of an investigation by the Food and Drug Administration into potential violations of 21 U.S.C. § 331(a). This testimony is inadmissible both because it is irrelevant in the absence of any evidence of any immunity agreement between the Government and Star, and because extrinsic evidence is not admissible to impeach a witness's credibility. See Fed. R. Evid. 104(b); Fed. R. Evid. 608(b).

Third, Mr. White proposes to testify as to the value that accrued to Williams upon the Government's intervention in various civil suits. McDonnell has failed to disclose the methodology Mr. White used in arriving at his opinion, precluding the Court from properly evaluating the reliability of this testimony. See Fed. R. Evid. 702. Accordingly, the Court finds that a Daubert hearing is necessary to determine whether this portion of Mr. White's testimony is admissible.

3. J. Allen Kosowsky, CPA

McDonnell intends to call Mr. Kosowsky to give expert testimony on four topics. First, Mr. Kosowsky proposes to opine as to the financial value of the benefits conferred on Williams in exchange for his testimony. For the reasons animating the Court's decisions with respect to Mr. White's testimony, Mr. Kosowsky's testimony will be excluded except to the extent that it relates to the financial value of the Government's intervention in various civil suits. The Court finds that a Daubert hearing is necessary to determine whether this portion of Mr. Kosowsky's testimony is admissible.

Second, Mr. Kosowsky proposes to testify as to various securities and trust transactions by Williams and Star. This testimony is inadmissible, extrinsic impeachment evidence. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 608(b).

Third, Mr. Kosowsky proposes to testify as to the mechanics of bank loan applications in order to rebut the Government's allegations that McDonnell's omissions from loan documents were intentional, fraudulent, or material. This testimony is inadmissible because it constitutes an impermissible opinion on McDonnell's state of mind and draws legal conclusions. See Fed. R. Evid. 702; Fed. R. Evid. 704(b). Alternatively, because an omission's materiality is irrelevant to a defendant's culpability under 18 U.S.C. § 1014, Mr. Kosowsky's proposed testimony is highly likely to confuse the issues and mislead the jury, rendering is unhelpful. This testimony is inadmissible as expert testimony under Rule 702.

Fourth, Mr. Kosowsky proposes to testify as to the state of the McDonnells' finances. McDonnell has failed to disclose the methodology Mr. Kosowsky used in arriving at his opinion, precluding the Court from properly evaluating the reliability of this testimony. See Fed. R. Evid. 702. Accordingly, the Court finds that a Daubert hearing is necessary to determine whether this portion of Mr. Kosowsky's testimony is admissible.

4. Norman A. Thomas, Esq.

McDonnell intends to call Mr. Thomas to give expert testimony on three topics. This testimony will be excluded in its entirety.

First, Mr. Thomas proposes to offer an explanation of Virginia's standardized Statement of Economic Interests form ("SOEI"). He will opine that the instructions regarding this form are complex and vague. This testimony is not admissible because it would not be helpful to the jury, who will be capable of reading and assessing the complexity of the SOEI for themselves. See Fed. R. Evid. 702.

Second, Mr. Thomas proposes to opine that McDonnell's SOEIs submitted between 2010 and 2013 evidence a reasonable understanding of Virginia's disclosure requirements. This testimony is also inadmissible because it would be unhelpful to the jury who, after capably assessing the complexity of the SOEI, will similarly be capable of assessing the reasonableness of McDonnell's disclosures. See Fed. R. Evid. 702.

5. Undisclosed, Unidentified Expert

McDonnell has attempted to disclose the testimony of an expert witness that he has not yet identified. He has not provided a sufficient justification for his failure to identify this expert prior to the deadline for disclosure. The Court, therefore, will exclude this hypothetical expert testimony. Furthermore, even the slim disclosure McDonnell does provide clearly demonstrates the inadmissibility of the hypothetical testimony as extrinsic impeachment evidence. See Fed. R. Evid. 608(b).

Let the Clerk send a copy of this Memorandum Opinion to all counsel of record.

An appropriate Order shall issue.

/s/
James R. Spencer
Senior U. S. District Judge

ENTERED this 26th day of June 2014.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
EASTERN DISTRICT OF VIRGINIA
RICHMOND DIVISION

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,

v.

ROBERT F. MCDONNELL,

and

MAUREEN G. MCDONNELL,

Defendants.

Action No. 3:14-CR-12

ORDER

THIS MATTER is before the Court on the Government's Motion to Exclude Expert Testimony ("Motion") (ECF No. 221). For the reasons more fully set forth in the accompanying Memorandum Opinion, the Motion is GRANTED IN PART and DENIED IN PART.

The proposed testimony of Mark L. Early, Norman A. Thomas, and an Unidentified, Undisclosed expert will be excluded in its entirety. The proposed testimony of Peter H. White will be excluded, with the exception of White's opinion as to the value that accrued to Jonnie Williams, Sr. upon the Government's intervention in various civil suits. The proposed testimony of J. Allen Kosowsky will be excluded, with the exception of: (1) Kosowsky's opinion as to the financial value that accrued to Williams upon the Government's intervention in various civil suits and (2) the McDonnells' financial condition.

The Court finds that a Daubert hearing is required to determine the admissibility of all expert testimony not excluded by this Order. The Parties are DIRECTED to contact the Court within five (5) days of this Order to schedule such a hearing.

//

//

Let the Clerk send a copy of this Order to all counsel of record.

It is SO ORDERED.

/s/
James R. Spencer
Senior U. S. District Judge

ENTERED this 26th day of June 2014.

IN THE UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
FOR THE EASTERN DISTRICT OF VIRGINIA

Richmond Division

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA	)
	)
v.	)
	)	No. 3:14cr12
ROBERT F MCDONNELL and	)
MAUREEN G. MCDONNELL,	)
Defendants.	)

RESPONSE OF THE UNITED STATES IN OPPOSITION TO DEFENDANTS' MOTION IN LIMINE TO EXCLUDE EVIDENCE RELATING TO STATEMENTS OF ECONOMIC INTERESTS

The United States of America, by and through the undersigned attorneys, respectfully files this response in opposition to defendants Robert F McDonnell and Maureen G. McDonnell's joint motion in limine seeking to exclude evidence relating to Mr. McDonnell's Statements of Economic Interests ("SOEI"), Doc. Nos. 237, 243.[1] For the reasons discussed below, the motion is both misguided and meritless, and it should be denied.

I. The Basis for Offering the Evidence

In light of the defendants' persistent mischaracterizations of the Government's theory in offering evidence concerning Mr. McDonnell's SOEIs, it is worth starting there. At trial the Government will offer evidence relating to Mr. McDonnell's SOEIs as concealment evidence that undeniably informs the defendants' corrupt intent and consciousness of guilt. The SOEIs are relevant as concealment evidence in at least four separate ways: first, because of Mr. McDonnell's deliberate omission of his golf-related gifts paid by Jonnie Williams,Ind. ¶¶ 37, 59, 69; second, because of Mr. McDonnell's deliberate omission of the $15,000 check from Mr. Williams to pay the remainder of the catering bill the McDonnells owed for their daughter's wedding, Ind. ¶¶ 27, 32, 35, 36; third, as the reason why Mrs. McDonnell sold and repurchased all Star stock held in her account on dates flanking the due date for Mr. McDonnell's 2011 SOEI, Ind. ¶¶ 66, 67, 70, and why the next year, she similarly unloaded Star stock to the defendants' children on December 26, 2012, such that less than $10,000 worth of Star stock remained in her account at year-end, Ind. ¶¶ 96, 97, 98; and fourth, as the reason why Mr. McDonnell had Mr. Williams direct $70,000 in loan proceeds to MoBo Realty LLC, Ind. ¶¶ 86, 89, 90.[2] [1] Mrs. McDonnell's motion, Doc. No. 243, adopts Mr. McDonnell's motion, Doc. No. 237 ("Def. Mot."), and memorandum in support, Doc. No. 238 ("Def. Mem.").

---

The Government is not offering evidence about Mr. McDonnell's SOEIs to argue, much less establish, any violation of Virginia law. Indeed, the reason that "[t]he Government does not directly allege that Mr. McDonnell violated Virginia's reporting requirements for public officials," Def. Mem. at 2, is precisely because that allegation is not the point of the evidence. Accordingly, the defendants' concerns directed at supposed Government arguments that Mr. McDonnell "deliberately evaded Virginia ethics laws," Def. Mem. at 5, or "violated or sidestepped distinct state legal requirements," Def. Mem. at 6, miss the mark entirely, and to the extent the defendants' prejudice argument is premised on such concerns, it is baseless.

II. The Evidence is Highly Relevant to Intent and Not Unfairly Prejudicial

As the Government has argued elsewhere, see Doc. No. 145 at 4–5, it is black-letter law that evidence of concealment is probative of intent and consciousness of guilt. See, e.g., United States v. Zayyad, 741 F.3d 452, 463 (4th Cir. 2014) (attempt to conceal counterfeit pills indicates awareness that the pills were unlawful); United States v. Beverly, 284 F. App'x. 36, 40 (4th Cir. 2008) (noting that "intent can be inferred from efforts to conceal the unlawful activity" (internal quotation omitted)); United States v. Rosen, 716 F.3d 691, 702 (2d Cir. 2013) (bribe payor's concealment of otherwise legal consulting contracts probative of consciousness of guilt that contracts were sham covers for bribes); United States v. Hart, 273 F.3d 363, 373–74 (3d Cir. 2001) (defendant's efforts to conceal scheme, including directing a subordinate to lie, probative of consciousness of guilt); United States v. Davis, 490 F.3d 541, 549 (6th Cir. 2007) (criminal intent can be inferred from efforts to conceal unlawful activity); United States v. Zichettello, 208 F.3d 72, 105 (2d Cir. 2000) (defendant's indication to another of his intention to conceal corrupt scheme evidences consciousness of guilt).

---

[2] The Government addresses the proferred Fed. R. Evid. 404(b) purposes of SOEI evidence separately, in Part IV below.

As we have also discussed elsewhere, see Doc. No. 145 at 6, the charges here will require the Government to prove the defendants had an intent to defraud, which "may be inferred from the totality of the circumstances and need not be proven by direct evidence." United States v. Ham, 998 F.2d 1247, 1254 (4th Cir. 1993). Fraud includes "acts taken to conceal, create a false impression, mislead, or otherwise deceive in order to prevent the other [party] from acquiring material information." United States v. Colton, 231 F.3d 890, 898 (4th Cir. 2000). The evidence of (a) Mr. McDonnell's failure to disclose the golf gifts he received from Mr. Williams; (b) Mr. McDonnell's failure to disclose the $15,000 check from Mr. Williams; (c) Mrs. McDonnell's efforts (twice) to avoid having Star stock in her account at year-end; and (d) Mr. McDonnell's direction to Mr. Williams to send the loan proceeds to MoBo all are paradigmatic circumstantial evidence of intent to defraud.

The defendants cite Ratzlaf v. United States, 510 U.S. 135 (1994), for the proposition that "[t]he mere fact that gifts and loans from Mr. Williams took forms that Mr. McDonnell was not required to report is not probative of intent to deceive," Def. Mem. at 2, but their citation to that opinion is misguided. The issue in Ratzlaf was the meaning of "willfully" in the federal statute criminalizing violations of the antistructuring statute. See 31 U.S.C. §§ 5322(a), 5324(3). The Supreme Court held that in that context, "willfully" requires the Government to prove that a defendant acted with knowledge that his conduct was unlawful, not just with the intent to evade a bank's reporting requirements. Ratzlaf, 510 U.S. at 147. Part of the Court's rationale was that structuring a transaction to avoid a bank's reporting requirements is not conduct that is itself "inevitably nefarious" or "invariably motivated by a desire to keep the Government in the dark." Id. at 144–45 (emphasis added). But contrary to the McDonnells' suggestion, the Court's opinion did not remotely pertain to the relevance or probative value of evidence of how a transaction is arranged. It is one thing to say, as the Supreme Court did in Ratzlaf, that arranging a transaction in a certain way is not, standing alone, inevitably nefarious. It does not at all follow, as the defendants here argue, that evidence of that transaction's arrangement is irrelevant (or "not probative," in the defendants' terms) to assessing a defendant's state of mind, particularly where the charges require proof of a scheme to defraud. And even the defendants' contorted and incorrect reading of Ratzlaf has nothing whatsoever to say about Mr. McDonnell's deliberate nondisclosure of gifts or loans he received from Mr. Williams.

As this Court has already explained in discussing Mrs. McDonnell's stock transactions, "[a]ttempts to conceal an interest in Star—especially a personal financial interest—may be probative of intent/animus to defraud and consciousness of guilt." Doc. No. 177, at 1. So much moreso are attempts to conceal the receipt of gifts and loans from Jonnie Williams—the very graft that the Indictment alleges were bribes.

The defendants nevertheless invoke Fed. R. Evid. 403 throughout their brief to argue that the SOEI evidence should be excluded because it is "more prejudicial than probative." Def. Mem. at 2. But Rule 403 does not bar evidence that is merely "more prejudicial than probative." Rather, as the Court is well aware, under Rule 403 the Court has discretion to exclude relevant evidence "if its probative value is substantially outweighed" by any combination of the concerns enumerated in the Rule. When it comes to assessing prejudice, as the Fourth Circuit has explained, "[t]he mere fact that the evidence will damage the defendant's case is not enough—the evidence must be unfairly prejudicial, and the unfair prejudice must substantially outweigh the probative value of the evidence." United States v. Williams, 445 F.3d 724, 730 (4th Cir. 2006) (citation omitted). And "[u]nfair prejudice exists when there is a genuine risk that the emotions of a jury will be excited to irrational behavior, and this risk is disproportionate to the probative value of the offered evidence." United States v. Williams, 740 F.3d 308, 314 (4th Cir. 2014) (internal quotation marks and citations omitted).

The degree of unfair prejudice required is illuminated by cases where courts have admitted, over Rule 403 objections, evidence far more inflammatory than at issue here. See, e.g., United States v. Smith, 441 F.3d 254, 262 (4th Cir. 2006) (testimony that defendant's son assisted him in his drug operation at as early as age six); United States v. Rivera, 412 F.3d 562, 571 (4th Cir. 2005) (evidence that defendant compared cutting victim's throat, after victim pleaded for his life, to "cutting up chicken"); United States v. Aramony, 88 F.3d 1369, 1377–79 (4th Cir. 1996) (evidence of defendant's sexual advances toward company employees in mail and wire fraud prosecution). In light of these examples, and notwithstanding the defendants' protestations, it is difficult to imagine a jury becoming emotionally "excited to irrational behavior" as a result of hearing the SOEI evidence in this case. This is especially so where, as noted above, the Government does not plan to elicit, mention, or argue that Mr. McDonnell violated Virginia ethics laws.[3] The point of the evidence is not to establish any violation of

---

[3] This fact distinguishes this case from the cases the defendants cite at pages 5 and 6 of their brief. In United States v. Terry, No. 1:10cr390, 2011 WL 2149361, at *3 (N.D. Ohio May 31, 2011), a case of a judge charged with accepting bribes, the Government sought to admit evidence of provisions of the Ohio Code of Judicial Conduct, together with testimony that certain conduct violated the Code and the disciplinary consequences of such violations. United

Virginia law; rather, it is to explain the defendants' concealment of their corrupt activities in violation of federal law.[4]

III. No Experts Are Necessary to Make the SOEIs Relevant

In another variation on their argument that the Virginia SOEI form is an impenetrable thicket of legalese that is impossible for ordinary humans to navigate, the defendants here argue that expert testimony is necessary to make the SOEI even relevant. Def. Mem. at 2. Even a cursory review of the form's instructions, see Doc. No. 244-1, at 1–3, reveals how exaggerated the defendants' characterizations are. The instructions are in plain English, and the jury is more than capable of applying the SOEI form's single-paragraph definitions of "gift" and "immediate family," id. at 2, and to assess what it means to receive a gift from a "personal friend for reasons clearly unrelated to your public position," id. at 10. These questions require no specialized knowledge or skill and are well within the ken of the average juror. This Court already found as much when it excluded the defendants' proffered SOEI expert testimony because: (1) "it would not be helpful to the jury, who will be capable of reading and assessing the complexity of the SOEI for themselves"; and (2) the jury "will similarly be capable of assessing the reasonableness of McDonnell's disclosures." Doc. 246, at 4.

A review of the cases the defendants cite in which courts acknowledged the necessity of experts confirms that expert SOEI testimony is unnecessary in this case. Levinson v. Westport States ex rel. El-Amin v. George Wash. Univ., 533 F Supp. 2d 12, 23–24 (D.D.C 2008), involving evidence concerning the standard of care for anesthesiologists, and In Re Welding Fume Prods. Liab. Litig., No. 1:03cv17000, 2010 WL 7699456, at *24 & n.123 (N.D. Ohio June 4, 2010), involving express testimony that corporate defendants violated ethical obligations such as "a corporation should act with honesty and integrity at all times," are even farther afield.

[4] Should the defendants want it, the Government would not object in principle to the Court giving a limiting instruction on the purpose for which the Government is offering the SOEI evidence (i.e., not to establish any violation of Virginia law, because that is not an issue in the case).

Nat'l Bank, No. 3:09cv269, 2013 WL 2181042, at *8 (D. Conn. May 20, 2013), involved regulations of the Office of the Comptroller of the Currency regarding collective investment funds that "contain technical language with cross-references to portions of the Internal Revenue Code," including 12 C.F.R. § 9.18. In re Gadolinium-Based Contrast Agents Prods. Liab. Litig., 956 F. Supp. 2d 809, 818 (N.D. Ohio 2013), involved a plaintiff's medical bills that required a jury to try to assess whether and to what extent any of the charges on the bill related to the plaintiff's nephrogenic systemic fibrosis. Aldridge v. Baltimore & Ohio R. Co., 789 F.2d 1061, 1068 (4th Cir. 1986), involved a jury's being tasked with calculating the time value of money and adjusting for inflation. Finally, United States v. Naegele, 471 F. Supp. 2d 152, 161–62 (D.D.C. 2007), involved an esoteric question of bankruptcy law, namely whether a lawyer-debtor's contingency fee arrangement with a client is properly reportable as a "contingent claim" on his bankruptcy schedules. All of these cases are plainly distinguishable from this case, where this Court has already recognized that expert SOEI testimony would "not be helpful to the jury, who will be capable of reading and assessing" the SOEI evidence themselves. Doc. 246, at 4.

IV. The Other Acts Evidence is Admissible under Rule 404(b)

The Government may offer evidence at trial that Mr. McDonnell deliberately omitted from his SOEI for calendar year 2012 a 10-day vacation for him and his family at Kiawah Island Golf Resort, costing some $23,000 and paid for by Mr. William H. Goodwin, Jr. In particular, the Government may present evidence that although the vacation appeared on a draft of Mr. McDonnell's 2012 SOEI, he crossed it out and added the handwritten margin annotation "personal" to indicate that the entry was a gift from a personal friend, when in fact it was not.[5] [5] As Mr. McDonnell correctly notes, the Government has already orally represented to the defendants that Mr. McDonnell's omission of the Goodwin vacation from his SOEI is the only evidence it currently seeks to offer under Rule 404(b).

---

Federal Rule of Evidence 404(b) provides:

> Evidence of other crimes, wrongs, or acts is not admissible to prove the character of a person in order to show action in conformity therewith. It may, however, be admissible for other purposes, such as proof of motive, opportunity, intent, preparation, plan, knowledge, identity, or absence of mistake or accident, provided that upon request by the accused, the prosecution in a criminal case shall provide reasonable notice in advance of trial, or during trial if the court excuses pretrial notice on good cause shown, of the general nature of any such evidence it intends to introduce at trial.

The Fourth Circuit has consistently recognized that "[b]ecause [Rule 404(b)] recognizes the admissibility of prior crimes, wrongs, or acts, with only the one stated exception, it is understood to be a rule of inclusion, authorizing evidence of prior acts for purposes other than character, such as 'motive, opportunity, intent, preparation, plan, knowledge, identity, or absence of mistake or accident.'" United States v. Queen, 132 F.3d 991, 994 (4th Cir. 1997) (quoting Fed. R. Evid. 404(b)) (internal citations omitted). The principal reason for the "one stated exception" is to ensure that "defendants not be convicted simply for possessing bad character." Id. at 995 (citing Michelson v. United States, 335 U.S. 469, 475-76 (1948)). On the other hand, Rule 404(b)'s nonexhaustive list identifying admissible uses "recognizes that 'extrinsic acts evidence may be critical to the establishment of the truth as to a disputed issue, especially when that issue involves the actor's state of mind and the only means of ascertaining that mental state is by drawing inferences from conduct.'" Id. at 996 (quoting Huddleston v. United States, 485 U.S. 681, 685 (1988)). In Queen the Fourth Circuit set out a four-part test to identify when "other acts" evidence is admissible under Rule 404(b):

> (1) The evidence must be relevant to an issue, such as an element of an offense, and must not be offered to establish the general character of the defendant. In this regard, the more similar the prior act is (in terms of physical similarity or mental state) to the act being proved, the more relevant it becomes. (2) The act must be > necessary in the sense that it is probative of an essential claim or an essential element of the offense. (3) The evidence must be reliable. And (4) the evidence's probative value must not be substantially outweighed by confusion or unfair prejudice in the sense that it tends to subordinate reason to emotion in the factfinding process.

Id. at 997. Here, the evidence regarding Mr. McDonnell's deliberate omission from his SOEI of the Kiawah vacation courtesy of Mr. Goodwin satisfies all four prongs of the Queen test. The "issue" or "element of the offense" to which this evidence is relevant is Mr. McDonnell's intent. As discussed above, the Government will be required to prove at trial that Mr. McDonnell participated in a scheme to defraud the public of its right to his honest services through bribery and that he did so with the intent to defraud. Mr. McDonnell's efforts to conceal the gifts from Mr. Williams are highly relevant to that intent, as discussed above. And Mr. McDonnell's inaccurate invocation of the personal friend exemption for the Kiawah Island trip is plainly probative of Mr. McDonnell's intent in failing to disclose the gifts from Jonnie Williams. First, it is intrinsic to the scheme to defraud because it is part of the very same form on which Mr. McDonnell failed to disclose gifts and loans from Mr. Williams. Second, if nothing else, it is obvious evidence of Mr. McDonnell's knowledge of the form and in particular the existence of the "personal friend" exception. Third, it is competent evidence of absence of mistake or lack of accident when it comes to assessing Mr. McDonnell's intent in failing to disclose the gifts and loans from Mr. Williams. See Fed R. Evid. 404(b) (authorizing admission of other acts evidence to prove, among other things, intent, knowledge, absence of mistake, or lack of accident).

In short, the Government intends to prove at trial that Mr. McDonnell knew about the gifts and loans from Jonnie Williams, that he knew full well he should have reported them (i.e., he knew that the gifts and loans were not from a "personal friend for reasons clearly unrelated to [his] public position," Doc. No. 244-1, at 10, and that his failure to do so was deliberate.

Evidence that Mr. McDonnell had the same knowledge with respect to the Kiawah Island trip from Mr. Goodwin and engaged in the identical calculus to avoid reporting it is, in the framework of the first two Queen factors, acutely relevant and probative of the essential element of intent.

With respect to Queen's third factor, the reliability of the evidence of Mr. McDonnell's conduct cannot seriously be in question. The Government intends to offer the draft SOEI on which Mr. McDonnell scratched through the Kiawah Island trip and wrote "personal" in the margin, as well as a gifts chart prepared by a staffer for use in completing the SOEI, on which Mr. McDonnell crossed out the Kiawah Island trip and wrote "Bill Goodwin pers friend" and "check to see if personal or reportable." This documentary evidence, together with what we anticipate to be uncontroversial testimony identifying his handwriting from staff who are very familiar with it, confirms the reliability of the evidence of Mr. McDonnell's conduct.

The final Queen factor clarifies that evidence offered under Rule 404(b) must also satisfy Rule 403, in that it must not "subordinate reason to emotion in the factfinding process." Queen, 132 F.3d at 997 As with the SOEI evidence generally, cases in which the Fourth Circuit has admitted evidence under Rule 404(b) far more inflammatory than the evidence offered here make it clear that this evidence poses little to no risk of the jurors becoming so emotionally incensed as to surrender their rational faculties. See, e.g., United States v. Gray, 405 F.3d 227, 238–40 (4th Cir. 2005) (evidence of defendant's prior murder of first husband); United States v. Ruhbayan, 406 F.3d 292, 299–300 (4th Cir. 2005) (evidence of defendant's physical abuse of former girlfriends); United States v. Powers, 59 F.3d 1460, 1464–68 (4th Cir. 1995) (evidence that defendant routinely beat his family members, forced his children to eat hot peppers to discipline them, and threatened to burn down his home with his family inside). Again, it is difficult to imagine how the evidence offered here could be more prone to inflame the emotions of a jury than was the evidence in those cases. The defendants' argument that the evidence should be excluded as unfairly prejudicial is meritless.

V. Conclusion

For all of these reasons, the defendants' motion should be denied.

Respectfully submitted,

DANA J. BOENTE
United States Attorney

JACK SMITH
Chief, Public Integrity Section
Criminal Division
U.S. Department of Justice

By: /s/
Michael S. Dry
Jessica D. Aber
Ryan S. Faulconer
Counsel for the United States
U.S. Attorney's Office
600 E. Main Street, Suite 1800
Richmond, VA 23219
Phone: 804-819-5400
Fax: 804-771-2316
Email: michael.s.dry@usdoj.gov
jessica.d.aber@usdoj.gov
ryan.faulconer2@usdoj.gov

By: /s/
David V Harbach, II
Counsel for the United States
U.S. Department of Justice
Criminal Division
Public Integrity Section
1400 New York Ave., N.W., Ste 12100
Washington, D.C. 20005
Phone: 202-514-1412
Fax: 202-514-3003
Email: david.harbach@usdoj.gov

CERTIFICATE OF SERVICE

I hereby certify that on July 1, 2014, a true and correct copy of the foregoing was delivered to all counsel of record via the Court's Electronic Filing System.

By: /s/
Jessica D. Aber
Virginia Bar No. 72680
Assistant United States Attorney
United States Attorney's Office
600 East Main Street, Suite 1800
Richmond, Virginia 23219
Phone: (804) 819-5400
Fax: (804) 771-2316
Email: jessica.d.aber@usdoj.gov

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
FOR THE EASTERN DISTRICT OF VIRGINIA
RICHMOND DIVISION

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,	)
	)
v.	)	CRIMINAL NO. 3:14-CR-00012
	)
ROBERT F. MCDONNELL MAUREEN G. MCDONNELL	))	JUDGE JAMES R. SPENCER

REPLY OF DEFENDANT ROBERT F. MCDONNELL TO THE GOVERNMENT'S OPPOSITION TO MOTION # 27 – MOTION IN LIMINE TO EXCLUDE EVIDENCE RELATING TO STATEMENTS OF ECONOMIC INTEREST

INTRODUCTION

The Government's Opposition to Mr. McDonnell's motion to exclude evidence relating to his Statement of Economic Interest (SOEIs) is fraught with contradictions. The Government states that it will not attempt to argue that Mr. McDonnell violated Virginia law; and then it insists that it will prove the elements of a Virginia ethics law violation. It disputes that introducing the SOEIs will lead to a distracting mini-trial on state law issues; and then it argues that it should be allowed to prove a separate violation of state ethics laws that does not involve Jonnie R. Williams, Sr. or any allegation of bribery. The perplexing nature of the Government's position is itself an indication that allowing it to introduce evidence pertaining to Mr. McDonnell's SOEIs will result in juror confusion. If the Government cannot articulate what it will argue about the SOEIs, it is unlikely that the jurors will be able to grasp why this evidence is in front of them. But whatever theory the Government ultimately settles upon, the evidence should be excluded. If the Government does not attempt to establish a violation or evasion of state disclosure requirements, the SOEI evidence is irrelevant. If the Government does attempt to do so, the evidence will be confusing to the jury and unfairly prejudicial to Mr. McDonnell. Either way, this evidence should not be admitted.

At the same time, the Government has moved the Court to preclude Mr. McDonnell from introducing evidence that negates criminal intent with respect to Counts 12 and 13 of the Indictment, as well as evidence that proves his general good character. Those motions cannot be squared with the Government's position here. The Government wishes to prove Mr. McDonnell's criminal intent by introducing evidence of nondisclosure under a regulatory scheme that is not integral to the crime charged. It then turns around and opposes his efforts to prove his lack of criminal intent by introducing evidence that nondisclosures on a loan application were immaterial to the lenders, on the ground that materiality is not integral to the crime charged. Similarly, the Government, after seeking considerable latitude in its efforts to prove Mr. McDonnell's corrupt intent, then argues that his efforts to prove his good character must be closely circumscribed. The Government cannot have it both ways. Evidence pertaining to the SOEIs should not be admitted; but if it is, Mr. McDonnell must be given the opportunity to show his lack of criminal intent by (1) introducing evidence that an alleged omission on his loan applications was immaterial, and (2) calling ten character witnesses to provide non-duplicative testimony about Mr. McDonnell's good character.

ARGUMENT

I. The Government's Arguments In Favor Of Introducing the SOEIs Are Self-Contradictory, And Introduction of the SOEIs Will Confuse the Jury and Prejudice Mr. McDonnell Regardless.

The Government's Opposition is incoherent. On the one hand, the Government explicitly asserts that it does not intend to argue that Mr. McDonnell violated Virginia ethics law. On the other hand, the Government forcefully asserts that it intends to prove that Mr. McDonnell violated Virginia ethics law. Both statements cannot be true, but either way, the evidence should be excluded.

A. If the Government Does Not Attempt to Prove That Mr. McDonnell Violated Or Evaded Virginia Law, the SOEI Evidence is Irrelevant.

At several points in its brief, the Government states explicitly that it intends to introduce the SOEIs without arguing that Mr. McDonnell's disclosures ran afoul of Virginia ethics law. The Government first asserts that it does not intend to "argue, much less establish, any violation of Virginia law," Opp'n at 2; then, going even further, it asserts that it "does not plan to elicit, mention, or argue that Mr. McDonnell violated Virginia ethics laws," Opp'n at 5 (emphasis added). The Government also complains that Mr. McDonnell "mischaracteriz[ed]" its theory of the case when he argued that its proposed use of the SOEIs will necessarily raise questions of Virginia law. Opp'n at 1. These statements are puzzling because if the Government does not argue that Mr. McDonnell's disclosures on his SOEIs violated or improperly evaded Virginia ethics laws, then the SOEIs are not even relevant, much less admissible.

The Government's theory of the relevance of the SOEIs is that they are "evidence of concealment" and thus "probative of intent and consciousness of guilt." Opp'n at 2. But the concept of "concealment" is meaningless unless the Government establishes a requirement to disclose. This is true even where relations between two alleged co-conspirators are at issue. Suppose, for example, that Mr. Williams had invited Mr. McDonnell to take a long walk around the grounds of Mr. Williams' gated neighborhood, and during that walk he had given Mr. McDonnell extensive advice on how to start and operate a small business following his governorship. Mr. McDonnell might have enjoyed the walk, and he might have benefited from the business advice. Indeed, Mr. Williams might have proposed the outing as part of an overall scheme to ingratiate himself to Mr. McDonnell and obtain beneficial treatment from the Virginia government; and Mr. McDonnell might have understood that he was invited on the walk and given the benefit of Mr. Williams' business advice with the clear expectation that he would then take official action to benefit Mr. Williams. But in the likely event that Mr. McDonnell did not disclose the walk or advice on his SOEI at the end of the year, it would be nonsensical to say that he "concealed" or "failed to disclose" either of these benefits, because Virginia law obviously does not require the disclosure of pleasant walks or generic business tips.

The same is true of any favor, service, or thing of value that Mr. McDonnell or his immediate family receive in any given year. If Virginia law does not require that something be disclosed, there can be no failure to disclose or "concealment." Indeed, the very word "concealment" entails breaching an obligation to reveal. And absent "concealment," there is no sense in which an SOEI omitting the item in question is relevant evidence of intent or consciousness of guilt. It would be as if the Government introduced Mr. McDonnell's passport application—which does not mention Mr. Williams—to argue that Mr. McDonnell "concealed" Mr. Williams' alleged gifts to McDonnell family members from the State Department. That argument would be coherent only if the Government first demonstrated that the application form required the disclosure of miscellaneous gifts to one's family, which it obviously does not. Similarly here, before the Government can argue "concealment" to the jury, it will have to first establish that disclosure was required, or at a minimum that Mr. McDonnell intentionally evaded specific disclosure requirements. The Government's assertion that it "does not plan to elicit, mention, or argue that Mr. McDonnell violated Virginia ethics laws," Opp'n at 5, is therefore baffling. If it is true, then the SOEIs should be excluded as irrelevant.

B. If the Government Does Attempt to Prove That Mr. McDonnell Violated Or Evaded Virginia Law, the SOEI Evidence Will Cause Juror Confusion and Unfairly Prejudice Mr. McDonnell.

More likely, the Government does not mean what it says when it disavows any intention to place Virginia law at issue. Indeed, the Government states—several pages later in the same brief—that it "intends to prove at trial that Mr. McDonnell knew about the gifts and loans from Jonnie Williams, that he knew full well he should have reported them (i.e., he knew that the gifts and loans were not from a 'personal friend for reasons clearly unrelated to [his] public position['),] and that his failure to do so was deliberate." Opp'n at 9 (citation omitted). It is hard to imagine what the Government means by this series of assertions if not that it intends to prove Mr. McDonnell violated Virginia ethics law.

Indeed, the Government's statement closely tracks the explicit terms of Virginia's ethics law. Section 2.2-3114 of the Virginia Code requires the Governor of the Commonwealth to file an SOEI. Section 2.2-3117 sets forth the form of the SOEI and thereby establishes what must be disclosed; among other things, the form instructs filers, "Do not list gifts or other things of value given by a relative or personal friend for reasons clearly unrelated to your public position." Finally, Section 2.2-3120 establishes that knowing violations of Virginia disclosure requirements constitute a misdemeanor and provides, "A knowing violation under this section is one in which the person engages in conduct, performs an act or refuses to perform an act when he knows that the conduct is prohibited or required by this chapter." The Government's declared intention, therefore—at least in this part of its Opposition—is to establish each of the elements of a violation of this statutory scheme: that Mr. McDonnell knew that under the terms of the law, he should disclose the gifts and loans from Mr. Williams, and that he deliberately declined to do so.

If the Government does set out to establish a violation or deliberate evasion of Virginia ethics law—as it must if it proposes to make the SOEIs relevant at all—then this case is precisely analogous to the numerous cases cited in Mr. McDonnell's Memorandum in which courts have excluded evidence of a defendant's non-compliance with legal or ethical requirements that are distinct from the crime charged. See Mem. at 2-6. The Government attempts to distinguish these cases on the ground that it "does not plan to elicit, mention, or argue that Mr. McDonnell violated Virginia ethics laws." Opp'n at 5 and n.3. But in light of the Government's own contrary assertion—as well as the dictates of simple logic—this claim is implausible.

Indeed, this case is virtually indistinguishable from United States v. Terry, No. 1:10-CR-390, 2011 WL 2149361 (N.D. Ohio May 31, 2011), where a judge was charged with honest services wire fraud and the Government sought to introduce evidence that the judge had violated certain provisions of the Ohio Code of Judicial Conduct. While the district court recognized that violations of the judicial Code might arguably be probative of intent to deceive, it excluded the evidence under Rule 403. The Terry court found that "there is tremendous concern that the introduction of evidence regarding judicial code violations would cause the jury to view the defendant as an unethical judge who might be more inclined than others to engage in a bribery scheme." Terry, 2001 WL 2149361, at *4. And it further explained that "the evidence might also tend to confuse the jury by suggesting that the federal government, who has no authority to prosecute potential ethical violations of judges and attorneys, is attempting to do just that." Terry, 2001 WL 2149361, at *4. These findings regarding prejudice and juror confusion are entirely apposite here.[1]

Moreover, if the Government is permitted to introduce the SOEIs, the inevitable result will be a distracting mini-trial in which the jury will be asked to construe a complex set of state regulatory requirements that are entirely distinct from the federal law violations at issue.[2] This set of issues will be all the more prejudicial and confusing because the Government plans to argue that in some instances, the McDonnells did not even violate Virginia law but instead merely structured transactions to avoid reporting requirements while complying with the law. See Indictment ¶111(b); Opp'n at 2. But as the Supreme Court noted in Ratzlaf v. United States,

---

[1] The Government cites a series of cases in which the Fourth Circuit has found that the admission of various types of "inflammatory" evidence did not violate Rule 403. Opp'n at 5. But "[a]pplying Rule 403 to determine if evidence is prejudicial requires a fact-intensive, context-specific inquiry." Sprint/United Mgmt. Co. v. Mendelsohn, 552 U.S. 379, 388 (2008). Rule 403 rulings in cases bearing no factual resemblance to this one say nothing at all about the admissibility of the SOEI evidence in this case. It is therefore irrelevant whether, for example, a district court presiding over a murder trial properly admitted evidence of callous statements made by the defendant. See Opp'n at 5 (discussing United States v. Rivera, 412 F.3d 562 (4th Cir. 2005)).

[2] Mr. McDonnell recognizes that, in excluding the testimony of his proposed expert on Virginia ethics law, this Court found that the jury will be "capable of assessing the reasonableness of [Mr.] McDonnell's disclosures." Mem. Op. (June 26, 2014), Dkt. 246, at 4. Even if expert testimony is not necessary, however, that does not cure the Rule 403 problem. The fact remains that allowing the Government to argue that Mr. McDonnell violated Virginia ethics laws will conduce to protracted and involved proceedings regarding the propriety or impropriety of his disclosures. Such proceedings will inevitably distract the jury and cloud the issue of whether the McDonnells violated federal law, as opposed to Virginia law.

510 U.S. 135 (1994), there are many innocent reasons for nondisclosure.[3] The jury will therefore be required not only to distinguish proper from improper nondisclosures but also to distinguish technically proper nondisclosures that are "actually" improper from technically proper nondisclosures that are "actually" innocent. This task will be, to say the least, daunting and confusing.

The risk of unfair prejudice and juror confusion is particularly troubling in the context of this case, because the Government faces significant problems of proof when it comes to showing what exactly Mr. Williams allegedly received in exchange for the gifts and loans he provided to the McDonnells. See generally Mem. in Support of Def. Robert F McDonnell's Motion #10 – Motion to Dismiss Counts 1-11 of the Indictment (March 25, 2014), Dkt. 106. The Government must not be allowed to circumvent the requirement that it prove a quo in this alleged bribery scheme by putting Mr. McDonnell on trial for failing to disclose a quid on a state disclosure form.

II. Evidence Pertaining to Mr. McDonnell's Alleged Failure to Report a Gift from a Third Party Is Inadmissible Under Rule 404(b).

The Government displays a similar confusion about what it plans to prove when it argues that it should be allowed to introduce evidence that Mr. McDonnell did not report a stay at Kiawah Island as the guest of William H. Goodwin, Jr. All of the reasons it gives for the admissibility of this evidence under Rule 404(b) might conceivably be valid if Mr. McDonnell were charged with a violation of Virginia ethics law. But he is not, and the Government's arguments therefore fail.

---

[3] The Government argues at length that Ratzlaf is inapposite because it addressed a statutory willfulness requirement rather than relevancy. Opp'n at 3-4. This argument misses the basic point that, as the Supreme Court explained in that case, structuring can be, and often is, perfectly innocent. See 510 U.S. at 144-45. Even if alleged structuring might theoretically be probative of an intent to deceive in some cases, Rule 403 prohibits the introduction of such evidence because it creates a substantial risk of confusion and unfair prejudice. See Mem. at 2-3.

As an initial matter, the Government appears to have abandoned any argument that Mr. McDonnell's SOEI disclosures pertaining to the Kiawah vacation are intrinsic evidence of the crimes charged. Instead, it focuses only on the test for admissibility of extrinsic evidence of other bad acts under Rule 404(b). See Opp'n at 8-9. That is appropriate, because the nondisclosure of a vacation paid for by a third party who is not accused of bribing or attempting to bribe Mr. McDonnell cannot be "inextricably intertwined" with, "part of," or a "necessary preliminary to" the corruption scheme alleged here. See United States v. Lipford, 203 F.3d 259, 268 (4th Cir. 2000).

The Government's discussion of the Fourth Circuit's test for admissibility of extrinsic evidence of bad acts under Rule 404(b) ignores the fact that Mr. McDonnell is charged with federal bribery crimes rather than violations of state ethics law. The Government argues that Mr. McDonnell's nondisclosure of the Kiawah vacation is probative of his "intent in failing to disclose the gifts from Jonnie Williams." Opp'n at 9. But Mr. McDonnell is not charged with failing to disclose gifts from Mr. Williams; he is charged with trading official acts for gifts. Similarly, the Government claims that the nondisclosure of the Kiawah vacation is relevant to Mr. McDonnell's fraud because it involved "the very same form on which Mr. McDonnell failed to disclose gifts and loans from Mr. Williams." Opp'n at 9. But that form is the state form requiring disclosures of state public officials; again, Mr. McDonnell is not charged with a violation of state ethics laws. The Government makes the same error yet again when it argues that the SOEI evidence pertaining to the Kiawah trip shows "absence of mistake when it comes to assessing Mr. McDonnell's intent in failing to disclose the gifts and loans from Mr.

Williams." Opp'n at 9. Once more: Mr. McDonnell is not charged with failing to disclose gifts and loans from Mr. Williams. The intent that the Government must prove is not that Mr. McDonnell intentionally avoided disclosure under state law, but "that [he] intended to accept money as a bribe or in payment for his legislative services," United States v. Bailey, 990 F.2d 119, 124 (4th Cir. 1993), in violation of federal law.

As Mr. McDonnell argued in his Memorandum, a central purpose of Rule 404(b) is to preclude the introduction of evidence to show a "generalized intent (and propensity to commit crime in general)." United States v. Queen, 132 F.3d 991, 996 (4th Cir. 1997). When 404(b) evidence is offered to show intent, therefore, courts must be particularly careful. See id. at 995. If the Government is allowed to introduce other acts evidence that is allegedly probative of one type of criminal intent (intent not to disclose) to show a distinct type of alleged criminal intent (intent to accept bribes), it will essentially be able to argue to the jury that Mr. McDonnell must be guilty because he has a criminal disposition. Rule 404(b) forbids precisely that.

The Government's inability to distinguish between an intent to avoid Virginia disclosure requirements and an intent to accept a bribe from Mr. Williams also demonstrates, once again, just how much potential for prejudice and confusion there is in its proposed use of this extraneous SOEI evidence. If the Government believes that failure to disclose a gift is essentially equivalent to engaging in quid pro quo bribery, it is not farfetched to suppose that a jury might come to the same improper conclusion—thereby convicting Mr. McDonnell of federal bribery felonies on the basis of a (never-instructed-by-any-judge) possible state misdemeanor disclosure violation. Introduction of SOEI evidence pertaining to the Kiawah trip is therefore independently barred under Rule 403.

III. The Government's Various Evidentiary Arguments Cannot All Be Credited.

Finally, the Government's position with regard to the SOEIs is also in stark tension with its position regarding two other evidentiary issues that go to the heart of Mr. McDonnell's lack of criminal intent. Specifically, the Government's arguments for the admissibility of the SOEI evidence cannot be squared with its arguments against admitting evidence of the immateriality of the false statements alleged in Counts 12 and 13 of the Indictment and against admitting more than three character witnesses. The Court should grant Mr. McDonnell's Motion to exclude evidence pertaining to the SOEIs; but if it denies this Motion in whole or in part, fairness dictates that it must allow Mr. McDonnell to present evidence of immateriality as well as ten character witnesses.

A. If Evidence of Immateriality Is Inadmissible Under Rule 403, Evidence Relating to the SOEIs Is Certainly Inadmissible Under the Same Rule.

Mr. McDonnell has also been charged with making false statements on loan applications in violation of 18 U.S.C. § 1014. The Government has separately moved to exclude evidence that Mr. McDonnell's alleged omission of loans from Mr. Williams from the loan applications was immaterial to the lenders in question. See United States' Mem. in Support of Mot. to Exclude Irrelevant and Misleading Evidence of Materiality of False Statements Charged in Counts 12 & 13 (June 20, 2014) ("Materiality Motion"), Dkt. 230. The reasons that the Government gives in support of this Motion are directly contradictory to its arguments for introducing the SOEIs.

As Mr. McDonnell explains in his Opposition to the Government's Materiality Motion, evidence that the loans from Mr. Williams would not have been material to his lenders is relevant because it makes it less probable that Mr. McDonnell intended to influence the bank. Robert F McDonnell's Mem. in Opp'n to the Govt.'s Mot. in Limine to Exclude Irrelevant and Misleading Evidence of Materiality of False Statements Charged in Counts 12 & 13 (July 1, 2014) ("Materiality Opp'n"), Dkt. 253. The Government argues, however, that this evidence of Mr. McDonnell's lack of intent should be excluded because materiality is not an element of the crime charged. Materiality Motion at 5-6. Even if relevant, the Government claims, this evidence "is likely to mislead and confuse the jury." Materiality Motion at 6.

These arguments are directly contradictory to the Government's arguments regarding the SOEIs. Just as materiality is not an element of a violation of § 1014, the failure to disclose gifts or loans on a state disclosure form is not an element of either honest services wire fraud or Hobbs Act extortion. If evidence tending to show that Mr. McDonnell lacked the requisite intent to violate federal law will confuse the jury by asking it to assess an issue—materiality—that is not integral to the crime charged, then surely evidence tending to show that Mr. McDonnell possessed the requisite intent to violate federal law will confuse the jury by asking it to assess an issue—compliance with state disclosure requirements—that is not integral to the crime charged. The Government provides no explanation for why SOEI evidence should be admitted, while materiality evidence should be excluded.

In fact, the SOEI evidence poses a far greater risk of juror confusion than evidence of immateriality does. Much of the Government's argument pertaining to the SOEIs involves allegedly improper "structuring" of transactions to avoid disclosure requirements. To explain to a jury why nondisclosure is probative of corrupt intent, the Government will have to show at a minimum (1) that Mr. McDonnell had a choice of means through which to receive the gift or loan, (2) that the transaction, in another form, would have been reportable, (3) that Mr. McDonnell deliberately chose a non-reportable form for the transaction, and (4) that this choice was made with a guilty conscience in order to conceal the transaction rather than for some innocent reason. Arguing that omissions from loan applications were immaterial to lenders, in contrast, requires showing only that the additional liabilities were not material. Moreover, there is no risk of unfair prejudice to the Government if Mr. McDonnell is allowed to demonstrate the immateriality of the alleged omissions. While that evidence shows Mr. McDonnell's innocent intent, it does not cast the Government in an unflattering light. In contrast, the SOEI evidence presents a substantial risk of unfair prejudice because the jury, rather than working through the complex requirements of Virginia ethics law and considering the many innocent reasons that exist for nondisclosure, may (with the Government's strong encouragement) leap to the conclusion that Mr. McDonnell did something criminal.

Because the SOEIs pose far greater problems under Rule 403 than evidence that Mr. McDonnell's alleged omissions from his loan applications were immaterial, the Court should bar evidence of the SOEIs while admitting evidence of immateriality. But it would not be proper to do the reverse. If the risk of juror confusion is sufficient to exclude evidence of lack of materiality from Mr. McDonnell's defense to Counts 12 and 13, it is certainly sufficient to bar the Government from introducing evidence of the SOEIs.

B. This All Underscores The Need For Mr. McDonnell To Call At Least Ten Character Witnesses.

The Government has also filed a Motion in Limine seeking to limit the number of character witnesses that Mr. McDonnell may introduce. See Mem. in Support of the Govt.'s Mot. in Limine to Limit the Number of Character Witnesses (June 20, 2014), Dkt. 232. In the Government's view, testimony from more than three character witnesses is "cumulative and unnecessary." Id. at 1. But the Government cannot be permitted to impugn Mr. McDonnell's intentions at every turn, using evidence outside the elements of its charged crimes, and then claim that Mr. McDonnell cannot defend himself by calling witnesses who will testify to his several relevant character traits.

CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons, Mr. McDonnell respectfully requests that the Court grant his Motion in Limine to exclude evidence relating to his Statements of Economic Interest.

Dated: July 7, 2014

Respectfully submitted,

/s/ Jonathan A. Berry
Henry W Asbill (pro hac vice)
Ryan D. Newman (pro hac vice)
Owen T. Conroy (pro hac vice)
Hilary K. Perkins (pro hac vice)
Jonathan A. Berry (VSB No. 81864)
JONES DAY
51 Louisiana Avenue, N.W
Washington, D.C. 20001
Telephone: (202) 879-3939
Facsimile: (202) 626-1700

John L. Brownlee (VSB No. 37358)
Timothy J. Taylor (VSB No. 84529)
HOLLAND & KNIGHT LLP
800 17th Street, N.W., Suite 1100
Washington, D.C. 20006
Telephone: (202) 828-1854
Facsimile: (202) 955-5564

Counsel for Robert F McDonnell

CERTIFICATE OF SERVICE

I, Jonathan A. Berry, am a member of the Bar of this Court. I hereby certify that on this 7th day of July, 2014, I caused the foregoing to be electronically filed with the Clerk of Court using the CM/ECF system, causing it to be served on all registered users.

Dated: July 7, 2014

Respectfully submitted,

/s/ Jonathan A. Berry
Jonathan A. Berry (VSB No. 81864)
JONES DAY
51 Louisiana Avenue, N.W
Washington, D.C. 20001
Telephone: (202) 879-3939
Facsimile: (202) 626-1700
Email: jberry@jonesday.com

Counsel for Robert F McDonnell

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
FOR THE EASTERN DISTRICT OF VIRGINIA
RICHMOND DIVISION

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,	)
	)	CRIMINAL NO. 3:14-CR-00012
v.	)
	)	JUDGE JAMES R. SPENCER
ROBERT F. MCDONNELL	)
MAUREEN G. MCDONNELL	)

ROBERT F. MCDONNELL'S PROPOSED JURY INSTRUCTIONS

Proposed Jury Instruction No. 37

"Corruptly" Defined

The term "corruptly," as used in these instructions, means to have an improper motive or purpose. An act is done "corruptly" if it is performed voluntarily and deliberately and performed with the purpose of either accomplishing an unlawful end or unlawful result or of accomplishing some otherwise lawful end or lawful result by any unlawful method or means. The defendant must have demanded, sought, or received a thing of value with the deliberate purpose of being influenced in the performance of his official duties. This involves conscious wrongdoing or, as it is sometimes expressed, a bad or evil state of mind. An official has corrupt intent only if he demands, seeks, or receives a payment with the deliberate intent to engage in some specific quid pro quo, which is Latin for "something for something." In other words, the official must have received the payment in exchange for performing or promising to perform some specific official act. A gift or payment given with the generalized hope of some unspecified future benefit is not a bribe. You may convict the defendant only if you find that he received something of value in exchange for performing or promising to perform some specific official act.

Authority:

Adapted from O'Malley et al., Federal Jury Practice and Instructions § 27.09; United States v. Sun-Diamond Growers of Cal., 526 U.S. 398, 404 (1999) ("Bribery requires an intent 'to influence' an official act or 'to be influenced' in an official act. In other words, for bribery, there must be a quid pro quo—a specific intent to give or receive something of value in exchange for an official act."); id. ("The insistence upon an 'official act,' carefully defined, seems pregnant with the requirement that some particular official act be identified and proved."); United States v. Quinn, 359 F.3d 666, 674 (4th Cir. 2006) ("Corrupt intent means simply having an improper motive or purpose. The defendant must have demanded, sought or received a thing of value with the deliberate purpose of being influence in the performance of his or her official duties. This involves conscious wrongdoing or, as it is sometimes expressed, a bad or evil state of mind."); United States v. Jennings, 160 F.3d 1006, 1013 (4th Cir. 1998) ("A bribe requires that the payment be made 'corruptly,' that is, with 'corrupt intent.' Under § 201, 'corrupt intent' is the intent to receive a specific benefit in return for the payment. In other words, the payor of a bribe must intend to engage in 'some more or less specific quid pro quo' with the official who receives the payment." (citation omitted)); id. at 1013 (explaining that "a good will gift to an official to foster a favorable business climate, given simply with the 'generalized hope or expectation of ultimate benefit on the part of the donor,' does not constitute a bribe"); id. at 1018-19 ("[A] trial court must explain that a payment is made with 'corrupt intent' only if it was made or promised with the intent to corrupt the particular official. Not every payment made to influence or reward an official is intended to corrupt him. [The trial court] simply may explain that the defendant must have intended for the official to engage in some specific act (or omission) or course of action (or inaction) in return for the charged payment." (citation omitted)); United States v. Alfisi, 308 F.3d 144, 149 (2d Cir. 2002) (stating that "bribery involves the giving of value to procure a specific official action from a public official").

Proposed Jury Instruction No. 58

Honest Services Wire Fraud—"Official Act" Defined

An "official act" means any decision or action on any question, matter, cause, suit, proceeding, or controversy which may at any time be pending or which may, by law, be brought before any public official in his or her official capacity or in his or her place of trust. The six terms—question, matter, cause, suit, proceeding, or controversy—refer to a class of questions or matters whose answer or disposition is determined by the government.

An act may be official even if it was not taken pursuant to responsibilities explicitly assigned by law to the official. Rather, a government official can perform an "official act" when it is a settled practice as part of the official's position for him to exercise influence over a government decision even if he does not have authority to make the final decision himself.

But the fact that an activity is a routine activity, or a "settled practice," of an office-holder does not alone make it an "official act." Many settled practices of government officials are not official acts within the meaning of the statute. For example, merely arranging a meeting, attending an event, hosting a reception, or making a speech are not, standing alone, "official acts," even if they are settled practices of the official. A government official's decisions on who to invite to lunch, whether to attend an event, or whether to attend a meeting or respond to a phone call are not decisions on matters pending before the government. That is because mere ingratiation and access are not corruption. Nor is an official's use of his official position to promote a purely private venture. The questions you must decide are both whether the charged conduct constitutes a "settled practice" and whether that conduct was intended to or did in fact influence a specific official decision the government actually makes—such as awarding a contract, hiring a government employee, issuing a license, passing a law, or implementing a regulation.

Authority:

See 18 U.S.C. § 201(a)(3); United States v. Sun-Diamond Growers of Cal., 526 U.S. 398, 407 (1999) (distinguishing between actions that "are assuredly 'official acts' in some sense"—such as "receiving [] sports teams at the White House, visiting [a] high school, and speaking to [] farmers about USDA policy"—and the narrower category of "official acts" that fall within the bribery laws); Citizens United v. Fed. Election Comm'n, 558 U.S. 310, 360 (2010) ("Ingratiation and access are not corruption."); United States v. Carson, 464 F.2d 424, 434 (2d Cir. 1972) ("It is the corruption of official positions through the misuse of influence in governmental decision-making which the bribery statutes make criminal."); United States v. Mandel, 591 F.2d 1347. 1362 (4th Cir. 1979) ("[T]he 'fraud' involved in the bribery of a public official lies in the fact that the public official is not exercising his independent judgment in passing on official matters."); United States v. Urciuoli, 513 F.3d 290, 296 (1st Cir. 2008) (rejecting the argument that "trad[ing] on the reputation, network and influence that comes with political office" or using the "access and attention" that comes with a government title, or even the "(possibly improper) use of senate letterhead" were sufficient—standing alone—to transform that conduct into an improper official action); Valdes v. United States, 475 F.3d 1319, 1324-25 (D.C. Cir. 2007) (en banc) (holding that the Government must prove that the defendant exerted "inappropriate influence on decisions that the government actually makes"); United States v. Rabbitt, 583 F.2d 1014, 1028 (8th Cir. 1978), abrogated on other grounds by McNally v. United States, 483 U.S. 350 (1987), superseded by statute, 18 U.S.C. § 1346 (reversing conviction where the most that the official did "was recommend [the alleged bribe payer] to state contractors as qualified architects and thereby gain them a friendly ear"); United States v. Loftus, 992 F.2d 793, 796 (8th Cir. 1993) (explaining that the conviction in Rabbitt was reversed because the official "promised only to introduce the firm to influential persons" and "did not promise to use his official position to influence those persons"); United States v. Jefferson, 674 F.3d 332, 356-57 (4th Cir. 2012) (holding that "the bribery statute does not encompass every action taken in one's official capacity" and that an "act must yet adhere to the definition confining an official act to a pending 'question, matter, cause, suit, proceeding or controversy,'" such that juries cannot "rely exclusively on [] settled practices"); United States v. Ring, 706 F.3d 460, 470 (D.C. Cir. 2013) (holding that a government attorney performed an official action when he "acted in his official capacity to influence the visa application process" and distinguishing between interfering with specific visa applications (an official act because it sought to improperly influence a governmental decision) and "making a purely informational inquiry" (an official act in some sense but not one that sought to influence governmental action)); United States v. Muntain, 610 F.2d 964, 966-67 (D.C. Cir. 1979) (holding that an official's "use of his official position to promote a purely private venture created an appearance of impropriety , but it is not criminal").

Proposed Jury Instruction No. 59

Honest Services Wire Fraud—"Corruptly" Defined

"Corrupt intent" means having an improper motive or purpose. An act is done "corruptly" if it is performed voluntarily and deliberately and performed with the purpose of either accomplishing an unlawful end or unlawful result or of accomplishing some otherwise lawful end or lawful result by any unlawful method or means. The defendant must have demanded, sought, or received a thing of value with the deliberate purpose of being influenced in the performance of his official duties. This involves conscious wrongdoing or, as it is sometimes expressed, a bad or evil state of mind. An official has corrupt intent only if he demands, seeks, or receives a payment with the deliberate intent to engage in some specific quid pro quo, which is Latin for "something for something." In other words, the official must have received the payment in exchange for performing or promising to perform some specific official act. A gift or payment given with the generalized hope of some unspecified future benefit is not a bribe. You may convict the defendant only if you find that he received something of value in exchange for performing or promising to perform some specific official act.

Authority:

Adapted from O'Malley et al., Federal Jury Practice and Instructions § 27.09; United States v. Sun-Diamond Growers of Cal., 526 U.S. 398, 404 (1999) ("Bribery requires an intent 'to influence' an official act or 'to be influenced' in an official act. In other words, for bribery, there must be a quid pro quo—a specific intent to give or receive something of value in exchange for an official act."); id. ("The insistence upon an 'official act,' carefully defined, seems pregnant with the requirement that some particular official act be identified and proved."); United States v. Quinn, 359 F.3d 666, 674 (4th Cir. 2006) ("Corrupt intent means simply having an improper motive or purpose. The defendant must have demanded, sought or received a thing of value with the deliberate purpose of being influence in the performance of his or her official duties. This involves conscious wrongdoing or, as it is sometimes expressed, a bad or evil state of mind."); United States v. Jennings, 160 F.3d 1006, 1013 (4th Cir. 1998) ("A bribe requires that the payment be made 'corruptly,' that is, with 'corrupt intent.' Under § 201, 'corrupt intent' is the intent to receive a specific benefit in return for the payment. In other words, the payor of a bribe must intend to engage in 'some more or less specific quid pro quo' with the official who receives the payment." (citation omitted)); id. at 1013 (explaining that "a good will gift to an official to foster a favorable business climate, given simply with the 'generalized hope or expectation of ultimate benefit on the part of the donor,' does not constitute a bribe"); id. at 1018-19 ("[A] trial court must explain that a payment is made with 'corrupt intent' only if it was made or promised with the intent to corrupt the particular official. Not every payment made to influence or reward an official is intended to corrupt him. [The trial court] simply may explain that the defendant must have intended for the official to engage in some specific act (or omission) or course of action (or inaction) in return for the charged payment." (citation omitted)); United States v. Alfisi, 308 F.3d 144, 149 (2d Cir. 2002) (stating that "bribery involves the giving of value to procure a specific official action from a public official").

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
EASTERN DISTRICT OF VIRGINIA
RICHMOND DIVISION

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,

v.

ROBERT F. MCDONNELL,

and

MAUREEN G. MCDONNELL,

Defendants.

Action No. 3:14-CR-12

MEMORANDUM OPINION

THIS MATTER is before the Court on seven motions in limine filed by the parties. Each of these motions has been fully briefed by the parties and a hearing was held on July 15, 2014.

The Government's Motion to Exclude Irrelevant and Misleading Evidence of Materiality of False Statements Charged in Counts 12 & 13 (ECF No. 229) seeks to exclude evidence regarding the materiality of the false statements charged in Counts 12 and 13 of the Indictment, which allege violations of 18 U.S.C. § 1014. Section 1014 "criminalizes the making of a false statement to a financial institution 'for the purpose of influencing in any way the action of' the institution with regard to, for example, an advance or a loan." Elliott v. United States, 332 F.3d 753, 764 (4th Cir. 2003) (quoting 18 U.S.C. § 1014). Neither objective materiality of the false statement nor reliance by the financial institution is relevant to a defendant's criminal culpability under section 1014. United States v. Lane, 323 F.3d 568, 582-83 (7th Cir. 2003); see United States v. Wells, 519 U.S. 482, 489-90 (1997) (finding that materiality is not an element of section 1014). What is relevant is the defendant's specific intent to influence the financial institution's decision.

There is no evidence in the record that Defendants had any inkling of the materiality of their allegedly false statements at the time they were made. This fact distinguishes the present situation from that considered by the Seventh Circuit in United States v. Phillips, 731 F.3d 649 (7th Cir. 2013). Accordingly, this motion will be GRANTED. Post-offense statements of Defendants, the financial institutions, or the financial institutions' officers are irrelevant and, additionally, may mislead the jury. See Fed. R. Evid. 402, 403. Defendants will be precluded from testifying as to their opinion of the allegedly false statements' materiality because their opinions as to materiality are irrelevant. See Fed. R. Evid. 402. They may, however, testify that they did not intend to influence the financial institutions.

The Government's Motion to Limit the Number of Character Witnesses (ECF No. 231) seeks to limit each Defendant to the use of three character witnesses at trial. Although it is highly unlikely that the Court will allow more than five (5) character witnesses per Defendant, this motion will be DENIED at this time as premature. The cumulative or permissible nature of character witnesses presented by Defendants will be assessed in context at trial

The Government's Motion to Permit Leading Questions by the United States of Witnesses Identified with Defendants (ECF No. 233) seeks: (1) to permit the Government to use leading questions on direct examination of eight potential witnesses who are family members of Defendants; and (2) to prohibit Defendants from using leading questions in cross-examination of those same witnesses. Federal Rule of Evidence 611 vests the Court with discretion to grant or deny the requested relief when witnesses are "identified with an adverse party." Fed. R. Evid. 611(c)(2). Because the record does not demonstrate that these eight witnesses have shown hostility or an uncooperative spirit, the Court finds no reason to alter the ordinary mode of examining witnesses. Accordingly, this motion will be DENIED. However, if these witnesses show themselves to be hostile or uncooperative, the Court will reconsider this issue at trial.

Mr. McDonnell's Motion to Exclude Co-Conspirator Acts and Statements Pending Prima Facie Showing of Conspiracy Involving Mr. McDonnell (ECF No. 227) seeks a pretrial James hearing. See United States v. James, 590 F.2d 575 (5th Cir. 1979). The preferred method in this Court for admissibility determinations pursuant to Federal Rule of Evidence 801(d)(2) is to conditionally admit the disputed evidence subject to later proof of conspiracy. Accord United States v. Berlin, 707 F. Supp. 832, 840 (E.D. Va. 1989). The Court finds that a James hearing would be duplicative and a waste of time. Accordingly, this motion will be DENIED.

Defendants' Motions to Exclude Evidence Relating to Star Scientific Stock Ownership (ECF Nos. 235, 242) seek to exclude evidence of Mrs. McDonnell's stock ownership and transfers pursuant to Federal Rule of Evidence 403. The disputed evidence goes to concealment, which may be probative of intent to defraud—an element of the charged crimes. See United States v. Zayyad, 741 F.3d 452, 463 (4th Cir. 2014). Further, this evidence does not unfairly prejudice Defendants because it was not sought, and will not be used, to prove a violation of Virginia's ethics laws or reporting requirements. Because the probative value of this evidence is not outweighed by competing considerations, see Fed. R. Evid. 403, this motion will be DENIED.

Defendants' Motions to Exclude Evidence Relating to Statements of Economic Interest (ECF Nos. 237, 243) seek to exclude Mr. McDonnell's Statements of Economic Interest ("SOEIs"), draft SOEIs and any other evidence pertaining to their preparation or submission. The disputed evidence goes to concealment and may be probative of intent to defraud—an element of the charged crimes. See Zayyad, 741 F.3d 463. As with evidence of Mrs. McDonnell's stock ownership and transfers, admission of the SOEIs will not unfairly prejudice Defendants because there is no suggestion, and there will be none at trial, that Mr. McDonnell violated Virginia's ethics laws or reporting requirements. Accordingly, the SOEIs will not be excluded pursuant to Federal Rule of Evidence 403.

Additionally, the draft SOEI referencing a gift from William H. Goodwin, Jr., is admissible pursuant to Federal Rule of Evidence 404(b) as evidence of Mr. McDonnell's knowledge of the personal friend exception to Virginia's SOEI reporting requirements and as evidence of an absence of mistake. The prior act sought to be proved, therefore, is Mr. McDonnell's omission of Mr. Goodwin's gift pursuant to the personal friend exception. Evidence of Mr. McDonnell's knowledge and of the absence of mistake is relevant to, and probative of, his alleged intent to defraud—an element of the charged crimes; the prior act alleged is similar to the act the Government seeks to prove—omission of gifts from Williams pursuant to the personal friend exception; and there is nothing in the record to suggest that the evidence will be unreliable or unfairly prejudicial to Defendants. See United States v. Queen, 132 F.3d 991, 997 (4th Cir. 1997). Accordingly, this motion will be DENIED.

Mr. McDonnell's Motion to Exclude Mrs. McDonnell's Testimonial Statements (ECF No. 239) seeks to exclude statements Mrs. McDonnell made to law enforcement officers in an interview held on February 15, 2013. The Confrontation Clause of the Sixth Amendment generally bars the admission of testimonial hearsay statements of a witness who did not appear at trial unless he was unavailable to testify, and the defendant has had a prior opportunity for cross-examination. See Crawford v. Washington, 541 U.S. 36, 53-54 (2004). However, "[t]he [Confrontation Clause] does not bar the use of testimonial statements for purposes other than establishing the truth of the matter asserted." Crawford, 541 U.S. at 59 n.9 (citing Tennessee v. Street, 471 U.S. 409, 414 (1985)). The Government intends to offer Mrs. McDonnell's statements as relevant, non-hearsay evidence against Mr. McDonnell. Accordingly, this motion will be DENIED. The Court will consider at trial whether an instruction limiting the relevance of Mrs. McDonnell's statements to her state of mind will be necessary.

Let the Clerk send a copy of this Memorandum Opinion to all counsel of record.

An appropriate Order shall issue.

/s/
James R. Spencer
Senior U. S. District Judge

ENTERED this 16th day of July 2014.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
EASTERN DISTRICT OF VIRGINIA
RICHMOND DIVISION

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,

v.

ROBERT F. MCDONNELL,

and

MAUREEN G. MCDONNELL,

Defendants.

Action No. 3:14-CR-12

ORDER

THIS MATTER is before the Court on seven motions in limine filed by the parties. For the reasons set forth in the accompanying Memorandum Opinion, the Court rules as follows:

- The Government's Motion to Exclude Irrelevant and Misleading Evidence of Materiality of False Statements Charged in Counts 12 & 13 (ECF No. 229) is GRANTED;
- The Government's Motion to Limit the Number of Character Witnesses (ECF No. 231) is DENIED as premature;
- The Government's Motion to Permit Leading Questions by the United States of Witnesses Identified with Defendants (ECF No. 233) is DENIED;
- Mr. McDonnell's Motion to Exclude Co-Conspirator Acts and Statements Pending Prima Facie Showing of Conspiracy Involving Mr. McDonnell (ECF No. 227) is DENIED;
- Defendants' Motions to Exclude Evidence Relating to Star Scientific Stock Ownership (ECF Nos. 235, 242) are DENIED;
- Defendants' Motions to Exclude Evidence Relating to Statements of Economic Interest (ECF Nos. 237, 243) are DENIED; and
- Mr. McDonnell's Motion to Exclude Mrs. McDonnell's Testimonial Statements (ECF No. 239) is DENIED.

Let the Clerk send a copy of this Order to all counsel of record.

It is SO ORDERED.

/s/
James R. Spencer
Senior U. S. District Judge

ENTERED this 16th day of July 2014.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
EASTERN DISTRICT OF VIRGINIA
RICHMOND DIVISION

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,

v.

ROBERT F. MCDONNELL,

and

MAUREEN G. MCDONNELL,

Defendants.

Action No. 3:14-CR-12

MEMORANDUM ORDER

THIS MATTER is before the Court on the Government's Motion to Exclude Expert Testimony ("Motion") (ECF No. 221). By Memorandum Opinion and Order dated June 26, 2014, the Court deferred its determination of the admissibility of certain expert testimony. Upon further consideration and after holding Daubert hearings, the Court will exclude the testimony of Peter H. White, esq., in its entirety and will exclude the testimony of J. Allen Kosowsky, CPA, in part.

Federal Rule of Evidence 702 permits a qualified expert to opine on any technical matter that will help the jury understand evidence or determine a fact in issue. See Fed. R. Evid. 702. When a party offers expert testimony in evidence, the Supreme Court charges the trial court with deciding whether the expert's testimony is relevant and reliable. Daubert v. Merrell Dow Pharms., Inc., 509 U.S. 579, 589 (1993); Kumho Tire Co., Ltd. v. Carmichael, 526 U.S. 137, 152 (1999). To satisfy the Daubert standard, a court must conclude the expert witness "employs in the courtroom the same level of intellectual rigor that characterizes the practice of an expert in the relevant field." Kumho Tire, 526 U.S. at 152. However, the Court must limit its consideration "solely [to] principles and methodology," and should not consider "the conclusions they generate." Daubert, 509 U.S. at 594-95.

As to Mr. White, the Court has no doubt that Mr. White has sufficient training and experience to opine as to the cost of securities litigation. However, he seeks to offer an expert opinion on the benefit that accrued to Jonnie Williams, Sr., as a result of the Government's request for a stay of discovery in two civil suits unrelated to this criminal prosecution. Mr. White's methodology is flawed because it fails to assess several variables—some of which may not be presently knowable— that necessarily affect the benefit that has accrued or will accrue to Mr. Williams. Examples of such variables include the ultimate length of the stays, the availability of insurance, and offsets by the possible negative effects of the stays, including the diminution of stock value for a longer period of time than if the suits had proceeded, the drag of unresolved legal issues on the business, and the possibility of prevailing on the suit and/or settling the suit earlier than if the stays had not been entered. Failure to consider such variables makes Mr. White's resulting opinion unreliable.

Alternatively, the Court finds that Mr. White's proposed testimony would not be helpful to the jury. See Fed. R. Evid. 702. In explaining that precisely quantifying the benefit to Williams would be inherently speculative, Mr. White testified that valuating this benefit "is more of a common sense analysis." Hrg. Tr. 53:19, July 11, 2014. The Court agrees. The jury can apply its own collective common sense to understand the benefits that may have accrued to Williams as a result of the civil stays, making expert testimony unnecessary. Defendants may inquire about these benefits in cross examination of Williams, and the jury will be equipped to assess that testimony without the aid of an expert.

As to Mr. Kosowsky, the Court finds that the proposed testimony regarding the financial benefit of the civil stays is beyond his expertise because it relies upon the legal assessment of others. Mr. Kosowsky's methodology is flawed because the ultimate opinion necessarily relies on information that he does not presently have. For example, Mr. Kosowsky indicated that he did not know or did not consider information such as the effect of pre-judgment interest sought in the civil complaints, the cost of civil discovery, the effect of additional civil lawsuits against Star Scientific, Inc., that were not stayed, the viability of the stayed civil actions, and the likelihood that Williams could sell his Star Scientific stock. Because Mr. Kosowsky's methodology is flawed, his opinion as to the benefit of the civil stays is unreliable and will be excluded.

However, the Court will not exclude Mr. Kosowsky's proposed testimony regarding the soundness of Defendants' finances at this time. There is potential for Mr. Kosowsky's expertise to validly aid the jury on this point. However, at the hearing held on July 15, 2014, Mr. Kosowsky indicated that his opinion was based, in part, on speculative information (potential future earnings), information gleaned from one or more interviews with Mr. McDonnell, and documents that could be assessed by a jury without the aid of an expert. Mr. Kosowsky's opinions will not be admitted unless the factual bases for those opinions are first established by admissible testimony and/or exhibits. See Fed. R. Evid. 705.

Let the Clerk send a copy of this Memorandum Order to all counsel of record.

It is SO ORDERED.

/s/
James R. Spencer
Senior U. S. District Judge

ENTERED this 16th day of July 2014.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
FOR THE EASTERN DISTRICT OF VIRGINIA
RICHMOND DIVISION

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,	)
	)
v.	)	CRIMINAL NO. 3:14-CR-00012
	)
ROBERT F. MCDONNELL MAUREEN G. MCDONNELL	)	JUDGE JAMES R. SPENCER
	)

DEFENDANT ROBERT F. MCDONNELL'S OFFER OF PROOF REGARDING EXPERT TESTIMONY

Pursuant to Federal Rule of Evidence 103(a)(2), Defendant Robert F McDonnell respectfully submits this offer of proof with respect to the proposed expert testimony of Mark L. Earley, Peter H. White, J. Allen Kosowsky, and Norman A. Thomas. On June 26, 2014, the Court excluded:

1. Mr. Earley's proposed testimony in full;
2. Mr. White's proposed testimony regarding the value of the transactional immunity offered to Jonnie Williams, Sr. in exchange for his testimony;
3. Mr. Kosowsky's proposed testimony regarding the financial value of the benefits conferred on Mr. Williams (except the value of the Government's intervention in various civil suits), securities and trust transactions by Mr. Williams and Star Scientific, Inc., and the mechanics of bank loan applications;
4. Mr. Thomas's proposed testimony in full.

June 26, 2014 Order at 1, Dkt. No. 247 Each proposed expert's excluded testimony was discussed in (1) Defendant's Notice of Intent to Use Expert Testimony at Trial, dated May 29, 2014, which was filed with the Court on June 16, 2014, as Exhibit A to the Government's Memorandum in Support of Motion to Exclude Expert Testimony, Dkt. No. 222; (2) Defendant's Supplementary Notice of Intent to Use Expert Testimony at Trial, dated June 12, 2014, attached as Exhibit B to the same Government brief; and (3) Defendant's Second Supplementary Notice of Intent to Use Expert Testimony at Trial, dated June 20, 2014, attached as Exhibit E to Mr. McDonnell's Response in Opposition to the same Government brief, Dkt. No. 241. This offer of proof is intended to provide additional information about the proposed testimony that was excluded for the purpose of preserving Mr. McDonnell's claim on appeal.

I. MARK L. EARLEY

As discussed in Mr. McDonnell's Notices, former Virginia Attorney General Mark L. Earley would testify concerning the common activities of governors of the Commonwealth of Virginia. Mr. Earley would not testify about what constitutes an "official act" under federal law. Rather, he would explain the general factual context of Mr. McDonnell's allegedly criminal conduct.

Mr. Earley would testify about the common practices of elected officials in Virginia when they are interacting with the donors and benefactors every politician must cultivate. He would explain that politicians rely on a variety of mechanisms to interact with their beseechers to avoid running afoul of legal and ethical obligations. These practices include referring a supporter for a meeting with a subordinate from which both the politician and the subordinate know nothing will result. They also involve declining to make specific commitments on behalf of the government to one's supporters, instead opting to route any requests for governmental assistance through the subordinate most qualified to assess the legitimacy of those requests and make an independent decision on the request that is based entirely on the merits. Mr. Earley would further explain that politicians frequently deploy these practices as defensive mechanisms—relying on their staff to turn back requests from a supporter.

Mr. Earley would also opine about whether certain conduct by Virginia politicians is consistent with the absence of fraudulent intent. Mr. Earley has no knowledge of Mr. McDonnell's actual beliefs or intentions and would not attempt to opine about what Mr. McDonnell personally believed at the time of the alleged conduct. He would, however, testify about the common practices of politicians trying to do their jobs honestly and appropriately.

Mr. Earley would also testify that several of the actions the Government has alleged Mr. McDonnell undertook in exchange for benefits are not "settled practices" of Virginia governors. Specifically, he would opine that it is not a settled practice of Virginia governors to lobby university professors to conduct specific clinical research.

II. PETER H. WHITE

As discussed in Mr. McDonnell's Notices, Mr. White would offer testimony about the benefits Star Scientific and Mr. Williams received from prosecutors in exchange for Mr. Williams' testimony. Specifically, Mr. White would explain the unusual transactional immunity agreement entered into by Mr. Williams and the Government because the nuances of different immunity arrangements is beyond the ken of the average juror. In particular, Mr. White would explain that over his 24 years as a federal prosecutor in the EDVA and a private attorney, the only transactional immunity agreement he has ever seen or heard about was the one entered between Monica Lewinsky and the Independent Counsel in 1998. He would further explain that over his career as an attorney in this District, he has never heard of any United States Attorney's Office ever providing a cooperating witness with transactional immunity for federal felonies that have no connection to the testimony the witness is providing—here, Mr. Williams' potential criminal securities fraud charges and the separate tax fraud Mr. Williams allegedly committed using a trust for his children.

In addition, Mr. White would explain the differences between a typical plea agreement or use immunity agreement and the transactional immunity agreements Mr. Williams received here. Mr. White would explain that use immunity, which is statutorily authorized, is commonly offered to witnesses to prevent their statements from being used against them. A witness who receives use immunity can be, and not infrequently is, ultimately prosecuted for the underlying criminal offenses. A witness who receives transactional immunity, on the other hand, is completely protected from future prosecution for any matter related to his immunized testimony. Mr. White's testimony is particularly important because the transactional immunity agreements offered to Mr. Williams include vague terms and avoid specificity about what he received in exchange for his testimony. That is different from a plea agreement, of course, which would include a factual basis for the plea that the jury would be able to assess in considering the witness's reliability.

Mr. White would also testify regarding the potential penalties Mr. Williams would have faced if he had not been given transactional immunity. Once again, this is important and admissible testimony because the transactional agreement itself omits any discussion of Mr. Williams' potential exposure absent the immunity agreement. Without Mr. White's testimony, the jury will have difficulty understanding the nature of the benefit that Mr. Williams and his company have received. Mr. White's opinions are based on his many years of experience as a criminal defense attorney and federal prosecutor, serving as lead counsel in over 80 federal and local jury trials. Because of his experience, Mr. White is competent to testify about transactional immunity agreements, how they compare to typical plea deals and more traditional sorts of immunity agreements, and thus elucidate how the transactional immunity agreements here benefitted Mr. Williams and his company.

III. J. ALLEN KOSOWSKY

As discussed in Mr. McDonnell's Notices, Mr. Kosowsky would offer testimony as an expert and summary witness. Mr. Kosowsky would opine on the financial value of the broad transactional immunity the Government has conferred on Mr. Williams. Mr. Kosowky is fully qualified to offer such an opinion. Mr. Kosowsky is a valuation expert and has two certifications in valuation (Certified Valuation Analyst and Accredited Business Valuator). His valuation would not value the immunity agreement per se, but rather would focus on the value (or cost) of the legal exposure Mr. Williams would have absent his broad immunity agreement.

On that same point, Mr. Kosowsky would also testify about various questionable transactions involving Mr. Williams or Star Scientific:

1. Star Scientific's "securities [transactions] including certain private placements and related party transactions," including those that were previously the subject of an investigation conducted by the United States Attorney's Office for the Eastern District of Virginia, as set forth in Star Scientific's March 18, 2013 Form 10-K filing with the Securities and Exchange Commission;
2. Mr. Williams' improper self-dealing regarding Star Scientific and other entities;
3. Mr. Williams' transactions involving an irrevocable trust or trusts, including his receipt and movement of assets through that trust or trusts, over which he improperly exercised control and access; and
4. Any other improper financial transactions or other questionable activity involving trusts or other entities that Mr. Williams established or over which he exercised control or access.

This testimony would relate to the financial benefits conferred on Mr. Williams and Star Scientific by virtue of the Government's immunity deal with Mr. Williams and would assist the jury in evaluating the credibility of Mr. Williams and other witnesses affiliated with him or with Star Scientific and other entities that Mr. Williams in whole or in part established, owned, controlled, or received benefits from. Mr. Kosowsky's opinions on these matters would be based on an examination of financial, tax, and trust-related records produced by the Government in discovery relating to Mr. Williams and others, as well as Star Scientific's publicly available financial information.

Mr. Kosowsky would also provide the jury with a general overview and explanation of how mortgage applications are processed and handled by banking institutions. He would help the jury understand the broader context of these interactions so that it could better evaluate the evidence concerning the Government's mortgage fraud charges. Mr. Kosowsky is fully qualified to offer an explanation and opinion about this process because he has extensive experience with loan applications, in his institutional role with various banking institutions, as a CPA who assists clients with loan application preparation, and as a Personal Financial Specialist.

IV. NORMAN A. THOMAS

As discussed in Mr. McDonnell's Notices, Mr. Thomas would testify about the Statement of Economic Interests ("SOEI"), a standardized form that Virginia public officials, employees, and certain political candidates must file annually. He would provide context and background for that form, and explain that the statute requiring that the SOEI be completed forbids a knowing violation of its terms, that is, "one in which the person engages in conduct, performs an act or refuses to perform an act when he knows that the conduct is prohibited or required by this chapter."[1] Such a violation can result in, at most, a Class 1 misdemeanor, which is a lesser crime than a felony. Thus, an official who prepares his SOEI using an unconventional or even arguably unreasonable interpretation of its instructions or terms does not violate the Act, unless he specifically knows that his actions contradict the instructions or terms. Mr. Thomas would explain that, to his knowledge, only two elected Virginia officials have ever been prosecuted for violating the requirements of the SOEI. Neither was convicted.[2] In any other instances, elected officials' potential or actual errors in relation to their SOEIs did not result in a known reported prosecution.

---

[1] Va. Code Section 2.2-3120.

Mr. Thomas would explain that the SOEI contains numerous sections and schedules, which officials need only fill out if their situation so requires. Those sections and schedules are as follows. Mr. Thomas would focus his testimony on Schedules B, C, and E of the SOEI. The General Assembly has amended the SOEI on numerous occasions.[3] However, from January 2011 to January 2014—the span during which Mr. McDonnell filed his SOEIs as Governor for years 2010 to 2013—the wording of Schedules B, C, D, and E, and the legislatively defined terms applicable to them, remained the same.[4]

SOEI Contents
Section	Description
Personal information	Requests the official's name, office held or sought, address, immediate family members' names.
Definitions and Explanatory Material	Defines terms used in the SOEI and gives reporting instructions.

---

[2] See RICHMOND TIMES-DISPATCH ("RTD"), Councilwoman Found not Guilty of Perjury Count; Hampton Trial Lasts Less than an Hour, July 22, 1997 (charges thrown out against Richmond city councilwoman charged with felony perjury for failure to report loans to husband on SOEI); RTD, Procedural Problem Ends McDaniel Case, July 13, 1990 (charges against Richmond city councilwoman, including count of failure to disclose loan on SOEI, dismissed on statute-of-limitations grounds).

[3] See 1988 Va. Acts ch. 849; 1994 Va. Acts chs. 724, 733, 777, 793; 1995 Va. Acts ch. 763; 1996 Va. Acts ch. 77; 1997 Va. Acts chs. 577, 844; 1998 Va. Acts ch. 732; 2001 Va. Acts ch. 844; 2006 Va. Acts chs. 310, 779, 787, 892; 2008 Va. Acts ch. 239; 2010 Va. Acts ch. 670; 2012 Va. Acts ch. 429; 2014 Va. Acts Ch. 792.

[4] See 2010 Va. Acts ch. 670; 2012 Va. Acts ch. 429. Accordingly, for the Schedules discussed below, the wording of the SOEI as it appears in 2012 Va. Acts ch. 429 is used.

Questionnaire of items 1 through 10	Asks the official a series of questions, each of which, if answered affirmatively, requires a particular Schedule to be completed.
Schedule A	Offices and directorships.
Schedule B	Personal liabilities.
Schedule C	Securities.
Schedule D	Payments for talks, meetings, and publications.
Schedule E	Gifts.
Schedule F	Business interests.
Schedule G-1	Payments for representation by you.
Schedule G-2	Payments for representation by associates.
Schedule G-3	Payments for services generally.
Schedule H-1	Real estate—state officers and employees.
Schedule H-2	Real estate—local officers and employees.
Schedule I	Real estate contracts with governmental agencies.

Mr. Thomas would opine, on the basis of his experience as Assistant Attorney General and as Opinions Counsel in the Office of the Attorney General, that various public officials approach the SOEI very differently. He would explain that he fielded a significant number of calls from public officials requesting verbal legal advice as to the proper preparing of their SOEI forms. He also had occasion to review portions of the draft SOEI forms of various public officials, which deviated tremendously from one another in their level of detail and their choices of what gifts and business interests to disclose or not disclose. On the basis of this deep experience, his knowledge of the legislative history of the SOEI, and his own experience with the SOEI form, Mr. Thomas would explain that the form is complex and vague, given the lack of clarity in the law and the different interpretations given to the SOEI by public officials.

Finally, Mr. Thomas would act as both a summary and expert witness concerning the SOEIs Mr. McDonnell filed during his time as Governor. He would examine Mr. McDonnell's SOEIs as filed, his SOEI drafts, the gift logs and other documentation relevant to the preparation of the SOEIs, and various other documentation related to gifts and loans received by Mr. McDonnell and his family. He would summarize this information to the jury, providing the factual context for items that the Government will suggest were improperly omitted (or structured to avoid reporting). Mr. Thomas would also offer his opinion that the SOEI forms filed by Mr. McDonnell from 2010 to 2013 evidence a reasonable understanding of which items were required to be disclosed. He would opine that each item related to Jonnie Williams or Star Scientific, Inc., as well as items related to other persons and companies, had an appropriate basis for disclosure or non-disclosure.

Dated: August 28, 2014

Respectfully submitted,

/s/ Jonathan A. Berry
Henry W Asbill (pro hac vice)
Ryan D. Newman (pro hac vice)
James M. Burnham (pro hac vice)
Jonathan A. Berry (VSB No. 81864)
JONES DAY
51 Louisiana Avenue, N.W
Washington, DC 20001
Telephone: (202) 879-3939
Facsimile: (202) 626-1700

John L. Brownlee (VSB No. 37358)
Daniel I. Small (pro hac vice)
Timothy J. Taylor (VSB No. 84529)
Christopher M. Iaquinto (pro hac vice)
HOLLAND & KNIGHT LLP
800 17th Street, N.W., Suite 1100
Washington, DC 20006
Telephone: (202) 828-1854
Facsimile: (202) 955-5564

Counsel for Robert F. McDonnell

CERTIFICATE OF SERVICE

I, Jonathan A. Berry, am a member of the Bar of this Court. I hereby certify that on this 28th day of August, 2014, I caused the foregoing to be electronically filed with the Clerk of Court using the CM/ECF system, causing it to be served on all registered users.

Dated: August 28, 2014

Respectfully submitted,

/s/ Jonathan A. Berry

Jonathan A. Berry (VSB No. 81864)
JONES DAY
51 Louisiana Avenue, N.W
Washington, D.C. 20001
Telephone: (202) 879-3939
Facsimile: (202) 626-1700
Email: jberry@jonesday.com

Counsel for Robert F McDonnell

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
FOR THE EASTERN DISTRICT OF VIRGINIA
RICHMOND DIVISION

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,	)
	)
v.	)	CRIMINAL NO. 3:14-CR-00012
	)
ROBERT F. MCDONNELL	)	JUDGE JAMES R. SPENCER
MAUREEN G. MCDONNELL	)

MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT OF DEFENDANT ROBERT F. MCDONNELL'S MOTION # 39 – RENEWED MOTION FOR JUDGMENT OF ACQUITTAL PURSUANT TO RULE 29(C) OF THE FEDERAL RULES OF CRIMINAL PROCEDURE

INTRODUCTION

Despite testimony from close to 70 witnesses, including Robert McDonnell himself and key members of the former Governor's cabinet and his closest staff, as well as many dozens of exhibits, the Government failed to show that Mr. McDonnell performed or promised to perform any "official act" for Jonnie Williams, as required to prove Counts 1-11. No reasonable juror could conclude from this record that the accused promised to exercise (or influence others to exercise) any governmental power to benefit Mr. Williams. The most the Government established, granting it the benefit of all reasonable inferences, is that Mr. McDonnell facilitated Mr. Williams' access to certain government decision-makers so that Mr. Williams could attempt to persuade them to his cause. But as the Supreme Court has made clear, "[i]ngratiation and access are not corruption." Citizens United v. Fed. Election Comm'n, 558 U.S. 310, 360 (2010). The Government likewise failed to produce any evidence that Mr. McDonnell promised to engage in specific official acts or a specific course of official acts in exchange for payments. Instead, at best, it showed that Mr. Williams believed he had secured a promise to engage in unspecified future acts in exchange for gifts and loans. Under United States v. Jennings, 160 F.3d 1006 (4th Cir. 1998), however, that is insufficient to support a conviction. For these reasons, Mr. McDonnell is entitled to a judgment of acquittal on Counts 1-11 of the Indictment. In the alternative, the Court should grant Mr. McDonnell a new trial on the ground that the evidence "weighs heavily against the verdict." United States v. Campbell, 977 F.2d 854, 860 (4th Cir. 1992).[1] [1] Mr. McDonnell's companion motion for a new trial, identifying various legal errors that deprived Mr. McDonnell of a fair trial, is being filed contemporaneously with this Rule 29(c) motion.

---

The Government also failed to prove federal jurisdiction for Counts 5-11, which allege that Mr. McDonnell conspired to commit, and did commit, extortion in violation of the Hobbs Act, 18 U.S.C. § 1951. The Hobbs Act criminalizes extortion that "obstructs, delays, or affects commerce or the movement of any article or commodity in commerce." 18 U.S.C. § 1951(a). "The charge that interstate commerce is affected is critical since the federal government's jurisdiction of this crime rests only on that interference." United States v. Bengali, 11 F.3d 1207, 1211 (4th Cir. 1993). Although jurisdiction may be shown by establishing a "realistic probability" of an effect on commerce from the "extortionate transaction" rather than demonstrating an actual effect, United States v. Spagnolo, 546 F.2d 1117, 1119 & n.6 (4th Cir. 1976), the Government must still make its proof of probability. It cannot merely rely on the intent of the conspirators, see United States v. Staszcuk, 517 F.2d 53, 60 (7th Cir. 1975), nor can it leave the jury to "resort[] to excessively strained inferences or guesswork," United States v. Peterson, 236 F.3d 848, 855 (7th Cir. 2001). Here, the Government has introduced only the most speculative evidence that any of the acts Mr. McDonnell allegedly agreed to perform would have had an effect on interstate commerce. For this additional reason, Mr. McDonnell is entitled to a judgment of acquittal on Counts 5-11; or, in the alternative, a new trial.

ARGUMENT

The standard governing a Rule 29 motion for a judgment of acquittal is "whether there is substantial evidence (direct or circumstantial) which, taken in the light most favorable to the prosecution, would warrant a jury finding that defendant was guilty beyond a reasonable doubt." United States v. Jaensch, 678 F Supp. 2d 421, 426 (E.D. Va. 2010), aff'd, 665 F.3d 83 (4th Cir. 2011). "Substantial evidence" does not mean "any evidence." Rather, it means "evidence that a reasonable finder of fact could accept as adequate and sufficient to support a conclusion of a defendant's guilt beyond a reasonable doubt." United States v. Burgos, 94 F.3d 849, 862 (4th Cir. 1996) (emphasis added) (internal quotation marks omitted). See also, e.g., United States v. Grubbs, 506 F.3d 434, 439 (6th Cir. 2007) (defining "substantial evidence" as "more than a scintilla. It means such relevant evidence as a reasonable mind might accept to support a conclusion. It is evidence affording a substantial basis of fact from which the fact in issue can be reasonably inferred." (internal quotation marks omitted)).

If the Court finds that the evidence is sufficient to withstand a Rule 29 challenge, Mr. McDonnell asks in the alternative for a new trial. When a defendant attacks the weight of the evidence in a motion for a new trial, the court's authority is broader than when it is deciding a motion for acquittal. See Campbell, 977 F.2d at 860. The district court need not view the evidence in the light most favorable to the prosecution, and it may evaluate the credibility of witnesses. See id. "When the evidence weighs so heavily against the verdict that it would be unjust to enter judgment, the court should grant a new trial." Id. (quoting United States v. Arrington, 757 F.2d 1484, 1485 (4th Cir. 1985)).

Here, the evidence was not sufficient to allow a reasonable jury to conclude beyond a reasonable doubt that Mr. McDonnell committed any of the crimes of which he was convicted. At a minimum, the evidence weighs so heavily against the verdict that it would be unjust to enter judgment against Mr. McDonnell.

I. MR. MCDONNELL IS ENTITLED TO A JUDGMENT OF ACQUITTAL ON COUNTS 1-11 BECAUSE HE DID NOT PERFORM OR PROMISE TO PERFORM ANY SPECIFIC "OFFICIAL ACTS" TO BENEFIT MR. WILLIAMS.

A. Granting Access To Government Officials Is Not An "Official Act."

In order to prove both the honest services fraud charges (Counts 1-4) and the Hobbs Act charges (Counts 5-11), including the corresponding conspiracy charges, the Government must establish that Mr. McDonnell agreed (or conspired) to perform "official acts" in exchange for receiving things of value from Mr. Williams. See Mem. in Support of Def. Robert F McDonnell's Mot. to Dismiss Counts 1-11 of the Indictment, Dkt. 106 ("Motion to Dismiss"), at 7-13. Not everything a public official does, however, is an "official act" that can constitute a quo in an illegal quid pro quo bribery scheme. As the Supreme Court taught in United States v. Sun-Diamond Growers, 526 U.S. 398, 407 (1999), some "actions [taken by government officials]—while they are assuredly 'official acts' in some sense—are not 'official acts' within the meaning of" federal anti-bribery laws. Thus, while "receiving [] sports teams at the White House, visiting [a] high school, and speaking to [] farmers about USDA policy" are actions that may be undertaken by a public official in the course of his duties, they are not "official acts." Id. Instead, the Government must prove that Mr. McDonnell promised to himself exercise, or pressure another government official to exercise, the regulatory powers of the Commonwealth.

Indeed, this Court acknowledged as much in holding that the question for the jury is whether Mr. McDonnell's "conduct in fact constituted 'the corruption of official positions through misuse of influence in governmental decision-making.'" May 5, 2014 Order, Dkt. No. 175, at 2 (quoting United States v. Carson, 464 F.2d 424, 434 (2d Cir. 1972)). Numerous other authorities, cited by Mr. McDonnell at length throughout these proceedings, likewise establish that an "official act" constitutes the exercise of, or promise to exercise, actual governmental power—that is, a "decision or action on [a] matter pending before any public official, in such official's official capacity." 18 U.S.C. § 201(a)(3). See, e.g., Motion to Dismiss at 7-19; Mem. in Support of Def. Robert F McDonnell's Mot. for J. of Acquittal, Dkt. 409 ("First Rule 29 Motion"); United States v. Urciuoli, 513 F.3d 290, 295-96 (1st Cir. 2008); Valdes v. United States, 475 F.3d 1319, 1324-25 (D.C. Cir. 2007) (en banc); United States v. Rabbitt, 583 F.2d 1014, 1028 (8th Cir. 1978); United States v. Muntain, 610 F.2d 964, 967-68 (D.C. Cir. 1979).

B. The Government Has Not Proved That Mr. McDonnell Performed Or Promised To Perform Any Specific "Official Act" Or Course Of Action To Benefit Mr. Williams.

Here, there is no evidence in the record that Mr. McDonnell did or promised to exercise actual governmental power in exchange for payments. Mr. McDonnell never asked or directed any other official to give Mr. Williams any governmental action he may have desired. Rather, even drawing every inference in favor of the Government, the most the Government has shown is that Mr. McDonnell facilitated Mr. Williams' access to certain Virginia officials by arranging or encouraging meetings or by inviting Mr. Williams and his colleagues to a luncheon and reception. But as the Supreme Court has held, "[i]ngratiation and access are not corruption." Citizens United, 558 U.S. at 360.

1. Mr. McDonnell Never Promised To Undertake A Specific "Official Act" Or A Specific Course Of "Official Acts" In Exchange For Payments.

Tellingly, Mr. Williams himself never even alleged a promise on Mr. McDonnell's part to perform a specific "official act." For example, Mr. Williams testified that, on May 2, 2011, when he met with Mrs. McDonnell at the Mansion, she allegedly told Mr. Williams that, given her "background in nutritional supplements," she could be "helpful to you with this project, with your company" and that the Governor said it was "okay for me to help you." Trial Tr. Vol. III, at 680:13-16. Mr. Williams clarified that Mrs. McDonnell did not promise that the Governor was going to help and that she never told him at this meeting that the Governor would "do X, Y or Z if you give us the money." Id. at 680:25-681:6. Mr. Williams next testified about a June 16, 2011 letter to Mr. McDonnell that he routed through Mrs. McDonnell's chief of staff, Mary Shea Sutherland. See GX-161. According to Mr. Williams, the purpose of the letter was to suggest that Mr. McDonnell initiate a "Virginia Study" of Anatabloc at Virginia public medical schools, which Mr. Williams had previously discussed with Mr. McDonnell on a flight to California in October 2010. Tr. Vol. IV, at 703:17-705:11. Although Mr. Williams asked Mr. McDonnell in the letter to have a staff member contact him, Mr. Williams testified that he never got any response. Id. at 705:12-18. And Mr. Williams never followed up on the letter with Mr. McDonnell. Mr. Williams also related a conversation with Mr. McDonnell about obtaining a research grant from the Tobacco Commission and stated that Mr. McDonnell thought it was a "good idea." Id. at 709:21-24. But, again, Mr. Williams confirmed that Mr. McDonnell never said that he would "get that done." Id. at 709:25-710:3. The closest Mr. Williams came to alleging a promise is when Mr. McDonnell allegedly told Mr. Williams in February 2012—almost a year into the supposed conspiracy—that he was "following up with the situation over at UVA." Tr. Vol. IV, at 775:5-6.

But even if Mr. McDonnell had promised Mr. Williams that he would help obtain studies for Star Scientific, that does not prove that Mr. McDonnell promised to perform specific official acts or a specific course of official action in exchange for things of value. As the Fourth Circuit explained in Jennings, it is legal error to allow a bribery conviction on the theory that money was paid to a government official merely "to influence [that official] 'in connection with' or 'in reference to' [government] business." 160 F.3d at 1022. Rather, quid pro quo corruption must involve "money in exchange for some specific official act or course of action." Id. at 1022. Here, however, there is no evidence—not from Mr. Williams or anyone else—that Mr. McDonnell ever promised to perform any specific official act or specific course of official actions for the benefit of Mr. Williams or his company. Indeed, on direct examination, Mr. Williams repeatedly refused to identify any specific official act or course of action that Mr. McDonnell allegedly promised to perform in exchange for payments. Instead, he repeatedly testified only to his vague belief that Mr. McDonnell would provide unspecified "help" at some indeterminate point in time. See, e.g., Tr. Vol. III, at 683:8-10 ("Q: Okay. Why did you agree to loan $50,000 and give $15,000 to the Governor? A: I needed—I needed his help."); Tr. Vol. IV, at 743:10-11 ("I thought I had an understanding she was helping me, they were helping me with my company. "); id. at 770:23-771:6 ("Q: Well, why are you loaning the money? A. I'm loaning him money to help me. Q: Help you do what, sir? Let's stop beating around the bush. Why are you not wanting people to know that you're loaning the Governor money? A. It may be wrong. I think it's wrong. It could be wrong, and it could be—it could be violating laws. I don't know that, but it could be."). As Jennings makes clear, that kind of vague promise does not establish the quid pro quo required by the federal anticorruption laws.

In short, the Government's case failed at the starting gate: It put forth no evidence that Mr. McDonnell promised to engage in any specific "official act" or course of action in exchange for payments.

2. None Of The Conduct Alleged By The Government Constitutes An "Official Act."

Nor did the Government overcome this evidentiary void by pointing to specific actions that Mr. McDonnell did undertake and then asking the jury to infer from those acts that an illicit quid pro quo agreement existed. The Government argued that the August 1, 2011 meeting between Mr. Williams and Molly Huffstetler, the August 30, 2011 Mansion event, the February 17, 2012 email to Jason Eige, the February 29, 2012 Healthcare Leaders Reception, and Mr. McDonnell's March 21, 2012 meeting with Lisa Hicks-Thomas and Sarah Wilson, were all "official acts." See Tr. Vol. XXV at 5869:16-5870:17; 6039:25-6042:14. Even if the Government could prove that Mr. McDonnell promised to take these actions in exchange for payments—and as discussed above, it did not do so—none of these actions constituted an "official act" under the federal bribery laws. Instead, at best, the Government showed only that

Mr. Williams was granted access to Virginia officials on certain occasions so that Mr. Williams could make his case to other government officials. In none of the instances cited by the Government as "official acts" did Mr. McDonnell influence, or attempt to influence, any decision on a pending governmental matter.[2]

a. Meeting With Molly Huffstetler

On August 1, 2011, Mr. Williams met at the Mansion with Mrs. McDonnell and Molly Huffstetler, an official from the Health and Human Resources Department. Tr. Vol. IV, at 719:4-25. Mr. McDonnell was not present, id. at 720:1-2, and did not initiate the meeting between his wife and Mr. Williams. But he did ask Secretary Hazel to have a member of his staff at the meeting, Tr. Vol. VII, at 1491.16-24. According to Ms. Huffstetler, she understood that Mr. McDonnell asked "nothing more" than that she attend the meeting. Id. at 1492:14-1493:8; see also id. at 1522:2-8. During the meeting, Mr. Williams explained the testing that had been done on Anatabloc to date and discussed his hope to test Anatabloc on volunteer state employees. Tr. Vol. IV, at 720:3-23; Tr. Vol. VII, at 1495:16-22. Mr. Williams also claimed he had talked with the Governor about obtaining research funding from the Tobacco Commission. Tr. Vol. IV, at 720:24-721:3. According to Ms. Huffstetler, Mr. Williams said nothing that she construed to be an "ask." Tr. Vol. VII, at 1524:6-9. After the meeting, Ms. Huffstetler, responded with a polite "blow-off" email. Id. at 1507:8-22; id. at 1517:22-1518:2 (characterizing the email as saying "'No' with a smile"). Ms. Huffstetler testified that, at the time she wrote this email, she understood that nothing further was required of her and that she received no further direction from Mr. McDonnell, Mrs. McDonnell, or Secretary Hazel. Id. at 1507:16-1508:4. And in fact, she took no further action in response to the meeting—a decision that she was empowered to make, and did make, on her own. Id. at 1517:1-21; id. at 1520:1-8. Importantly, Ms. Huffstetler related that she did not perceive any pressure on her from Mr. McDonnell (or from Mrs. McDonnell) to do anything other than attend the meeting. Id. at 1524:10-14. Consequently, Mr. McDonnell did nothing with respect to this meeting that constituted an "official act." See United States v. Loftus, 992 F.2d 793, 796 (8th Cir. 1993) (explaining the result in Rabbitt where the Eighth Circuit reversed a Hobbs Act conviction because the official "promised only to introduce the [gift-paying] firm to influential persons" and "did not promise to use his official position to influence those persons").

---

[2] Mr. Williams' November 4, 2010 meeting with Secretary Hazel and Mr. McDonnell's brief February 3, 2011 appearance at a CigRx event pre-date the charged conduct, which began in April 2011. But neither event is a legally cognizable official act, regardless. See Tr. Vol. IX, at 2188:20-2189:1 (testimony of Secretary Hazel that "I missed the punch line of the meeting because I never got the ask at that point"); Tr. Vol. V, at 1088:13-15 (testimony of Jonnie Williams affirming that Mr. McDonnell's attendance at CigRx event consisted of "canned remarks that are supportive of Virginia business, et cetera, spend[ing] a few minutes and mak[ing] some nice comments about [the witness's] company").

b. Mansion Event

On August 30, 2011, the same day Star Scientific launched Anatabloc, a luncheon was held at the Mansion for doctors from Johns Hopkins University, the University of Virginia ("UVA"), Virginia Commonwealth University ("VCU"), the Roskamp Institute, and Richmond generally. Tr. Vol. IV, at 727:18-728:21. The Governor (belatedly) and Mrs. McDonnell also attended. Id. Mr. Williams wanted the Governor present "[b]ecause it sends a signal to those medical schools that this is important." Id. at 729:13-18. He thought it would give his product "credibility." Id.; id. at 734:6-19; see also Tr. Vol. X, at 2374:2-6 (Perito explaining "halo" effect). During the luncheon, Mr. Williams presented a portion of $200,000 in grants to university researchers as seed money to prepare research proposals for submission to the Tobacco Commission. Tr. Vol. IV, at 733:3-734:5. Mr. McDonnell arrived toward the end of the lunch and asked a series of questions about what it would take to show the efficacy of Anatabloc. Id. at 732:2-20; see also Tr. Vol. VIII, at 1793:11-1795:9 (Dr. Lazo testifying that Mr. McDonnell asked whether "there was some scientific validity" to the pre-clinical studies, whether "there was any reason to explore this further," and whether this could be "something good for the Commonwealth" and that "the Governor's position was more of an interrogative type ... of questioning"). Although Mr. Williams characterized Mr. McDonnell's remarks as "generally supportive," Tr. Vol. IV, at 732:24-733:2, he did not testify that Mr. McDonnell asked or directed the UVA and VCU doctors in attendance to submit any application on behalf of Star Scientific to the Tobacco Commission for funding to research Anatabloc.

In fact, Paul Perito, Star Scientific's president who also attended the Mansion event, testified that, in response to Mr. Williams' comment that he hoped the Governor would support an application to the Tobacco Commission, Mr. McDonnell made clear to the attendees that he had "limited decision-making power" with respect to the Tobacco Commission. Tr. Vol. X, at 2376:5-22. There was no testimony that Mr. McDonnell publicly announced his support of an application to the Tobacco Commission for funding of Anatabloc research. Nor was there any testimony that Mr. McDonnell pressured the UVA and VCU doctors to study Anatabloc. See Tr. Vol. VIII, at 1810:3-12 (Dr. Lazo affirming that Mr. McDonnell did not "come up to you and grab your arm, pull you to the corner, and say, 'Listen, I really want you to go research this stuff'"). The Mansion event, therefore, was not an "official act" under the bribery laws. See Loftus, 992 F.2d at 796; Urciuoli, 513 F.3d at 295-96 (rejecting the Government's position that "trad[ing] ... on the reputation, network and influence that comes with political office" or using the "access and attention" that comes with a government title, or even the "(possibly improper) use of senate letterhead" were—standing alone—improper); Muntain, 610 F.2d at 967-68 (rejecting the Government's position that "any acts within the range of an official's public duties" are "official acts," including labor-relations official's meetings "to discuss matters of interest to the unions," and concluding that the defendant's "use of his official position to promote a purely private venture created an appearance of impropriety, but it is not criminal").

c. Email To Jasen Eige

On February 17, 2012, days after receiving an email from Mrs. McDonnell about UVA and VCU not returning calls from Mr. Williams, see Tr. Vol. VII, at 1661:1-25, Jasen Eige, the Governor's counsel and policy advisor, received an email from Mr. McDonnell that said, "Please see me about Anatabloc issues at VCU and UVA," id. at 1665:25-1666:10. Mr. Eige responded, "Will do. We need to be careful with this issue." Id. at 1666:11-12. Mr. Eige testified that Mr. McDonnell's inquiry did not change his view that the Governor should not participate in resolving a dispute between Mr. Williams and officials at UVA and VCU. Id. at 1666:13-1667:16. At around the same time, Mr. Eige called Jerry Kilgore, Mr. Williams' lobbyist, to "change the expectations of his client" so as to "shut [Mr. Williams'] request down." Id. at 1664:23-1665:4; id. at 1668:3-6; see also Tr. Vol. XI, at 2825:3-5 (Kilgore testifying that he "certainly passed it back to [Star and Mr. Williams] that Jasen isn't confident that the Governor should weigh in here"). And Mr. Eige related that Mr. McDonnell "never followed back up with me or never pushed back or never directed me to actually go forward and try to make something happen with the universities." Tr. Vol. VII, at 1668:13-16. Again, therefore, there was no "official action" on the part of Mr. McDonnell. See United States v. Ring, 706 F.3d 460, 470 (D.C. Cir. 2013) (distinguishing between "act[ing] in [an] official capacity to influence the visa application process" (an official act because it sought to improperly influence a governmental decision) and "making a purely informational inquiry" (an official act in some sense but not one that sought to influence governmental action)).

d. Healthcare Leaders Reception

On February 29, 2012, Mr. Williams attended an annual healthcare leaders reception at the Mansion. Tr. Vol. IV, at 761:5-8, 783:3-5. Mr. Williams testified that Mrs. McDonnell asked him to identify healthcare leaders that he wanted to invite to the event. Id. at 761:10-12; see also id. at 783:6-784:10. Mr. Williams did so, naming Virginia physicians, doctors from Johns Hopkins, and Star Scientific employees. Id. at 761.13-20. He viewed the event as an opportunity to mingle with doctors and introduce them to Anatabloc in the hope that they would eventually recommend it to their patients. Id. at 761:22-762:10; see also id. at 763:15-18 (Mr. Williams explaining the "credibility" that comes with "presenting your product to someone" "in front of the showcase of the Governor's Mansion"). During the reception, Mr. Williams asked Mrs. McDonnell if she would have Mr. McDonnell publicly recognize Dr. Paul Ladenson, the head of endocrinology at Johns Hopkins who was also a paid consultant to Star Scientific. Id. at 785:13-23. Mr. McDonnell did so. Id. at 785:13-15; see also id. at 787:2-10 (Mr. Williams testifying that Mr. McDonnell's announcement of Dr. Ladenson drew attention to Dr. Ladenson as a representative of Star Scientific). But there is no testimony that Mr. McDonnell even mentioned Star Scientific or Anatabloc, much less that he influenced or pressured any of the doctors in attendance to study or use Anatabloc. See Tr. Vol. IX, at 2121:11-16 (Ms. Scarbrough testifying that, in introducing Dr. Ladenson, Mr. McDonnell did not tell the attendees to speak to him about Anatabloc or identify him as an associate of Mr. Williams); id. at 2165:1-4 (Dr. Crantz testifying that Mr. McDonnell introduced Dr. Ladenson as a healthcare leader from Johns Hopkins University). Mr. McDonnell, therefore, never performed or promised to perform an "official act." See Loftus, 992 F.2d at 796; Urciuoli, 513 F.3d at 295-96; Muntain, 610 F.2d at 967-68.

e. Meeting With Lisa Hicks-Thomas And Sarah Wilson

On March 21, 2012, Mr. McDonnell had a meeting on healthcare policy with Lisa Hicks-Thomas, Sara Wilson, and Martin Kent. Tr. Vol. XI, at 2654:17-2655:18; id. at 2675:17-2676:3. Ms. Wilson said that, at the end of the meeting, Mr. McDonnell pulled out a bottle of Anatabloc and "talked about how much it had helped him and his wife." Id. at 2657:2-10; see also id. at 2676:13-20. Ms. Hicks-Thomas recalled that Mr. McDonnell said that Anatabloc was "working well for him, and that he thought it would be good for state employees, and then he asked us if we would meet with them"—that is, with representatives of Anatabloc. Id. at 2676:15-20. These two staffers disagreed about whether Mr. McDonnell in fact suggested they meet with Star, and neither Ms. Hicks-Thomas nor Ms. Wilson followed up on Mr. McDonnell's request. Moreover, Mr. McDonnell never contacted either staffer about the issue after they left his office. Id. at 2679:23-2680:3; id. at 2668:17-2669:17. At most, the evidence shows that Mr. McDonnell asked Ms. Hicks-Thomas and Ms. Wilson to meet with Star Scientific representatives. There is no evidence that he directed them to take any particular action or make any particular decision on any pending matter. Once again, therefore, there is no evidence that Mr. McDonnell promised to undertake an "official action." See Loftus, 992 F.2d at 796; Urciuoli, 513 F.3d at 295-96; Muntain, 610 F.2d at 967-68.

3. The Government's Arguments For Why The Foregoing Conduct Constitutes "Official Acts" Under The Bribery Laws Are Wrong.

The Government nevertheless has advanced two arguments for why, in its view, Mr. McDonnell engaged in "official action" under the federal bribery laws. Both are wrong.

First, the Government contended that Mr. McDonnell promised to help Mr. Williams obtain research studies from the University of Virginia ("UVA") and Virginia Commonwealth University ("VCU") and funding from the Virginia Tobacco Commission. See, e.g., Tr. Vol.

XXV, at 5824:19-21, 5849:18-21. There is, of course, no evidence of any such promise, as discussed above. But regardless, such a promise to "help" would not, itself, rise to the level of an "official act." Instead, the Government must prove that the "help" that Mr. McDonnell offered itself constituted an "official act."

The record testimony regarding former Attorney General Kenneth Cuccinelli is illustrative. In particular, the evidence shows that Mr. Cuccinelli received gifts from Mr. Williams and also introduced him to influential lobbyist Jerry Kilgore, whose brother is the chairman of the Tobacco Commission. Tr. Vol. XII, at 2848:3-8, 2835:18-2836:9. Arguably, then, Mr. Cuccinelli agreed to "help" Mr. Williams in obtaining Tobacco Commission funding in exchange for gifts. But no one would claim that this was a crime, because introducing someone to a lobbyist does not constitute "official action." Consequently, any promise by Mr. Cuccinelli to "help" Mr. Williams get Tobacco Commission funding would not be an "official act," because the form that the help took did not, itself, constitute an "official act."

The same is true here. Even if Mr. McDonnell had promised to help Mr. Williams get studies from Virginia universities or funding from the Tobacco Commission—and he did not—such a vague promise would not constitute a promise to engage in specific "official action" because none of the "help" that Mr. McDonnell allegedly offered constituted an exercise of actual governmental power. Rather, at most, Mr. McDonnell gave Mr. Williams access to other government officials so that Mr. Williams could plead his case. That kind of access, however, has never been understood to constitute "official action" under the federal bribery laws.

Second, the Government also argued that Mr. McDonnell somehow performed "official acts" merely by providing Mr. Williams and Star Scientific with "credibility." See, e.g., Tr. Vol. XXV, at 5843:25-5844:13. An official's conduct, however, does not become a legally cognizable official act simply because it might confer credibility or reputational benefits on others. Credibility is irrelevant to the "official act" inquiry, which turns on whether the official made a decision or took action on a matter pending before him. Providing credibility is not an official act, any more than is letting influential people have photo ops with a public official, even though it provides those individuals with credibility when they put the photos on their office walls. See Urciuoli, 513 F.3d at 295-96; Jennings, 160 F.3d at 1013 ("a goodwill gift" made "with the generalized hope or expectation of ultimate benefit on the part of the donor" is not bribery).

* * *

In short, there is no evidence that Mr. McDonnell promised to engage in specific official acts or a specific course of official action in exchange for payment. Nor do any of the actions alleged by the Government constitute "official acts" because they were not decisions or actions on matters pending before Mr. McDonnell or any other official. Arranging a meeting with a staffer, speaking at an event, making an informational inquiry with a staffer, attending a healthcare reception, and asking a staffer to meet with a constituent—without more—are not actions or decisions on a matter because they do not purport to exercise—or influence the exercise of—any of the regulatory powers of the state. Here, at most, Mr. McDonnell provided Mr. Williams with access to other government officials. But "[i]ngratiation and access are not corruption." Citizens United, 558 U.S. at 360. Regulating that conduct is the province of campaign finance laws, ethics regulations, and gift laws—none of which Mr. McDonnell has been charged with violating here. See, e.g., id. at 357 (explaining that "restrictions on direct contributions are preventative"). Accordingly, this Court should grant an acquittal on Counts 1-11. In the alternative, the Court should grant Mr. McDonnell a new trial.

C. The Honest Services Fraud Statute And Hobbs Act Are Unconstitutionally Vague.

"To satisfy due process, a penal statute [must] define the criminal offense [1] with sufficient definiteness that ordinary people can understand what conduct is prohibited and [2] in a manner that does not encourage arbitrary and discriminatory enforcement." Skilling v. United States, 561 U.S. 358, 364 (2010) (citation omitted). Here, the honest services fraud statute and Hobbs Act are unconstitutionally vague on their face; but regardless, they are unconstitutionally vague under the Government's definition of "official act."

First, these statutes are facially unconstitutional. As to the honest services fraud statute, the prohibition of "'a scheme or artifice to deprive another of the intangible right of honest services[]' is vague, and therefore violates the Due Process Clause," because it provides no definition of the right of honest services whose deprivation it prohibits. See Skilling, 561 U.S. at 415-20 (Scalia, J., dissenting). And a "statute that is unconstitutionally vague cannot be saved by judicial construction that writes in specific criteria that its text does not contain." Id. at 415-16. The Hobbs Act is similarly unconstitutionally vague in that it provides no definition for what it means to obtain property "under color of official right." See 18 U.S.C. § 1951(b)(2).

Second, even if the honest services fraud statute and Hobbs Act were facially constitutional, they are unconstitutionally vague under the Government's capacious view of the meaning of "official acts." Interpreting "official act" to dispense with proof that the official sought to exercise governmental power will leave officials guessing about the legality of standard courtesies extended by politicians to supporters, benefactors, and the general public. The Government's definition of official act would potentially criminalize any interaction with a benefactor, such as facilitating a meeting, hosting or appearing at an event, or speaking favorably about that benefactor. It would even raise questions about the legality of offering photo opportunities at fundraisers, or organizing private events wherein donors obtain special access to officials in exchange for specified contributions. All such acts potentially "promote" or "legitimize" or lend "credibility." Such an amorphous and uncertain standard fails to provide fair notice in accordance with Skilling. In addition, such a broad construction would lead to arbitrary prosecutions. If providing "access" is criminal, then prosecutorial discretion is the only thing standing between most public officials and federal indictment. The danger of arbitrary prosecution is particularly clear here, given that Mr. McDonnell's gubernatorial predecessors and his current successor engaged in similar conduct without even prompting any investigation at all. See Def.'s Mem. in Supp. of Mot. #1 (Jan. 21, 2014), Dkt. 8, at 16-17.

For these reasons as well, Mr. McDonnell is entitled to acquittal on Counts 1-11.

D. The Constitution Forbids Federal Prosecution Of State Officials For Non-Corrupt Conduct That Is Legal Under State Law.

Finally, the Government's broad legal theory criminalizes political activity of state public officials that has no impact on federal funds and is "not corruption." Citizens United, 558 U.S. at 360. Extending the federal criminal law into that core province of state self-governance violates the Tenth Amendment and the principles of federalism it embodies. The federal government is permitted to interfere with State self-governance in only limited circumstances, such as when federal funds are at stake, see 18 U.S.C. § 666—which the Government does not allege here—or when federal intervention is necessary to discharge the Government's obligation to "guarantee a Republican Fo[illegible] Government," U.S. Const. art. IV, § 4. The States are otherwise entitled to set their own rules governing the political activity of their officials. That is why the Supreme Court has warned against adopting over-broad constructions of the federal bribery laws that would improperly "involve[] the Federal Government in setting standards of disclosure and good government for local and state officials." McNally v. United States, 483 U.S. 350, 360 (1987). That is precisely what the Government is attempting to do here.

This prosecution is ultimately no different from the federal government setting fixed limits on campaign donations to state officials because, in the judgment of the federal government, unlimited campaign donations corrupt state governance. But such an intrusive prohibition would, of course, "upset[] the federal balance to a degree that renders it ... unconstitutional." United States v. Lopez, 514 U.S. 549, 580 (1995) (Kennedy, J., concurring). Accordingly, this Court should enter a judgment of acquittal on Counts 1-11.

II. MR. MCDONNELL IS ENTITLED TO A JUDGMENT OF ACQUITTAL ON COUNTS 5-11 BECAUSE THE GOVERNMENT FAILED TO ESTABLISH THE JURISDICTIONAL BASIS FOR HOBBS ACT EXTORTION.

In addition to the absence of any official act, see supra Part I, the Government's proof on the Hobbs Act counts is further deficient because there is no evidence that the alleged bribery scheme had an actual or realistically probable effect on interstate commerce. This deficiency provides a second, independent reason to enter a judgment of acquittal on Counts 5-11; or, in the alternative, to grant Mr. McDonnell a new trial.

The Hobbs Act criminalizes robbery and extortion that "obstructs, delays, or affects commerce or the movement of any article or commodity in commerce." 18 U.S.C. § 1951(a). Interference with interstate commerce is a jurisdictional element of the crime that must be proved beyond a reasonable doubt by the Government. See United States v. Tillery, 702 F.3d 170, 174 (4th Cir. 2012). Although the Act sweeps broadly, see Stirone v. United States, 361 U.S. 212, 215 (1960), courts have nevertheless established meaningful requirements of proof for the jurisdictional predicate of the Hobbs Act. In the words of the Second Circuit, a showing of an impact on commerce "is essential given that the Hobbs Act confers only limited jurisdiction on the federal courts for prosecutions of robberies or extortions," which are otherwise "quintessential state crimes." United States v. Perrotta, 313 F.3d 33, 36 (2d Cir. 2002).

Indeed, in recent years, the Supreme Court has been particularly vigilant in enforcing the constitutional limitations on Commerce Clause jurisdiction. For example, in Jones v. United States, 529 U.S. 848 (2000), the Supreme Court held that 18 U.S.C. § 844(i), which criminalizes arson of any "property used in interstate or foreign commerce," could not be used to prosecute arson of an owner-occupied residence. Id. at 850. The Court found that in light of United States v. Lopez, 514 U.S. 549 (1995), "a constitutional question would arise were we to read § 844(i) to render the traditionally local criminal conduct in which [the defendant] engaged as a matter for federal enforcement." Jones, 529 U.S. at 858 (internal quotation marks omitted). The Courts of Appeals have recognized that the rationale of Jones precludes a jurisdictional standard for the Hobbs Act "that would expand the reach of the Act to include nearly every robbery or extortion committed," Perrotta, 313 F.3d at 37 See also United States v. Marrero, 299 F.3d 653, 655 (7th Cir. 2002) (noting that "[b]efore Lopez, courts were not fussy about the jurisdictional requirement of the Hobbs Act," but stating that in light of "the Supreme Court's evident concern not to allow the concept of 'commerce' (interstate or foreign) to expand to the point at which every transaction in the American economy would be within Congress's reach we are in a new era") (citations omitted).

The Government's theory of Hobbs Act jurisdiction in this case was that if the conspiracy between Mr. Williams and the McDonnells had been more successful, Star Scientific's business would have benefited and this would have constituted an effect on interstate commerce. See Tr. Vol. XXV, at 5891:12-21 (arguing to the jury that "had the scheme actually worked out a little better than it did for Star, then the effects on their business would have been positive and would have affected interstate commerce"). The Government, by relying solely on this theory, conceded that none of the actions that the McDonnells performed had an actual effect (direct or indirect) on interstate commerce. Under Fourth Circuit law, the Government was therefore required to prove that there was a "realistic probability" of an effect on commerce from the "extortionate transaction" in order to establish Hobbs Act jurisdiction. Spagnolo, 546 F.2d at 1119 & n.6 (citing Staszcuk, 517 F.2d at 59-60). This standard, although more lenient than that applied in other circuits,[3] still requires the Government to introduce competent evidence showing what the likely, specific effect on commerce would have been.

For example, in United States v. Staszcuk—the Seventh Circuit case that first established the "realistic probability" theory of Hobbs Act jurisdiction that the Fourth Circuit subsequently adopted, see Spagnolo, 546 F.2d at 1119 & n.6—a city alderman accepted a bribe to advocate for a zoning variance so that an animal hospital could be built on a specific piece of property. The variance was granted, but the hospital was never built. The court held that the lack of an actual effect on commerce was not fatal to jurisdiction; but in doing so it relied explicitly on testimony of one of three contractors who bid on the contract that the construction project would have required the use of materials manufactured out-of-state. 517 F.2d at 60. The court further held that an "intent" to affect commerce is not enough; the probability of an effect must be shown. Id.

---

[3] The Courts of Appeals are divided on whether a "potential" effect on commerce is sufficient to support jurisdiction for a substantive Hobbs Act charge. Compare, e.g., United States v. Rivera Rangel, 396 F.3d 476, 482-83 (1st Cir. 2005) ("The Hobbs Act ... has ... been held to reach even those effects which are merely potential or subtle."), and United States v. Brantley, 777 F.2d 159, 162 (4th Cir. 1985) (holding that the "jurisdictional predicate [of the Hobbs Act] ... may be shown by proof of probabilities without evidence that any particular commercial movements were affected."), with United States v. Williams, 308 F.3d 833, 838 (8th Cir. 2002) ("the [Hobbs Act's] plain language requires an actual effect on interstate commerce, not just a probable or potential impact."), and United States v. Carcione, 272 F.3d 1297, 1301 n.5 (11th Cir. 2001) ("A substantive violation of the Hobbs Act requires an actual, de minimis affect on commerce.") (citation omitted).

Similarly, in United States v. Taylor, 966 F.2d 830 (4th Cir. 1992), and United States v. Bailey, 990 F.2d 119 (4th Cir. 1993), South Carolina legislators had accepted bribes to vote for a bill—which did not pass—that would have legalized pari-mutuel betting on horse and dog racing. The Fourth Circuit found that the Government had adequately proved Hobbs Act jurisdiction on a "realistic probability" theory only because it had introduced detailed expert testimony indicating that if the bill had passed, interstate commerce would have been affected because out-of-state tourists would have traveled to South Carolina. See Taylor, 966 F.2d at 835-36; Bailey, 990 F.2d at 126.

In other words, while it is true that in the Fourth Circuit, the "jurisdictional predicate [of the Hobbs Act] ... may be shown by proof of probabilities," United States v. Brantley, 777 F.2d 159, 162 (4th Cir. 1985), the Government must actually make its proof that there was a "realistic probability" of an effect on commerce. It is not enough "to pile inference upon inference in a manner that would bid fair to convert congressional authority under the Commerce Clause to a general police power of the sort retained by the States." Lopez, 514 U.S. at 567. Here, the Government introduced no competent evidence establishing a "realistic probability" of an effect on commerce.

To be sure, the Government elicited testimony indicating that Star Scientific has offices in several different states. Tr. Vol. X, at 2341:23-2342:15. But the mere fact that Star Scientific may have an interstate presence does not relieve the Government of its obligation to prove that there was a reasonable probability that the alleged conspiracy would have had an effect on interstate commerce. The Government introduced no evidence indicating how any action that Mr. McDonnell performed or allegedly promised to perform would have specifically impacted Star's business operations in a way that affected interstate commerce or caused any goods or funds to move in interstate commerce.

All that the record reflects is that Star Scientific officials had a vague belief that others would view Star Scientific and its products in a positive light through their association with Mr. McDonnell and his office. For example, Paul Perito, the former president of Star Scientific, testified that he believed that, from Mr. Williams' relationship with the McDonnells, "there could be a halo, I describe it as a halo effect, if the Chief Executive of the Commonwealth of the state, which is the home state of the product, embraces the worthiness of the product. It gives it a type of credibility." Tr. Vol. X, at 2347:21-25. See also id. at 2374:4-6; id. at 2354:13-21. But Mr. Perito's general expectation that Star Scientific's reputation would be enhanced through its association with the McDonnells is not equivalent to the type of concrete, particularized effect on interstate commerce that courts have looked to for Hobbs Act jurisdiction. The Government presented no testimony of the type relied on in Staszcuk, Taylor, and Bailey, for example, that specific goods would have moved in interstate commerce or that people would have traveled to engage in commerce if the alleged scheme had succeeded. Nor was there any testimony setting forth with specificity a probable causal chain between an action the McDonnells took (or supposedly agreed to take) and a financial benefit to Star.

Indeed, to the extent Star officials and advocates did testify to specific effects they anticipated the McDonnells' endorsement might have, those effects were *intra*state. Mr. Perito focused on the positive impact that an association with the McDonnells could have on the views and actions of Virginia officials, testifying that he hoped their support "might resonate with [other] state officials," as well as scientists at Virginia universities. Id. at 2379:7-14. Similarly, Jerry Kilgore believed that it was important to have studies done inside the state of Virginia because he thought that that would increase the likelihood of gaining funding from the Virginia Tobacco Commission, explaining, "I'm convinced the Commission likes to spend money on Virginia projects, not see Marylanders getting the money." Tr. Vol. XI, at 2801:24-2802:1. Mr. Kilgore testified that he eventually convinced Mr. Williams and other Star officials that "we should be focusing on UVA and VCU" rather than Johns Hopkins. Id. at 2802:6-9. As for Mr. Williams, he repeatedly confirmed that his goal was to persuade Virginia researchers to perform studies and, more generally, that the anticipated benefits of Mr. McDonnell's assistance would be *intra*state and local in nature. See Tr. Vol. IV, at 720:6-7 (testifying that he hoped Anatabloc would "lower the healthcare costs in Virginia"); id. at 729:13-19 (testifying that he wanted studies done at UVA and VCU and thought that the "credibility" gained by the Governor's support would help achieve this goal); id. at 734:10-19 ("I'm trying to have this tested in Virginia. [S]ince it was going to be done in Virginia, to have the crown of it or the 'Virginia Study' or, you know, 'This is what happened in Virginia.'"); id. at 771:15-17 ("I thought the ends justified the means for what I was trying to accomplish here in Virginia."); id. at 784:7-10 ("Q: [T]here were several doctors that you were trying to get to sell—or convince that Anatabloc was good for the local area, right? A: Yes.") (emphasis added); id. at 804:3-4 ("I expected that he would continue to help me move this product forward in Virginia"); Tr. Vol. V, at 1028:20-23 ("This was something that was important to our company and important to me to—to bring the credibility of Virginia to this discovery and this product and to have the testing done in the State of Virginia"); id. at 1085:6-10 ("I thought that because I thought I had the capability in Virginia, I was very proud of this, I thought this was an important discovery with our company and I actually thought it would lower the healthcare costs in Virginia. And I still do."); id. at 1112:25 ("Well, we wanted the studies done in Virginia. "); id. at 1123:25-1124:2

("'We propose to use Health Diagnostic Laboratory, Incorporated, a Virginia company, for some of the blood analysis to be carried out in these studies.'"); id. at 1147:9-11 ("I think we were—we were leading the way towards trying to lower the healthcare costs in Virginia."). A Virginia company's efforts to obtain studies and funding from Virginia state entities or to lower health care costs within the state do not constitute *inter*state commerce.

Rather than meet its burden of proving beyond a reasonable doubt that there was a "reasonable probability" of an effect on interstate commerce, the Government simply left it to the jury to infer such an effect. But Hobbs Act jurisdiction cannot be established through "strained inferences." Peterson, 236 F.3d at 855. "To render a guilty verdict, the jury must hear sufficient evidence [of a federal jurisdictional nexus] to avoid resorting to guesswork." Id. See also, e.g., United States v. Elders, 569 F.2d 1020, 1025 (7th Cir. 1978) ("Although the [Hobbs] Act requires only a de minimis effect on commerce, the effect still must be more than a speculative, attenuated 'one step removed' kind of effect."). The Government's proof of jurisdiction for the Hobbs Act charges was inadequate, and for this additional and independent reason, Mr. McDonnell is entitled to a judgment of acquittal or, in the alternative, a new trial on Counts 5-11.

CONCLUSION

The Court should grant Mr. McDonnell a judgment of acquittal on Counts 1-11. In the alternative, it should grant Mr. McDonnell a new trial.

Dated: September 18, 2014

Respectfully submitted,

/s/ Jonathan A. Berry

Henry W. Asbill (pro hac vice)
Mary Ellen Powers (pro hac vice)
Noel J. Francisco (pro hac vice)
Ryan D. Newman (pro hac vice)
James M. Burnham (pro hac vice)
Jonathan A. Berry (VSB No. 81864)
JONES DAY
51 Louisiana Avenue, N.W
Washington, D.C. 20001
Telephone: (202) 879-3939
Facsimile: (202) 626-1700

John L. Brownlee (VSB No. 37358)
HOLLAND & KNIGHT LLP
800 17th Street, N.W
Suite 1100
Washington, D.C. 20006
Telephone: (202) 828-1854
Facsimile: (202) 955-5564

Counsel for Robert F McDonnell

CERTIFICATE OF SERVICE

I, Jonathan A. Berry, am a member of the Bar of this Court. I hereby certify that on this 18th day of September, 2014, I caused the foregoing to be electronically filed with the Clerk of Court using the CM/ECF system, causing it to be served on all registered users.

Dated: September 18, 2014

Respectfully submitted,

/s/ Jonathan A. Berry
Jonathan A. Berry (VSB No. 81864)
JONES DAY
51 Louisiana Avenue, N.W
Washington, D.C. 20001
Telephone: (202) 879-3939
Facsimile: (202) 626-1700
Email: jberry@jonesday.com

Counsel for Robert F McDonnell

No. 15-4019

UNITED STATES COURT OF APPEALS FOR THE FOURTH CIRCUIT

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,
Plaintiff-Appellee,

v.

ROBERT F McDONNELL,
Defendant-Appellant,

On Appeal from the United States District Court for the Eastern District of Virginia, Richmond Division, James R. Spencer, District Judge

JOINT APPENDIX VOLUME II OF XII (Pages JA.804-1551)

Dana J. Boente
United States Attorney

Raymond Hulser
Acting Chief, Public Integrity Section
Criminal Division
U.S. Department of Justice

Richard D. Cooke
Ryan S. Faulconer
Michael S. Dry
Jessica D. Aber
David V Harbach, II
U.S. Attorney's Office
600 E. Main Street, Suite 1800
Richmond, VA 23219
Telephone: 804-819-5400

Counsel for the Plaintiff-Appellee The United States of America

Noel J. Francisco
Henry W Asbill
Charlotte H. Taylor
James M. Burnham
JONES DAY
51 Louisiana Avenue, N.W
Washington, DC 20001
Telephone: (202) 879-3939

John L. Brownlee
Elizabeth N. Jochum
HOLLAND & KNIGHT LLP
800 17th Street N.W
Suite 1100
Washington, DC 20006
Telephone: (202) 828-1854

Counsel for Defendant-Appellant Robert F. McDonnell

JOINT APPENDIX
TABLE OF CONTENTS
No. 15-4019

VOLUME I

I. PLEADINGS

A. United States v. Robert F. McDonnell and Maureen G. McDonnell, Criminal No. 3:14-cr-00012

Description	Page
U.S. District Court for the Eastern District of Virginia Docket Sheet, No. 3:14-cr-00012-JRS	1
Indictment (Jan. 21, 2014) (Dkt. No. 1)	81
Memorandum in Support of Defendant Robert F. McDonnell's Motion for the Production of Evidence and Other Relief to Remedy the Government's Interference in the Defense's Investigation (Feb. 13, 2014) (Dkt. No. 52)	124
Defendant Robert F. McDonnell's Motion for Bill of Particulars (Feb. 27, 2014) (Dkt. No. 80)	154
Response of the United States in Opposition to Defendants' Motions for Bill of Particulars (Mar. 10, 2014) (Dkt. No. 84)	173
Reply of Defendant Robert F. McDonnell to the Government's Opposition to Motion for Bill of Particulars (Mar. 13, 2014) (Dkt. No. 86)	189
Memorandum Order (Mar. 17, 2014) (Dkt. No. 93)	207
Memorandum Order (Mar. 19, 2014) (Dkt. No. 98)	209
Order (Mar. 20, 2014) (Dkt. No. 100)	211
Memorandum in Support of Defendant Robert F. McDonnell's Motion to Dismiss Counts 1-11 of the Indictment (Mar. 25, 2014) (Dkt. No. 106)	216
Memorandum in Support of Defendant Robert F. McDonnell's Motion for Omnibus Voir Dire Relief (Mar. 25, 2014) (Dkt. No. 110)	254
Memorandum in Support of Defendant Robert F. McDonnell's Motion to Sever Joint Trial (Mar. 25, 2014) (Dkt. No. 115)	285

Non-Confidential Memorandum in Support of Defendant Robert F McDonnell's Motion for Leave to File Supporting Declarations Under Seal and for Ex Parte in Camera Review (Mar. 25, 2014) (Dkt. No. 117) 313

Order (Apr. 1, 2014) (Dkt. No. 128) 319

Response of the United States in Opposition to Defendant Robert F McDonnell's Motion for Leave to File Supporting Declarations Under Seal and for Ex Parte in Camera Review (Apr. 2, 2014) (Dkt. No. 131) 320

Order (Apr. 7, 2014) (Dkt. No. 135) 334

Reply of Defendant Robert F McDonnell to the Government's Opposition to Motion for Leave to File Supporting Declarations Under Seal and for Ex Parte in Camera Review (Apr. 7, 2014) (Dkt. No. 136) 335

Memorandum Order (Apr. 17, 2014) (Dkt. No. 137) 350

Defendant Robert F McDonnell's Notice of Non-Filing of Declarations Pursuant to the Court's April 17, 2014 Order (Apr. 21, 2014) (Dkt. No. 140)... 353

Response of the United States in Opposition to Defendants' Motion to Sever Joint Trial (Apr. 24, 2014) (Dkt. No. 143) 359

Response of the United States to Defendants' Motions for Omnibus Voir Dire Relief (Apr. 24, 2014) (Dkt. No. 144) 381

Government's Response in Opposition to Defendants' Joint Motion to Dismiss Counts 1-11 of the Indictment (Apr. 24, 2104) (Dkt. No. 146) 389

Reply of Defendant Robert F McDonnell to the Government's Opposition to Motion to Dismiss Counts 1-11 of the Indictment (May 5, 2014) (Dkt. No. 148) 421

Reply of Defendant Robert F McDonnell to the Government's Response to Motion for Omnibus Voir Dire Relief (May 5, 2014) (Dkt. No. 151) 450

Reply of Defendant Robert F McDonnell to the Government's Opposition to Motion to Sever Joint Trial (May 5, 2014) (Dkt. No. 152) 461

Order (May 8, 2014) (Dkt. No. 157) 487

Defendant Robert F McDonnell's Notice of Filing of Declarations Pursuant to the Court's Orders (May 14, 2014) (Dkt. No. 162) 488

Order (May 20, 2014) (Dkt. No. 175) 491

Order (May 20, 2014) (Dkt. No. 176) 493

Order (May 20, 2014) (Dkt. No. 180) 495

Joint Proposed Jury Questionnaire (May 29, 2014) 497

Defendant Robert F McDonnell's Additional Proposed Juror Questionnaire Items (May 30, 2014) 536

Government's Proposed Additions to Jury Questionnaire (May 30, 2014) 551

Defendant Robert F McDonnell's Objections to Government's Proposed Additions to Juror Questionnaire (June 2, 2014) 559

Government's Objections to Defendants' Proposed Additions to Jury Questionnaire (June 2, 2014) 564

Final Jury Questionnaire (June 2014) 571

Memorandum in Support of Defendant Robert F McDonnell's Sealed Motion for Clarification (June 4, 2014) (Dkt. No. 205) 602

Sealed Order (June 4, 2014) (Dkt. No. 206) 616

Order (June 6, 2014) (Dkt. No. 217) 617

Government's Memorandum in Support of Motion to Exclude Expert Testimony (June 16, 2014) (Dkt. No. 222) 619

Memorandum in Support of Defendant Robert F McDonnell's Motion in Limine to Exclude Evidence Relating to Statements of Economic Interest (June 20, 2014) (Dkt. No. 238) 650

Robert F McDonnell's Memorandum in Opposition to the Government's Motion to Exclude Expert Testimony (June 20, 2014) (Dkt. No. 241) 663

Government's Reply in Support of Motion to Exclude Expert Testimony (June 24, 2014) (Dkt. No. 244) 696

Memorandum Opinion (June 26, 2014) (Dkt. No. 246) 716

Order (June 26, 2014) (Dkt. No. 247) 721

Response of the United States in Opposition to Defendants' Motion in Limine to Exclude Evidence Relating to Statements of Economic Interests (July 1, 2014) (Dkt. No. 252) 723

Reply of Defendant Robert F. McDonnell to the Government's Opposition to Motion in Limine to Exclude Evidence Relating to Statements of Economic Interest (July 7, 2014) (Dkt. No. 269) 735

Robert F. McDonnell's Proposed Jury Instructions (July 14, 2014) (Dkt. No. 287) (Excerpts, Nos. 37, 58, 59) 750

Memorandum Opinion (July 16, 2014) (Dkt. No. 295) 758

Order (July 16, 2014) (Dkt. No. 296) 762

Memorandum Order (July 16, 2014) (Dkt. No. 297) 764

Defendant Robert F. McDonnell's Offer of Proof Regarding Expert Testimony (Aug. 28, 2014) (Dkt. No. 468) 767

Memorandum in Support of Defendant Robert F. McDonnell's Renewed Motion for Judgment of Acquittal Pursuant to Rule 29(c) of the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure (Sept. 18, 2014) (Dkt. No. 510) 777

VOLUME II

I. PLEADINGS (CONTINUED)

Description Page

Government's Response in Opposition to Defendant Robert F. McDonnell's Renewed Motion for Judgment of Acquittal (Oct. 14, 2014) (Dkt. No. 532) 804

Defendant Robert F. McDonnell's Motion to Supplement the Record on Appeal (Oct. 23, 2014) (Dkt. No. 539) 834

Defendant Robert F. McDonnell's Reply in Support of Renewed Motion for Judgment of Acquittal Pursuant to Rule 29(c) of the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure (Oct. 24, 2014) (Dkt. No. 540) 837

Memorandum in Support of Defendant Robert F. McDonnell's Motion for New Trial Pursuant to Rule 33 of the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure (Oct. 30, 2014) (Dkt. No. 548) 860

Defendant Robert F McDonnell's Reply in Support of Motion for New Trial Pursuant to Rule 33 of the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure (Oct. 30, 2014) (Dkt. No. 549) 892

Exhibit A to Defendant Robert F McDonnell's Reply in Support of Motion for New Trial Pursuant to Rule 33 of the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure (Oct. 30, 2014) (Dkt. No. 549-1) 915

Government's Response in Opposition to Defendant Robert F McDonnell's Motion for a New Trial (Oct. 30, 2014) (Dkt. No. 553) 918

Memorandum Opinion (Dec. 1, 2014) (Dkt. No. 567) 950

Order (Dec. 1, 2014) (Dkt. No. 568) 975

Memorandum Opinion (Dec. 1, 2014) (Dkt. No. 571) 976

Order (Dec. 1, 2014) (Dkt. No. 572) 987

Memorandum in Support of Defendant Robert F McDonnell's Motion to Unseal Certain Sealed Portions of the Record (Jan. 9, 2015) (Dkt. No. 612) 988

Reply of Defendant Robert F McDonnell to the Government's Response to Motion to Unseal Certain Sealed Portions of the Record (Jan. 9, 2015) (Dkt. No. 613) 1000

Statement of Defendant Robert F McDonnell Respecting the "Opposition to Unsealing" Filed by Jonnie R. Williams, Sr. in the Closed Case In re Grand Jury Subpoenas, No. 3:14-ms-67 (Jan. 9, 2015) (Dkt. No. 614) 1008

Reply of Defendant Robert F McDonnell to the Government's Response to Motion to Supplement the Record on Appeal (Jan. 9, 2015) (Dkt. No. 616) 1015

Government's Response to Defendants' Motions to Unseal (Jan. 9, 2015) (Dkt. No. 617) 1020

Government's Response to Defendants' Motions to Supplement the Record (Jan. 9, 2015) (Dkt. No. 618) 1031

Memorandum Order (Jan. 12, 2015) (Dkt. No. 620) 1040

Robert F McDonnell Amended Judgment (Jan. 13, 2015) (Dkt. No. 627) 1045

Defendant Robert F McDonnell's Notice of Appeal (Jan. 13, 2015) (Dkt. No. 629) 1052

Defendant-Appellant's Motion for Release Pending Appeal (Jan. 14, 2015) (Dkt. No. 2-1) 1054

Exhibit E to Defendant-Appellant's Motion for Release Pending Appeal (Jan. 14, 2015) (Dkt. No. 2-6) 1078

United States' Response to Motion for Bail Pending Appeal (Jan. 21, 2015) (Dkt. No. 29-1) 1084

Defendant-Appellant's Reply on Motion for Release Pending Appeal (Jan. 25, 2015) (Dkt. No. 38-1) 1117

Exhibit D to Defendant-Appellant's Reply on Motion for Release Pending Appeal (Jan. 25, 2015) (Dkt. No. 38-2) (Excerpt, Tr. 54-60) 1136

B. In re Grand Jury Subpoenas, Action No. 3:14-ms-67

Description Page

Motion to Seal Case and Documents (Mar. 12, 2014) 1146

Memorandum in Support of Movant's Motion to Seal Case and Documents (Mar. 12, 2014) 1150

Motion to Order Return of Private Information (Mar. 12, 2014) 1156

Exhibit 1 to Motion to Order Return of Private Information (Mar. 12, 2014) 1169

Exhibit 2 to Motion to Order Return of Private Information (Mar. 12, 2014) 1177

Order (Mar. 12, 2014) 1180

Response of the United States to Jonnie R. Williams, Sr.'s Motion to Order Return of Private Information (Mar. 13, 2014) 1181

Order (Mar. 13, 2014) 1188

Request to Unseal for Limited Purpose (Mar. 14, 2014) 1189

Order (Mar. 14, 2014) 1193

Motion to Order Return of Private Information (May 19, 2014) 1194

Exhibit A to Motion to Order Return of Private Information (May 19, 2014) 1200

Exhibit B to Motion to Order Return of Private Information (May 19, 2014) 1202

Exhibit C to Motion to Order Return of Private Information (May 19, 2014) 1204

Order (June 4, 2014) 1207

Motion for Limited Unsealing & Return of Private Information (June 5, 2014) 1208

Sealed Order (June 6, 2014) 1217

Sealed Order (June 9, 2014) 1218

Motion of Robert F McDonnell to Intervene (June 11, 2014) 1219

Robert F McDonnell's Sealed Memorandum in Opposition to Jonnie Williams' Motion for Return of Private Information (June 11, 2014) 1222

Reply in Support of Returning Private Information (June 12, 2014) 1245

Motion for Partial Unsealing of the Record (June 18, 2014) 1252

Motion to Stay Order Granting Motion for Return of Private Information (June 18, 2014) 1256

Sealed Order (June 18, 2014) 1268

Sealed Order (June 18, 2014) 1271

Jonnie R. Williams Sr.'s Response Consenting to Partial Unsealing and Opposing a Stay (June 19, 2014) 1272

Response of the United States to Mr. McDonnell's Motion to Stay Order Granting Motion for Return of Private Information (June 19, 2014) 1276

Response of the United States to Mr. McDonnell's Motion for Partial Unsealing of the Record (June 19, 2014) 1278

Reply of Intervenor Robert F McDonnell to the Opposition of Jonnie R. Williams, Sr. to His Motion to Stay Order Granting Motion for Return of Private Information (June 19, 2014) 1281

Sealed Order (June 19, 2014) 1285

Notice of Appeal (June 19, 2014) 1289

II. TRANSCRIPTS

Description Page

Motions Hearing of March 18, 2014 (Dkt. No. 96) 1292

Motions Hearing of May 19, 2014 (Dkt. No. 181) 1312

Motions and Daubert Hearing of July 10, 2014 (Dkt. No. 278) 1382

Motions and Daubert Hearing of July 15, 2014 (Dkt. No. 293) 1440

VOLUME III

II. TRANSCRIPTS (CONTINUED)

Description Page

Trial Proceedings of July 28, 2014 (Vol. 1) (Dkt. No. 330) 1552

  Voir Dire 1553

Trial Proceedings of July 29, 2014 (Vol. 2) (Dkt. No. 337) 1731

  Opening Statements 1747

  Ryan Greer 1828

  Cailin McDonnell Young 1861

  Jerri Fulkerson 1932

Trial Proceedings of July 30, 2014 (Vol. 3) (Dkt. No. 345) 1976

  Jerri Fulkerson 1979

  Phil Owenby 2121

  Robert R. ("Bobby") McDonnell 2151

Mark Sykes 2186

Jonnie Ray Williams, Sr. 2197

VOLUME IV

II. TRANSCRIPTS (CONTINUED)

Description Page

Trial Proceedings of July 31, 2014 (Vol. 4) (Dkt. No. 346) 2244

Jonnie Ray Williams, Sr. 2245

Trial Proceedings of August 1, 2014 (Vol. 5) (Dkt. No. 357) 2464

Jonnie Ray Williams, Sr. 2466

Trial Proceedings of August 4, 2014 (Vol. 6) (Dkt. No. 358) 2704

Jonnie Ray Williams, Sr. 2705

Philip Cox 2854

Monica Block 2948

VOLUME V

II. TRANSCRIPTS (CONTINUED)

Description Page

Trial Proceedings of August 5, 2014 (Vol. 7) (Dkt. No. 359) 3002

Monica Block 3003

Molly Huffstetler 3037

Dr. John Clore 3089

Jasen Eige 3143

Dr. John Faessel 3251

Pamelia Watts 3265

Timothy Huff 3298

Trial Proceedings of August 6, 2014 (Vol. 8) (Dkt. No. 376) 3310
    Timothy Huff 3313
    Dr. John Lazo 3328
    Mary Shea Sutherland 3367
Trial Proceedings of August 7, 2014 (Vol. 9) (Dkt. No. 379) 3581
    Sarah Scarbrough 3583
    Patrizio Caturegli 3682
    Dr. Frank Crantz 3703
    Dr. William A. Hazel, Jr. 3731
    Alfred Walden 3768
    Todd Claiborne 3775
    Tucker Martin 3782

VOLUME VI

II. TRANSCRIPTS (CONTINUED)

Description Page

Trial Proceedings of August 8, 2014 (Vol. 10) (Dkt. No. 384) 3849
    Matthew A. Conrad 3851
    Paul Perito 3883
    John A. Piscitelli 3992
Trial Proceedings of August 11, 2014 (Vol. 11) (Dkt. No. 388) 4085
    Martin Kent 4086
    Sara Wilson 4201
    Lisa Hicks-Thomas 4223
    Michael Uncapher 4232

Sharon Krueger 4299
Jerry Kilgore 4337
Trial In-Chambers Proceedings of August 12, 2014 (Dkt. No. 547) 4382
Trial Proceedings of August 12, 2014 (Vol. 12) (Dkt. No. 398) 4400
Jerry Kilgore 4401
Emily Rabbitt 4430
George Vetrovec 4447
Amy Bridge 4486
Charles Hagan 4495
James Lyons 4565
Donnie Williams 4578
William Sessoms, Jr. 4612

VOLUME VII

II. TRANSCRIPTS (CONTINUED)

Description Page

Trial Proceedings of August 13, 2014 (Vol. 13) (Dkt. No. 405) 4649
William Sessoms 4651
Barbara Tierney 4680
Frank R. Pollack 4686
Nanette Bolt 4694
Jeffrey Creekmore 4795
George Floyd 4812
William Long, Jr. 4820
Stipulations 4828

David Hulser 4834

Trial Proceedings of August 14, 2014 (Vol. 14) (Dkt. No. 412) 4916

David Hulser 4917

Trial Proceedings of August 15, 2014 (Vol. 15) (Dkt. No. 425) 5127

Motions Argument 5128

VOLUME VIII

II. TRANSCRIPTS (CONTINUED)

Description Page

Trial Proceedings of August 18, 2014 (Vol. 16) (Dkt. No. 428) 5173

Brenda Chamberlain 5175

Janet Kelly 5223

Neal Noyes 5334

Laura Fornash 5360

Richard Brown 5370

James Cheng 5381

Trial Proceedings of August 19, 2014 (Vol. 17) (Dkt. No. 431) 5420

Maureen C. McDonnell 5421

Kathleen Scott 5602

J. Allen Kosowsky 5628

Trial Proceedings of August 20, 2014 (Vol. 18) (Dkt. No. 436) 5682

J. Allen Kosowsky 5683

Daniel Cook 5754

Todd Haymore 5789

James Burke 5812

Fr. Timothy Scully 5848
Joseph F Damico 5860
Robert F McDonnell 5870

VOLUME IX

II. TRANSCRIPTS (CONTINUED)

Description Page

Trial Proceedings of August 21, 2014 (Vol. 19) (Dkt. No. 443) 5947
Robert F McDonnell 5949
Trial Proceedings of August 22, 2014 (Vol. 20) (Dkt. No. 451) 6206
Robert F McDonnell 6207
Trial Proceedings of August 25, 2014 (Vol. 21) (Dkt. No. 457) 6426
Robert F McDonnell 6428

VOLUME X

II. TRANSCRIPTS (CONTINUED)

Description Page

Trial Proceedings of August 26, 2014 (Vol. 22) (Dkt. No. 461) 6711
Robert F McDonnell 6712
Trial Proceedings of August 27, 2014 (Vol. 23) (Dkt. No. 466) 6982
April Niamtu 6986
Jeanine McDonnell Zubowsky 7024
Emmet Flood 7074
Robert Ross 7093
Allen James Abel, Jr. 7240
Matthew Hunter 7248

Trial Proceedings of August 28, 2014 (Vol. 24) (Dkt. No. 475) 7260

Kathryn Weber 7261

Motions Argument 7300

VOLUME XI

II. TRANSCRIPTS (CONTINUED)

Description Page

Trial Proceedings of August 29, 2014 (Vol. 25) (Dkt. No. 478) 7385

Closing Arguments 7386

Trial Proceedings of September 2, 2014 (Vol. 26) (Dkt. No. 487) 7641

Jury Instructions 7644

Trial Proceedings of September 3, 2014 (Vol. 27) (Dkt. No. 492) 7705

Deliberations 7706

Trial Proceedings of September 4, 2014 (Vol. 28) (Dkt. No. 498) 7708

Deliberations and Verdict 7709

Sentencing Proceedings of January 6, 2015 (Dkt. No. 604) 7718

Gary Nelson 7745

William Horan 7751

Monsignor Timothy Keeney 7766

William Howell 7775

Clovia Lawrence 7783

Michel Zajur 7791

Nancy Naisawald 7796

Terrie Suit 7807

Albert Poole 7822

Janet Kelly 7826

L. Douglas Wilder 7832

Attorney Argument 7846

III. EXHIBITS

Description Page

GX5: Blank Statement of Economic Interest Form 7899

GX134: Email from Robert F McDonnell to Jonnie Williams, Sr. (May 28, 2011) 7917

GX530: Letter from Dana Boente to Richard Culien, Esq. and Reid H. Weingarten, Esq. (May 30, 2014) 7918

GX627: Emails between Emily Rabbitt and Adam Zubowsky (Jan. 4, 2013) 7921

RM-0014: Letter from Mary-Shea Sutherland to Jonnie Williams (Jan. 20, 2012) 7923

VOLUME XII
SEALED APPENDIX

IV SEALED DOCUMENTS

Description Page

Declaration #1 of William A. Burck (filed ex parte and under seal) (May 14, 2014) 7926

IN THE UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
FOR THE EASTERN DISTRICT OF VIRGINIA

Richmond Division

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA)
)
v.)
) No. 3:14cr12
ROBERT F. MCDONNELL and)
MAUREEN G. MCDONNELL,)
Defendants.)

GOVERNMENT'S RESPONSE IN OPPOSITION TO DEFENDANT ROBERT F. MCDONNELL'S RENEWED MOTION FOR JUDGMENT OF ACQUITTAL

The United States of America, by undersigned counsel, respectfully files this response in opposition to defendant Robert F. McDonnell's renewed motion for judgment of acquittal pursuant to Fed. R. Crim. P. 29(c). See Doc. No. 509. In that motion and accompanying memorandum in support, Doc. No. 510 ("Def. Mem."), Mr. McDonnell asks this Court to set aside the jury's unanimous verdict finding him guilty on all eleven corruption charges in this case and enter a judgment of acquittal as a matter of law—or alternatively, to exercise its discretion to order a new trial. In support of that request, Mr. McDonnell essentially offers two arguments this Court has already rejected, namely that the United States did not adduce sufficient evidence of (i) the "official action" component of the quid pro quo required for the corruption charges in this case; and (ii) an actual or potential effect on interstate commerce as required by Counts 5–11, which charged violations of conspiracy to commit and substantive extortion under color of official right under the Hobbs Act. But for the reasons discussed below, the jury was properly and thoroughly instructed on both of these issues, and there was ample evidence to support the jury's conclusion that the defendants engaged in a quid pro quo with Jonnie Williams and that their scheme had an actual or potential effect on interstate commerce. As such, Mr. McDonnell's motion is meritless and should be denied.

I. Applicable Legal Standard

Where, as here, a defendant moves pursuant to Rule 29(c) for a court to set aside a unanimous verdict and enter a judgment of acquittal as a matter of law based on an alleged insufficiency of the evidence, a defendant "faces a heavy burden." United States v. Foster, 507 F.3d 233, 245 (4th Cir. 2007). More specifically, in ruling on such a motion, a court must "view the evidence in the light most favorable to the prosecution[] and inquire whether a rational trier of fact could have found the essential elements of the charged offense beyond a reasonable doubt." United States v. Singh, 518 F.3d 236, 246 (4th Cir. 2008). In conducting this inquiry, a court must "consider both circumstantial and direct evidence," and a court must also "allow the government all reasonable inferences that could be drawn in its favor." United States v. Harvey, 532 F.3d 326, 333 (4th Cir. 2008). In other words, courts "must bear in mind that 'the jury, not the reviewing court, weighs the credibility of the evidence and resolves any conflicts in the evidence presented.'" United States v. Beidler, 110 F.3d 1064, 1067 (4th Cir. 1997) (quoting United States v. Murphy, 35 F.3d 143, 148 (4th Cir. 1994)).

Similarly, when a defendant asks a court to order a new trial based on an alleged insufficiency of the evidence, Fed. R. Crim. P 33 provides that a "court may vacate any judgment and grant a new trial if the interest of justice so requires." But as this Court has previously noted, "[w]hether a defendant gets a new trial is left to the trial court's discretion." United States v. Chinasa, 789 F Supp. 2d 691, 694 (E.D. Va. 2011) (Spencer, J.) (citing United States v. Smith, 451 F.3d 209, 216–17 (4th Cir. 2006)). And in the context of a sufficiency challenge, "[a] court should use its discretion to grant a new trial sparingly and only do so if 'the evidence weighs so heavily against the verdict that it would be unjust to enter judgment.'" Id. (quoting United States v. Arrington, 757 F.2d 1484, 1485 (4th Cir. 1985)) (emphasis added).

II. Argument

A. The jury's unanimous finding that the United States proved the quid pro quo required by the corruption charges in this case was supported by sufficient evidence.

Mr. McDonnell's first argument is that this Court should set aside the jury's unanimous guilty verdicts on the corruption charges in this case because, he claims, the United States "failed to show that Mr. McDonnell performed or promised to perform any 'official act' for Jonnie Williams, as required to prove Counts 1–11." Def. Mem. at 1. But his claims about the definition and proof of "official actions" depend on legal arguments that this Court has correctly rejected throughout this case, invoke factual claims that are contradicted by the record, and are unsupportable under the standard for reviewing a jury's verdict in any event.

1. The Quid Pro Quo Requirement[1]

Under settled law, the United States was not required to prove that Mr. McDonnell actually followed through on the corrupt bargain and took or caused official action because "fulfillment of the quid pro quo is not an element of the offense." Evans v. United States, 504 U.S. 255, 268 (1992); see also United States v. Brewster, 408 U.S. 501, 526 (1972) ("There is no need [under 18 U.S.C. § 201] for the Government to show that [defendant public official] fulfilled the alleged illegal bargain; acceptance of the bribe is the violation of the statute, not performance of the illegal promise."); United States v. Hairston, 46 F.3d 361, 365 (4th Cir. 1995) (Hobbs Act quid pro quo requirement is "not onerous" and "[t]he official need not actually fulfill the quid pro quo"). In other words, as the Court instructed the jury with respect to honest-services fraud, it could find the required quid pro quo "whether or not the payor actually provides the thing of value and whether or not the public official ultimately performs the requested action or intends to so," and "it is not necessary that the scheme actually succeeded or that any official action was taken by the public official in the course of the scheme." Tr. 6100–01.

---

[1] The black-letter bribery principles set forth here are taken from the Court's jury instructions. To the extent that Mr. McDonnell challenges those jury instructions in his separate motion seeking a new trial, see Doc. No. 511, the United States responds to those arguments in its response to that motion. See Doc. No. 530, at 2–14.

To prove a quid pro quo, the United States was also not required to link any particular payment to any specific alleged official action. More specifically, as the Court instructed the jury with respect to extortion under color of official right, "a given thing of value need not be correlated with a specific official action, and a thing or things of value may be given with the intent to retain a public official's services on an as-needed basis, so that as opportunities arise the public official would take specific official action on the payor's behalf." Tr. 6113–14; see also United States v. Jefferson, 674 F.3d 332, 360 (4th Cir. 2012) ("We agree with [the Second Circuit] that, 'in order to establish the quid pro quo essential to proving bribery, the government need not show that the defendant intended for his payments to be tied to specific official acts (or omissions).'" (quoting Ganim v. United States, 510 F.3d 134, 148 (2d Cir. 2007) (internal quotation omitted)); United States v. Jennings, 160 F.3d 1006, 1014 (4th Cir. 1998) ("The quid pro quo requirement is satisfied so long as the evidence shows a course of conduct of favors and gifts flowing to a public official in exchange for a pattern of official actions favorable to the donor.").

Moreover, as the Court instructed the jury, "[t]he public official and the payor need not state the quid pro quo in express terms. Otherwise, the law's effect could be frustrated by knowing winks and nods." Tr. 6101. And "the intent to exchange may be established by circumstantial evidence, based on the defendant's words, conduct, acts, and all the surrounding circumstances disclosed by the evidence and the rational or logical inferences that may be drawn from them." Tr. 6101, see also Tr. 6113 (same); Evans, 504 U.S. at 274 ("The official and the payor need not state the quid pro quo [required by the Hobbs Act] in express terms, for otherwise the law's effect could be frustrated by knowing winks and nods. [A] quid pro quo with the attendant corrupt motive can be inferred from an ongoing course of conduct." (Kennedy, J., concurring)); United States v. Hamilton, 701 F.3d 404, 409 (4th Cir. 2012) (holding, in case involving Hobbs Act extortion, that corrupt intent can be inferred and need not be expressly stated).

Finally, as the Court instructed the jury, the "official action" that constitutes the quo in the required quid pro quo exchange "means any decision or action on any question, matter, cause, suit, proceeding, or controversy, which may at any time be pending, or which may by law be brought before any public official, in such public official's official capacity." Tr. 6102; see also Tr. 6114. And within the parameters of that definition, "official action" also > includes those actions that have been clearly established by settled practice as part of a public official's position, even if the action was not taken pursuant to responsibilities explicitly assigned by law In other words, official actions may include acts that a public official customarily performs, even if those actions are not described in any law, rule, or job description. And a public official need not have actual or final authority over the end result sought by a bribe payor so long as the alleged bribe payor reasonably believes that the public official had influence, power or authority over a means to the end sought by the bribe payor. In addition, official action can include actions taken in furtherance of longer-term goals, and an official action is no less official because it is one in a series of steps to exercise influence or achieve an end.

Tr. 6102–03.

2. The Evidence of a Quid Pro Quo Here

In the context of the well-settled principles set forth above and otherwise included in the Court's instructions to the jury regarding the quid pro quo requirement, the United States adduced ample evidence from which a jury could have found proof beyond a reasonable doubt of the quid pro quo component of the corruption charges. Put simply, the United States adduced evidence to support every allegation in the Indictment in this case—allegations that the Court already ruled were collectively sufficient to meet the legal standards set forth above. Those include the specific allegation—incorporated by the Court in its jury instructions—that the alleged quid pro quo was an "exchange for Robert McDonnell and the Office of the Governor of Virginia performing official actions on an as-needed basis, as opportunities arose, to legitimize, promote, and obtain research studies for Star Scientific's products." Tr. 6089. It also includes the allegations specifying the types of "favorable official action" alleged as part of the corrupt agreement, namely meetings with Mr. McDonnell's "subordinates to discuss and promote Anatabloc," events "designed to encourage Virginia university researchers to initiate studies of anatabine," contact with subordinate government officials "as part of an effort to encourage Virginia state research universities to initiate studies of anatabine," allowing Williams "to invite individuals important to Star Scientific's business to exclusive events at the Governor's Mansion," and "recommending that senior [subordinate] government officials meet with Star Scientific to discuss ways that the company's products could lower healthcare costs." Tr. 6090–91. The United States adduced evidence from which a reasonable juror could have found beyond a reasonable doubt that each of those allegations were true—and thus, that the required quid pro quo had been proven.

First, there was overwhelming evidence at trial that Mr. McDonnell knew that Mr. Williams wanted Mr. McDonnell and his former office to engage in official action on the question, matter, and cause of obtaining research studies for Star Scientific's Anatabloc product, both at state universities and through access to state government employees. For example, Jonnie Williams testified at length about an October 2010 flight from California to Virginia during which he explained to Mr. McDonnell that he wanted "independent testing in Virginia" of Anatabloc, something that Mr. McDonnell agreed "was a good idea." Tr. 660. During that same flight, Williams asked Mr. McDonnell to "connect [him] with the person in Virginia in [McDonnell's] administration so that [Williams] c[ould] move this forward." Tr. 660. Later, at a private dinner on April 29, 2011, Williams testified that he again brought up the studies that he wanted performed on Anatabloc in Virginia. Tr. 677. And Williams testified that when he provided $65,000 in payments to the McDonnells on or about May 23, 2011, he did so because of the action that he knew Mr. McDonnell could take with respect to the medical schools in Virginia on whether those schools would study Anatabloc. Tr. 683.

Moreover, in June 2011, Williams sent a letter to Mr. McDonnell that specifically described the context within which Williams sought official action from Mr. McDonnell. Tr. 700–05. That letter, which was admitted as an attachment to two different emails as Gov Exhs. 161 and 162, was addressed to Mr. McDonnell on Star Scientific letterhead, and Mr. McDonnell admitted on cross-examination that he personally received it. See Gov. Exhs. 161, 162; see also Tr. 5036–37 Williams testified that he sent it at Mr. McDonnell's request and based on conversations he had previously had with Mr. McDonnell, including the conversations during the October 2010 flight from California to Virginia. Tr. 702. The letter stated that its purpose was "to provide the Commonwealth of Virginia with a technology platform to lower healthcare costs," which Williams testified he had previously discussed with Mr. McDonnell. Tr. 702. The letter continued, "I am suggesting that you use the attached protocol to initiate the 'Virginia Study' of Anatabloc at the Medical College of Virginia and the University of Virginia School of Medicine," which Mr. Williams explained was a reference to his sought-after animal and human studies at medical colleges in Virginia—and which, again, he testified he had previously discussed with Mr. McDonnell. Tr. 703–05. For his part, Mr. McDonnell conceded that he read the portion of the letter referring to studies of Anatabloc at the University of Virginia ("UVa") and at Virginia Commonwealth University ("VCU"), also known as the Medical College of Virginia ("MCV"). Tr. 5037. Moreover, Mr. McDonnell conceded that although the letter was "the first time I saw the thing in writing," he thought Williams "might have talked to me about that at the dinner at the Mansion" on April 29, 2011. Tr. 5037; see also Tr. 5070 (Mr. McDonnell stating "I know what the letter said" and "I knew what the letter said" in reference to the June 2011 letter).

The evidence about Mr. McDonnell's actions that followed in the ensuing months also made clear that he knew that Williams sought official action on the question, matter, or cause of obtaining research studies for Anatabloc at UVa, VCU, and elsewhere in Virginia state government. For example, on August 1, 2011—less than six weeks after receiving the June 2011 letter—Mr. McDonnell wrote an email ordering Dr. Bill Hazel, Mr. McDonnell's Secretary of Health and Human Resources, to send a subordinate to a meeting with Mr. Williams and Mrs. McDonnell on less than 12 hours of notice. Tr. 2196–97, 2200–01. And in that email, Mr. McDonnell wrote that the purpose of the meeting was "on the Star Scientific anatablock [sic] trials planned in va at vcu and uva." Gov. Exh. 189 (emphasis added). In other words, Mr.

McDonnell knew that the official action Williams sought from him was "on" the studies that Williams sought at state universities.

Similarly, the evidence at trial showed that Mr. McDonnell knew that the purpose of the August 30, 2011, Anatabloc launch[2] at the Governor's Mansion was to further Williams's goal of obtaining Anatabloc studies at UVa and VCU. Indeed, on the event briefing form that Mr. McDonnell received describing that event and listing its attendees, Mr. McDonnell wrote in asterisks next to the names of the UVa and VCU researchers who were attending the event. See Tr. 2572–73 (describing Gov. Exh. 231), 5080–81 (Mr. McDonnell agreeing he starred names of UVa and VCU researchers). In other words, as the United States argued to the jury in its summation, the launch "wasn't some ceremonial event without context or some event with no purpose," but rather an event to "send[] a signal to those medical schools that this is important." Tr. 5843–44.

The evidence about Mr. McDonnell's conduct in January through March 2012 provided further support that he knew that Williams sought official action in return for the things of value that Williams was providing to the McDonnells. For example, Williams testified that in early 2012, he had conversations with both of the McDonnells about his frustrations that UVa was not moving forward at the same time he discussed providing them with additional payments. Tr. 757–58, 775. And Williams's testimony was supported by the McDonnells' own written words. On February 9, 2012, Mrs. McDonnell wrote an email to Mr. McDonnell stating that Williams had "calls in to VCU & UVA & no one will return his calls." Gov. Exh. 312. The attachment to the email referred to Mr. McDonnell's support for UVa and VCU performing Anatabloc studies with Tobacco Commission funding. And on February 10, 2012, Mrs. McDonnell emailed Mr. McDonnell's senior policy advisor, asked him to call Williams, and stated, "Gov wants to know why nothing has developed w studies after Jonnie gave $200,000. I'm just trying to talk w Jonnie. Gov wants to get this going w VCU MCV " Gov. Exh. 314. To be sure, Mr. McDonnell claimed at trial that he did not read the attachment to the February 9 email and that his wife was not honestly conveying a conversation between the two of them in the February 10 email. See Tr. 5169–75. But the jury was free to reject that testimony from Mr. McDonnell and instead credit the plain language of the documents. Indeed, doing so would have been sensible given the testimony at trial that Mr. McDonnell was sitting next to his wife in a vehicle at the precise moment she sent the February 10 email purporting to convey his wishes. See Tr. 2252–55, 3362–63, 5166–67. It would also have been sensible for the jury to reject Mr. McDonnell's testimony based on Mr. McDonnell's own words in a February 17, 2012, email to the same senior policy advisor whom Mrs. McDonnell emailed only a week before. In that email, Mr. McDonnell asked his senior policy advisor to "see me about anatabloc issues at VCU and UVA." Gov. Exh. 320.

---

[2] Although the parties repeatedly debated—at times humorously—whether the August 30, 2011, event at the Governor's Mansion was a "launch" or "just" a "lunch," the time for that debate has now passed. There was ample evidence in the record from which the jury could have rejected Mr. McDonnell's attempts to minimize the event and instead accepted the testimony of the witnesses who described the event as a product launch—or more importantly, an event designed to have an impact on the UVa and VCU researchers who Williams wanted to study his product. See, e.g., Tr. 2057 (Mansion Director describing Mrs. McDonnell's description of the event as a "launch"), 2062 (Mansion Director's impression of event as a product launch), 1564 (VCU researcher agreeing that event seemed "designed to make a big splash"), 1785 (email to UVa researcher describing event as a "lunch related to Star Scientific slash Tobacco Commission studies with anatabine"), 1790 (UVa researcher describing Anatabloc at each place setting). In other words, as the Court said, "You say lunch. He says launch. We all know what we're talking about. So the jury will decide." Tr. 2128.

The testimony about the invitations to the Healthcare Leaders Reception at the Governor's Mansion on February 29, 2012, provides further support for the jury finding that Mr. McDonnell knew he was engaged in a quid pro quo relationship. For example, the Mansion Director testified about a list of potential invitees that included state university researchers

Williams wanted to study Anatabloc and that had obvious references to other individuals affiliated with Star Scientific. Tr. 2073–75 (referring to Gov Exh. 629). On one of the pages, Mr. McDonnell's handwriting appeared immediately between lines of Mrs. McDonnell's handwriting, and Mrs. McDonnell's handwriting referred to VCU and UVa. Tr. 2075. After receiving that list, the Mansion Director wrote an email based on a conversation with one of the McDonnells stating that the McDonnells "were going over the list last night for the healthcare industry event. The Governor wants to make sure the people below are included in the list." Tr. 2076 (referring to Gov. Exh. 306). The email then referred to the McDonnells' desire to ensure that individuals from VCU and UVa were present. Tr. 2076. At the event that later took place on February 29, 2012, both Star Scientific employees and individuals Star Scientific wanted to study its product attended, and state funds paid for those individuals' attendance at the event. See Tr. 2088–90, 2154–71, 2881–97

Finally, the testimony about Mr. McDonnell's statements to subordinate officials at a cabinet meeting on March 21, 2012, supported the jury's finding that Mr. McDonnell knew he was engaged in a quid pro quo with Williams. In that meeting, Mr. McDonnell was discussing the state employee healthcare plan with his Secretary of Administration, Lisa Hicks-Thomas, and Sara Wilson, who reported to Hicks-Thomas and served as the Director of the Department of Human Resource Management for Virginia. See Tr. 2655–56, 2675–76, 5239. In the context of that discussion about ways to lower healthcare costs for Virginia government employees, Mr. McDonnell pulled Anatabloc out of his pocket and referred to its positive health benefits for him and his wife. See Tr. 2657, 2676, 5239. Hicks-Thomas testified that she recalled Mr. McDonnell stating that he thought Anatabloc "would be good for state employees" and then instructing her to meet with Star Scientific. Tr. 2676. And although Wilson and Hicks-Thomas did not have the same recollection of the precise details of the meeting, both agreed that after Mr. McDonnell mentioned Anatabloc to them, they followed up and looked into Star Scientific together in Hicks-Thomas's office. See Tr. 2658, 2677. Although the context of the March 21, 2012, cabinet meeting was about state government employees in general rather than UVa and VCU specifically, it was consistent with the testimony at trial that one of Williams's and Star Scientific's alternative goals was to perform research studies on state government employees who used the product. See Tr. 720, 2653–54,

The United States also overwhelmingly demonstrated that the official actions sought and agreed as part of the alleged quid pro quo were within the range of actions on questions, matters, or causes pending before Mr. McDonnell as Governor as matter of custom and settled practice. For example, the former Mansion Director testified that "the matter of Virginia business and economic development" was "one of the most important priorities" of Mr. McDonnell's administration. Tr. 2037. Similarly, Mr. McDonnell's Communications Director testified that Virginia business and economic development issues were "why we got elected" and was "the priority" of the administration. Tr. 2234–35. And when asked "where on the Administration's list of priorities the matter of Virginia business and economic development was," Mr. McDonnell's former Chief of Staff responded, "It was at the top of the list. I would say it was probably only second to public safety." Tr. 2541.

Moreover, several former McDonnell staffers also testified about the myriad ways that Mr. McDonnell and his staff would take action on questions, matters, and causes of Virginia business and economic development. For example, Mr. McDonnell's former Chief of Staff was asked, "How common was it for the Governor's Mansion to host events to promote Virginia business and economic development?" He responded, "It was very common. I think staff, long time staff members at the Mansion had commented to me that we probably had more events at the Mansion than any other administration they could recall." Tr. 2542. Mr. McDonnell's former Communications Director agreed that it "seemed very common" for "Mansion events to relate to promoting Virginia business and economic development." Tr. 2235. And the former Chief of Staff elaborated that one of the Mansion Director's "main functions" and "primary jobs" was to coordinate such events. Tr. 2542. For her part, Mr. McDonnell's former Mansion Director testified that it was "[v]ery common" to have such events at the Governor's Mansion, and she agreed that "hosting and attending events [was] a customary part of the Governor's position" based on her experience. Tr. 2038. She explained that "[a]ll of the events that we hosted at the Mansion actually had to be approved by the Governor and the Governor's Chief of Staff," and she explained that the planning associated with such an event would take course over time and be done on official time as a government employee. Tr. 2040–41. And the jury heard from the Mansion Director who worked in the prior two gubernatorial administrations, who testified that events designed to promote Virginia business and economic development were also common during those administrations. Tr. 2918–20.

Similarly, Mr. McDonnell's former Chief of Staff testified that it was "[v]ery common" for Mr. McDonnell to have meetings on his schedule. Tr. 2545. And when asked how common it was "for those meetings to relate to promoting Virginia business and economic development," he responded, "Very common." Tr. 2545. The former Chief of Staff explained that those included cabinet meetings at which Mr. McDonnell would instruct subordinate staff members to meet with outside third parties. Tr. 2546. And Mr. McDonnell's former Communications Director testified that he recalled "[l]ots of" meetings that "related to promoting Virginia business and economic development." Tr. 2236.

Mr. McDonnell's former Chief of Staff also explained that Mr. McDonnell appointed all of the members of the boards that oversaw UVa and VCU, as well as a majority of the individuals who served on the Tobacco Commission. Tr. 2548, 2551. The former Chief of Staff also discussed several examples of scenarios in which Mr. McDonnell would take action on issues pending before him that related to other parts of state government like UVa or the Tobacco Commission even though a governor might not have a formal role in those particular questions, matters, or causes. See, e.g., Tr. 2549–50, 2552–53. Likewise, a lobbyist and former Virginia Attorney General testified about the impact that gubernatorial support could have on an application by a university for something like Tobacco Commission funding. Tr. 2823.

In the end, the United States adduced overwhelming evidence that Mr. McDonnell routinely and customarily took official action on questions, matters, and causes to promote Virginia business and economic development, and the United States also adduced overwhelming evidence that those actions routinely and customarily included arranging meetings and hosting events as a matter of settled practice. Likewise, the jury heard evidence from which it could have easily found beyond a reasonable doubt that the McDonnells and Williams had an implicit, these-for-those quid pro quo agreement to exchange things of value for such official actions to benefit Star Scientific by taking official action on the research studies that Williams sought at state universities and using state employees. Similarly, Mr. McDonnell was free to argue—as he did—that the McDonnells did not actually agree to exchange such official actions for things of value or that any actions Mr. McDonnell did agree to take or cause were not "on" questions, matters, or causes that were pending before him. But both whether an agreement existed and whether that agreement included actions "on" questions, matters, or causes pending before Mr. McDonnell were factual questions that a reasonable jury could have—and this jury did—resolve against Mr. McDonnell.

The Fourth Circuit's analysis in Jefferson is particularly instructive in this regard. In that case, the Fourth Circuit found sufficient evidence for the jury to conclude "first of all, that performing constituent services was a settled official practice of Jefferson's congressional office and, second, that African trade issues were 'matters' or 'causes' that were pending before him." Jefferson, 674 F.3d at 357 (emphasis added). And "[t]he jury was then entitled to conclude that Jefferson's actions in connection with both constituent requests and the promotion of trade in Africa fell under the umbrella of his 'official acts.'" Id. at 357–58. In other words, with "African trade issues" as the broadly defined class of "matters" or "causes" pending before former Congressman Jefferson, the Fourth Circuit found myriad actions by Jefferson to promote constituents' interests in African trade issues (and thus "on" those "matters" or "causes") to be official acts. Those included "meeting[s], letter[s], trip[s], and other action[s] by Jefferson," including (i) "[g]ranting requests for assistance to business ventures by corresponding and visiting with foreign officials"; (ii) "[s]cheduling and conducting meetings with Army officials and representatives, at which [Jefferson] promoted [a bribe-paying business]"; (iii) "[t]raveling to Nigeria and Ghana, and meeting with representatives of the [Export-Import] Bank [of the United States] to endorse, assist, and promote [a bribe-paying business's] scheme"; and (iv) "[v]ouching for [a bribe-paying business] in Nigeria and seeking to secure construction contracts for [its] entities." Id. at 357, 356. Or put more simply, the "action" in an "official action" could be something as simple as a "meeting, letter, trip, or other action"; the question for the jury is whether the action is "to fulfill [the public official's] end of a corrupt bargain"—in other words, whether the action is "on" a question, matter, cause, etc., as required by the definition of official action.

Here, Virginia business and economic development issues such as Williams's desired promotion of his product using Virginia state government were questions, matters, or causes pending before Mr. McDonnell and his former office, and the McDonnells promised, took, and caused official actions on those questions, matters, and causes by hosting events, arranging meetings, and the like. Thus, as in Jefferson, the jury was entitled here to find "first of all, that performing constituent services [for businesses like Star Scientific] was a settled official practice of [Mr. McDonnell's gubernatorial] office and, second, that [Virginia business and economic development] issues were 'matters' or 'causes' that were pending before him." Jefferson, 674 F.3d at 357. And "[t]he jury was then entitled to conclude that [Mr. McDonnell's] actions in connection with both constituent requests and the promotion of [Virginia business and economic development] fell under the umbrella of his 'official acts.'" Id. at 357–58. As such, the jury was entitled to find that the United States satisfied the quid pro quo requirement of the corruption charges in this case.

3. Mr. McDonnell's arguments that he did not promise or perform "official actions" attempt to redefine bribery law, seek to relitigate factual issues, are logically incongruous, and raise irrelevant issues not properly brought in a Rule 29(c) motion.

Mr. McDonnell's first attack on the sufficiency of the evidence has nothing to do with the sufficiency of the evidence at all. Instead, as he has done throughout this case, Mr. McDonnell first seeks to redefine bribery law by setting up a false dichotomy between "[i]ngratiation and access" on the one hand, which he asserts is a category of conduct categorically excluded from the definition of "official action," and "actual governmental power" on the other hand, which he claims is necessary to prove "official action" and which he defines essentially as the "exercise [of] the regulatory powers of the Commonwealth." Def. Mem. at 4–5. He then slaps the "access" label on the actions he promised to and did perform for Williams, conclusorily asserts the same actions involved no "actual governmental power," and asks this Court to set aside the jury's verdict.

Mr. McDonnell's reliance on two phrases that appear nowhere within any definition of "official action" is as flawed at this stage as it has been when this Court has previously rejected it. First, Mr. McDonnell claims that any conduct that can be characterized as "[i]ngratiation and access" falls outside the definition of "official action." In support of that proposition, he cites yet again to the following sentence from Citizens United v. Federal Election Commission, 558 U.S. 310, 360 (2010): "Ingratiation and access are not corruption." See Def. Mem. at 5. But the sentence Mr. McDonnell cites from Citizens United is wholly irrelevant to the definition of "official action." Notably, the Supreme Court did not state that "ingratiation and access are not official actions," nor would it be grammatically correct, as Mr. McDonnell asks this Court to do, to read what the Supreme Court did say as equivalent to that statement. Indeed, neither "ingratiation" nor "access"—or for that matter, "corruption"—describe types of "actions" at all, whether official or not. In other words, just as the sentence "official actions are corruption" would make no sense, so does the sentence "ingratiation and access are not official actions."

What the Supreme Court actually held in Citizens United was that "[a]n outright ban on corporate political speech during the critical preelection period is not a permissible remedy" to address Government anticorruption concerns about corporate spending on independent electioneering communications that are by definition not coordinated with any public official. 558 U.S. at 361. The Court observed that "independent expenditures do not lead to, or create the appearance of, quid pro quo corruption. In fact, there is only scant evidence that independent expenditures even ingratiate." Id. at 360. It was at this point that the Court stated that "[i]ngratiation and access, in any event, are not corruption." Id. Put differently, the Supreme Court observed that the mere fact of ingratiation or access did not necessarily equal corruption—particularly where, as there (and unlike here), the activity in question is money spent on political speech protected by the First Amendment and not coordinated with any public official. Rather, what is required for corruption is what this Court required the jury to find here: a quid pro quo exchange of things of value for official actions.

But to suggest, as Mr. McDonnell has, that in Citizens United the Supreme Court held that "ingratiation" or "access" can never be present as part of a corrupt exchange of personal payments in return for official action is a bridge too far. Indeed, it is difficult to imagine a bribery scheme that does not involve "ingratiation" and "access," and Mr. McDonnell's cherrypicking of a single sentence from Citizens United to suggest that whatever might be subsumed under the rubric of "ingratiation" or "access" can never form a basis for a corruption charge is undermined by what the Supreme Court made sure to emphasize first: "'The hallmark of corruption is the financial quid pro quo: dollars for political favors.'" 558 U.S. at 359 (quoting Fed. Election Comm'n v. Nat'l Conservative Political Action Comm., 470 U.S. 480, 497 (1985)). Unlike the sentence that Mr. McDonnell cites, that sentence from Citizens United at least reads in a way that could grammatically equate "official action" to "political favors." But Mr. McDonnell would assuredly have fought any attempt by the United States to define official action as any "political favor." And in the end, Citizens United is simply a case that says nothing about what constitutes official action at all.[3] [3] Moreover, to the extent Citizens United discussed corruption at all, it was in the context of discussing whether there was an appearance of corruption when third parties other than a public official received campaign contributions. Citizens United has nothing to say about secret loans, wedding payments, and golf outings given directly to a public official and his family.

---

Next, Mr. McDonnell's attempt to characterize the alleged official actions promised and performed in this case as not involving "actual governmental power" is at best an effort to get this Court involved in a series of factual disputes that were properly left by this Court for the jury to resolve. As a threshold matter, Mr. McDonnell's invocation of the phrase "actual governmental power" does little more than beg the question of what "governmental power" is and what makes it "actual." But his attempt to equate "actual governmental power" with the "regulatory powers of the Commonwealth," Def. Mem. at 4, is wrong. Courts have consistently rejected arguments by public officials that "official action" is restricted to formalized acts written in laws, such as voting, signing legislation, disbursing government funds, or the like.[4] Indeed, the Supreme Court rejected the argument a century ago that official actions must be "prescribed by a written rule or regulation," instead finding that "[i]n numerous instances, duties not completely defined by written rules are clearly established by settled practice, and action taken in furtherance of their performance must be regarded as within the provisions of the above-mentioned statutes against bribery." United States v. Birdsall, 233 U.S. 223 (1914). Mr. McDonnell's attempts to restrict official action to action invoking "regulatory powers"—or powers rooted in regulations—are no different and should be rejected.

Even assuming, however, that the phrase "actual governmental power" has any relevance to the "official action" inquiry, it is clear that a reasonable jury could have found that Mr. McDonnell agreed to and did exercise "actual governmental power" for Williams as part of the alleged quid pro quo. For example, the jury could have reasonably found that Mr. McDonnell's order for a subordinate state employee to take a meeting on a particular issue exercised the governmental power inherent in a chief executive's relationship with those whom he can hire and fire at will. Similarly, the jury could have reasonably found that Mr. McDonnell's approval of an event at the Governor's Mansion designed to aid a particular business in its efforts to convince others in state government to help that business exercised governmental power with respect to both the Mansion staff who then had to spend government time arranging that event and the subordinate state university employees who attended the event. The jury could also reasonably have found that Mr. McDonnell's involvement in inviting Williams and individuals Williams wanted to convince to study his product to a reception paid for by taxpayers exercised Mr. McDonnell's actual governmental powers. And finally, a reasonable juror could have found that Mr. McDonnell's instructions to subordinate officials at a cabinet meeting—even if he chose not to yell or scream—exercised his actual governmental power. The entire purpose of Birdsall and its progeny is to ensure that public officials do not escape criminal liability by lining their pockets in exchange for their official actions merely because those actions are not rooted in some written rule or regulation, and Mr. McDonnell should not be able to do so here simply because he engaged in less aggressive official action than he might have done for a higher price.

---

[4] See, e.g., Jefferson, 674 F.3d at 357 (approving instruction based on Birdsall that an "act may be official even if it was not taken pursuant to responsibilities explicitly assigned by law. Rather official acts include those activities that have been clearly established by settled practice as part [of] a public official's position"; explaining that the instruction "simply explained to the jury that an official act need not be prescribed by statute, but rather may include acts that a congressman customarily performs, even if the act falls outside the formal legislative process").

Mr. McDonnell also argues that the evidence adduced at trial did not show a sufficiently "specific" quid pro quo agreement. See Def. Mem. at 5–7. But after conclusorily asserting a lack of specificity, Mr. McDonnell defeats his own argument by then describing it with more than sufficient specificity from which the jury could have found the required quid pro quo. For example, Mr. McDonnell refers to the June 2011 letter and Williams's testimony that "the purpose of the letter was to suggest that Mr. McDonnell initiate a 'Virginia study' of Anatabloc at Virginia public medical schools, which Mr. Williams had previously discussed with Mr. McDonnell on a flight to California in October 2010." Def. Mem. at 5–6. And after referencing several other conversations that Williams relayed between him and Mr. McDonnell about the Tobacco Commission and studies at UVa, Mr. McDonnell then asserts that "even if Mr. McDonnell had promised Mr. Williams that he would help obtain studies for Star Scientific, that does not prove that Mr. McDonnell promised to perform specific official acts or a specific course of official action in exchange for things of value." Id. at 6.[5] But agreeing to take action on the question, matter, or cause of obtaining research studies from state universities by arranging meetings and hosting events is the specific quid pro quo alleged in this case, and it does not become insufficiently specific merely because Mr. McDonnell labels it as such. Indeed, requiring the level of specificity that Mr. McDonnell seems to think is required would read the "course of action" theory out of bribery law entirely and prevent stream of benefits cases such as this one from being prosecuted.[6]

---

[5] Later on, Mr. McDonnell asserts that "[e]ven if Mr. McDonnell had promised to help Mr. Williams get studies from Virginia universities or funding from the Tobacco Commission—and he did not—such a vague promise would not constitute a promise to engage in specific 'official action' because none of the 'help' that Mr. McDonnell allegedly offered constituted an exercise of actual governmental power." Def. Mem. at 14. There is nothing vague about a governor promising to wield his power over subordinate state officials to obtain studies at state universities for a businessman, and any suggestion to the contrary is as dangerous as it is meritless.

[6] Mr. McDonnell cites to Jennings for his specificity requirement, but he misreads what the Fourth Circuit actually held in Jennings. In that case, the Fourth Circuit noted that "the payor of a bribe must intend to engage in 'some more or less specific quid pro quo' with the official who receives the payment." 160 F.3d at 1013 (quoting United States v. Arthur, 544 F.2d 730, 734 (4th Cir. 1976)) (emphasis added). But the Fourth Circuit cautioned that a "more or less" specific quid pro quo need only be "fairly specific." Id. at 1019. Thus, it does not require "that the defendant intended for his payments to be tied to specific official acts (or omissions). Rather, it is sufficient to show that the payor intended for each payment to induce the official to adopt a specific course of action." Id. at 1014. As a result, "[t]he quid pro quo requirement is satisfied so long as the evidence shows a 'course of conduct of favors and gifts flowing to a public official in exchange for a pattern of official actions favorable to'" the bribe payor. Id.

Mr. McDonnell also attacks the specificity of the quid pro quo proven at trial by pointing to a series of excerpts from Williams's testimony and claiming that "Williams himself never even alleged a promise on Mr. McDonnell's part to perform a specific 'official act.'" Def. Mem. at 5. But in addition to once again attempting to read the black-letter "course of action" theory of bribery out of the law, Mr. McDonnell's argument conflates whether Williams testified to an explicit or express quid pro quo with whether the testimony of Williams, along with that of other witnesses, the documentary evidence, and common sense provided sufficient evidence of an implicit quid pro quo agreement. In other words, as the United States argued to the jury:

> But more importantly, folks, common sense tells you it was clear Jonnie Williams wanted something. Dr. Hazel knew it. And he said about that treatment that Jonnie Williams got, that he had never seen anything quite like it. Dr. Vetrovec knew it after spending 20 minutes with the man. Mr. Cox knew it, and he said it to Mr. McDonnell's face. Do you know who else knew it? Jasen Eige. He knew it. That's why he told the Governor that they needed to be careful.

(quoting Arthur, 544 F.2d at 734). And bribe "payments may be made with the intent to retain the official's services on an 'as needed' basis, so that whenever the opportunity presents itself the official will take specific action on the payor's behalf." Id. Thus, the Fourth Circuit rejected Jennings's sufficiency challenge, finding that "[e]ven if the evidence did not necessarily link each of Jennings's payments to a specific official act by [the public official], a reasonable juror could still conclude that Jennings paid bribes" because "a reasonable juror could have concluded that there was a course of conduct involving payments flowing from Jennings to [the public official] in exchange for a pattern of official actions favorable to Jennings's companies, and that was sufficient to convict Jennings of bribery." Id. at 1018. The same sentences would be true about this case, and the Court adequately conveyed these principles in its jury instructions. Indeed, in Jennings the Fourth Circuit emphasized that "a court need not resort to Latin to make this point," id. at 1019—something that this Court repeatedly did anyway. In Jennings, the Fourth Circuit did find that the district court's instructions did not adequately convey the required quid pro quo for a bribery charge because they only required the jury to find payments were made to influence the public official "in connection with" or "in reference to" the business of the public official's agency in the abstract. Id. at 1022. But had "any of the court's four explanations of 'corrupt intent' required the jury to find a relatively specific quid pro quo, the jury instruction would have been saved " Id. Here, the Court's instructions plainly required a "relatively specific" quid pro quo for the reasons set forth in the United States' separate response to Mr. McDonnell's motion for a new trial based on alleged errors in those instructions. See Doc. No. 530, at 9–14.

> And here's the kicker. None of the people I just mentioned, not one, knew about the loans, the check for Cailin's wedding, the golf. None of these people, not one, had received the June 16th letter from Jonnie Williams. None of these people were on the six-hour plane ride back from California. None of these people were at the private April 29th dinner at the Mansion. The only one who did all of those things is sitting right there, and he's the only one who claims to have no idea that Jonnie Williams ever wanted anything from him. Bob McDonnell knew exactly why Jonnie Williams was showering him and his family with gifts, and so do you.
>
> The better question is why doesn't he want to admit it? And the answer tells you all you need to know Now, of course, there's no explicit agreement. Of course not. We don't have to prove one. It doesn't have to be expressed. People's conduct, acts, and all the surrounding circumstances, can establish that there was an agreement. That's the law, and it makes sense.
>
> Remember, we are in the real world now. We're not on TV This is a real Governor who is very smart and wields tremendous power. This is a real businessman who is very smart and pursues his agenda as aggressively as anyone anywhere. These guys aren't long-time friends, and when the gifts start rolling in, they have barely known each other. Why do you think a smart, savvy bribe payer and a smart, powerful politician would not make an explicit agreement? In the real world, these things aren't explicit, but they are agreements just the same. They are deals just the same. And some of the very best evidence in this case that there was a corrupt deal is the lengths that both sides went to hide it.

Tr. 5872–73. Mr. McDonnell's efforts to reargue that evidence should be rejected.

Finally, Mr. McDonnell identifies several of the alleged official actions in this case, describes them in the light most favorable to him, characterizes them as "access," and then asserts that no jury could ever reasonably find that they were "official actions." See Def. Mem. at 7–13. For example, Mr. McDonnell asserts that ordering a subordinate to attend a meeting that Mr. McDonnell knew was, in his words, "on the Star Scientific anatablock [sic] trials planned in va at vcu and uva," Gov. Exh. 189, was not action on any question, matter, or cause because the subordinate state official who attended that meeting "did not perceive any pressure on her from

Mr. McDonnell to do anything other than attend the meeting." Def. Mem. at 9. Similarly, Mr. McDonnell argues that the Anatabloc launch event at the Governor's Mansion was not action on any question, matter, or cause because, he claims, there was no "testimony that Mr. McDonnell pressured the UVA and VCU doctors to study Anatabloc." Def. Mem. at 10. Likewise, Mr. McDonnell claims that the expenditure of taxpayer funds to permit Williams to invite doctors to an event at the Governor's Mansion as part of an effort to convince them to do studies on Anatabloc was not action on any question, matter, or cause because Mr. McDonnell did not explicitly "influence[] or pressure[] any of the doctors in attendance to study or use Anatabloc." Def. Mem. at 12. And Mr. McDonnell dismisses the March 21, 2012, cabinet meeting because he "never contacted either staffer about the issue after they left his office." Def. Mem. at 13 (emphasis added).

The flawed premise of each of these arguments is clear. In each of them, Mr. McDonnell conditions whether he promised, took, or caused official action on whether other public officials—officials who assuredly had not personally received more than $177,000 in things of value from Mr. Williams—took official action. The fact is, Mr. McDonnell took official action when he ordered a subordinate to take a meeting, approved and attended an event at a state facility, and directed a cabinet official to arrange a meeting, and all of those actions were on the question, matter, or cause of the use of state government to promote and obtain research studies for Anatabloc. The fact that Mr. McDonnell's subordinate state officials, whether in his former office or at the state universities, may have chosen not to take additional official action (whether for independent reasons or because they, unlike him, were not on retainer) was beside the point.[7]

---

[7] Indeed, the evidence at trial showed that directing a subordinate to take a meeting on a particular issue and hosting events at the Governor's Mansion on particular causes are quintessential parts of a governor's job, and no reasonable definition of "official action" should

And the fact that Mr. McDonnell had the unilateral power as the chief state executive to promise and take the actions he did—or promise and make the decisions that he did—is precisely the point. That unilateral power to arrange meetings, host events, and take other action on questions, matters, and causes of Virginia business and economic development is exactly what was worth more than $177,000 to Jonnie Williams, and exchanging those actions for more than $177,000 in payments and things of value satisfied any reasonable definition of quid pro quo bribery.[8]

B. The jury's unanimous finding that the United States satisfied the interstate commerce element required by Counts 5–11 was supported by sufficient evidence.

Next, Mr. McDonnell complains that the United States failed to present evidence to satisfy the interstate commerce element for the Hobbs Act conspiracy and extortion under color of official right charges in Counts 5–11. More specifically, he claims that he is entitled to judgment of acquittal as a matter of law on those counts because there was insufficient evidence for the jury to find that his bribery scheme "had an actual or realistically probable effect on interstate commerce." Def. Mem. at 18. He does not, however, challenge the instructions on this exclude such conduct. Nor should Mr. McDonnell be able to escape criminal culpability merely because he engaged in action that he characterizes as not involving "pressure." The mere fact that he may not have been explicit or twisted arms does not cause his conduct to fall outside the definition of "official action." That is why, after all, multiple state government employees testified about the impact that Mr. McDonnell's conduct had on them. See, e.g., Tr. 2770 (UVa official describing pro/con list about whether to conduct Anatabloc studies; listed first "Pro" as "Perception to Governor" and listed first "Con" as "Political pressure from Governor and impact on future UVA requests from the Governor"). In other words, "pressure" and "influence" come in varied forms, and the question is not how forceful the actions were that Mr. McDonnell took or promised to take on a question, matter, or cause to help Mr. Williams—it is whether he took or promised any such action. The jury could have reasonably found that he did.

---

[8] Mr. McDonnell also repackages constitutional vagueness and 10th Amendment states-rights claims that he already raised—and this Court rejected—in his motion to dismiss the Indictment. See Def. Mem. at 16–18. For the reasons stated in the United States' response in opposition to Mr. McDonnell's motion to dismiss, see Doc. No. 146, at 29–30, those arguments are meritless and should be rejected. In any event, they do not warrant discussion here because they are not an appropriate basis for an evidentiary sufficiency challenge under Rule 29.

element. And the Court properly defined the pertinent element as requiring that in obtaining or attempting to obtain property in violation of the other elements, "the defendant did or attempted in any way or degree to delay, obstruct, or affect interstate commerce, or an item moving in interstate commerce." Tr. 6112. The Court then continued to explain that "[t]o find the interstate commerce element satisfied, it is not necessary to find that a defendant actually intended to obstruct, delay, or affect commerce. Rather, the government need not [sic] only prove that the defendant you are considering deliberately performed or attempted to perform an act, the ordinary and natural consequences of which would be to obstruct, delay or affect commerce." Tr. 6114. The Court further instructed that "[t]he effect on interstate commerce need only be slight, and it need not be adverse. Proof that the extortion under color of official right would have affected interstate commerce, even if minimally and even if positively, is sufficient." Tr. 6114–15. In light of these instructions, the United States presented ample evidence for a jury to find the interstate commerce element satisfied.

As a preliminary matter, the jury heard evidence the bribery scheme actually affected interstate commerce. For example, out-of-state invitees traveled to Virginia to attend both the August 30, 2011, Anatabloc Launch and the February 29, 2012, Healthcare Leaders Reception at the Mansion. The United States introduced Exhibit 234, the calendar entry for the Anatabloc Launch at the Mansion. The entry contained a list of attendees at the event, which included two doctors from the Roskamp Institute in Florida. See Gov. Exh. 234, Tr. 1891. Dr. Paul Ladenson from Maryland also attended the event, which was the "national launch" of the product. See Gov. Exh. 234, Tr. 721, 1133. Similarly, the Healthcare Leaders Reception in February 2012 was attended by out-of-state guests. Dr. Ladenson attended, as did Dr. Frank Crantz from Potomac, Maryland. Tr. 2120, 2152, 2162. In addition, in June 2011, Mrs. McDonnell flew from Richmond to Sarasota, Florida, to attend the Roskamp event at Mr. Williams's request. Tr. 1856. And Mr. McDonnell knew this. Tr. 5027 Later, Mrs. McDonnell traveled to California and Michigan and attended conferences discussing studies of Anatabloc. Tr. 2137–44. And with respect to Count 8—expenses charged at Kinloch Golf Club in May 2011—the jury heard evidence that Star Scientific paid the cost of the bribe. See Tr. 429–31 (describing Gov. Exh. 182), 580–82 (describing Gov. Exh. 135). All of these were more than the "minimal" effect on interstate commerce that the Court's jury instructions required, and all were sufficient for the jury to find that the quid pro quo agreement in this case had an actual effect on interstate commerce.

But the United States also presented evidence that Mr. McDonnell's bribery scheme would have had a realistically probable effect on interstate commerce. The aims of the conspiracy were not simply to have Anatabloc viewed in a "positive light," Def. Mem. at 22, with Mr. McDonnell's association. Rather, it was to arrange meetings, host events at the Mansion and invite guests to exclusive events at the Mansion, contact government officials to encourage research universities to initiate anatabine studies, and recommend that senior government officials meet with Star executives to discuss ways the company's products could lower healthcare costs. See Ind. ¶ 111(c)(i)–(v).

If Mr. Williams obtained funding for research studies at Virginia research universities, that would have had an immediate impact on the Commonwealth. But the "Virginia study" would have resulted in effects felt far beyond Virginia. Star Scientific has offices in Massachusetts and Washington, D.C., and its manufacturing facilities are in New Jersey. Tr. 2341–42. Mr. McDonnell knew that anatabine was synthesized out of state. Tr. 4734. Mr. Williams's goal, after all, was for Anatabloc to become more scientifically validated so that it would receive further regulatory approval and consumer acceptance—and increase revenues in his interstate company. Indeed, the jury heard evidence that Mr. Williams traveled with Mrs. McDonnell to at least three separate states—Florida, Michigan, and California—to tout studies on Anatabloc, and the jury could have reasonably inferred that had he obtained the studies at UVa and VCU, Star Scientific would have promoted those studies on a nationwide basis for the purpose of causing increased sales nationwide. See, e.g., Gov. Ex. 253 (excerpted video of Michigan event); Tr. 750. That provided sufficient evidence for the jury to infer that the bribery scheme also would have had a realistically probable effect on interstate commerce.

Mr. McDonnell's arguments to the contrary are little more than another attempt to reargue factual disputes that were properly left to the jury to decide. For example, Mr. McDonnell's asserts that the United States "introduced no evidence indicating how any action that Mr. McDonnell performed or allegedly promised to perform would have specifically impacted Star's business operations in a way that affected interstate commerce or caused any goods or funds to move in commerce." Def. Mem. at 21–22. But the jury could have reasonably inferred that the August 2011 Launch, the February 2012 Healthcare Leaders Reception, and the UVa and VCU studies either did or would have had a realistically probable effect on Star's activities in interstate commerce as a company that sold and promoted its products nationwide. Similarly, Mr. McDonnell's description of the interstate commerce evidence as a "vague belief," Def. Mem. at 22, by Star is little more than a jury argument, and his statement that the evidence at trial "is not equivalent to the type of concrete, particularized effect on interstate commerce that courts have looked to," id., simply overstates the applicable standard as set forth in the jury instructions. For these and the other reasons already discussed, this Court should reject Mr. McDonnell's motion for judgment of acquittal on Counts 5–11.

III. Conclusion

For all of these reasons, Mr. McDonnell's motion for judgment of acquittal (or in the alternative, for a new trial) (Doc. No. 509) should be denied.

Respectfully submitted,

DANA J. BOENTE
United States Attorney

JACK SMITH
Chief, Public Integrity Section
Criminal Division
U.S. Department of Justice

By: /s/
Ryan S. Faulconer
Richard D. Cooke
Michael S. Dry
Jessica D. Aber
Counsel for the United States
U.S. Attorney's Office
600 E. Main Street, Suite 1800
Richmond, VA 23219
Phone: 804-819-5400
Fax: 804-771-2316
Email: ryan.faulconer2@usdoj.gov
richard.cooke@usdoj.gov
michael.s.dry@usdoj.gov
jessica.d.aber@usdoj.gov

CERTIFICATE OF SERVICE

I hereby certify that on October 14, 2014, I will electronically file the foregoing with the Clerk of Court using the CM/ECF system, which will then send a notification of such filing ("NEF") to all counsel of record.

By: /s/
Ryan S. Faulconer
Counsel for the United States
U.S. Attorney's Office
600 E. Main Street, Suite 1800
Richmond, VA 23219
Phone: 804-819-5400
Fax: 804-771-2316
Email: ryan.faulconer2@usdoj.gov

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
FOR THE EASTERN DISTRICT OF VIRGINIA
RICHMOND DIVISION

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,	)
	)	CRIMINAL NO. 3:14-CR-00012
v.	)
	)	JUDGE JAMES R. SPENCER
ROBERT F. MCDONNELL	)
MAUREEN G. MCDONNELL	)

DEFENDANT ROBERT F. MCDONNELL'S MOTION # 44 – MOTION TO SUPPLEMENT THE RECORD ON APPEAL

Defendant Robert McDonnell, by and through undersigned counsel, moves the Court for an order to supplement the record on appeal. Some of this material may already be slated for inclusion in the record, but Mr. McDonnell makes this request out of an abundance of caution. In particular, Mr. McDonnell requests that the following documents be added to the record on appeal:

- All trial transcripts (Vols. I–XXVIII), from the July 28, 2014 voir dire through the September 4, 2014 announcement of the verdict, including all transcripts of statements or arguments of counsel before, during, or after trial;
- All other hearing transcripts, including for the proceedings held on January 24 (Dkt. No. 27), February 3 (Dkt. No. 43), March 18 (Dkt. No. 96), May 19 (Dkt. No. 181), July 10 (Dkt. No. 278), and July 15 (Dkt. No. 293);
- All questions proposed for the mailed juror questionnaire (attached to this Motion as Appendices 1 and 2) and the final version mailed by the Court (attached as Appendix 3);
- All completed juror questionnaires (as redacted by the Court);

- All additional questions proposed during the July 28 voir dire; and
- Documents relating to proceedings previously sealed by the Court, attached hereto as sealed Appendices 4 to 35. Mr. McDonnell sets forth the basis for including Appendices 4 to 33 in the record in this case in his Memorandum in Support of his Motion #45 to Unseal Certain Sealed Portions of the Record, at 1-2 n.2.

A proposed Order is submitted herewith for the convenience of the Court.

Dated: October 23, 2014

Respectfully submitted,

/s/ Jonathan A. Berry

Henry W Asbill (pro hac vice)
Noel J. Francisco (pro hac vice)
Ryan D. Newman (pro hac vice)
James M. Burnham (pro hac vice)
Jonathan A. Berry (VSB No. 81864)
JONES DAY
51 Louisiana Avenue, N.W
Washington, DC 20001
Telephone: (202) 879-3939
Facsimile: (202) 626-1700

John L. Brownlee (VSB No. 37358)
HOLLAND & KNIGHT LLP
800 17th Street N.W
Suite 1100
Washington, DC 20006
Telephone: (202) 828-1854
Facsimile: (202) 955-5564

Counsel for Robert F McDonnell

CERTIFICATE OF SERVICE

I, Jonathan A. Berry, am a member of the Bar of this Court. I hereby certify that on this 23rd day of October, 2014, I caused the foregoing to be electronically filed with the Clerk of Court using the CM/ECF system, causing it to be served on all registered users.

Dated: October 23, 2014

Respectfully submitted,

/s/ Jonathan A. Berry

Jonathan A. Berry (VSB No. 81864)
JONES DAY
51 Louisiana Avenue, N.W.
Washington, DC 20001
Telephone: (202) 879-3939
Facsimile: (202) 626-1700
Email: jberry@jonesday.com

Counsel for Robert F McDonnell

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
FOR THE EASTERN DISTRICT OF VIRGINIA
RICHMOND DIVISION

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,	)
	)
v.	)	CRIMINAL NO. 3:14-CR-00012
	)
ROBERT F. MCDONNELL	)	JUDGE JAMES R. SPENCER
MAUREEN G. MCDONNELL	)

DEFENDANT ROBERT F. MCDONNELL'S REPLY IN SUPPORT OF MOTION # 39 – RENEWED MOTION FOR JUDGMENT OF ACQUITTAL PURSUANT TO RULE 29(C) OF THE FEDERAL RULES OF CRIMINAL PROCEDURE

INTRODUCTION

There is no evidence that Mr. McDonnell ever directed, requested, or recommended that any official or employee of the Commonwealth of Virginia initiate state-sponsored studies of anatabine. That fact has forced the Government to concoct an unprecedented factual and legal theory of bribery that is not supported by any of the cases it has cited and that flatly contradicts various pronouncements of the Supreme Court. As a result, if left standing, Mr. McDonnell's conviction will be the only one in which a public official has ever been found guilty of bribery not for promising to himself influence the exercise of governmental power, but for merely facilitating access so that a third party could attempt to do so. An individual should not be imprisoned for engaging in conduct that, until this case, no court had ever before found to be a crime. The absence of governmental action benefiting Mr. Williams and his company likewise explains why the Government has also had to manufacture a theory of jurisdiction based on irrelevant facts and sheer speculation that is also without precedent. Accordingly, Mr. McDonnell is entitled to a judgment of acquittal or, in the alternative, a new trial.

ARGUMENT

I. THE GOVERNMENT FAILED TO PROVE THAT MR. MCDONNELL ENGAGED IN A QUID PRO QUO.

The Government has failed to prove that Mr. McDonnell engaged in an illicit quid pro quo because none of the actions that he allegedly performed in exchange for Mr. Williams' gifts and loans are "official acts" under the bribery laws. This is significant because, having conceded that there is no evidence of an express quid pro quo agreement, the Government could prove a quid pro quo on the facts in this case only by showing that Mr. McDonnell actually performed official acts so that the jury could infer—based on the timing of official acts and things of value—that the actions were undertaken in exchange for the gifts and loans Mr. Williams provided. Accordingly, the Government has presented evidence of five actions taken by Mr. McDonnell that the Government contends are official acts. But because none of those actions—viewed in the light most favorable to the Government—satisfy the definition of "official act" as a matter of law, the Government has failed to prove beyond a reasonable doubt that Mr. McDonnell accepted the gifts and loans from Mr. Williams in exchange for performing or promising to perform specific official acts for the benefit of Mr. Williams' company.

A. The Government Cannot Prove A Quid Pro Quo In This Case Without First Proving That Mr. McDonnell Performed "Official Acts" For Mr. Williams.

To prove an unlawful quid pro quo, the Government must show beyond a reasonable doubt that an official accepted things of value in exchange "for some specific official act or course of action." United States v. Jennings, 160 F.3d 1006, 1019 (4th Cir. 1998). The Government cannot satisfy this burden merely by showing that things of value were given "with a vague expectation of some future benefit." Id. at 1022 (quotation marks and alteration omitted). On some level, "[a]ll payments to elected officials are intended to influence their official conduct." United States v. Taylor, 993 F.2d 382, 385 (4th Cir. 1993). For that reason, the Government must prove that the official promised to "engage[] in some specific act (or omission) or course of action (or inaction)." Jennings, 160 F.3d at 1019.

In this case, the Government has no evidence that Mr. McDonnell ever promised Mr. Williams that he would undertake any specific official act or course of action in exchange for any of the gifts and loans that Mr. Williams provided. To be sure, Mr. McDonnell was aware that Mr. Williams wanted UVA and VCU to study anatabine. See Gov't Br. at 7-8 (citing testimony from the trial). But none of the transcript pages cited by the Government show that Mr. Williams asked Mr. McDonnell to undertake any specific official act or course of action to help Mr. Williams obtain the desired studies.[1] Nor do any of the transcript pages show that Mr. McDonnell promised to undertake any specific official act or course of action. Given this lack of evidence, the Government had no choice but to concede in closing arguments that "[t]here is no express agreement in this case." Tr. Vol. XXV, at 6045:10-11; see also id. at 5873:1-2 (same).

Because there was no evidence of an explicit agreement, the Government had to prove the agreement circumstantially. To do this, the Government presented evidence of five actions taken by Mr. McDonnell that it argued were official acts. The Government then argued that the jury could infer, based on the timing of gifts and alleged official acts, that Mr. McDonnell had entered into a corrupt quid pro quo arrangement with Mr. Williams. See Tr. Vol. XXV, at 6046:16-18. To prove a quid pro quo, therefore, the Government had to prove that Mr. McDonnell performed official acts for Mr. Williams.

B. None Of Mr. McDonnell's Actions For Mr. Williams Are Legally Cognizable "Official Acts."

The Government offered evidence of five actions that Mr. McDonnell undertook for the benefit of Mr. Williams and his company: (1) Mr. McDonnell "order[ed]" his Secretary of Health and Human Resources "to send a subordinate to a meeting with Mr. Williams and Mrs. McDonnell" on the subject of "the Star Scientific anatablock [sic] trials planned in va at vcu and uva," Gov't Br. at 8; (2) Mr. McDonnell approved an "Anatabloc launch" at the Governor's Mansion to "send[] a signal" to UVA and VCU that Anatabloc was "important," id. at 9; (3) Mr. McDonnell "asked his senior policy advisor to 'see me about anatabloc issues at VCU and UVA,'" id. at 10; (4) Mr. McDonnell approved an invitation list for a healthcare leaders reception at the Mansion that included Star Scientific employees and researchers from UVA and VCU, id. at 10-11, and (5) Mr. McDonnell, in a meeting with his Secretary of Administration and the Director of the Department of Human Resource Management, "pulled Anatabloc out of his pocket," said that he thought it "would be good for state employees," and instructed them to meet with Star Scientific, id. at 11-12. None of these actions satisfy the definition of "official act" as it has been applied in countless cases. Indeed, the Government has yet to identify a single case in which a court has found that merely arranging a meeting or attending an event is an official act, without also finding that the official asked, recommended, or directed that specific action be taken on the pending matter. The Government has thus failed to prove that Mr. McDonnell traded official acts for gifts and loans from Mr. Williams.

---

[1] At most, Mr. Williams asked Mr. McDonnell in a June 2011 letter to have a staff member contact Mr. Williams. Tr. Vol. IV, at 705:12-18. But merely providing access to a staff member is not an "official act," and in any event, Mr. Williams testified that he never got any response to this letter. See id.

1. The Government's Position In This Case Is Unprecedented.

An "official act" is any "decision" or "action" "on" a "matter pending before any public official[] in such official's official capacity." 18 U.S.C. § 201(a)(3). When an official arranges a meeting, attends an event, or otherwise facilitates access to himself or other decision-makers, he has not made any "decision" or taken any "action" on a "matter." Holding a meeting about job creation, for instance, is not taking action on job creation, which would entail actually implementing or advocating the implementation of policies that would create jobs. Arranging meetings and the like are merely prefatory and are not themselves decisions or actions on any particular matter pending before the official.

That is why the Government has been unable to identify a single case—not one—that sustained a bribery conviction solely because an official provided access to himself or other officials. Indeed, the only case remotely on point is United States v. Rabbitt, 583 F.2d 1014 (8th Cir. 1978), abrogated on other grounds by McNally v. United States, 483 U.S. 350 (1987), superseded by statute, 18 U.S.C. § 1346, in which the Eighth Circuit reversed the Hobbs Act conviction of a state legislator who "offered, for a fee , to introduce [an architectural] firm to people who might be able to secure architectural contracts for it." Id. at 1020. As the Eighth Circuit has explained, the conviction in Rabbitt was reversed because the official "promised only to introduce the firm to influential persons" and "did not promise to use his official position to influence those persons." United States v. Loftus, 992 F.2d 793, 796 (8th Cir. 1993); see also United States v. Urciuoli, 513 F.3d 290, 296 (1st Cir. 2008) (rejecting the notion that "trad[ing] … on the reputation, network and influence that comes with political office" or using the "access and attention" that comes with a government title are improper).

In the absence of any supporting case law, the Government attempts to embrace the Fourth Circuit's decision in Jefferson. See Gov't Br. at 15-16. But Jefferson addressed a completely different question—namely, the defendant's argument that the meaning of "official act" had been limited by Sun-Diamond to an official's formal duties, thus categorically "foreclos[ing] the use of a 'settled practice' instruction." United States v. Jefferson, 674 F.3d 332, 353 (4th Cir. 2012). The Fourth Circuit disagreed, holding that an official act could still include the informal, settled practices of an official, so long as all the elements of the official act definition were satisfied. Id. at 356. Here, by contrast, Mr. McDonnell does not dispute that an official act can include a settled practice of an official not otherwise provided for by law or regulation. Mr. McDonnell instead contends that certain settled practices, such as facilitating meetings or attending events, are not "actions" or "decisions" on "matters" without evidence that the official sought to influence "decisions that the government actually makes." Id. at 357. The Fourth Circuit in Jefferson did not address this precise argument for good reason—there was no dispute that Congressman Jefferson was actively influencing "decisions that the government actually makes," id., by, among many other things, obtaining a letter of endorsement from another congressman to help secure a contract with the Army for a bribe-paying company, id. at 342; personally participating in meetings where he encouraged Ex-Im Bank officials to fund the venture of a bribe-paying company, id. at 343; personally meeting with foreign government officials to promote the venture, id. at 344; and obtaining travel visas for representatives of a bribe-paying company, id. at 347 Congressman Jefferson thus did far more than merely facilitate access to governmental decision-makers.

To prove an official act, therefore, the Government must show—as it did in Jefferson—that the official either himself took formal action on a matter pending before the government or, if lacking authority to take such action, asked another official to do so. Thus, in Rabbitt, because the state legislator could not himself award state contracts, the Government had to show—which it failed to do—that the legislator exerted influence on the relevant decision-makers to encourage them to award the contracts. Simply making the introduction was not enough. Likewise, here, because Mr. McDonnell could not himself conduct research on anatabine, the Government had to show, at a minimum, that Mr. McDonnell asked or directed UVA or VCU officials to conduct such research. Merely providing Mr. Williams with access to UVA and VCU officials so that Mr. Williams could persuade them to his cause was not enough. In other words, providing access to officials on a matter is not the same as taking action or making a decision on the matter.

If it were otherwise, then virtually every elected official should be under federal investigation, if not already indicted. It would strain credulity to suggest that donors are not routinely afforded access to public officials and their staffs to discuss matters pending before the official.[2] The Government has steadfastly refused to offer any rebuttal to the commonsense point that its broad interpretation of "official act" would ensnare countless officials who take calls from donors, meet with donors, arrange meetings for donors, or attend events for donors. The Government's inability to do so confirms that its interpretation is unsound.

---

[2] See, e.g., McConnell v. Fed. Election Comm'n, 540 U.S. 93, 130, 150-51 (2003) (detailing the types of actions elected officials routinely take on behalf of donors, including, e.g., "mak[ing] time available in their schedules to meet with representatives of business and unions

2. Mr. McDonnell Did Not Perform An "Official Act."

None of the actions identified by the Government are "official acts" under the appropriately limited construction that Mr. McDonnell advocates. To prove that Mr. McDonnell performed an official act in furtherance of Mr. Williams' goal of obtaining research studies of anatabine, the Government must show, at a minimum, that Mr. McDonnell told UVA and VCU researchers (or other state employees) that he wanted them to conduct the research.[3] The Government claims that the defense simply "slaps the 'access' label on the actions [Mr. McDonnell] promised to and did perform for Williams," Gov't Br. at 16, but that is precisely because access is all Mr. McDonnell provided. The Government's own descriptions of Mr. McDonnell's actions make this clear. For instance, the Government claims that Mr. McDonnell "order[ed] a subordinate state employee to take a meeting" with Mr. Williams on the subject of Anatabloc trials. Id. at 20. It likewise asserts that Mr. McDonnell approved "an event at the Governor's Mansion designed to aid a particular business in its efforts to convince others in state and wealthy individuals who gave large sums to their parties" wherein they "are pressed by their benefactors to introduce legislation, to amend legislation, to block legislation, and to vote on legislation in a certain way"; "furnish[ing] their own menus of opportunities for access to would-be soft-money donors, with increased prices reflecting an increased level of access"; and "provid[ing] special access to candidates and senior Government officials in exchange for large soft-money contributions").

---

[3] This, moreover, assumes that influencing individual researchers at public universities constitutes official action. That, however, cannot possibly be correct. Otherwise, every private entity that funded research by a public university professor would be violating the federal bribery law by paying money (bribes) to professors (public officials) in exchange for them performing specific research (official acts).

government to help that business," id., that he was "involve[d] in inviting Williams and individuals Williams wanted to convince to study his product to a reception," id.; and that, in a cabinet meeting, he told his subordinates that "he thought Anatabloc 'would be good for state employees' and then instruct[ed] [them] to meet with Star Scientific," id. at 11. Missing is any evidence that Mr. McDonnell asked any UVA or VCU official to make an application to the Tobacco Commission in order to conduct the studies that Mr. Williams wanted. Indeed, there is no evidence that Mr. McDonnell ever asked or directed any state employee to initiate studies of anatabine. To the contrary, all the evidence is the opposite, as witness after witness testified that they were never pressured to make any decision on behalf of Mr. Williams or his company.[4] Thus, at most, the evidence here shows that Mr. McDonnell (or his wife) provided opportunities for Mr. Williams to have access to UVA or VCU officials (or other state employees) so that Mr. Williams could advocate for state-funded studies. Doing those things were not official acts.

The Government suggests that Mr. McDonnell implicitly signaled his desire for the state to conduct studies of anatabine. According to prosecutors, for example, Mr. McDonnell "didn't have to say a single thing" at the August 30, 2011 Mansion event because his mere presence conferred "credibility" or had a "halo effect" on Star Scientific that would have tended to influence the UVA and VCU doctors in attendance.[5] Likewise, the Government insinuates that [4] See, e.g., Tr. Vol. VII, at 1524:10-14 (Molly Huffstetler testifying that she did not perceive any pressure on her from Mr. McDonnell (or from Mrs. McDonnell) to do anything other than attend the meeting); Tr. Vol. VIII, at 1810:3-12 (Dr. Lazo affirming that Mr. McDonnell did not "come up to you and grab your arm, pull you to the corner, and say, 'Listen, I really want you to go research this stuff"); Tr. Vol. VII, at 1668:13-16 (Jasen Eige testifying that Mr. McDonnell "never pushed back or never directed me to actually go forward and try to make something happen with the universities").

---

[5] Tr. Vol. XXV, at 5843:25-5844:9, 5845:10-15; see also id. at 5849:24-5850:3 (explaining "how the Governor's attendance added gravitas to their effort and could influence officials from UVA and VCU"); Gov't Br. at 9 & n.2 (explaining that the event was designed to "send[] a signal to those medical schools that this is important" and "to have an impact on the

Mr. McDonnell pulling out a bottle of Anatabloc during a meeting, telling his subordinates that it worked for him and could be good for state employees, and then asking them to meet with Star Scientific are tantamount to a directive that the state "perform research studies on state government employees who used the product." Gov't Br. at 11-12.

Even assuming that Mr. McDonnell's conduct could be perceived as sending implicit signals, merely attending an event for a donor or praising the efficacy of a donor's product while facilitating a meeting are plainly not enough to establish that "action" on a matter has been taken. After all, every campaign donor who displays in his office or advertisements photos of himself with influential politicians does so in order to confer "credibility" on his company. That does not convert the campaign donations that provided those photo-ops into "bribes." That is precisely why in Rabbitt, the state legislator "recommended" a specific architecture firm "as competent architects to persons authorized to employ architects for state projects," 583 F.2d at 1020, and yet the Eighth Circuit still found no improper official action because the legislator "did not promise to use his official position to influence those persons," Loftus, 992 F.2d at 796. The Government's position, in contrast, would vest federal prosecutors with the broad power to transform virtually any event that a public official attends or any meeting that a public official facilitates into an official act on the nebulous theory that it conferred "credibility" on other attendees at the event. That cannot possibly be the law. Rather, to find that action on a matter has been taken requires more than vague allegations of a "halo effect"; it requires a clear articulation by the official of what action he desires to be taken on the matter. Here, because Mr.

UVa and VCU researchers who Williams wanted to study his product"); id. at 25 n.7 (arguing that "'pressure' and 'influence' come in varied forms, and the question is not how forceful the actions were that Mr. McDonnell took or promised to take on a question, matter, or cause to help Mr. Williams—it is whether he took or promised any such action").

McDonnell never asked, recommended, or instructed any state employee to conduct studies of anatabine – nor promised to do so – he performed no legally cognizable official act.

The Government also argues that Mr. McDonnell took official action by asking his senior policy advisor to "see me about anatabloc issues at VCU and UVA." Gov't Br. at 10; GX-320. The Government omits that Mr. McDonnell's inquiry resulted in the rejection of assistance to Mr. Williams and his company.[6] Mr. McDonnell's request to meet with his staffer, therefore, cannot possibly constitute official action under the federal bribery laws. Instead, it was, at worst, nothing more than a "purely informational inquiry," which the D.C. Circuit has squarely held is not an "official act." United States v. Ring, 706 F.3d 460, 470 (D.C. Cir. 2013) (citing Valdes v. United States, 475 F.3d 1319, 1324-25 (D.C. Cir. 2007) (en banc)). Indeed, if merely inquiring about a matter is itself an official act, then virtually every public official is a potential criminal since officials routinely make inquiries into matters of concern to their donors. The Government's interpretation of "official act" would criminalize this innocuous courtesy.

In sum, not one of the actions undertaken by Mr. McDonnell for Mr. Williams qualifies as an "official act" under any reasonable interpretation of that term.

C. The Government's Counterarguments Are Wrong.

The Government challenges Mr. McDonnell's interpretation of official act in two respects, both of which are flawed. First, the Government contends that the official act definition says nothing about ingratiation and access and that Mr. McDonnell's reliance on Citizens United v. Federal Election Commission, 558 U.S. 310 (2010), is misplaced because that case does not purport to address the meaning of "official act" under the bribery laws. See Gov't Br. at 17-18. Second, the Government contends that the definition of official act says nothing about exercising government power, which in any event, it believes, could include the actions taken by Mr. McDonnell. See Gov't Br. at 19-20. Both arguments are wrong.

---

[6] The advisor had already called Mr. Williams' lobbyist to "change the expectations of his client" so as to "shut [Mr. Williams'] request down." Tr. Vol. VII, at 1664:23-1665:4; id. at 1668:3-6. Nothing further was pursued, and the advisor testified that Mr. McDonnell "never followed back up," "never pushed back," and "never directed me to actually go forward and try to make something happen with the universities." Id. at 1668:13-16.

1. Citizens United Supports Mr. McDonnell's Interpretation Of "Official Act."

As a threshold matter, the Government's argument that the statutory definition of official act does not mention "access" or "governmental power" is entirely beside the point.[7] The definition also does not mention "settled practice," and yet courts have long construed official act to include the settled practices of public officials. The question, then, is what does the definition—"action" or "decision" "on" a "matter"—mean. The Government contends that an official act is anything an official does in his official capacity, as determined by law or settled practice, so long as the action pertains to any "matter" of interest to an official. But, as Mr. McDonnell has explained elsewhere, this definition is so broad that it would sweep in countless innocuous activities of public officials, including activities—e.g., the Secretary of Agriculture giving a speech on USDA policy to farmers—that the Supreme Court has explicitly said are not official acts under the statutory definition. See United States v. Sun-Diamond Growers of Calif., 526 U.S. 398, 407 (1999). The Government has yet to offer any response to this point.

Since the Government's broad interpretation is unworkable and conflicts with Supreme Court precedent, a more limited interpretation is required. And on that question, Citizens United and McCutcheon v. Federal Election Commission, 134 S. Ct. 1434 (2014), provide directly relevant guidance. As the Government points out, see Gov't Br. at 17, the Supreme Court explained in Citizens United that independent expenditures in support of a public official—assuredly a "thing of value"—do not even raise the appearance of quid pro quo corruption because "there is only scant evidence that independent expenditures even ingratiate." Citizens United, 558 U.S. at 360. But the Court went further, explaining that even if independent expenditures did result in "ingratiation and access," that still would not constitute quid pro quo corruption. Id. Remarkably, the Government's interpretation of official act would permit overzealous prosecutors to criminalize conduct—access for things of value—that the Supreme Court has stated is not even corruption. The Government's inability to articulate an interpretation of official act that does not run roughshod over Supreme Court pronouncements—not to mention routine political practices—proves that its interpretation is fatally flawed.

---

[7] The relevant statutes do not reference "official act" at all. That requirement, rather, applies only by analogy to other statutes. See, e.g., Skilling v. United States, 561 U.S. 358, 412 (2010) (explaining that the honest-services fraud statute draws content "from federal statutes proscribing—and defining—similar crimes").

At bottom, merely providing access is not an official act that could support charges of quid pro quo corruption because it is not "action" "on" a "matter." By declaring that "[i]ngratiation and access . . . are not corruption," id., Citizens United supports this point.[8]

2. An "Official Act" Must Have As Its Object The Exercise Of Governmental Power.

An action or decision is not "on" a "matter" unless it exercises or influences the exercise of governmental power. Although the Government contests this proposition, see Gov't Br. at 19, it is well established that "[i]t is the corruption of official positions through the misuse of influence in governmental decision-making which the bribery statutes make criminal." United States v. Carson, 464 F.2d 424, 434 (2d Cir. 1972) (emphasis added); see also Valdes, 475 F.3d at 1324 (explaining that "the six-term series" of words in the official act definition "refers to a class of questions or matters whose answer or disposition is determined by the government" (emphasis added)). Numerous cases illustrate this basic principle.

---

[8] The Government also completely misses the point when it characterizes Mr. McDonnell as arguing that "'ingratiation' or 'access' can never be present" in a bribery scheme. Gov't Br. at 18. Of course, ingratiation and access will often be present in a bribery scheme, but it is not "ingratiation" or "access" that makes it bribery.

In Valdes, for instance, a policeman took payments in exchange for performing searches for license plates, outstanding warrants, and the like using an official police database. 475 F.3d at 1321-22. The Government argued "that the bribery statute should be construed broadly, to encompass essentially any action which implicates the duties and powers of a public official." Id. at 1322. The D.C. Circuit rejected this construction, holding that the "official act" concept does not subsume "officials' moonlighting, or their misuse of government resources, or the two in combination"; rather, the Government must prove that the defendant exerted "inappropriate influence on decisions that the government actually makes." Id. at 1324-25. Yet under the Government's theory here, the policeman in Valdes plainly exercised "official action"—and the Government, which does not even cite Valdes in its briefs, does not contend otherwise.

Similarly, in United States v. Muntain, 610 F.2d 964, 966-67 (D.C. Cir. 1979), a HUD official was convicted for allegedly accepting illegal gratuities after selling group automobile insurance policies to labor unions that he met as part of his official duties. The official "frequently combine[d] the promotion of the automobile insurance with trips taken at government expense for the purpose of conferring with labor officials across the United States concerning official business." Id. at 966-67. The official argued that selling insurance policies was not an "official act" because it did not "involve[] any question, matter, cause, suit, proceeding or controversy which by law might have been brought before [him]." Id. at 967. The Government, by contrast, contended that "any acts within the range of an official's public duties" are "official acts," including any meetings "to discuss matters of interest to the unions." Id. The D.C. Circuit rejected the Government's construction and vacated the conviction: "To the extent that [the defendant's] use of his official position to promote a purely private venture created an appearance of impropriety, his conduct is reprehensible, but it is not criminal." Id. at 967-68.

These cases make clear that it is not the mere use of government personnel or resources that constitutes official action; it is the use of an official's office to influence government decisions—or, in other words, to influence the exercise of governmental power—that constitutes official action. The Government therefore errs in arguing that merely ordering a subordinate to take a meeting, approving an event at the Governor's Mansion, and inviting constituents to a taxpayer-funded reception are—without more—official acts. See Gov't Br. at 19-20. Although these actions certainly involve the use of government personnel or resources, they do not constitute official acts under the statutory definition without evidence that the official sought to influence a government decision or action on a pending matter.

To be sure, to perform an official act, an official need not himself exercise the powers of the government through some "formalized act[] written in laws." See Gov't Br. at 19. An official act can be as simple as sending a letter to an official who has formal authority requesting that certain action be taken on a pending matter. See, e.g., United States v. Biaggi, 853 F.2d 89, 98 (2d Cir. 1988) (writing letters using congressional stationery to secure a Navy contract for the bribe-paying company). But it is not the mere sending of the letter that constitutes the official act; it is the attempt to influence the recipient in the exercise of a governmental decision or action on the matter, so long as it is the settled practice of the official to do so. This was, after all, the point of United States v. Birdsall, 233 U.S. 223 (1914), in which two "special officers" appointed by the Commissioner of Indian Affairs were convicted of accepting bribes in exchange for recommending to the Commissioner that certain individuals convicted of illegal liquor trafficking be given lenient sentences. Id. at 229-30. The officials' authority to make sentencing recommendations was not established by statute or regulation, but was established by settled practice. Id. at 230-36. And even though the officials did not have final decision-making authority, they nonetheless performed an official act by recommending leniency, thereby using their power to influence a governmental decision on the matter of sentencing.

Here, by contrast, there is no evidence that Mr. McDonnell directed, asked, or even recommended that any state government official or employee exercise the powers of a state government agency—here, UVA or VCU—by making an application to the Tobacco Commission or otherwise pursuing a program to conduct research on anatabine. Without this evidence, the most that any reasonable juror could have found is that Mr. McDonnell arranged access for Mr. Williams. But merely providing access is not—and cannot be—an official act.

3. The Government's Position Contravenes Numerous Settled Principles Of Statutory Construction.

Finally, the Government's position is foreclosed by numerous canons of construction that require all ambiguities here to be interpreted in favor of Mr. McDonnell. See Mem. in Support of Mot. to Dismiss, Dkt. 106, at 14-16. In this country, the Government may not deprive individuals of their liberty unless the laws at issue are clear and unambiguous. Here, the Government has not possibly met its burden, since it has yet to identify a single case in which a public official was found to have violated the honest-services fraud statute or Hobbs Act for conduct that is even remotely analogous to that at issue here, and every case that even touches the issue has rejected the Government's position. This alone is reason enough to reject the unbounded theory upon which the Government secured a criminal conviction in this case.

II. THE GOVERNMENT'S AFTER-THE-FACT ATTEMPT TO MANUFACTURE HOBBS ACT JURISDICTION FAILS.

In response to Mr. McDonnell's argument that it failed to adduce adequate proof of the Hobbs Act's jurisdictional predicate, the Government engages in an ex post scramble to cobble together its evidence of this key element of Counts 5-11. Apparently having lost confidence in the theory of Hobbs Act jurisdiction that it actually argued to the jury—that the scheme to obtain university studies of Anatabloc, if successful, would have had a positive impact on Star Scientific's business, see Tr. Vol. XXV, at 5891:12-21—the Government now points to every mention of interstate commerce that it can dredge up from the record and argues that this collection of miscellaneous facts is adequate to carry its burden. This last-minute gambit fails. Indeed, the Government does not cite a single case holding that Hobbs Act jurisdiction existed on analogous facts; and all of the relevant cases support Mr. McDonnell's position.

As an initial matter, the Government cannot be allowed to hide behind the jury's guilty verdict. The Government effectively argues that the verdict cannot be second-guessed if there is any evidence of interstate commercial activity in the record; it dismissively refers to Mr. McDonnell's attack on the jurisdictional basis of his Hobbs Act convictions as "little more than a jury argument." Gov't Opp'n at 28. But "[t]he question of whether a defendant's conduct satisfies the jurisdictional predicate of the Hobbs Act is one of law." United States v. Bengali, 11 F.3d 1207, 1211 (4th Cir. 1993). This Court need not defer to the jury's verdict of guilty where the conduct in question does not establish an adequate jurisdictional basis for Mr. McDonnell's Hobbs Act convictions. See, e.g., United States v. Buffey, 899 F.2d 1402, 1407 (4th Cir. 1990) (reversing defendants' Hobbs Act convictions for lack of jurisdiction after jury returned a guilty verdict "because, even believing all of the underlying facts presented by the government, we cannot say that it is reasonably probable that the extortion [the defendants] conspired to commit would have had an impact on interstate commerce"). Similarly, where the prosecution asks the jury to find a probability of an effect on commerce, it cannot leave it to the jury to draw "strained inferences" from the record. United States v. Peterson, 236 F.3d 848, 855 (7th Cir. 2001). "To render a guilty verdict, the jury must hear sufficient evidence [of a federal jurisdictional nexus] to avoid resorting to guesswork." Id. Reversal of a conviction on the basis of insufficient evidence is appropriate where the prosecution fails to fulfill its duty. See id. (reversing Hobbs Act conviction where "the inferences offered [by the Government's expert witness] were too attenuated to establish that [the robbery victim] ran an interstate business").

Moreover, the Supreme Court's decision in Jones v. United States, 529 U.S. 848 (2000), makes clear that the mere fact that the Government may adduce some connection with interstate commercial activity in a given case does not mean that the jurisdictional predicate is satisfied. Rather, a statute's jurisdictional nexus must be given limiting effect. There, the Court considered whether the federal arson statute, 18 U.S.C. 844(i), which criminalizes arson of a "building used in interstate commerce," applies to arson of a residence. The Government argued that the residence was "used in interstate commerce" because it was used as security on a home loan with an out-of-state lender, was insured by an out-of-state insurer, and received deliveries of natural gas from out of state. Jones, 529 U.S. at 855. But the Supreme Court rejected this argument, finding that the Government's strained construction of the statute was not only at odds with common sense, it also raised serious constitutional doubts because it would make every act of arson a federal crime. Id. at 856-59. Instead, the Court held, "the provision covers only property currently used in commerce or in an activity affecting commerce." Id. at 859.

The same principles of statutory interpretation and federalism set forth in Jones apply to the Hobbs Act. The requirement that the relevant act of extortion or robbery "obstruct[], delay[], or affect[] commerce," 18 U.S.C. § 1951(a), must be given effect. It is not enough to show some tangential relationship between the facts of a given case and interstate commerce. Consistent with these principles, where the Government alleges that a defendant "affect[ed] commerce by extortion," courts generally look to two possible jurisdictional predicates. In some cases, the payment of the extortionate demands supplies the jurisdictional nexus; to take a common example, the assets of a business engaged in interstate commerce may be depleted by making such payments. See, e.g., Bengali, 11 F.3d at 1212. In other cases, the accomplishment of the extortionate scheme affects commerce. Where extortion under color of official right is alleged, courts have looked to the impact that the corruptly traded official act had, or would have had, on commerce. See, e.g., United States v. Bailey, 990 F.2d 119 (4th Cir. 1993) (finding Hobbs Act jurisdiction where legislator sold his vote for a bill that, if passed, would have caused an increase in interstate travel to South Carolina); United States v. Taylor, 966 F.2d 830 (4th Cir. 1992) (same). Here, the Government has not introduced proof of either type of effect.

The Government relies principally on two types of evidence.[9] First, it points to evidence that third parties traveled interstate to attend the Anatabloc "launch" at the executive mansion and the healthcare leaders reception and that Mrs. McDonnell traveled to several out-of-state events to support Anatabloc. Tellingly, the Government cites no case from any jurisdiction to support its newly minted theory that interstate travel by third parties incident to an extortion or robbery scheme establishes the requisite effect on interstate commerce. The caselaw, in fact, stands for the opposite proposition: even where participants in an extortion or robbery travel interstate, more evidence of an effect on commerce must be present before Hobbs Act jurisdiction exists. For example, in United States v. Marrero, the victims of the extortion traveled across state lines to buy drugs from the defendants, who robbed them instead. The Seventh Circuit found that the interstate travel of the victims was relevant only because it helped establish that they were engaged in an interstate business the assets of which were depleted by the robbery; the travel did not, in itself, provide Hobbs Act jurisdiction. See 299 F.3d 653, 656 (7th Cir. 2002). Even where co-conspirators travel interstate during the course of a conspiracy, courts of appeals have been unwilling to find that Hobbs Act jurisdiction exists without an additional showing of an effect on commerce. See United States v. Bencivengo, 749 F.3d 205, 215 n.8 (3d Cir. 2014) ("[C]ourts have typically been careful to note that interstate travel does not, by itself, suffice to establish jurisdiction under the Hobbs Act."); see also, e.g., United States v. Le, 256 F.3d 1229, 1236 n.7 (11th Cir. 2001) (noting that "the fact that some of the co-conspirators traveled interstate is not the sole basis for jurisdiction under the Hobbs Act in this case, but rather, it is only one element which, in conjunction with other circumstances, provides that jurisdiction"). Without more, the interstate travel upon which the Government belatedly relies cannot rescue its case.

---

[9] In addition to the two categories discussed at length here, the Government also cites record evidence that the Kinloch Golf Club charges that constitute the basis of Count 8 were expensed to Star Scientific. It is too late in the day to litigate the case on this theory. The Government did not argue this depletion of assets theory to the jury, and the jury received no instruction on this theory of jurisdiction. The prosecution cannot defeat a sufficiency of the evidence challenge by raising a theory that was never presented to the jury. See United States v. Labat, 905 F.2d 18, 23 (2d Cir. 1990) (holding, on a sufficiency of the evidence challenge, that "[w]e may not permissibly infer either that the jury found [the defendant] guilty on a theory as to which it was not instructed, or that, had the jury been properly instructed on that theory, it would have found him guilty on that basis" (citations omitted)).

The Government's second category of supposed evidence of an effect on interstate commerce is, as Mr. McDonnell has already argued, purely conjectural. Relying on evidence that Star Scientific had offices in several states and that Mr. Williams traveled from state to state promoting his product, the Government argues in general terms that if the conspiracy had been more successful—that is, if the Anatabloc studies had gone forward—Star would have benefited. But the Government's argument on this point is devoid not only of citations to any relevant authorities but also of meaningful citations to the record. For example, the Government simply states, without support, that "the 'Virginia Study' would have resulted in effects felt far beyond Virginia." Gov't Opp'n at 27. This postulation is unsupported by evidence in the record. Similarly, the Government states, without record support, that Mr. Williams' "goal" was "for Anatabloc to become more scientifically validated so that it would receive further regulatory approval and consumer acceptance—and increase revenues in his interstate company." Id. at 27-28. Such assertions are not evidence. But even if this unsupported statement were true, the intent of a co-conspirator is not sufficient to establish the requisite effect on commerce; proof of probabilities must be made. United States v. Staszcuk, 517 F.2d 53, 60 (7th Cir. 1975).

The only concrete record evidence that the Government points to in support of its argument that obtaining the Anatabloc studies would have affected commerce is the evidence that Mrs. McDonnell traveled interstate with Mr. Williams in the past. The jury could reasonably have inferred, the Government argues, that more such travel would have taken place if Star's business had been boosted by the studies. Gov't Opp'n at 28. But such interstate travel is precisely the type of evidence that courts of appeals have found to be insufficient, standing alone, to establish Hobbs Act jurisdiction. By using this evidence to show both an actual effect on commerce and a probable effect on commerce, the Government is simply bootstrapping.

CONCLUSION

The Court should grant Mr. McDonnell a judgment of acquittal on Counts 1-11. In the alternative, it should grant Mr. McDonnell a new trial.

Dated: October 24, 2014

Respectfully submitted,

/s/ Jonathan A. Berry

Henry W Asbill (pro hac vice)
Mary Ellen Powers (pro hac vice)
Noel J. Francisco (pro hac vice)
Ryan D. Newman (pro hac vice)
James M. Burnham (pro hac vice)
Jonathan A. Berry (VSB No. 81864)
JONES DAY
51 Louisiana Avenue, N.W
Washington, D.C. 20001
Telephone: (202) 879-3939
Facsimile: (202) 626-1700

John L. Brownlee (VSB No. 37358)
HOLLAND & KNIGHT LLP
800 17th Street, N.W
Suite 1100
Washington, D.C. 20006
Telephone: (202) 828-1854
Facsimile: (202) 955-5564

Counsel for Robert F McDonnell

CERTIFICATE OF SERVICE

I, Jonathan A. Berry, am a member of the Bar of this Court. I hereby certify that on this 24th day of October, 2014, I caused the foregoing to be electronically filed with the Clerk of Court using the CM/ECF system, causing it to be served on all registered users.

Dated: October 24, 2014

Respectfully submitted,

/s/ Jonathan A. Berry
Jonathan A. Berry (VSB No. 81864)
JONES DAY
51 Louisiana Avenue, N.W
Washington, D.C. 20001
Telephone: (202) 879-3939
Facsimile: (202) 626-1700
Email: jberry@jonesday.com

Counsel for Robert F McDonnell

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
FOR THE EASTERN DISTRICT OF VIRGINIA
RICHMOND DIVISION

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,	)
	)
v.	)	CRIMINAL NO. 3:14-CR-00012
	)
ROBERT F. MCDONNELL	)	JUDGE JAMES R. SPENCER
MAUREEN G. MCDONNELL	)

MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT OF DEFENDANT ROBERT F. MCDONNELL'S MOTION # 40 – MOTION FOR NEW TRIAL PURSUANT TO RULE 33 OF THE FEDERAL RULES OF CRIMINAL PROCEDURE

INTRODUCTION

On September 4, 2014, a jury convicted Mr. McDonnell on eleven counts for committing, and conspiring to commit, honest services wire fraud and extortion under color of official right. Not only is the verdict based on legally insufficient evidence, see Mem. in Support of Def. Robert F McDonnell's Renewed Mot. for J. of Acquittal, but it is also predicated on numerous legal errors that deprived Mr. McDonnell of a fair trial and allowed the jury to convict him on legally erroneous grounds that would ensnare virtually any public official. Without waiving any other arguments that he has preserved, Mr. McDonnell requests that the Court vacate the jury's flawed verdict and grant a new trial for the following four reasons.

- First, the Court's jury instructions were legally erroneous because they (1) allowed the jury to convict Mr. McDonnell on an erroneous understanding of "official act" and (2) allowed a conviction on the theory that Mr. McDonnell accepted things of value that were given for future unspecified action.

- Second, Mr. McDonnell was deprived of his right to an impartial jury due to an inadequate inquiry into each prospective juror's exposure to the near constant, overwhelmingly prejudicial publicity before the trial.

- Third, the Court failed to voir dire the jurors in light of evidence that they had prematurely begun deliberations in violation of the Court's instructions.

- Finally, the Court erroneously admitted highly prejudicial Rule 404(b) evidence that Mr. McDonnell received things of value from William Goodwin and that Mr. McDonnell's staff had organized free golf for him.

ARGUMENT

Under Rule of Criminal Procedure 33(a), "the court may vacate any judgment and grant a new trial if the interest of justice so requires." Mr. McDonnell's trial contained numerous legal errors that deprived him of a fair trial and allowed the jury to convict him on a legally erroneous basis. Therefore, the Court should vacate the jury's verdict and grant a new trial.

I. MR. MCDONNELL IS ENTITLED TO A NEW TRIAL BECAUSE THE COURT'S INSTRUCTIONS WERE LEGALLY ERRONEOUS.

It is not a crime under the federal corruption laws for an official to accept a thing of value knowing that it was "given simply with the generalized hope or expectation of ultimate benefit on the part of the donor." United States v. Jennings, 160 F.3d 1006, 1013 (4th Cir. 1998) (internal quotation marks omitted). "Vague expectations of some future benefit" are not "sufficient to make a payment a bribe." Id. (quoting United States v. Allen, 10 F.3d 405, 411 (7th Cir. 1993)). Instead, the Government must prove that an official accepted things of value that he knew were made in return "for some specific official act or course of action." Id. at 1019. The Court's jury instructions turn these principles on their head (1) by allowing the jury to convict Mr. McDonnell on an erroneous understanding of "official act" and (2) by allowing a conviction on the theory that things of value were given and accepted for unspecified future help. Under these instructions, prosecutors may pursue virtually any elected public official in America who does anything in his or her official capacity for anyone who gives them something of value—including, it bears emphasizing, campaign contributions. If accepted, this would revolutionize the relationship between politics and the criminal law, criminalizing routine political courtesies. This is not the law. Rather, as the Supreme Court has repeatedly emphasized, "[i]ngratiation and access . . . are not corruption." Citizens United v. Fed. Election Comm'n, 558 U.S. 310, 360 (2010).

A. The Court's Instructions Were Improper Because They Invited The Jury To Convict Mr. McDonnell On An Erroneous Understanding Of "Official Act."

The Government argued to the jury that anything Mr. McDonnell did in his official capacity as Governor involving Virginia business development was an official act. This is contrary not only to the statutory definition of "official act," but to all of the relevant precedents as well. Because the Court's "official act" instruction permitted the jury to convict Mr. McDonnell on a legally erroneous understanding of official act, the instruction was improper.

1. In their summation, the prosecutors identified five actions Mr. McDonnell took that they told the jurors were official acts.

- First, the prosecutors argued that "directing Dr. Hazel to send somebody" to a meeting between Mrs. McDonnell and Mr. Williams was an official act. Tr. Vol. XXV, at 5869:17-18. According to the prosecutors, "Jonnie Williams wanted to meet with somebody from the Health and Human Resources [department], and he got that meeting." Id. at 6040:11-13.

- Second, the prosecutors argued to the jury that the Mansion event was an official act because it was "ultimately approved by the Governor." Id. at 5843:13. According to the prosecutors, Mr. McDonnell "didn't have to say a single thing" at the event because his mere presence conferred "credibility" or had a "halo effect" on Star Scientific with respect to the UVA and VCU doctors in attendance, whom Mr. Williams hoped to impress. Id. at 5843:25-5844:9, 5845:10-15; see also 5849:24-5850:3 (explaining "how the Governor's attendance added gravitas to their effort and could influence officials from UVA and VCU").

- Third, the prosecutors argued that Mr. McDonnell "e-mailing his policy director" to ask the director to see him about Anatabloc studies at UVA and VCU was an official act. Id. at 6040:24-6041:8. The sum total of the prosecutors' explanation for why that qualifies is that Mr. McDonnell was "emailing"—that is, "[h]e's doing something." Id. at 6041:8.

- Fourth, the prosecutors argued that "the Virginia Healthcare Leaders event" was an official act. Id. at 5869:19-20. Apparently, Mr. McDonnell performed an official act because he knew when he attended the event that "Ms. McDonnell had basically blessed Mr. Williams inviting who he wanted" to attend. Id. at 6041:9-14. The prosecutors also argued to the jury that Mr. McDonnell had singled out Dr. Paul Ladenson, a Star consultant, when giving remarks at the event, thus implying that even that innocuous courtesy was an official act. See id. at 6041:19-6042:2.

- Fifth, the prosecutors argued that "Mr. McDonnell meeting with Lisa Hicks-Thomas and Sara Wilson, asking them to reach out to the Star people, or strongly suggesting as much," was an official act. Id. at 5869:20-23. According to the prosecutors, "[t]he Governor of Virginia pulling out a product and talking to his senior advisors in a meeting about lowering healthcare costs in Virginia" is the equivalent of saying, "You should meet with them." Id. at 6042:7-11.

In explaining why these acts were official, the prosecutors argued that "Mr. McDonnell's involvement with every single one of these things was in his official capacity as Governor, whether it was approving the Mansion event or directing conduct by a subordinate," id. at 5870:2-6, and that each of the actions was on the matter of "Virginia business development," id. at 5869:23-24. The Government thus invited the jury to find that Mr. McDonnell had performed official acts merely by acting in his official capacity, so long as there was some connection to "Virginia business development." On the Government's view, therefore, merely arranging a meeting, emailing a subordinate, and hosting an event—without anything more—are official acts, provided that they have some relation to a "matter," however broadly defined.

2. The Government's overbroad interpretation of "official act" is directly at odds with Supreme Court and Fourth Circuit precedent. The Fourth Circuit has made clear that "the bribery statute does not encompass every action taken in one's official capacity"; rather, those actions "must yet adhere to the definition confining an official act to a pending 'question, matter, cause, suit, proceeding or controversy.'" United States v. Jefferson, 674 F.3d 332, 356 (4th Cir. 2010) (citation omitted). And it is no crime for a public official to accept gifts that were given merely "because of his office." United States v. Taylor, 993 F.2d 382, 385-86 (4th Cir. 1993). "This would cover almost all payments to officeholders." Id. at 386. The Supreme Court has similarly explained that "receiving [] sports teams at the White House, visiting [a] high school, and speaking to [] farmers about USDA policy"—while "assuredly 'official acts' in some sense"—"are not 'official acts' within the meaning" of the federal bribery laws. United States v. Sun-Diamond Growers of Calif., 526 U.S. 398, 407 (1999). But on the Government's view, the Secretary of Agriculture "speaking to [] farmers about USDA policy" would qualify as an official act since "speaking to [] farmers" is an action within the Secretary's official capacity—in other words, a settled practice of the Secretary—and "USDA policy" is a matter pending before the Secretary. Because the Government's logic cannot be squared with Sun-Diamond, Jefferson, and other cases, it must be rejected.

An "official act," therefore, is not just any action related to a broadly defined matter that is taken in an official's official capacity. Rather, it is an action or decision on a matter, and that requires the official to himself exercise the regulatory power of the government or, if the official does not have actual or final authority over the matter, at the very least, to ask the relevant decision-maker to exercise the powers of the government on the matter. This explains why merely giving a speech about a matter is not—in and of itself—an official act, unless the official calls upon other officials to exercise governmental power. Thus, for instance, the Secretary of Agriculture's speech to farmers about USDA policy is not an official act, but a speech directing his Assistant Secretary to award a contract or to promulgate a specific regulation would be an official act. Similarly, attending a meeting or event or directing a subordinate to attend a meeting or event are not—in and of themselves—official acts, unless the official also asks or directs that specific governmental action be taken. Merely providing access—in other words—is not an action or decision on a matter and thus not an official act. See generally Mem. in Support of Def. Robert F. McDonnell's Mot. to Dismiss Counts 1-11 of the Indictment, Dkt. 106 ("Motion to Dismiss"), at 7-19; Mem. in Support of Def. Robert F. McDonnell's Mot. for J. of Acquittal, Dkt. 409 ("First Rule 29 Motion"). This is why, to date, the Government has failed to identify a single case that adopts its unbounded theory of "official act."[1]

---

[1] At best, the statutes here are ambiguous and therefore must be construed narrowly in favor of Mr. McDonnell. See Staples v. United States, 511 U.S. 600, 619 n.17 (1994) ("[A]n ambiguous criminal statute is to be construed in favor of the accused . . . ."); Penn. Dep't of Corr. v. Yeskey, 524 U.S. 206, 208-09 (1998) ("[A]bsent an unmistakably clear expression of intent to alter the usual constitutional balance between the States and the Federal Government,

3. The Court's "official act" instruction is erroneous because it invited the jurors to find that official acts can be nothing more than arranging meetings, attending events, or emailing subordinates. Although the Court stated the statutory definition of "official act" as "any decision or action on any question, matter, cause, suit, proceeding, or controversy, which may at any time be pending, or which may by law be brought before any public official, in such public official's official capacity," it then continued in a way that plainly invited the jury to embrace the Government's unbounded and unprecedented theory of "official act":

> Official action as I just defined it includes those actions that have been clearly established by settled practice as part of a public official's position, even if the action was not taken pursuant to responsibilities explicitly assigned by law. In other words, official actions may include acts that a public official customarily performs, even if those actions are not described in any law, rule, or job description. And a public official need not have actual or final authority over the end result sought by a bribe payor so long as the alleged bribe payor reasonably believes that the public official had influence, power or authority over a means to the end sought by the bribe payor. In addition, official action can include actions taken in furtherance of longer-term goals, and an official action is no less official because it is one in a series of steps to exercise influence or achieve an end.

Tr. Vol. XXVI, at 6102:18-6103:14.

Although an official act may include actions that have been established by settled practice, the bare fact that an action is a settled practice does not make it an official act. The Government must still show that the action or decision involved the exercise of actual governmental power—the actual regulatory power of the state. Yet the Court's instructions provide no guidance about what makes a settled practice an action or decision on a matter.

(continued...)

we will interpret a statute to preserve rather than destroy the States' substantial sovereign powers." (internal quotation marks omitted)); FCC v. Fox Television Stations, Inc., 556 U.S. 502, 516 (2009) ("The so-called canon of constitutional avoidance is an interpretive tool, counseling that ambiguous statutory language be construed to avoid serious constitutional doubts.").

While instructing the jury about settled practices, the Court failed to explain the rest of the definition. Given the definition's unwieldy language, the Court's instruction would inevitably mislead the typical juror to erroneously conclude that an official act is any settled practice of an official. And, of course, the prosecutors took full advantage of the Court's misleading instruction, repeatedly telling the jurors that an official act includes any settled practice, including simply arranging a meeting, attending an event, or emailing a subordinate. See Tr. Vol. XXV, at 5869:12-15, 6039:6-11. The Court's instructions thus elide the critical distinction between settled practices that are official acts and those that are not. Instead, the instructions focus exclusively on the principle—irrelevant and undisputed in this case—that an official act can include settled practices, without further explaining when a settled practice does or does not constitute official action.

The Court's misleading—and thus legally erroneous—emphasis on settled practices is compounded by the erroneous instruction that "official action can include actions taken in furtherance of longer-term goals, and an official action is no less official because it is one in a series of steps to exercise influence or achieve an end." Tr. Vol. XXVI, at 6103:10-14. This language was not part of the "official act" instruction in Jefferson. Indeed, the Government, in proposing this instruction, cited no on-point legal authority whatsoever—an absence that is telling. That an act may be "taken in furtherance of longer-term goals" or is "one in a series of steps to exercise influence or achieve an end" bears no relation to the actual definition of "official act." The Court's instruction invited the jury to conclude that any action taken in service of a long-term goal of exercising influence is itself an official act. But that is not the law—actions that are otherwise not a decision or action on a matter do not somehow become, in and of themselves, official acts simply because they may be taken with some longer-term goal in mind. An official act is a decision or action on a matter, regardless of whether it was taken in furtherance of a longer-term goal. And the defense has never argued that an act otherwise satisfying the definition of "official act" is somehow less official because it is one in a series of steps to achieve some end. The Government obviously proposed this instruction to fit its erroneous legal theory that an official act is anything done in an official's official capacity, even if it is not—in any real sense—an action or decision on a matter. The Court erred by including the instruction, and this error allowed the jury to conclude that actions that clearly do not satisfy the statutory definition of "official act"—such as emailing a staffer—somehow become official acts because they were (allegedly) taken in service of some goal.

In sum, taken as a whole, the Court's "official act" instruction improperly allowed—if not affirmatively invited—the jury to accept the Government's legally erroneous theory that Mr. McDonnell performed an official act merely because he took an action in his official capacity.

B. The Court's Instructions Were Improper Because They Invited The Jury To Convict Mr. McDonnell Based On A Promise Of Unspecified Future Action.

Despite identifying acts performed by Mr. McDonnell that they believed were official, the prosecutors nonetheless argued repeatedly that the Government was not even required to prove that an official act had actually been performed, so long as there was a corrupt agreement. See Tr. Vol. XXV, at 5869:8-10 (prosecutor arguing that "we don't even have to prove that he did any official acts so long as we prove the corrupt agreement"); id. at 6039:21-23 (prosecutor arguing that "the government doesn't have to prove there was any quo, we just have to prove the corrupt agreement"); id. at 6042:15 (prosecutor arguing that "we don't have to prove any one of those" official acts). The Court confirmed this in its instructions. See Tr. Vol. XXVI, at 6100:18-6101:1 (court instructing the jury that "it is not necessary that any official action was taken by the public official in the course of the scheme"). But if a corrupt agreement is all that the Government must prove, then the jury must also be instructed that, to find such an agreement, it must find that the things of value were given in exchange for "some specific official act or course of action." Jennings, 160 F.3d at 1019.

It is not enough for the Government to prove that things of value were given "with a vague expectation of some future benefit." Id. at 1022 (quotation marks and alterations omitted). That is because, on some level, "[a]ll payments to elected officials are intended to influence their official conduct." United States v. Taylor, 993 F.2d 382, 385 (4th Cir. 1993); see also Jennings, 160 F.3d at 1018 ("Not every payment made to influence or reward an official is intended to corrupt him."). For this reason, the Fourth Circuit has made clear that "a good will gift to an official to foster a favorable business climate, given simply with the generalized hope or expectation of ultimate benefit on the part of the donor, does not constitute a bribe." Jennings, 160 F.3d at 1013 (internal quotation marks omitted). To constitute an unlawful quid pro quo, the official must know that things of value were given in exchange for the official promising to "engage[] in some specific act (or omission) or course of action (or inaction)." Id. at 1019.

Indeed, in Jennings, the Fourth Circuit held that it was plain error for the district court to charge the jury that "it was sufficient if Jennings [the bribe-payor] paid Morris [the official] to influence him (Morris) 'in connection with' or 'in reference to' [government] business." Id. at 1022. According to the circuit court, the district court's jury instructions "could have described a situation in which Jennings paid Morris with a vague expectation of some future benefit." Id. (internal quotation marks and alterations omitted). Consequently, the instructions failed to explain that quid pro quo corruption involves the "intent to induce a specific act." Id. at 1021 (emphasis added).

The Court's instructions in this case fail for the same reason. They allowed the jury to convict Mr. McDonnell based solely on a finding that he accepted things of value that were given with a generalized hope or expectation that he would perform some unspecified future action in furtherance of a larger goal. In defining bribery, the Court told the jury that it must find "that a public official demanded, sought or received something of value as described in the indictment and that the public official demanded, sought or received the item of value corruptly in return for being influenced in the performance of any official act." Tr. Vol. XXVI, at 6100:13-18. The Court further instructed the jury that bribery "includes a public official's solicitation or agreement to accept a thing of value in exchange for official action whether or not the public official ultimately perform[s] the requested official action or intends to do so." Id. at 6100:18-23; see also 6113:4-15 (same). And it explained that an "official action can include actions taken in furtherance of longer-term goals" and can be just "one in a series of steps to exercise influence or achieve an end." Id. at 6103:10-14.

As in Jennings, none of the instructions "stated that [Mr. Williams] must have given money to [Mr. McDonnell] in exchange for some specific official act or course of action." Jennings, 160 F.3d at 1022 (emphasis added); see also id. at 1014 (explaining that the Government must show "that payments were made with the intent of securing a specific type of official action or favor in return"). Therefore, the Court committed legal error in rejecting Mr. McDonnell's request, based on Jennings, to include the following language in the Court's instructions: "To convict the defendant, the official must have received the payment in exchange for performing or promising to perform some specific official act. A gift or payment given with the generalized hope of some unspecified future benefit is not a bribe. You may convict the defendant only if you find that he received something of value in exchange for performing or promising to perform some specific official act." Tr. Vol. XXIV, at 5771:19-5772:1.

The Court's bribery instructions are also improper in light of the Government's failure to produce any evidence of an explicit quid pro quo agreement. The prosecutors told the jury that there was no such evidence, Tr. Vol. XXV, at 5873:1-2, 6045:10-11, and the Court instructed the jury that the parties to a bribe "need not state the quid pro quo in express terms" lest "the law's ... effect could be frustrated by knowing winks and nods," Tr. Vol. XXVI, at 6101:9-12. But instructing the jury that the Government need not prove that an official act had been performed, where the Government itself concedes there is no evidence of an express quid pro quo agreement, effectively eliminates the quid pro quo element of the offense. If there is evidence of an explicit quid pro quo, then of course there is no need to prove that official acts had actually been performed. But if there is no express quid pro quo agreement, as is the case here, then the only way the Government can prove that a quid pro quo existed is by proving that things of value were given and official acts were performed. The prosecutors confirmed as much in arguing to the jury that the timing of gifts and official acts "establishe[d] the pro in the quid pro quo agreement." Tr. Vol. XXV, at 6046:16-18. Since there is no evidence of an express quid pro quo, the Court erred in instructing the jury that the Government was not required to prove any official acts. The Court's instructions improperly invited the jury to convict Mr. McDonnell merely because he accepted things of value given with the generalized hope of unspecified future assistance.

II. MR. MCDONNELL IS ENTITLED TO A NEW TRIAL BECAUSE THE COURT'S VOIR DIRE ON PRETRIAL PUBLICITY WAS INADEQUATE.

During voir dire, the Court acknowledged that there had been heavy pretrial publicity in this case and that it expected nearly every prospective juror to have heard of the allegations against Mr. McDonnell. Nevertheless, the Court declined Mr. McDonnell's request that the Court conduct an independent inquiry of each prospective juror to determine what effect the avalanche of prejudicial pretrial publicity had on the juror's impartiality. Instead, the Court simply asked the prospective jurors en masse whether they could be impartial and decide the case based on the evidence at trial. All of them indicated that they could by sitting down, and the Court declined to allow any further questions to be asked. The perfunctory nature of this voir dire is contrary to Supreme Court and Fourth Circuit precedent as well as precedents from other circuits overturning convictions for similarly inadequate voir dire. Accordingly, the Court should grant a new trial.

A. Voir Dire Must Provide "Reasonable Assurance" That Bias Or Partiality Would Be Discovered.

Voir dire "plays an essential role in guaranteeing a criminal defendant's Sixth Amendment right to an impartial jury." United States v. Lancaster, 96 F.3d 734, 738 (4th Cir. 1996). Although the voir dire process generally "is committed to the sound discretion of the trial court," a trial court nevertheless abuses its discretion "if the voir dire does not provide a reasonable assurance that prejudice would be discovered if present." Id. at 740. In particular, where there is possibility that pretrial publicity might have prejudiced the jury, a more searching voir dire is necessary to provide that "reasonable assurance." "In an era of rapid and widespread communications, trial courts must be vigilant to ensure that jurors are not biased and trials are not compromised by media attention surrounding a case." United States v. Bakker, 925 F.2d 728, 734 (4th Cir. 1991). Consequently, the proper way to impanel jurors who have been inundated with pretrial publicity "is through a careful voir dire." Id.; see also United States v. Blitch, 622 F.3d 658, 656 (7th Cir. 2010) ("[T]he greater that probability [of bias], the more searching the inquiry needed to make reasonably sure that an unbiased jury is impaneled.").

The Fourth Circuit has therefore expressed a preference for the following procedure where prejudicial publicity is brought to a trial court's attention: "'[T]he court must ascertain if any jurors who had been exposed to such publicity had read or heard the same. Such jurors who respond affirmatively must then be examined, individually and outside the presence of the other jurors, to determine the effect of the publicity.'" United States v. Hankish, 502 F.2d 71, 77 (4th Cir. 1974) (quoting Margoles v. United States, 407 F.2d 727, 735 (7th Cir. 1969)). It is not enough to accept at face value a prospective juror's assurances of impartiality. "[W]hen a juror is exposed to potentially prejudicial pretrial publicity," a court must determine "whether the juror can lay aside any impression or opinion due to the exposure" since the "juror is poorly placed to make a determination as to his own impartiality." United States v. Davis, 583 F.2d 190, 197 (5th Cir. 1978). It is, in short, the court's job "to determine the effect of the publicity" on each prospective juror. Hankish, 502 F.2d at 77 (quotation marks omitted).

This is precisely the level of inquiry that the Supreme Court recently approved in Skilling—a case involving the high-profile criminal trial of Jeffrey Skilling, the former president of Enron Corporation. In rejecting Skilling's challenge to the sufficiency of voir dire on pretrial publicity, the Court found that the trial court (1) "initially screened venire members by eliciting their responses to a comprehensive questionnaire," Skilling v. United States, 561 U.S. 358, 388 (2010); (2) "examined each prospective juror individually, thus preventing the spread of any prejudicial information to other venire members," id. at 389; (3) "repeatedly admonished that there were 'no right and wrong answers to th[e] questions,'" id.; and (4) accorded the parties "an opportunity to ask follow-up questions of every prospective juror brought to the bench for colloquy," id. Based on this assessment, the Supreme Court concluded that the trial court "did not simply take venire members who proclaimed their impartiality at their word" but "followed up with each individually to uncover concealed bias." Id. at 394-95. According to the Court, "[t]his face-to-face opportunity to gauge demeanor and credibility, coupled with information from the questionnaires regarding jurors' backgrounds, opinions, and sources of news, gave the [trial] court a sturdy foundation to assess fitness for jury service." Id. at 395. Based on these findings, the Supreme Court concluded that Skilling had "failed to show that his voir dire fell short of constitutional requirements." Id.

The Fourth Circuit similarly requires a voir dire "directed at disclosing the impact that both past and future media attention would have upon potential jurors." Bakker, 925 F.2d at 733. Thus, in Bakker, the trial court "questioned potential jurors about exposure to pre-trial publicity including specific media reports, about exposure to the opinions of others, about the juror's personal opinions about the case, and about whether media attention during the trial would influence a juror's decisions." Id. The circuit court held that this "careful" voir dire was the "proper way" to impanel jurors in high-publicity cases and thus guaranteed to the defendant his Sixth Amendment right to an impartial jury. Id. at 734.

Consistent with Skilling, as well as the Fourth Circuit's analysis in Bakker, numerous courts have set aside convictions where the trial court relied "solely on a juror's assertion of impartiality," rather than conducting "a sufficiently probing inquiry to permit the court to reach its own conclusion." United States v. Pratt, 728 F.3d 463, 470 (5th Cir. 2013). In United States v. Davis, for example, the Fifth Circuit held that it was inadequate merely to ask prospective jurors to raise their hands "if [they] felt the publicity impaired [their] ability to render an impartial decision" and to otherwise refuse "to examine each panel member individually regarding the opinions held because of the publicity." 583 F.2d 190, 196 (5th Cir. 1978). Because "the nature of the publicity as a whole raised a significant possibility of prejudice," the Fifth Circuit concluded that "the cursory questioning by the court was not enough." Id. While acknowledging that the "separate examination of jurors … is not necessarily required," the circuit court nevertheless held that the trial court "should have determined what in particular each juror had heard or read and how it affected his attitude toward the trial, and should have determined for itself whether any juror's impartiality had been destroyed." Id. at 196-97

Courts in other cases have similarly set aside convictions based on the trial court's failure to conduct an independent inquiry into the effect of pretrial publicity on each prospective juror's impartiality. See, e.g., United States v. Beckner, 69 F.3d 1290, 1293-94 (5th Cir. 1995) (reversing conviction because the trial court failed "to make an independent determination of the impartiality of each juror" by asking them "what information they had read, heard, or otherwise received as a result of [pretrial] publicity" and "how any such information had affected their attitudes or perceptions of the case"); United States v. Hawkins, 658 F.2d 279, 282-85 (5th Cir. Unit A 1981) (reversing conviction based on Davis because the trial court failed to conduct any further inquiry beyond asking prospective jurors to raise their hands if they had formed an opinion about the case that would affect them if selected as jurors); Silverthorne v. United States, 400 F.2d 627, 638 (9th Cir. 1968) (reversing conviction because the "trial court made no effort to ascertain what information the jurors had accumulated" but instead merely obtained "jurors' assurances of impartiality" and thus "had no way of objectively assessing the impact caused by this pretrial [publicity] on the juror's impartiality").

B. The Court's Voir Dire On Pretrial Publicity Did Not Provide "Reasonable Assurance" That Bias Or Partiality Would Be Discovered.

To demonstrate inadequate voir dire on pretrial publicity, "a defendant must show (1) that pretrial publicity about the case raised a significant possibility of prejudice, and (2) that the district court's voir dire procedure failed to provide a reasonable assurance that prejudice would be discovered if present." Pratt, 728 F.3d at 470. Both requirements are satisfied here.

1. Heavy Pretrial Publicity Raised A Significant Possibility Of Prejudice.

There is no question that the barrage of negative pretrial publicity about this case severely prejudiced Mr. McDonnell. In Mr. McDonnell's memorandum in support of his motion for omnibus voir dire relief, the defense detailed the heavy media attention surrounding this case, which the Government never disputed. See Mem. in Support of Def. Robert F McDonnell's Mot. for Omnibus Voir Dire Relief ("Voir Dire Mot."), Dkt. No. 110, at 3-6. A Lexis search for reports appearing in U.S. media sources between March 1, 2013 and July 27, 2014 (including newspapers, television transcripts, and a selection of Internet sources) containing Mr. McDonnell's name and any of the terms "Jonnie Williams," "Star Scientific," "investigation," "scandal," or "Gift-gate" in the headline or lead paragraph returned 2,356 results.[2] As media coverage intensified, so too did the interest of Virginians. Data available from Google.com regarding searches conducted by Internet users in Virginia shows a surge of interest in Mr. McDonnell and Star Scientific just as the media coverage of the investigation increased in intensity. See Voir Dire Mot. at 4-6.

Not only was Mr. McDonnell's case highly publicized, the coverage was overwhelmingly prejudicial. See id. at 6-11. Even before Mr. McDonnell was indicted, opinion-makers in the media had already convicted him. For example, on May 12, 2013, a writer for the Richmond Times-Dispatch website posted a blog [illegible]t stating that Mr. McDonnell was "[h]iding behind legal technicalities" and "making a n.. [illegible]y" of "personal responsibility" and "family values."

---

[2] Source: Lexis Advance search of all news sources for: (Robert or Bob or Governor or Gov. /3 McDonnell) and hlead ("Jonnie Williams" or "Star Scientific" or "investigation" or "scandal" or "gift-gate" or "gift gate" or "giftgate"), from March 1, 2013 through July 27, 2014. [The 'hlead' search function searches for terms within the article headline or lead paragraph.]

A. Barton Hinkle, McDonnell Family Values, Richmond Times-Dispatch, May 12, 2013. On July 12, 2013, the Washington Post ran an editorial entitled "Unfit for His Office," claiming that "mountainous evidence" suggests that Mr. McDonnell "has no business continuing in office." Ruth Marcus, Unfit For His Office, Washington Post, July 12, 2013.

Following the indictment, the prejudicial coverage intensified, as many articles unquestioningly accepted the unproven allegations in the indictment as true. On January 22, 2014, the day after the indictment, the Washington Post published an article titled "Indictment Shows McDonnell as a Man in Denial," speculating that Mr. McDonnell was "brought down" by "a toxic mix of personal money worries, an assertive wife, a taste for luxury, and a culture of coziness between politicians and rich supporters." Robert McCartney, Indictment Shows McDonnell As A Man In Denial, Washington Post, Jan. 22, 2014. On the same date, the Richmond Times-Dispatch published a column that accepted virtually all of the allegations in the indictment as true, further editorializing that the McDonnells engaged in "unseemly" conduct and conjuring an image of a "governor in irons." Jeff E. Schapiro, Va.'s Image Now Like That Of Maryland, Illinois, Richmond Times-Dispatch, Jan. 22, 2014. And on the eve of arraignment, the press also reported on leaked details from highly sensitive, confidential meetings between the Government and attorneys for the McDonnells. See, e.g., Rosalind S. Helderman & Carol D. Leonnig, Ex-Va. McDonnell Rejected Plea Offer to Face One Felony, Spare Wife Any Charges, Avoid Trial, Washington Post, Jan. 23, 2014 (claiming knowledge of confidential pre-indictment negotiations between the parties). And the press mischaracterized critical facts in ways that were highly prejudicial to the defense. For example, even though the Government has never claimed that the loans from Mr. Williams to Mrs. McDonnell and MoBo were cash gifts, many media reports insisted on describing them as "payments" that Mr. McDonnell "considers" or "characterizes" as loans. See Timeline: The McDonnells and Jonnie Williams, Richmond Times-Dispatch, Jan. 21, 2014 ("The governor considers the payments loans."); Laura Vozzella, Herring Dismisses Lawyers For McDonnell, Washington Post, Jan. 17, 2014 ("$165,000 in gifts and money characterized as loans"). This negative publicity never ceased, continuing right up until the trial began and thereafter until the verdict. See, e.g., Exh. A.

2. The Court's Voir Dire On Pretrial Publicity Failed To Provide A "Reasonable Assurance" That Prejudice Would Be Uncovered.

In light of this massive and highly prejudicial pretrial publicity, the Court was obligated to provide "reasonable assurance" that any prejudice would be discovered if present among the prospective jurors. But the Court failed to provide that assurance by declining to make an independent assessment, based on an individualized voir dire of each prospective juror who admitted to knowledge of the case, as to whether the pretrial publicity affected the juror's impartiality. Instead, the Court limited its in-court voir dire on the issue of pretrial publicity to two questions. After acknowledging that the "case has generated a lot of media interest and there have been quite a few newspaper articles, radio and television media items relating to this case and the parties involved" and that "most of you have read in the newspaper or seen on television or heard on the radio, at least once, some of these media items or news stories," the Court first asked approximately 150 prospective jurors to stand up "if you have read, heard or seen something in the media." Tr. Vol. I, at 140:17-25. Almost all stood. Then, the Court asked, "[b]ased on what you have heard or read or seen relating to this case, if you are, in your mind, able to put aside whatever it is that you've heard, listen to the evidence in this case and be fair to both sides, then I want you to sit down." Id. at 141:2-9. No one remained standing. See id. at 141:20-21. Based on this, the Court informed the parties that it was "satisfied with the responses." Id. at 141:14-15. The Court denied Mr. McDonnell's request to individually voir dire the prospective jurors who acknowledged having been exposed to pretrial publicity, as well as Mr. McDonnell's request to ask proposed follow-up questions. See id. at 137:8-139:20.

The perfunctory nature of this voir dire on pretrial publicity did not provide a "reasonable assurance" that bias would be uncovered in this high-profile case. In fact, it proved highly unreliable as some of the jurors who had answered on their questionnaires that they could not "listen to the evidence in this case and be fair to both sides" actually sat down when asked if they could do just that. See Tr. Vol. I, at 150:17-19; 153:11-12. The Court did not question the "potential jurors about exposure to pre-trial publicity including specific media reports, about exposure to the opinions of others, [or] about the juror's personal opinions about the case," as the trial court in Bakker had done. 925 F.2d at 733. Nor did the Court "follow[] up with each [prospective juror] individually to uncover concealed bias," as the trial court in Skilling had done. 561 U.S. at 395; see also id. at 389 ("[A]ware of the greater-than-normal need, due to pretrial publicity, to ensure against jury bias , the court examined each prospective juror individually "). There was, in short, no "face-to-face opportunity to gauge demeanor and credibility," as was the case in Skilling. Id. at 395. To the contrary, this Court "simply [took] venire members who proclaimed their impartiality at their word." Id. at 394. But, as the case law makes clear, see Part I.A, it is erroneous in a high-publicity case to "rely solely on a juror's assertion of impartiality" without "conduct[ing] a sufficiently probing inquiry to permit the court to reach its own conclusion." Pratt, 728 F.3d at 470.

To be sure, in addition to the in-court voir dire, the Court also required the prospective jurors to answer a questionnaire. But in Skilling, which also involved a questionnaire, those written responses still did not obviate individualized questioning so that the court and the parties could gauge the prospective jurors' demeanor through more tailored inquiry. Indeed, the questionnaire in Skilling even asked broader and more open-ended questions.[3] Here, by contrast, the questionnaire did not allow questioning on what exactly the prospective jurors had been exposed to, whether they found the reporting to be credible, what opinions they had formed as a result of such coverage, and what specifically they remembered from the media reports. This, however, is precisely the type of searching inquiry required by the cases described above.

The limited questionnaire approved by the Court in this case was as incomplete on the subject of pretrial publicity as was the in-court voir dire. It asked the prospective jurors whether they had "seen, heard or read anything about this case" and about "[h]ow closely [they have] followed the news about this case"—"[v]ery closely," "[s]omewhat closely," "[n]ot very closely," or "[n]ot at all." Exh. B at 22. The questionnaire also asked the prospective jurors to "indicate from what source[s] [they] heard about the case"—"[t]elevision," "[n]ewspapers," "[m]agazines," "[r]adio," "Internet," etc.—without asking the prospective jurors to "describe the sources for any of the options checked." (The parties requested that the prospective jurors be asked to "describe the sources," which would have revealed the nature of the media coverage each prospective juror had been exposed to, but the Court rejected the request.) Compare Exh. B at 23, with Exh. C at 30. Finally, the questionnaire asked whether the prospective juror had "expressed an opinion about this case or about those involved to anyone." Exh. B at 23. But, significantly, it did not ask whether the prospective juror had formed an opinion (as opposed to publicly stating one), nor did it ask any other question "directed at disclosing the impact that both past and future media attention would have" upon the prospective juror. Bakker, 925 F.2d at 733. Indeed, the Court did not include in the questionnaire the most salient questions (requested by the defense or both parties) that were designed to determine the effect of the media coverage on the prospective juror's impartiality. For example, the Court did not ask, "Based on what you have read, heard, seen, and/or overheard in conversations, please tell us what opinions, if any, you have formed about the guilt or innocence of Robert F McDonnell." Exh. C at 31. Nor did the Court ask, "Based on what you have read, seen or heard expressed about the case, the charges, or the individuals involved, indicate which of the following best describes your current belief about whether former Governor Robert F. "Bob" McDonnell is guilty or not guilty of these charges"—"[d]efinitely guilty," "[p]robably guilty," [p]robably not guilty," [d]efinitely not guilty," [n]ot sure," or "[n]o opinion." Exh. D at 9. These questions were critical as they were designed to determine the effect of pretrial publicity on the prospective juror's impartiality. Yet because the Court did not include them—and did not ask them during voir dire—it failed to provide "reasonable assurance" that the pretrial publicity did not prejudice the prospective jurors.

---

[3] The following is just a sample: "Do you have an opinion about the cause of the collapse of Enron? If YES, what is your opinion? On what do you base your opinion?"; "Have you heard or read about any of the Enron cases? If YES, please tell us the name of all sources from which you have heard or read about the Enron cases."; "Do you have an opinion about Jeffrey Skilling [?] If YES, what is your opinion? On what do you base your opinion?"; "Based on anything you have heard, read, or been told[,] do you have any opinion about the guilt or innocence of Jeffrey Skilling[?] If YES ., please explain." 561 U.S. at 371 n.4.

In sum, "[t]he court should have determined what in particular each juror had heard or read and how it affected his attitude toward the trial, and should have determined for itself whether any juror's impartiality had been destroyed." Davis, 583 F.2d at 196. Its failure to do so deprived Mr. McDonnell of his right to an impartial jury and thus warrants a new trial.

III. MR. MCDONNELL IS ENTITLED TO A NEW TRIAL BECAUSE THE COURT FAILED TO VOIR DIRE THE JURORS BASED ON EVIDENCE OF JUROR MISCONDUCT.

During the trial, the Court was informed that a juror, Louis DeNitto, contacted a lawyer about the case. In his conversation with the lawyer, Mr. DeNitto apparently implied strongly that the jurors had been discussing the case in violation of the Court's instructions. Specifically, he reportedly said that he had been elected foreman and that the jurors were "all over the place."

The Court decided to strike Mr. DeNitto from the jury on the ground that he had violated the Court's order against discussing the case with anyone. Mr. McDonnell's counsel objected to Mr. DeNitto's removal and, in the alternative, requested (1) that the entire panel be interviewed in camera given the evidence that they have been actively discussing the case, contrary to the Court's order that "[u]ntil you retire to the jury room at the end of the case to deliberate on your verdict, you simply are not to talk about this case," Tr. Vol. II, at 193:2–4; (2) that the Court declare a mistrial in light of the same; and (3) that the first alternate juror be struck in view of the fact—acknowledged by the Court—that he had been sleeping through much of the trial, including the cross-examination of the Government's key witness Mr. Williams. Because the Court's refusal to voir dire the jury about their alleged premature deliberations was an abuse of discretion, the Court should grant a new trial.

A. There Is Credible Evidence That The Jury Began Deliberating Prematurely In Violation Of The Court's Instructions.[4]

On August 12, 2014, the Government reported to the Court that it had received a telephone voicemail message the night before from an attorney named James Watson, who stated that he had been contacted by a juror in this case, Louis DeNitto, whom Mr. Watson had represented in civil matters. In his message, Mr. Watson stated that Mr. DeNitto had contacted him; the attorney added that he believed the contact was "inconsequential." After the Government retrieved Mr. Watson's message, the prosecution team interviewed Mr. Watson by telephone without notification to defense counsel. The prosecutors then provided a summary report of the interview, as well as Mr. Watson's voice message, to the defense late on the evening of August 11.

---

[4] The defense is awaiting a copy of the in-chambers transcript from the Court. The following reflects the best recollection of defense counsel.

The next morning, the Court conducted in-camera interviews of Mr. Watson and Mr. DeNitto. Mr. Watson essentially reiterated that Mr. DeNitto had informed him that he was the foreman of the jury—which would mean that the jury has discussed the case and has even voted on a foreman—and that the twelve jurors are "all over the place," a phrase that would suggest they are not only discussing the case but are forming views on guilt or innocence. When Mr. DeNitto was questioned, he explained that he had called Mr. Watson on other business and, in the course of that conversation, mentioned that he was sitting on a jury and asked in the abstract how juries functioned. In particular, he denied stating that he was the foreman and said that he had only asked how the process works. As to juror deliberations, Mr. DeNitto related that the jury he was on had been confused about the opening jury instructions—further demonstrating that they were engaging in premature deliberations. At that point, Mr. Watson asked Mr. DeNitto if he was serving as a juror on this case, in response to which Mr. DeNitto replied in the affirmative. Mr. Watson then ended the conversation and contacted the lead prosecutor.[5]

B. The Court Erred By Refusing To Voir Dire The Jury Despite Evidence That They Had Begun Deliberations Prematurely.

In the face of credible evidence that jury deliberations had begun prematurely, the Court's refusal to voir dire the jurors as to the existence, extent, and effect of those deliberations is prejudicial error. It is established that "'when jury misconduct (including improper intra-jury influences) has been alleged, the district court should: ascertain whether the misconduct actually occurred; if it did, determine whether it was prejudicial; and if there are no grounds for a new trial, specify the reasons it decided misconduct did not occur, or occurred but was non-prejudicial.'" United States v. Resko, 3 F.3d 684, 691 (3d Cir. 1993) (citing United States v. Richman, 600 F.2d 286, 295 (1st Cir. 1979)). This procedure is necessary to ensure that the district court properly exercises its discretion and to create a record for appellate review. Cf. United States v. Hanno, 21 F.3d 42, 47 (4th Cir. 1994) (reversing district court and ordering new trial because "[t]he fact that no record was made of the proceeding in excusing those jurors required the court to assume prejudice"); United States v. Gay, 522 F.2d 429, 435 (6th Cir. 1975) (reversing district court and ordering new trial because "[e]ven though the appellant has not been able to demonstrate prejudice in the present case, the total absence of a record of the proceedings in which the changes in the makeup of the jury occurred requires us to assume prejudice").

---

[5] Mr. DeNitto's juror service in this case was already public. See Exh. E. Further, it is unclear on the current record whether Mr. Watson violated his ethical obligations by reporting Mr. DeNitto's communications to the prosecution. See Virginia Rules of Professional Conduct R. 1.6 (pertaining to confidentiality of client information).

In Resko, there were allegations that the jurors had begun deliberating during the course of the trial. The district court submitted a questionnaire to the jury asking (1) whether they were engaging in premature deliberations, and (2) if so, whether they had formed an opinion as to guilt or innocence. The jurors unanimously answered "yes" to (1), and "no" to (2). Thereafter, the district court refused the defendants' requests for individualized voir dire of the jurors. The Third Circuit held that this was reversible error for two reasons: First, "the district court's ability to evaluate the situation was necessarily diminished by the dearth of information about the jury's misconduct." Id. at 691. Second, the appellate court's "own ability to review the district court's determination that there was no prejudice to the defendants is hampered by this absence of information in the record." Id. Accordingly, the Third Circuit vacated the convictions and remanded for a new trial.

This case is no different than Resko, except that, here, the Court did not even ask the jurors whether they had engaged in premature deliberations and whether they had formed an opinion on Mr. McDonnell's guilt or innocence. Given the credible evidence of premature jury deliberation, the Court should have investigated further. Therefore, just as in Resko, Mr. McDonnell's conviction should be set aside and a new trial granted. Alternatively, the defense requests an evidentiary hearing on whether there were premature deliberations.

IV. MR. MCDONNELL IS ENTITLED TO A NEW TRIAL BECAUSE THE COURT ERRONEOUSLY ADMITTED PREJUDICIAL RULE 404(b) EVIDENCE.

It is well-established in the Fourth Circuit that in order for evidence of a defendant's prior bad acts to be admissible under Federal Rule of Evidence 404(b), it must, as a threshold matter, "be relevant to an issue other than character." United States v. Queen, 132 F.3d 991, 995 (4th Cir. 1997). Permissible purposes for admitting prior act evidence include showing intent, plan, knowledge, and absence of mistake. Fed. R. Evid. 404(b)(2). But "Rule 404(b) prohibits proof of a defendant's character to show conduct in conformity therewith," primarily to ensure "that defendants not be convicted simply for possessing bad character." Queen, 132 F.3d at 996, 995. The Rule is also a crucial safeguard "against juries becoming confused by the purpose of the admitted acts and using the acts improperly in arriving at a verdict." Id. at 996. Here, the Government was allowed to impugn Mr. McDonnell's character in violation of Rule 404(b) on at least two significant occasions, thereby causing substantial prejudice to the defense.

A. Contrary To Rule 404(b), The Court Admitted Evidence That Mr. McDonnell Received Things Of Value From William Goodwin.

First, the Government introduced evidence that William Goodwin provided a vacation on Kiawah Island to the McDonnell family and that Mr. McDonnell did not disclose this gift on his annual Statement of Economic Interest ("SOEI") (collectively, the "Goodwin evidence"). But the Government never established that this evidence was "relevant to an issue other than character," as Rule 404(b) requires, Queen, 132 F.3d at 995. Indeed, the Government entirely failed to establish the central predicate of its theory of the admissibility of the Goodwin evidence: that Mr. Goodwin was not a personal friend and so Mr. McDonnell's omission of the Kiawah vacation from his SOEI was improper.

The Government has consistently maintained that the Goodwin evidence is relevant to intent because it purportedly shows that Mr. McDonnell, on other occasions, improperly manipulated the "personal friend" exception to Virginia's gift disclosure requirements. See Govt's Opp'n to Defs.' Mot. in Limine to Exclude Evidence Relating to Statements of Economic Interests at 10, Dkt. 252 ("Evidence that Mr. McDonnell had the same knowledge with respect to the Kiawah Island trip from Mr. Goodwin and engaged in identical calculus to avoid reporting it is acutely relevant and probative of the essential element of intent."); Tr. Vol. XXIII, at 5416:22-25 ("The fact that from the Government's view Mr. Goodwin was not a personal friend and he failed to put down a $23,000 vacation to Kiawah Island is probative, is admissible. "). In keeping with the Government's arguments, this Court ruled that the Goodwin evidence was admissible under 404(b) because it showed lack of mistake in omitting gifts from Mr. Williams from his SOEIs and so was relevant to Mr. McDonnell's alleged "intent to defraud." July 17, 2014 Mem. Op. at 4, Dkt. 295; see also Tr. Vol. XXIII, at 5417:1-2.

The Government, therefore, was permitted to cross-examine Mr. McDonnell extensively concerning the vacation on Kiawah Island. Tr. Vol. XXI, at 5051:3-5055:20. The Government also elicited testimony that Mr. McDonnell had not disclosed the Kiawah vacation on his SOEI, Tr. Vol. XXII, at 5295:5-8, and that the trip was listed on a draft SOEI and then crossed out with the notation "Personal," id. at 5296:5-23. See also Tr. Vol. VII, at 1737:16-1738:24, 1740:2-7 (testimony of Pamelia Watts). But the Government never called Mr. Goodwin to the stand or otherwise offered any evidence purporting to show that Mr. Goodwin was not Mr. McDonnell's personal friend. Indeed, Mr. McDonnell testified consistently that he considered Mr. Goodwin a personal friend, Tr. Vol. XXI, at 5055:16-20, Tr. Vol. XXII, at 5341:3-5, and that therefore, in keeping with the SOEI instructions, he did not disclose gifts from Mr. Goodwin that he believed were given to him for reasons unrelated to his public office, id. at 5335:3-14. The Government therefore failed to establish the most basic element of its theory of why the Goodwin evidence was admissible: improper manipulation of the "personal friend" exception.

Because the Government did not prove any manipulation or impropriety, the Goodwin evidence could not be relevant to Mr. McDonnell's intent or lack of mistake. Under these circumstances, all that the Goodwin evidence could possibly show was that Mr. McDonnell had accepted a valuable gift from a third party whom he considered to be a personal friend. In other words, the Goodwin evidence, as presented by the Government, did no more than suggest to the jury that Mr. McDonnell had a propensity to accept expensive gifts from donors—an alleged character trait that, if believed by the jury, was obviously prejudicial. Again, extrinsic evidence of prior acts is only admissible if it is "relevant to an issue other than the general character of the defendant," such as intent. United States v. Hodge, 354 F.3d 305, 312 (4th Cir. 2004) (citation omitted). The Goodwin evidence, as presented by the Government, does not satisfy that test.

B. Contrary To Rule 404(b), The Court Admitted Evidence Indicating That Mr. McDonnell's Staff Organized Free Golf For Him.

Similarly, the Court allowed the Government to introduce into evidence, also over defense objection, an email from Adam Zubowsky to Emily Rabbitt (neither of whom testified) describing actions Mr. Zubowsky had supposedly taken in the past, at Mr. McDonnell's request, to organize rounds of golf for Mr. McDonnell and his family at no cost. See GX-627; Tr. Vol. XXI, at 5138:10-5139:1. As an initial matter, this email was inadmissible hearsay, and it should have been excluded on that basis. Indeed, there is no conceivable exception to the hearsay rule into which this email could possibly fit. Given its highly prejudicial nature, admission of this hearsay evidence requires a new trial. See, e.g., United States v. McCall, 740 F.2d 1331(4th Cir. 1984) (reversing defendant's conviction and remanding for a new trial where prejudicial hearsay evidence was admitted and no exception to the hearsay rule applied); United States v. Bercier, 506 F.3d 625 (8th Cir. 2007) (same).

Moreover, the admission of this evidence violated Rule 404(b) and this Court's pre-trial Order requiring notice of the same. See Mar. 20, 2014 Order, Dkt. 100, at 3. Nothing about these rounds of golf or the manner in which they were organized related to Mr. Williams or the bribery allegations that are the subject of this case. There was no evidence pertaining to their disclosure or non-disclosure on Mr. McDonnell's SOEIs, so the Zubowsky email could not have been relevant to intent or lack of mistake when it came to Mr. McDonnell's disclosures of his dealings with Mr. Williams. The Government did not even try to argue that the evidence was offered for one of the other approved purposes listed in Rule 404(b)(2). See Tr. Vol. XXI, at 5137:10-12. The only purpose for which the Government offered this evidence was to try to prove that Mr. McDonnell had a habit of soliciting free golf—in other words, to show his character in an unflattering light and to intimate that he had his hand out in the past and that he therefore likely had his hand out to Mr. Williams during the course of the supposed conspiracy. But Rule 404(b) forbids such use of propensity evidence.

* * *

Neither of the foregoing violations of Rule 404(b) can be considered harmless. In this high-profile case, the improper prior act evidence was particularly dangerous. The roughly $23,000 vacation paid for by Mr. Goodwin was far more expensive than Mr. McDonnell's share of the Chatham vacation paid for by Mr. Williams. Compare Tr. Vol. XXII, at 5296:5-7, with Tr. Vol. XIV, at 3539:6-9 (confirming that $7,383.14 was reported for the Chatham trip on Mr.

McDonnell's SOEI). And given that the rounds of golf bought by Mr. Williams played such a central role in the Government's case, the prejudicial effect of the Zubowsky email is unquestionable. At bottom, the jury's determination of guilt or innocence turned on whether it found that a corrupt agreement existed between Mr. Williams and Mr. McDonnell; and the Government offered only the vague testimony of its cooperating witness and circumstantial evidence of an agreement that it conceded was never made explicit. The jury's verdict therefore turned on its assessment of Mr. McDonnell's credibility weighed against Mr. Williams' word and the inferences the prosecution asked it to draw about Mr. McDonnell's state of mind. Under these circumstances, improper, inflammatory character evidence could easily tip the scales toward a guilty verdict. See, e.g., United States v. Lee, 724 F.3d 968, 983 (7th Cir. 2013) (reversing on the basis of Rule 404(b) error where the defendant claimed he had no connection to cocaine discovered in a car he was driving and the Government's case "otherwise rested on [an immunized co-conspirator] witness whose credibility was less than sterling"); United States v. Lail, 846 F.2d 1299, 1301-02 (11th Cir. 1988) (reversing on the basis of Rule 404(b) error where the case depended on "a clear credibility choice" between witnesses). The Court should order a new trial untainted by this prejudicial propensity evidence.

CONCLUSION

For all of the foregoing reasons, the Court should set aside the jury's verdict and grant Mr. McDonnell a new trial.

Dated: September 18, 2014

Respectfully submitted,

/s/ Jonathan A. Berry

Henry W Asbill (pro hac vice)
Mary Ellen Powers (pro hac vice)
Noel J. Francisco (pro hac vice)
Ryan D. Newman (pro hac vice)
James M. Burnham (pro hac vice)
Jonathan A. Berry (VSB No. 81864)
JONES DAY
51 Louisiana Avenue, N.W
Washington, D.C. 20001
Telephone: (202) 879-3939
Facsimile: (202) 626-1700

John L. Brownlee (VSB No. 37358)
HOLLAND & KNIGHT LLP
800 17th Street, N.W
Suite 1100
Washington, D.C. 20006
Telephone: (202) 828-1854
Facsimile: (202) 955-5564

Counsel for Robert F McDonnell

CERTIFICATE OF SERVICE

I, Jonathan A. Berry, am a member of the Bar of this Court. I hereby certify that on this 18th day of September, 2014, I caused the foregoing to be electronically filed with the Clerk of Court using the CM/ECF system, causing it to be served on all registered users.

Dated: September 18, 2014

Respectfully submitted,

/s/ Jonathan A. Berry
Jonathan A. Berry (VSB No. 81864)
JONES DAY
51 Louisiana Avenue, N.W
Washington, D.C. 20001
Telephone: (202) 879-3939
Facsimile: (202) 626-1700
Email: jberry@jonesday.com

Counsel for Robert F McDonnell

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
FOR THE EASTERN DISTRICT OF VIRGINIA
RICHMOND DIVISION

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,	)
	)
v.	)	CRIMINAL NO. 3:14-CR-00012
	)
ROBERT F. MCDONNELL	)	JUDGE JAMES R. SPENCER
MAUREEN G. MCDONNELL	)

DEFENDANT ROBERT F. MCDONNELL'S REPLY IN SUPPORT OF MOTION # 40 – MOTION FOR NEW TRIAL PURSUANT TO RULE 33 OF THE FEDERAL RULES OF CRIMINAL PROCEDURE

INTRODUCTION

In his motion for a new trial, Mr. McDonnell raised four claims: (1) the Court's bribery instructions were legally erroneous because they permitted the jury to convict Mr. McDonnell for conduct that is not a crime; (2) the Court's inadequate panel voir dire on pretrial publicity deprived Mr. McDonnell of an impartial jury; (3) the Court erred in failing to individually voir dire the sitting jurors after learning of potential premature deliberations; and (4) the Court erroneously admitted highly prejudicial Rule 404(b) evidence. None of the Government's counterarguments withstand scrutiny.

ARGUMENT

I. THE COURT'S INSTRUCTIONS PERMITTED THE JURY TO CONVICT MR. MCDONNELL ON LEGALLY ERRONEOUS GROUNDS.

The Court's jury instructions were defective in two critical respects. First, the "official act" instruction erroneously permitted the jury to convict Mr. McDonnell merely for acting in his official capacity without any evidence that he actually sought to influence a matter pending before the government. Second, the "quid pro quo" instructions erroneously permitted the jury to convict Mr. McDonnell based on nothing more than a promise of unspecified future assistance.

A. Mr. McDonnell Cannot Be Convicted Merely For Acting In His Official Capacity.

A public official does not perform an official act merely by taking some action in his official capacity. United States v. Jefferson, 674 F.3d 332, 356 (4th Cir. 2012). Rather, the official must take or promise "action" or make a "decision" "on" a pending "matter." 18 U.S.C. § 201(a)(3). This means that the official must take or promise some action to induce or influence the government to act on whatever matter is pending—in other words, the official must seek to influence the exercise of governmental power. As Mr. McDonnell has explained in his reply in support of his renewed motion for judgment of acquittal, merely arranging a meeting or attending an event about a particular matter (in other words, facilitating access)—without attempting to influence the resolution of the matter—is not an "action" "on" the "matter."

The Court's objected-to "official act" instruction erroneously permitted the jury to conclude that arranging a meeting, attending an event, or emailing a subordinate—standing alone—are indeed official acts, so long as they pertain to a pending "matter," however broadly defined. Because the Court gave no fuller explanation of what constitutes an "action" or "decision" "on" a "matter"—other than to say that it can include the settled practices of an official and virtually anything else a public official does—the jury could easily have found that Mr. McDonnell performed an official act merely by facilitating meetings and authorizing events ("actions") about business development (a "matter")—in other words, merely by acting in his official capacity. And that is precisely what the prosecutors asked the jury to find when, in their closing argument, they argued that "Mr. McDonnell's involvement with every single one of [the alleged official acts] was in his official capacity as Governor," and that each of the actions was on the topic of "Virginia business development." See Tr. Vol. XXV, at 5870:2-6, 5869:23-24. Neither the Court nor the prosecutors required the jury to determine, as the defense had requested, whether Mr. McDonnell's "conduct was intended to or did in fact influence a specific official decision the government actually makes." Proposed Jury Instruction No. 58, Dkt. 287. Because of this omission, the Court's "official act" instruction was flawed.[1]

---

[1] Nothing demonstrates the overbreadth of the instruction more clearly than simply applying it to conduct that the Supreme Court has already said is not an official act. In United States v. Sun-Diamond Growers of California, 526 U.S. 398 (1999), the Supreme Court made clear that the Secretary of Agriculture "speaking [] to farmers about USDA policy" was "not [an] 'official act[]' within the meaning" of the federal bribery laws. Id. at 407. And yet this conduct plainly satisfies the meaning of "official act" under this Court's instruction. In its response, the Government does not even attempt to reconcile this obvious incongruence.

The Government defends the Court's "official act" instruction by claiming that it is "materially indistinguishable" from the instruction approved in Jefferson. Gov't Br. at 3-4. This is not true—as discussed below, the instructions differ in material ways. But regardless, this argument makes sense only if the legal issue in this case is materially indistinguishable from the issue in Jefferson. It is not. In Jefferson, the defendant took the extreme position that Sun-Diamond categorically "foreclose[d] the use of a 'settled practice' instruction," 674 F.3d at 353, such that settled practices without any basis in a formal legislative or governmental process could never constitute official acts, id. at 338. Here, by contrast, Mr. McDonnell does not dispute that a settled practice can be an official act; instead, he argues that merely arranging meetings, attending events, or emailing subordinates—although settled practices of governors—are not official acts because absent proof that the official sought to influence "decisions that the government actually makes," id. at 357, they are not "actions" "on" a pending "matter." Because the defendant in Jefferson did not raise this argument (presumably because, unlike here, the facts in that case did not support it), the Jefferson court did not address it.

In any event, even if the Jefferson "official act" instruction were somehow applicable here, the Government is wrong to suggest that this Court's instruction is "materially indistinguishable." The Government altered the Jefferson instruction in multiple ways.[2] But the most egregious change was adding a line with no analog in the Jefferson instruction: "official action can include actions taken in furtherance of longer-term goals, and an official action is no less official because it is one in a series of steps to exercise influence or achieve an end." Tr. Vol. XXVI, at 6103:10-14. The Government claims that this line is "a logical consequence" of the principle that the official need not have actual authority over the end sought by the bribe-payor. Gov't Br. at 5. This, however, is manifestly wrong.

---

[2] For example, this Court adopted the Government's proposal adding that "official actions may include acts that a public official customarily performs, even if those actions are not described in any law, rule, or job description." Tr. Vol. XXVI, at 6103:3-5. Additionally, in making the basic point that the official "need not have actual or final authority over the end result," the Court added the following, which was not included in the Jefferson instruction: "so long as the alleged bribe payor reasonably believes that the public official had influence, power or authority over a means to the end sought by the bribe payor." Id. at 6103:5-10.

That an official need not have authority over the bribe-payor's goal in order to perform an official act does not mean that any action taken in the service of that goal is itself an official act. Whether an action is a means to an end is irrelevant to the official act inquiry. All that matters is whether the alleged official act is an "action" or "decision" "on" a pending "matter." Prefatory actions by an official that do not themselves exert influence on a pending governmental decision are not official acts even though they may otherwise serve the alleged bribe-payor's goals. Thus, Attorney General Cuccinelli did not engage in "official action" when he introduced Mr. Williams to influential lobbyist Jerry Kilgore. Although that introduction was plainly a step toward Mr. Williams' goal of obtaining funding for anatabine research, it did not involve any exercise of actual governmental power on a pending governmental decision. So too here. Interim steps in which the official merely provides access or advice but avoids attempting to influence a pending governmental decision are not official acts. This is what separates the cases cited by the Government, see Gov't Br. at 6 n.2, from this case. The Court's failure to instruct the jury on this critical distinction and its decision to invite the jury to find—without more—that interim steps toward a larger goal are themselves official acts were clearly erroneous.

B. Mr. McDonnell Cannot Be Convicted Based Merely On A Promise Of Unspecified Future Action.

In giving its quid pro quo instructions, the Court likewise failed to make clear, as required by United States v. Jennings, 160 F.3d 1006 (4th Cir. 1998), that in order to convict Mr. McDonnell, the jury must find that Mr. Williams gave things of value "in exchange for some specific official act or course of action." Id. at 1022 (emphasis added). Read as a whole, the instructions do not foreclose the possibility that the jury could have convicted Mr. McDonnell based solely on a finding that he accepted things of value that were given with a generalized hope that Mr. McDonnell would provide unspecified help in "legitimiz[ing], promot[ing], and obtain[ing] research studies for Star Scientific products." Tr. Vol. XXVI, at 6089:21-22.

The Government asserts that the instructions identified specific actions that Mr. McDonnell was alleged to have performed. See Gov't Br. at 11-12. But it ignores that the instructions then go on to inform the jury both that (1) it could find a quid pro quo "whether or not the public official ultimately performs the requested official action or intends to do so," id. at 6100:21-23, and (2) the parties "need not state the quid pro quo in express terms," id. at 6101:9-12. As Mr. McDonnell explained, see McDonnell Br. at 11, instructing the jury that it need not find an express understanding that the things of value were given in exchange for specific official action, while at the same time instructing the jury that it also need not find that the official actually performed any official action, effectively eliminates Jennings's requirement that the jury find that things of value were given in exchange for "some specific official act or course of action." Jennings, 160 F.3d at 1019. In its response brief, the Government had no answer to this point. Compounding the error was the Court's refusal to give Mr. McDonnell's proposed clarifying instruction, which would have informed the jury that it could convict Mr. McDonnell "only if [it] [found] that he received something of value in exchange for performing or promising to perform some specific official act" and that a "gift or payment given with the generalized hope of some unspecified future benefit is not a bribe." Tr. Vol. XXIV, at 5771:19-5772:1. These fundamental defects are not overcome (1) by the Court's generic quid pro quo instruction, which did not mention the specificity requirement, see id. at 6100:9-18; (2) by its definition of "corruptly," which did not articulate how specific the corrupt bargain must be, see id. at 6101:6-8; (3) by its instruction that a quid pro quo can be proven by an "intent to retain a public official's services on an as-needed basis, so that as opportunities arise the public official would take specific official action on the payor's behalf," which is buried deep in the discussion of the Hobbs Act counts and does not even apply to the honest-services fraud counts, see id. at 6113:23-6114:1; or (4) by the good faith instruction, which has nothing to do with defining the elements of the corruption offenses, see id. at 6123:3-15. See generally Gov't Br. at 12-13.

Finally, the Government contends that requiring the jury to find that Mr. McDonnell "received something of value in exchange for performing or promising to perform some specific official act," Tr. Vol. XXIV, at 5771.19-5772:1, would have improperly required the jury to link each specific official act with a specific thing of value, see Gov't Br. at 9-10. That is manifestly false. The requirement of "specificity" does not transform the instruction into one requiring linkage. Mr. McDonnell did not ask for a linkage instruction, and nothing in Mr. McDonnell's proposed instruction would have precluded the Government from proving that things of value were given in exchange for specific official action by showing "a course of conduct of favors and gifts flowing to a public official in exchange for a pattern of official actions favorable to the donor."[3] Jennings, 160 F.3d at 1014. This is just another way of proving a corrupt exchange of payments and specific official acts without actually producing evidence of an express agreement. The Court nevertheless had a duty to instruct the jury that it had to find that Mr. McDonnell knew he was accepting things of value in exchange for specific official action, not in exchange for vague and unspecified future official action. Taken as a whole, the Court's instructions failed to make this requirement clear and instead erroneously invited the jury to convict Mr. McDonnell for accepting things of value in exchange for unspecified future assistance.

---

[3] Indeed, nothing prevented the Government from making this very argument, see Tr. Vol. XXV, at 6046:16-18, even though the Court declined giving the Government's proposed "course of conduct" instruction.

II. THE COURT'S VOIR DIRE ON PRETRIAL PUBLICITY WAS INADEQUATE.

A trial court abuses its discretion in conducting voir dire on pretrial publicity if (1) the "pretrial publicity about the case raised a significant possibility of prejudice" and (2) "the district court's voir dire procedure failed to provide a reasonable assurance that prejudice would be discovered if present." United States v. Pratt, 728 F.3d 463, 470 (5th Cir. 2013); see also United States v. Lancaster, 96 F.3d 734, 740 (4th Cir. 1996). Mr. McDonnell has established both requirements. First, Mr. McDonnell offered overwhelming evidence of the barrage of negative publicity that preceded his trial. See McDonnell Br. at 16-18. Second, the Court's inadequate voir dire failed to provide reasonable assurance that prejudice would be discovered because the Court did not conduct an independent, individualized assessment of each prospective juror who admitted media-based knowledge of the case to ascertain whether the pretrial publicity affected the juror's impartiality. See McDonnell Br. at 18-21. Instead, the Court limited its in-court voir dire to two questions, which essentially asked the prospective jurors to self-report their bias publicly. In so doing, the Court improperly relied "solely on [the jurors'] assertion[s] of impartiality," rather than conducting "a sufficiently probing inquiry to permit the court to reach its own conclusion." Pratt, 728 F.3d at 470. In response, the Government raises a hodgepodge of mostly irrelevant criticisms, none of which remotely undermine Mr. McDonnell's showing.

A. The Pretrial Publicity Was Prejudicial.

The Government does not—and cannot—dispute that there was substantial, objectively negative pretrial publicity. Instead, the Government tepidly suggests that the avalanche of publicity was not prejudicial because (1) Mr. McDonnell did not seek a change of venue, and (2) unlike in Skilling v. United States, 561 U.S. 358 (2010), there was no "widespread community impact," nor was there any well-publicized pretrial guilty plea by a codefendant. See Gov't Br. at 16. Neither argument undermines Mr. McDonnell's showing that pretrial publicity "raised a significant possibility of prejudice." Pratt, 728 F.3d at 470.

First, Mr. McDonnell did not seek a change of venue because that request would have been premature. He expected that, with an adequate voir dire, he could have received a fair trial before an impartial jury in Richmond. Indeed, Skilling stands for the principle that a change of venue is warranted only in the extraordinary situation where a searching and comprehensive voir dire cannot secure an impartial jury.[4] But Mr. McDonnell's decision not to seek a change of venue does not mean that the pretrial publicity was not prejudicial, and it certainly does not mean that he somehow forfeited his right to an adequate voir dire on the subject of pretrial publicity.

Second, the community impact of Mr. McDonnell's alleged crimes was considerably broader than the impact of the defendant's crimes in Skilling. To be sure, a certain class of individuals lost their jobs or investments because of Mr. Skilling, but not everyone in the jury pool was affected. Here, Mr. McDonnell was accused of having defrauded "the citizens of Virginia of their right to the honest services" of their Governor. Indictment ¶ 113. Thus, every citizen of Virginia was potentially an indirect victim of Mr. McDonnell's alleged crimes. That demanded an even more probing voir dire. In addition, although it was widely publicized before Mr. Skilling's trial that his co-defendant had pled guilty, here it was widely and prominently publicized before trial—the first time on the day of arraignment when the pretrial publicity was especially great—that Mr. McDonnell had engaged in plea negotiations with the Government, which is arguably even more prejudicial. See, e.g., Rosalind S. Helderman & Carol D. Leonnig, McDonnell Rejected Plea Offer to Face One Felony, Spare Wife Any Charges, Avoid Trial, Washington Post, Jan. 23, 2014.

---

[4] The Government speculates that Mr. McDonnell elected not to move for a change of venue in order to "take advantage of [his] favorable [approval] rating." Gov't Br. at 16. But the Government's own evidence for this claim shows that Mr. McDonnell's approval rating actually plummeted ten points—from 59% to 49%—in the two days immediately following his indictment. If anything, therefore, the Government's evidence shows that the news of Mr. McDonnell's indictment had an immediate prejudicial effect.

B. The Court's Voir Dire Failed To Provide A "Reasonable Assurance" That Prejudice Would Be Uncovered.

The Government's remaining arguments, which address Mr. McDonnell's claim that the Court's voir dire was inadequate, are equally wrong. First, relying on United States v. Bailey, 112 F.3d 758 (4th Cir. 1997), the Government contends that the Court was not required to question prospective jurors individually. Gov't Br. at 17. Bailey, however, is a pre-Skilling case that conflicts with the Supreme Court's admonition that trial courts "not simply take venire members who proclaimed their impartiality at their word." Skilling, 561 U.S. at 394-95. But even if Bailey remains good law, it is plainly distinguishable. Unlike here, where each prospective juror was a potential victim of Mr. McDonnell's alleged corruption, none of the prospective jurors in Bailey were victims of the publicized kidnapping and domestic violence crimes that the defendant was accused of committing. See 112 F.3d at 761. More importantly, the record in Bailey showed that the district court "asked all or substantially all of the questions given to it in advance by the defendant." Id. at 769-70. Here, by contrast, the Court rejected numerous, specific questions about pretrial publicity that Mr. McDonnell proposed for the jury questionnaire. See McDonnell Br. at 20-21 & Exh. C. And the Court also declined to ask any of Mr. McDonnell's proposed follow-up questions for prospective jurors who admitted to having heard or read about the case. See Exh. A; Tr. Vol. I, at 137:8-139:20.

In any event, even if a trial court has discretion to "question prospective jurors collectively rather than individually," Bailey, 112 F.3d at 770, that does not absolve the court of conducting a voir dire "directed at disclosing the impact that both past and future media attention would have upon potential jurors." United States v. Bakker, 925 F.2d 728, 733 (4th Cir. 1991). This necessarily entails questioning "potential jurors about exposure to pre-trial publicity including specific media reports, about exposure to the opinions of others, about the juror's personal opinions about the case, and about whether media attention during the trial would influence a juror's decisions." Id., see also United States v. Davis, 583 F.2d 190, 196-97 (5th Cir. 1978) (acknowledging that the "separate examination of jurors is not necessarily required" but holding that the trial court "should have determined what in particular each juror had heard or read and how it affected his attitude toward the trial, and should have determined for itself whether any juror's impartiality had been destroyed"). Such detailed inquiry into the nature of the jurors' exposure to pretrial publicity is critical because a single highly prejudicial article—such as the article about plea negotiations—can have a disproportionate impact on a juror's ability to remain impartial. The nature of the exposure matters just as much as the quantity of exposure. To be sure, examining each prospective juror individually is more prudent because it "prevent[s] the spread of any prejudicial information to other venire members." Skilling, 561 U.S. at 389. But regardless, both general and specific questions about the nature, extent, and impact of pretrial publicity must still be asked—whether collectively or individually—and that did not happen in this case.

Second, the Government makes several arguments aimed at showing that the Court's voir dire was adequate. For example, it points out that the voir dire in Skilling—which was approved by the Supreme Court—was "about 28% shorter than the seven-hour-and-fifteen-minute voir dire conducted in this case." Gov't Br. at 16. This argument is spurious. That the total voir dire in Skilling was shorter than the total vire dire in this case proves nothing about whether the voir dire on pretrial publicity in Skilling was less comprehensive than the voir dire on pretrial publicity here. And, indeed, we know for certain that it was more comprehensive in Skilling because the district court, unlike here, actually conducted an individual voir dire of each relevant prospective juror on the subject of pretrial publicity. 561 U.S. at 394-95.

The Government also argues that, after posing two collective questions on pretrial publicity, the Court gave the defense a "full opportunity" to examine jurors who gave them concern. Gov't Br. at 18. This is simply false. The Court refused the defense's request to ask a series of follow-up questions for each prospective juror who acknowledged having heard or read about the case. See Tr. Vol. I, at 137:8-139:20. Mr. McDonnell thus was unable to make an informed judgment about which prospective jurors to identify for further individualized questioning. See id. at 141.20-23 (defense counsel objecting that "I can't trust the credibility of [the prospective jurors' responses to the two collective questions] without a further inquiry and I can't make any judgments or arguments to you [about for-cause strikes] without any further inquiry"). As a consequence, only those prospective jurors who gave questionable answers on their jury questionnaires were individually questioned. But the jury questionnaire approved by this Court was far less thorough on the subject of pretrial publicity than the questionnaire in Skilling—a flaw that was compounded by the Court rejecting many of the questions on pretrial publicity proposed by the defense. See McDonnell Br. at 19-21.

In an attempt to bolster the questionnaire's deficiency on pretrial publicity, the Government points to numerous questions that are not even designed to determine the nature or extent of a prospective juror's exposure to specific pretrial publicity.[5] Only Questions 83, 84,

---

[5] See, e.g., Question 47 (asking prospective jurors to identify the networks on which they follow national news); Question 48 (asking prospective jurors what newspapers, including tabloids, they most often read); Question 49 (asking prospective jurors to list the Internet web sites that they visit for news and current events); Question 50 (asking how often prospective jurors watch investigative news programs or television shows "that deal with lawyers, the legal

85, and 86 actually involve pretrial publicity, and even they are woefully deficient in helping Mr. McDonnell ferret out prospective jurors who are biased on account of the pretrial publicity in this case. See McDonnell Br. at 20-21. Furthermore, not only were many relevant questions not even asked, neither the Court nor the parties could assess the demeanor of the prospective jurors as they answered the jury questionnaire. The questionnaire, in short, cannot compensate for the Court's inadequate voir dire.

Finally, the Government argues that the jurors who were ultimately selected showed no signs of bias. As evidence of this, the Government points to the jury's verdict in which it acquitted Mr. McDonnell on counts 12 and 13 and acquitted Mrs. McDonnell on counts 4, 9, 11, and 13. See Gov't Br. at 15. But counts 12 and 13 were the false statement charges, which unlike the corruption charges were not a focus of the coverage.[6] If anything, therefore, this shows that greater exposure to prejudicial publicity made it more likely that the jury would convict. And although Mrs. McDonnell was acquitted on the corruption charges in counts 4, 9, and 11, this does not prove that the jury was uninfluenced by pretrial publicity; it only proves system, police work, prisons, politicians, or political life"); Question 69 (asking prospective jurors if knowing that the defendants are "well-known public figures" would affect their ability to follow the Court's instructions); Question 77 (asking prospective jurors whether the McDonnells had done anything while in office that "affected you in a personal way"); Question 97 (asking prospective jurors if there is "any reason that you believe you should not sit as a juror in this case"); Question 98 (asking prospective jurors if there is "anything else that you think the Court should know that might influence your ability to fairly and impartially judge the evidence in this case and to apply the law as instructed by the Court").

---

(continued…)

[6] A search of media headlines in Lexis Advance from January 21, 2014 through July 28, 2014 covering Virginia and the District of Columbia yielded 341 results. Of those results, there were no headlines referring specifically to the false statement charges, while there were 59 articles with headlines mentioning "corruption" or "gifts." Source: Lexis Advance search of all news sources for Virginia and the District of Columbia: "hlead (((Gov. or Bob or Robert) w/3 McDonnell) and (indict* or charg* or alleg* or accus*))." [The 'hlead' search function searches for terms within the article headline or lead paragraph.] that even a jury influenced by pretrial publicity cannot overlook undisputed facts. Because there was no evidence connecting Mrs. McDonnell to the golf outings or to the $20,000 loan to MoBo, which were the subjects of those counts, the jury had no choice but to acquit her.

The Government also asserts that the selected jurors had minimal exposure to pretrial publicity. See Gov't Br. at 20-21. That is not true. Fourteen of the 16 individuals seated as jurors or alternates indicated, per Question 83, that they had heard about the case. And yet the voir dire never investigated what they had heard about the case and how prejudicial that publicity might have been. For example, four persons selected (0248, 0012, 0487, and 0431) got their news from the Richmond Times-Dispatch, which featured a barrage of negative coverage. Another juror (0401) relied on The Washington Post (which was similarly negative) not only for news, but specifically for information about how gift-disclosure laws are supposed to operate. See Juror 0401, Question 67 She also admitted to personal conversations with others about Mr. McDonnell's case, id. at Question 85, but denied ever having expressed an opinion about it, id. at Question 86. These responses indicate that nearly all of the persons selected had had direct or indirect media exposure sufficient to raise a reasonable suspicion about their ability to be impartial—which should have been addressed at voir dire.

III. THE COURT FAILED TO VOIR DIRE THE JURY BASED ON EVIDENCE OF JUROR MISCONDUCT.

The Government has identified no Fourth Circuit case that repudiates the holding in United States v. Resko, 3 F.3d 684 (3d Cir. 1993), where the Third Circuit reversed a conviction because the trial court refused to individually voir dire the jurors despite allegations during the trial that the jury had begun deliberations prematurely. Id. at 691. This case is no different, and the Government does not even try to distinguish it. During the trial, the Court received information from a source that the Government concedes is credible. The source was Mr.

DeNitto's lawyer who reported that Mr. DeNitto had called and said that he was the foreman in a trial and that the jurors were "all over the place." Aug. 12, 2014 Chambers Conf. Tr., at 7:17-20. This is strong evidence that the jurors had already begun deliberating in violation of the Court's instructions. Given this information, the Court should have conducted an individual voir dire of the jurors, as Resko requires. The Court's failure to do so warrants a new trial.

Although devoting much of its response to arguing that the Court properly excluded Mr. DeNitto from the jury—an issue that Mr. McDonnell did not even raise in his new trial motion—the Government nonetheless contends that voir dire was unnecessary because (1) the evidence of premature deliberations was not credible, and (2) even if it were, there were sufficiently good reasons not to voir dire the jury. Both arguments fly in the face of Resko and should be rejected.

A. There Was Credible Evidence That The Jury Had Begun Deliberations Prematurely.

The Court removed Mr. DeNitto from the jury after being informed by the Government that Mr. DeNitto had called his lawyer, Mr. Watson, and mentioned his role in the case.[7] Although the Court had only instructed the jurors that they may not "discuss" the case with anyone, Tr. Vol. I, at 176:25-177:1, the Court nevertheless found that Mr. DeNitto had violated that order "simply by making the phone call and identifying himself as being on this jury," Aug. 12, 2014 Chambers Conference Tr., at 10:17-19.[8] In so doing, the Court presumably found credible the account given by Mr. Watson who reported that Mr. DeNitto called him and said, "I'm calling you because I'm the Foreman, and there are 12 people, and they are kind of all over the place and I don't know what to do."[9] Id. at 7:17-20. Mr. DeNitto also said that he was "put up in a hotel here in the McDonnell case." Id. at 8:9-10. Based on this information, Mr. Watson stopped the conversation and told Mr. DeNitto, "when you are on the jury, I can't talk to you and you shouldn't be talking with me." Id. at 8:20-22. When asked whether there were any "substantive discussions or any discussions of the evidence in the case in any way, shape, or form," Mr. Watson replied, "Absolutely none, not even close." Id. at 9:8-11. In light of this information, the Court concluded that "Mr. Denitto is gone." Id. at 10:17 [7] The Government did not inform defense counsel of these facts until after it had already interviewed Mr. Watson, who had reported the contact, not to the Court, but to prosecutors. Although the Government eventually provided the voicemail message that Mr. Watson left with prosecutors, which contained his phone number, Mr. Watson did not return defense counsel's call requesting an interview until several days after Mr. DeNitto was removed from the jury when Mr. Watson left defense counsel a voice message. Thus, Mr. McDonnell was not afforded a meaningful opportunity to investigate this matter.

---

[8] Although the Court struck Mr. DeNitto because he disclosed that he was on the jury, that fact was already public knowledge, see McDonnell Br., Exh. E, and in any event, the Court never instructed the jurors not to tell anyone they were sitting on this case.

Only after removing Mr. DeNitto did the Court hear from him. Mr. DeNitto acknowledged that he had called Mr. Watson and mentioned being on a jury, but he said that the call was for other business. Id. at 13:4-20. Mr. DeNitto denied telling Mr. Watson that he was the foreman. Id. at 13:14-15. He also said that the call ended when he confirmed that he was referring to the McDonnell trial. Id. at 13:16-19. When asked about his comment that there were "12 people all over the place," Mr. DeNitto confirmed that he "did say that." Id. at 13:21-25. Then, in response to the Court's question whether he had talked to other jurors, Mr. DeNitto said that his comment "wasn't intended" to convey that. Id. at 14:10-12. Mr. DeNitto told the Court, "I didn't talk to anyone about it, about the specifics of the case or anything." Id. at 14:13-14. The Court then concluded, over objection, "All right, obviously he is still out." Id. at 14:25.

The Government accuses Mr. McDonnell of being "internally inconsistent," see Gov't Br. at 24, but it is actually the Government's position that is inconsistent. In defending Mr.

---

[9] At the time, Mr. DeNitto could reasonably have thought that he was the foreman. In his questionnaire, see Juror 0356, Question 40, Mr. DeNitto reported that he had previously sat on juries in state trials where seat one—his assigned seat—is typically the foreman's.

DeNitto's removal from the jury, the Government credits Mr. Watson's account, but then—despite attacking Mr. DeNitto's credibility, see id. at 24-25—the Government turns around and credits Mr. DeNitto's claim that he "didn't talk to anyone about the specifics of the case," Aug. 12, 2014 Chambers Conf. Tr., at 14:13-14, as evidence that the jurors had not been deliberating. The Government cannot have it both ways.

Mr. DeNitto's suggestion that he had not talked to the other jurors about the case is not necessarily inconsistent with his observation that the jurors were "all over the place." But even if there were reason not to credit the account Mr. DeNitto gave the Court, there is no question that Mr. Watson's account is credible because he had no apparent interest in the matter and was merely reporting on what Mr. DeNitto had told him at a time when Mr. DeNitto had no reason to shade the truth. Therefore, based solely on what Mr. Watson reported, there is credible evidence that the jurors had been discussing the case among themselves, otherwise Mr. DeNitto would not have told him that "there are 12 people, and they are kind of all over the place." Id. at 7:17-20. At the very least, however, this record plainly demonstrates that there was a strong likelihood of premature deliberations that warranted further examination.

B. The Court Erred In Refusing To Voir Dire The Jury.

In light of the credible evidence of premature deliberations, the Court should have followed Resko and conducted an individual voir dire of the jurors to determine whether the improper deliberations had in fact occurred and, if so, to assess the extent of the prejudice and to take appropriate remedial measures. Under Resko, it is reversible error for the Court to close its eyes to credible evidence of juror misconduct by not conducting a voir dire. See 3 F.3d at 691.

Nevertheless, despite the absence of any contrary Fourth Circuit authority, the Government simply ignores Resko, thus essentially claiming that the Court was free to do whatever it wanted. See Gov't Br. at 25-26. The Government provides little justification for the Court's ruling other than to suggest that the Court's "curative" instruction, which reminded jurors not to talk about the case among themselves or with others, see Tr. Vol. XII, at 3076:20-23, was sufficient to sustain "the policy of preserving jury secrecy and independence." Gov't Br. at 25. But the instruction, which essentially reiterated the points that the Court made each day, was not "curative" at all. Indeed, if the jurors had been prematurely deliberating, the instruction could not have cured that problem. More importantly, the Court had no knowledge of the nature and extent of the misconduct—or whether any misconduct had even occurred—precisely because it declined to voir dire the jury. The Court obviously could not have cured a problem it avoided learning anything about. That is precisely why the Third Circuit held in Resko that "the district court's ability to evaluate the situation was necessarily diminished by the dearth of information about the jury's misconduct." 3 F.3d at 691.

IV THE COURT ERRONEOUSLY ADMITTED PREJUDICIAL RULE 404(b) EVIDENCE.

The Government offers little of substance in its attempt to rebut Mr. McDonnell's argument that the Court erroneously admitted prejudicial Rule 404(b) evidence. Both the Goodwin evidence and the Zubowski email constituted inadmissible propensity evidence. Moreover, the Zubowski email was inadmissible hearsay. All of this evidence was highly inflammatory, and the prejudice caused by its admission entitles Mr. McDonnell to a new trial.

A. The Court Improperly Admitted Evidence That Mr. McDonnell Received Things Of Value From William Goodwin.

As Mr. McDonnell has explained, the Government argued that the Goodwin evidence was admissible because it purportedly showed Mr. McDonnell's improper manipulation of the "personal friend" exception. Yet Mr. McDonnell testified consistently that he considered Mr. Goodwin a personal friend, Tr. Vol. XXI, at 5055:16-20, Tr. Vol. XXII, at 5341:3-5, and that he did not disclose gifts from Mr. Goodwin that he believed were given to him for reasons unrelated to his public office, id. at 5335:3-14. The Government never called Mr. Goodwin to testify, nor did it introduce any other evidence purporting to establish that Mr. McDonnell's treatment of Mr. Goodwin s gifts on his SOEI was improper. The Government attempts to patch over its glaring failure to establish the factual predicate on which the Goodwin evidence was offered by making conclusory assertions about the inferences to be drawn from Mr. McDonnell's testimony. It was the Government's burden, however, to establish the admissibility of the 404(b) evidence by showing that Mr. McDonnell misclassified the vacation he received from Mr. Goodwin. See United States v. Stein, 521 F Supp. 2d 266, 270 (S.D.N.Y 2007). Scraps of testimony concerning whether Mr. McDonnell recalled certain details about Mr. Goodwin's family or when he possessed Mr. Goodwin's cell phone number are not sufficient to carry this burden.

The Government's handling of the Goodwin evidence was an inexcusable bait and switch. It won this Court's permission to admit the evidence by promising to show that Mr. McDonnell had, on a separate occasion, improperly invoked the "personal friend" exception on his SOEIs. It introduced the damaging evidence. But it never followed through on its obligation to establish the factual predicate that would arguably have allowed the jury to consider the evidence for a permissible purpose.[10] Instead, the evidence only tended to show Mr. McDonnell's putative propensity to accept expensive gifts. This was prejudicial error.

B. The Court Improperly Admitted Evidence Indicating That Mr. McDonnell's Staff Organized Free Golf For Him.

The admission of the January 4, 2013 email from Adam Zubowsky to Emily Rabbitt was erroneous in two separate ways. First, the email was inadmissible hearsay. Trying to excuse this error, the Government claims that the email falls under Rule 801(d)(2)(A) or 801(d)(2)(D). Both provisions are inapplicable.

---

[10] As for the Government's suggestion that Mr. McDonnell's acceptance of a gift from Mr. Goodwin was intrinsic evidence of his alleged conspiracy with Mr. Williams, it is plainly contrary to applicable Fourth Circuit precedent. See generally Mem. in Support of Deft. Robert F McDonnell's Mot. to Exclude Evidence Relating to SOEI, Dkt. 238, at 6-7.

Rule 801(d)(2)(A) excludes from the definition of hearsay a statement offered against an opposing party and "made by the party in an individual or representative capacity." The Government contends that this exclusion applies because the Zubowsky email "was simply conveying information provided to him by Mr. McDonnell." Gov't Opp'n at 30. This characterization of the email is inaccurate; in it, Mr. Zubowsky describes his own practices in his former capacity as an aide to Mr. McDonnell and does not purport to relate any statement made by Mr. McDonnell. See Gov't Ex. 627. But in any event, the hearsay problem arises because the email is an out-of-court statement by Mr. Zubowsky offered to show the truth of the matter asserted. Even if the email did quote statements from Mr. McDonnell, the supposed admissibility of those hearsay-within-hearsay statements under Rule 801(d)(2)(A) would not make Mr. Zubowsky's out-of-court statement admissible.

Rule 801(d)(2)(D) is an even less plausible basis for circumventing the hearsay rule. This provision excludes from the definition of hearsay a statement offered against an opposing party and "made by the party's agent or employee on a matter within the scope of that relationship and while it existed" (emphasis added). Mr. Zubowsky had left Mr. McDonnell's employment over a month earlier. See Ex. B. So this rule does not apply.

Second, the email also constituted improper propensity evidence and was separately inadmissible under Rule 404(b). The Government now contends that it introduced the email in order to contradict Mr. McDonnell's testimony that he had not asked his staff to arrange for free or discounted golf for him and his family. See Gov't Opp'n at 29 (discussing Tr. 5135-36). Rule 608(b), of course, prohibits the introduction of extrinsic evidence of specific instances of conduct solely for the purpose of impeachment. See, e.g., United States v. Moore, 27 F.3d 969, 975 (4th Cir. 1994). So the Government makes a broader claim: that it introduced the email to rebut the "notion," supposedly implicit throughout Mr. McDonnell's direct testimony, "that he accepted gifts from Mr. Williams and others simply to spend time with his family and that the luxuriousness of the gifts had no bearing." Gov't Opp'n at 29. This putative justification of the introduction of the Zubowsky email simply proves Mr. McDonnell's point: that the Government proffered the evidence in order to show that Mr. McDonnell had a propensity to seek out free expensive gifts. Rule 404(b) does not permit such use of evidence of other acts.

C. Both Errors Were Prejudicial And Warrant A New Trial.

Finally, the Government overall fails to address Mr. McDonnell's point that in a case such as this—where the question of guilt or innocence turned entirely on what the jury believed about Mr. McDonnell's state of mind, and the Government's proof depended to a large degree on the testimony of a cooperating, co-conspirator witness whose credibility was highly questionable—the improper admission of inflammatory Rule 404(b) evidence was highly likely to have an impact on the jury's verdict. See United States v. Lee, 724 F.3d 968, 983 (7th Cir. 2013); United States v. Lail, 846 F.2d 1299, 1301-02 (11th Cir. 1988). The Government unconvincingly attempts to distinguish these precedents by listing irrelevant factual differences. Gov't Opp'n at 28. But the holdings of Lee and Lail turned not on whether the crime at issue was a drug crime or a bank robbery, or on whether the 404(b) evidence at issue was of prior criminal conduct or other types of acts. Rather, those cases recognized the heightened risk of prejudice where a 404(b) error is made and the case turns on the defendant's state of mind and a credibility choice between witnesses. The same risk was present here.

CONCLUSION

The Court should set aside the jury's verdict and grant Mr. McDonnell a new trial.

Dated: October 24, 2014

Respectfully submitted,

/s/ Jonathan A. Berry
Henry W. Asbill (pro hac vice)
Mary Ellen Powers (pro hac vice)
Noel J. Francisco (pro hac vice)
Ryan D. Newman (pro hac vice)
James M. Burnham (pro hac vice)
Jonathan A. Berry (VSB No. 81864)
JONES DAY
51 Louisiana Avenue, N.W
Washington, D.C. 20001
Telephone: (202) 879-3939
Facsimile: (202) 626-1700

John L. Brownlee (VSB No. 37358)
HOLLAND & KNIGHT LLP
800 17th Street, N.W
Suite 1100
Washington, D.C. 20006
Telephone: (202) 828-1854
Facsimile: (202) 955-5564

Counsel for Robert F. McDonnell

CERTIFICATE OF SERVICE

I, Jonathan A. Berry, am a member of the Bar of this Court. I hereby certify that on this 24th day of October, 2014, I caused the foregoing to be electronically filed with the Clerk of Court using the CM/ECF system, causing it to be served on all registered users.

Dated: October 24, 2014

Respectfully submitted,

/s/ Jonathan A. Berry
Jonathan A. Berry (VSB No. 81864)
JONES DAY
51 Louisiana Avenue, N.W.
Washington, D.C. 20001
Telephone: (202) 879-3939
Facsimile: (202) 626-1700
Email: jberry@jonesday.com

Counsel for Robert F. McDonnell

EXHIBIT A

c/5-4

INDIVIDUAL FOLLOW UP QUESTIONS FOR JURORS WITH ANY PRE-TRIAL EXPOSURE:

You have indicated on your juror questionnaire that you have read, seen or heard something about this case or the people involved. There is nothing wrong with having read, heard or overheard something about the case, but now we need to know a little bit more about what you have heard, the circumstance of how you received that information and any impressions you have formed.

1. First when do you first recall that you read or heard something about the case, or any of the people involved?
2. Please describe or summarize what you have heard or read.
3. Did you talk about what you read or heard with your spouse or any of your family members, friends or co-workers? What was the nature of those conversations—what was said?
4. Have any of your family members, friends or co-workers or anyone else close to you expressed any opinion or view about the case or the people involved? If so, what did they say? Is this an opinion or point of view that you share?
5. Have you formed or expressed any views, opinions or conclusions about the case based on anything you may have read or heard or overheard discussed? If so, what are those views or conclusion?
6. Have you shared or discussed your opinions about the case or the people involved with anyone at all?
7. Have you ever heard anyone say anything favorable or unfavorable in the past about either of the defendants in the case—former Governor Bob McDonnell or former First Lady Maureen McDonnell? If so, what things have you heard others say about either or both of the defendants?
8. Have you formed any favorable or unfavorable personal impressions about either defendant, former Governor Bob McDonnell or former First Lady Maureen McDonnell from anything you have heard about either defendant in the past, or as a result of these charges? (If so, what were those impressions? Were these strong impressions? How strong?)

Dft's App Ex. 1

9. Have you heard anyone say what he or she thought the verdict should be in this case? (If so, what is your relationship with the person or persons who expressed opinions? What was your reaction to hearing these opinions expressed? Did you agree or disagree?)

10. At any time have you ever formed or expressed any opinion about this case, or any of the people involved?

11. If you are selected to sit as a juror in this case will you be concerned about anything you have already read, seen or heard someone say about this case? If so, please tell us about your concerns.

12. Do you have any concerns about what the reactions of any other people—such as family members, friends, co-workers or anyone else in the community or the media—may be to any verdict you might reach in the event you were selected to be a member of the jury in this case? If so, tell us something about your concerns.

13. Has what you have read, seen or heard discussed or thought about regarding these charges and the defendants caused you to lean in the direction of finding one or both of the defendants guilty, or not guilty? If so, please tell us about how you are leaning

14. Are these leanings, impressions or opinions going to be in the back of your mind if you are selected to sit as a juror in this case? Why or why not?

15. Would you need or require to hear from the defendant or his attorney, or expect the defendant or his attorney to present any evidence to change your mind about what you have previously heard or concluded in order to find Mr. McDonnell not guilty (regardless of the judge's instructions to the contrary)? If so, tell us why you would expect or require the defense to present evidence in order to reach a verdict of not guilty.

16. Will you be able to follow the Court's instructions to presume former Governor Robert F. McDonnell is innocent of these charges and to require the government to prove his guilt beyond a reasonable doubt, OR would it be difficult or impossible for you to find him not guilty unless the defense presented evidence or proof of his innocence? Please explain.

IN THE UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
FOR THE EASTERN DISTRICT OF VIRGINIA

Richmond Division

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA	)
	)
v.	)
	)	No. 3:14cr12
ROBERT F MCDONNELL and	)
MAUREEN G. MCDONNELL,	)
Defendants.	)

GOVERNMENT'S RESPONSE IN OPPOSITION TO DEFENDANT ROBERT F. MCDONNELL'S MOTION FOR A NEW TRIAL

The United States respectfully opposes defendant Robert F McDonnell's motion for a new trial under Fed. R. Crim. P 33. See Doc. Nos. 511 and 518 (hereinafter "Def. Mem."). For the reasons discussed below, each of Mr. McDonnell's contentions is without merit.

Under Rule 33, a court "should exercise its discretion to grant a new trial sparingly.'" United States v. Perry, 335 F.3d 316, 320 (4th Cir. 2003) (quoting United States v. Wilson, 118 F.3d 228, 237 (4th Cir. 1997)). That is because "[a] new trial is a drastic remedy intended for the rare case." United States v. Chin, 181 F.3d 92, 1999 WL 333137, at *1 (4th Cir. 1999) (unpublished). And a new trial should be granted "only when the evidence weighs heavily against the verdict," Wilson, 118 F.3d at 237, or "when substantial prejudice has occurred," United States v. Jones, 542 F.2d 186, 211 (4th Cir. 1976) (quotation omitted).

Mr. McDonnell seeks a new trial on four grounds. First, he alleges that the Court improperly defined "official action" for the corruption offenses charged in Counts 1-11. Second, he claims the Court's inquiries via written questionnaire, in-court voir dire of the jury panel, and individualized voir dire of specific jurors at Mr. McDonnell's request was insufficient to address his concerns regarding pretrial publicity. Third, he claims that the Court should have inquired of the entire jury regarding alleged premature deliberations even after Mr. McDonnell's counsel declined the opportunity to examine the juror who he claims was the source of the need to conduct that inquiry.[1] And fourth, he claims the Court erred in admitting under Fed. R. Evid. 404(b) evidence of free golf and vacations accepted and solicited by Mr. McDonnell from sources other than Jonnie Williams, Sr. None of these claims warrant a new trial.

I. The Court's jury instructions, taken as a whole, fairly and accurately stated the quid pro quo required by the charged corruption offenses.

Mr. McDonnell's arguments on "official action" are effectively a restatement of his earlier arguments that this Court has rejected numerous times. In short, Mr. McDonnell claims that the Court's instructions (i) "allow[ed] the jury to convict Mr. McDonnell on an erroneous understanding of 'official act,'" and (ii) "allow[ed] a conviction on the theory that things of value were given and accepted for unspecified future help." Def. Mem. at 2. He claims that this Court's instructions therefore "revolutionize the relationship between politics and the criminal law, criminalizing routine political courtesies." Id.

Not so. Importantly, a court reviewing jury instructions after trial must not "view a single instruction in isolation"; rather, the question is "whether taken as a whole and in the context of the entire charge, the instructions accurately and fairly state the controlling law." United States v. Rahman, 83 F.3d 89, 92 (4th Cir. 1996). This is so because "[a] trial court has considerable discretion in choosing the specific instructions, and [the Fourth Circuit] will not reverse unless an instructional error is determined to have been prejudicial, based on review of the record as a whole." United States v. Whitfield, 695 F.3d 288, 305 (4th Cir. 2012) (quotations omitted).

---

[1] The United States previously filed a redacted version of this response because Mr. McDonnell's third alleged error referred to materials that were under seal at that time. Those materials have been unsealed by the Court, see Doc. No. 546, and the United States files this amended response that unredacts the portions no longer unseal but complies with the Court's directive that other portions of this pleading that refer to matters still under seal remain redacted.

Here, the Court's instructions on the definition of "official action" specifically and the quid pro quo requirement of the corruption charges more generally accurately stated the controlling law. Indeed, as described in greater detail below, the Court's instructions were materially indistinguishable from the instructions that the Fourth Circuit approved in Jefferson. They therefore provide no basis to grant Mr. McDonnell a new trial.

A. The Court's "official action" instruction was correct and materially indistinguishable from the Jefferson "official action" instructions.

First, the Court defined "official action" the same way that the court did in Jefferson: using the statutory definition found in 18 U.S.C. § 201(a)(3). Specifically, the Court instructed the jury, "The term official action means any decision or action on any question, matter, cause, suit, proceeding, or controversy, which may at any time be pending, or which may by law be brought before any public official, in such public official's official capacity." Tr. 6102 (emphasis added). In other words, the Court instructed the jury that not all decisions or actions by a public official are "official actions"; rather, the Court's instructions limited the decisions or actions that may constitute "official actions" as a matter of bribery law to those that are "on any question, matter, cause, suit, proceeding or controversy, which may at any time be pending, or which may by law be brought before any public official, in such public official's official capacity." Id.

After so limiting the class of decisions or actions that could constitute official actions, the Court then instructed the jury about a few basic principles of bribery law:

> Official action as I just defined it includes those actions that have been clearly established by settled practice as part of a public official's position, even if the action was not taken pursuant to responsibilities explicitly assigned by law. In other words, official actions may include acts that a public official customarily performs, even if those actions are not described in any law, rule, or job description. And a public official need not have actual or final authority over the end result sought by a bribe payor so long as the alleged bribe payor reasonably believes that the public official had influence, power or authority over a means to the end sought by the bribe payor. In addition, official action can include actions > taken in furtherance of longer-term goals, and an official action is no less official because it is one in a series of steps to exercise influence or achieve an end.

Tr. 6102–03 (emphases added). Importantly, the four sentences above are materially indistinguishable from the district court's instructions in Jefferson, and all four sentences convey well-settled principles of bribery law. In Jefferson, after also defining "official act" using § 201(a)(3)'s statutory definition, the district court continued as follows:

> An act may be official even if it was not taken pursuant to responsibilities explicitly assigned by law. Rather, official acts include those activities that have been clearly established by settled practice as part of a public official's position. Moreover, an act on a particular question or matter may still be official even if the public official did not have authority to make a final decision or take binding action on the issue.

United States v. Jefferson, No. 1:07cr209, Doc. No. 684, at 58 (E.D. Va. June 22, 2010).

Notably, the first two sentences of the quoted passage above from Jefferson are nearly identical to the first sentence of the preceding passage from this case. Moreover, the next sentence from this Court's instruction—that "[i]n other words, official actions may include acts that a public official customarily performs, even if those actions are not described in any law, rule, or job description"—is simply a rephrasing of the same principle using the Fourth Circuit's language from its opinion in Jefferson. In that opinion, the Fourth Circuit approved the instruction above because "it simply explained to the jury that an official act need not be prescribed by statute, but rather may include acts that a congressman customarily performs, even if the act falls outside of the formal legislative process." United States v. Jefferson, 674 F.3d 332, 357 (4th Cir. 2012). The only meaningful difference between that language from the Fourth Circuit's Jefferson opinion and the Court's instruction in this case is that this Court adjusted the language so as to remove the particular references to a congressman and the legislative process—an appropriate adjustment given that the defendant here was an executive rather than a legislator.

Next, the last two sentences of this Court's "official action" instruction were simply a commonsense elucidation of the same black-letter bribery law principles included in the Jefferson jury instructions and undergirding the Fourth Circuit's reasoning in Jefferson. For example, this Court's instruction that "a public official need not have actual or final authority over the end result sought by a bribe payor so long as the alleged bribe payor reasonably believes that the public official had influence, power or authority over a means to the end sought by the bribe payor" is no different from the Jefferson instruction that "an act on a particular question or matter may still be official even if the public official did not have authority to make a final decision or take binding action on the issue." And this Court's instruction in this case that "official action can include actions taken in furtherance of longer-term goals, and an official action is no less official because it is one in a series of steps to exercise influence or achieve an end" is both a logical consequence of the sentences before it and a well-settled principle of bribery law reflected in the Fourth Circuit's Jefferson opinion. More specifically, because official actions can include both decisions and actions, and because a public official need not have the authority to make a final decision or take binding action on a question, matter, or cause to take action on it, it follows that some actions "on" a question, matter, or cause may be earlier steps than others in a process to exercise influence or achieve an ultimate end. Likewise, the requirement that a decision or action must be "on" a question, matter, or cause does not mean that a decision or action is only official if it achieves the end sought by the bribe payor with respect to the question, matter, or cause at issue. That is why the Fourth Circuit found myriad actions by Jefferson—including "meeting[s], letter[s], trip[s], or other action[s]"—to be official acts. Id. at 359. The fact that actions may vary in number, importance, and impact over time—or that some may have been something like a meeting or event early in the process of exercising influence to achieve a longer-term goal—does not mean that public officials are free to sell those actions to the highest bidder as a means to line their pockets.[2]

In the end, this Court's "official action" instructions—like the "official act" instructions in Jefferson—were an appropriate explanation of black-letter bribery law and the principles set forth in the century-old Supreme Court decision in United States v. Birdsall, 233 U.S. 223 (1914). See Jefferson, 674 F.3d at 357 (noting "settled practice" instruction "was entirely consistent with the Birdsall principle, which has never been overruled or called into question by the Supreme Court"). In Birdsall, the Supreme Court described those principles this way:

> [I]t was not necessary that it should be prescribed by statute; it was sufficient that it was governed by a lawful requirement of the department under whose authority the office was acting. Nor was it necessary that the requirement should be prescribed by a written rule or regulation. It might also be found in an established usage which constituted the common law of the department and fixed the duties of those engaged in its activities. In numerous instances, duties not completely defined by written rules are clearly established by settled practice, and action taken in furtherance of their performance must be regarded as within the provisions of the above-mentioned statutes against bribery.

Birdsall, 233 U.S. at 230–31 (citations omitted), quoted in Jefferson, 674 F.3d at 351–52. To be sure, neither the jury instructions in Jefferson nor the Court's instructions in this case were simply a verbatim recitation of the century-old language in Birdsall. But the inquiry is one of substance, not form, and the question at this stage is "whether taken as a whole and in the context of the entire charge, the instructions accurately and fairly state the controlling law." Rahman, 83 F.3d at 92. The fact that the Supreme Court used the phrase "established usage" in 1914 and this

---

[2] That is why courts have routinely found such interim steps to exercise influence or achieve an end to be official acts. See, e.g., United States v. Dimora, 750 F.3d 619, 626–27 (6th Cir. 2014) ("Actual authority over the end result is not controlling if Dimora, through his official position, had influence and authority over a means to that end." (emphasis added) (internal quotations and citations omitted)); United States v. Loftus, 992 F.2d 793, 796 (8th Cir. 1993) (same); United States v. Ring, 706 F.3d 460, 468–70 (D.C. Cir. 2013) (phone call and email); United States v. Rosen, 716 F.3d 691, 695 (2d Cir. 2013) (letter and setting up meeting); United States v. Moore, 525 F.3d 1033, 1041 (11th Cir. 2008) (phone calls and meetings).

Court used the phrase "customarily performs" in 2014 is immaterial, as is the distinction between "action taken in furtherance" in 1914 versus "one in a series of steps to exercise influence or achieve an end" in 2014.

Mr. McDonnell concedes—as he must—that it was proper for the Court to define "official action" using the § 201(a)(3) statutory language. Indeed, even Mr. McDonnell's requested jury instructions began with that language. See Doc. No. 287, at 80. But Mr. McDonnell claims that the remainder of the Court's "official action" instruction "improperly allowed—if not affirmatively invited—the jury to accept the legally erroneous theory that Mr. McDonnell performed an official act merely because he took an action in his official capacity." Def. Mem. at 8. Put slightly differently, Mr. McDonnell argues that the "unwieldy language" that results from reading the § 201(a)(3) definition of official action in tandem with the "settled practice" instruction "would inevitably mislead the typical juror to erroneously conclude that an official act is any settled practice of an official." Id. at 7.

Unfortunately for Mr. McDonnell, the Fourth Circuit squarely rejected this very argument in Jefferson. There, the Fourth Circuit held that the "settled practice" instruction "did not in any way supplant the statutory definition of what constitutes an official act" and that "[i]nasmuch as the trial court gave its 'settled practice' instruction in tandem with the statutory definition of 'official act,' the jury was not authorized to ignore the directive that Jefferson's official acts must pertain to a pending question, matter, or cause that was before him." 674 F.3d at 357. Here, the jury was no more authorized than the jury was in Jefferson to ignore the Court's definition of official action as being restricted to "action on any question, matter, cause, suit, proceeding, or controversy." Tr. 6102. And based on the evidence adduced at trial, this jury was entitled to conclude, first of all, that performing constituent services for Virginia companies like Star Scientific was a settled practice of the Office of the Governor of Virginia and, second, that Virginia business development issues like obtaining research studies at state universities and using state employees to study Anatabloc were matters or causes that were pending before Mr. McDonnell. Thus, the jury was entitled to conclude that Mr. McDonnell's actions in connection with both Star Scientific's requests and the promotion of business in Virginia through meetings and events to help obtain those studies fell under the umbrella of his official actions. See Jefferson, 674 F.3d at 357 (describing equivalent findings for jury in that case).

According to Mr. McDonnell, to be an "official action," an action must "involve[] the exercise of actual governmental power—the actual regulatory power of the state." Def. Mem. at 6. In his proposed jury instructions, Mr. McDonnell explained this category of actions to include those "such as awarding a contract, hiring a government employee, issuing a license, passing a law, or implementing a regulation." Doc. No. 287, at 80–81. But as the United States argued in response to Mr. McDonnell's motion to dismiss, saying that an official action must involve "actual governmental power" only begs the question of what constitutes "governmental power" and what makes it "actual." And no case has ever restricted "official action"—or for that matter, "governmental power"—to action involving government contracts, hiring decisions, or written laws and regulations. Nor would it be sensible to do so. Indeed, for a public official such as the chief executive of a state, the exercise of "actual governmental power" comes in varied forms, and the entire purpose of Birdsall and its progeny is to ensure that public officials do not escape criminal liability by lining their pockets in exchange for their official actions merely because those actions are not written in a job description or taught in a high school civics class.

Put simply, Mr. McDonnell exercised "governmental power" when he took action on the question, matter, or cause of whether Star Scientific would get state assistance for its research studies, and he was not free to trade his actions for cash merely because he got the process to first base by arranging a meeting or to second base by hosting an event designed to persuade other state employees. And whether those state employees took action in response to his actions is beside the point; Mr. McDonnell's actions were no less "on" the question, matter, or cause of whether Star Scientific would get the state assistance it wanted merely because they were actions early in the process or because Mr. McDonnell concluded that he was more likely to get caught if he did something more noticeable. A public official who drives a hard bargain with his bribe payor by agreeing to perform limited official action is just as guilty as a public official who promises to perform every official action imaginable. The jury instructions in this case merely acknowledged that principle, and they provide no basis to vacate the jury's verdict.

B. The jury instructions did not invite the jury to convict Mr. McDonnell based on a vague expectation of unspecified future assistance.

Mr. McDonnell also argues that the jury instructions "improperly invited the jury to convict Mr. McDonnell merely because he accepted things of value given with the generalized hope of unspecified future assistance." Def. Mem. at 11. He claims that the instructions did so because the Court did not give his proposed instruction that, among other things, "[y]ou may convict the defendant only if you find that he received something of value in exchange for performing or promising to perform some specific official act." Def. Mem. at 10–11. But the Court was entirely correct in rejecting Mr. McDonnell's proposed instruction because such an instruction would have been legally inaccurate in this case. In Jefferson, the Fourth Circuit explicitly rejected the argument that each payment need be linked to a "specific" official act, finding that "it would be impossible—and it is unnecessary—to link every dollar paid to one of the Jefferson family companies to a specific meeting, letter, trip, or other action by Jefferson to fulfill his end of a corrupt bargain." 674 F.3d at 359. Instead, "it is sufficient to show that the payor intended for each payment to induce the official to adopt a specific course of action," and "[t]he quid pro quo requirement is satisfied so long as the evidence shows a course of conduct of favors and gifts flowing to a public official in exchange for a pattern of official actions favorable to the donor." United States v. Jennings, 160 F.3d 1006, 1014 (4th Cir. 1998), quoted in Jefferson, 674 F.3d at 359. In other words, "all that must be shown is that payments were made with the intent of securing a specific type of official action or favor in return. For example, payments may be made with the intent to retain the official's services on an 'as needed' basis, so that whenever the opportunity presents itself the official will take specific action on the payor's behalf." Id.

Mr. McDonnell's proposed instruction was erroneous because it wholly excluded the "course of action" and "pattern of official actions" theories of quid pro quo corruption. Mr. McDonnell implicitly acknowledges that when he – for the first time—claims that the jury should have been instructed that "it must find that the things of value were given in exchange 'for some specific official act or course of action.'" Def. Mem. at 9 (quoting Jennings, 160 F.3d at 1019) (emphasis added). To be sure, Mr. McDonnell had previously requested that the jury be instructed that the things of value were given in exchange for a "specific official act." But until now, he consistently fought the notion of an exchange for a "course of action" as sufficient to prove a quid pro quo. Indeed, Mr. McDonnell specifically (and successfully) objected to the United States' proposed "course of conduct" instruction based on Jennings at the charge conference in this case. See Tr. 5793–94. The Court declined to give the United States' full "course of conduct" instruction but nonetheless addressed the "course of action" theory when it instructed the jury with respect to the Hobbs Act counts that "a given thing of value need not be correlated with a specific official action, and a thing or things of value may be given with the intent to retain a public official's services on an as-needed basis, so that as opportunities arise the public official would take specific official action on the payor's behalf." Tr. 6113–14 (emphasis added). That instruction is no different from the following instruction approved by the Fourth Circuit in Jefferson: "[T]he quid pro quo requirement is satisfied if the defendant agreed to accept things of value in exchange for performing official acts on an as-needed basis, so that [when]ever the opportunity presented itself, he would take specific action on the payor's behalf." 674 F.3d at 358.

The Court also gave numerous other instructions emphasizing that the jury must find a quid pro quo exchange consistent with the Fourth Circuit's opinions in Jennings and Jefferson. First, in describing the nature of the honest-services conspiracy charged in Count One, the Court specified the alleged quid pro quo as an "exchange for Robert McDonnell and the Office of the Governor of Virginia performing official actions on an as-needed basis, as opportunities arose, to legitimize, promote, and obtain research studies for Star Scientific's products." Tr. 6089. In other words, the alleged exchange was not simply things of value in return for official action in the abstract; it was for official action "to legitimize, promote, and obtain research studies for Star Scientific products." Id. Similarly, the Court specified the types of "favorable official action" alleged as part of the corrupt agreement by describing that the meetings, events, and other official actions alleged were not mere meetings or events without context or purpose. Rather, the alleged course of official action exchanged for things of value included meetings with Mr. McDonnell's "subordinates to discuss and promote Anatabloc," events "designed to encourage Virginia university researchers to initiate studies of anatabine," contact with subordinate government officials "as part of an effort to encourage Virginia state research universities to initiate studies of anatabine," allowing Williams "to invite individuals important to Star Scientific's business to exclusive events at the Governor's Mansion," and "recommending that senior [subordinate] government officials meet with Star Scientific to discuss ways that the company's products could lower healthcare costs." Tr. 6090–91.[3]

Moreover, the Court specifically instructed the jury that bribery "involves the exchange of a thing or things of value for official action by a public official. In other words, a quid pro quo. You've heard that phrase, the Latin phrase, meaning 'this for that' or 'these for those.'" Tr. 6100. With this instruction, the Court told the jury that it must find a "that" or a "those" for which the things of value were exchanged. The Court continued by specifying that "[b]ribery means that a public official demanded, sought or received something of value as described in the indictment and that the public official demanded, sought or received the item of value corruptly in return for being influenced in the performance of any official act." Tr. 6100 (emphasis added). The Court further explained that the word "corruptly" required the jury to find not just the exchange alleged in the indictment, but also that the defendants had "an improper motive or purpose" and that "[a]n act is done corruptly if it is performed knowingly and dishonestly for a wrongful purpose." Tr. 6101. And that was not all. When it moved to the Hobbs Act counts, the Court reiterated that the jury must find a quid pro quo, instructing the jury that Mr. McDonnell "must have known that the thing of value was given in exchange for official action." Tr. 6113. The Court also emphasized that even a these-for-those exchange requires an "intent to retain a public official's services on an as-needed basis, so that as opportunities arise the public official would take specific official action on the payor's behalf." Tr. 6113–14 (emphasis added).

---

[3] The Court's description of the charged quid pro quo, which was incorporated by reference into the other corruption counts in the redacted indictment the Court gave to the jury, was also entirely consistent with the argument the United States consistently made to the jury: that the meetings, events, and other official actions promised and performed were on the question, matter, or cause of using state universities and other state resources to study Anatabloc. See, e.g., Tr. 5837 (describing August 1, 2011, meeting as "on the Star Scientific Anatabloc trials planned in Virginia at VCU and UVA"), 5843–44 (arguing August 30, 2011, mansion event "wasn't some ceremonial event without context or some event with no purpose," but rather an event to "send[] a signal to those medical schools that this is important"), 5849 (arguing that "there was a plan to try to get Mr. and Mrs. McDonnell to assist Star in promoting the product and in obtaining studies at UVA and VCU"), 5850 (describing purpose of August 30 mansion event as to "influence officials from UVA and VCU"), 5859 (describing February 2012 actions as part of "plan to kick start studies at UVA for Jonnie Williams' benefit"), 5868 (describing March 2012 cabinet meeting as part of "discussion about the [state] employee health plan" and how Anatabloc "would be good for State employees"), 5869 (arguing that alleged official actions were "on the issue of Virginia business development"), 5871 (referring to June 2011 letter from Williams to Mr. McDonnell about getting studies at state universities), 6040–41 (same), 6044 ("What did Mr. Williams always want? He wanted the studies at UVA and VCU.").

Finally, the Court emphasized the heightened mental state that the jury was required to find by giving a "good faith" instruction that was nearly identical to the general good-faith instruction requested by Mr. McDonnell. See Doc. No. 287, at 50. And the Court emphasized that "[t]he burden of establishing lack of good faith and criminal intent rests upon the prosecution. A defendant is under no burden to prove his or her good faith. Rather, the prosecution must prove knowledge of falsity or bad faith beyond a reasonable doubt." Tr. 6123.

In sum, the Court's quid pro quo instructions, taken as a whole, fairly and accurately stated the controlling law with respect to the corruption charges in this case by requiring the appropriate amount of specificity for the quid pro quo exchange while also permitting for the as-needed, opportunities-arise nature of the charged quid pro quo in this case.

Mr. McDonnell points to various quotations from Jennings that were not included verbatim in the jury instructions, but as with his "official action" arguments, he is elevating form over substance when he does so. For example, Mr. McDonnell complains that the jury should have been instructed that it must find an "exchange for 'some specific official act or course of action,'" Def. Mem. at 9 (quoting Jennings, 160 F.3d at 1019), but he does not explain how instructing the jury that it must find an "intent to retain a public official's services on an as-needed basis, so that as opportunities arise the public official would take specific official action on the payor's behalf," Tr. 6113–14, is meaningfully different. Similarly, Mr. McDonnell accurately quotes Jennings when he says that "the Fourth Circuit has made clear that 'a good will gift to an official to foster a favorable business climate, given simply with the generalized hope or expectation of ultimate benefit on the part of the donor, does not constitute a bribe.'" Def. Mem. at 9 (quoting Jennings, 160 F.3d at 1013 (quotation omitted)).[4] But the Court accurately conveyed that principle when it instructed the jury that it must find a this-for-that or these-for-those quid pro quo as charged, that the alleged agreement was the specific one described in the indictment, and that the defendants must have been acting corruptly and in bad faith.

II. This Court did not abuse its discretion in conducting voir dire on pretrial publicity.

This Court's voir dire on pretrial publicity complied with Supreme Court and Fourth Circuit precedent and was not an abuse of discretion, as is illustrated by the Supreme Court's most recent opinion on this subject, Skilling v. United States, 561 U.S. 358 (2010).

In Skilling, the defendant, the former CEO of Enron, moved for a change of venue outside of the Houston area, citing the widespread negative press about Enron's collapse and the economic fallout in the Houston area from Enron's downfall. When the transfer request was denied, the defendant also challenged the adequacy of the district court's voir dire on pretrial publicity. In support of his arguments, the defendant "submitted hundreds of news reports detailing Enron's downfall" and "presented affidavits from the experts he engaged portraying community attitudes in Houston in comparison to other potential venues." Id. at 369–70. The defendant also contended that the district court's "truncated voir dire did almost nothing to weed out prejudices." Id. at 377. The Supreme Court rejected these challenges.

---

[4] Notably, Mr. McDonnell did not actually request an instruction that stated this full quote from Jennings; instead, as he did with deleting "course of action" from his Jennings quotations in the manner previously described above, he deleted "a good will gift to an official to foster a favorable business climate" from the description of what was insufficient in Jennings to show a quid pro quo. See Doc. No. 287, at 49. In essence, Mr. McDonnell changed (and indeed, restricted) the meaning of Jennings in the instructions he requested, and he now flees back to the precise (but broader) language of Jennings as a justification for why the Court erred in rejecting his requested instructions. But the Court was within its discretion in choosing the language that it did to convey the principles set forth in Jennings.

In rejecting that any presumption of prejudice applied from the pretrial publicity, the Supreme Court explained that "our decisions 'cannot be made to stand for the proposition that juror exposure to news accounts of the crime alone presumptively deprives the defendant of due process.'" Id. at 380 (quoting Murphy v. Florida, 421 U.S. 794, 798-99 (1975)). The Supreme Court noted, "Jurors are not required to be 'totally ignorant of the facts and issues involved'" and that "scarcely any of those best qualified to serve as jurors will not have formed some impression or opinion as to the merits of the case." Id. at 381 (quoting Irvin v. Dowd, 366 U.S. 717, 722 (1961)). The Skilling Court concluded, "A presumption of prejudice, our decisions indicate, attends only the extreme case." 561 U.S. at 381 (citing Reynolds v. United States, 98 U.S. 145, 155–56 (1879) ("[E]very case of public interest is almost, as a matter of necessity, brought to the attention of all the intelligent people in the vicinity, and scarcely any one can be found among those best fitted for jurors who has not read or heard of it, and who has not some impression or some opinion in respect to its merits.").

In evaluating prejudice from pretrial publicity, the Court also explained that "of prime significance, Skilling's jury acquitted him of nine insider-trading counts. It would be odd for an appellate court to presume prejudice in a case in which jurors' actions run counter to that presumption." Skilling, 561 U.S. at 383. The same is true here. The jury acquitted Mr. McDonnell on counts 12 and 13 and acquitted Mrs. McDonnell on counts 4, 9, 11, and 13. "[P]retrial publicity—even pervasive, adverse publicity—does not inevitably lead to an unfair trial." Id. at 384 (quoting Nebraska Press Assn. v. Stuart, 427 U.S. 539, 554 (1976)).

In this case, the McDonnells never sought a change of venue, waiving any such claim under Fed. R. Crim. P 21(d), and have never contended that a presumption of prejudice applies. Indeed, Mr. McDonnell remained popular even after he was indicted on January 21, 2014.[5] The McDonnells evidently wanted to take advantage of that favorable rating—a more favorable rating than an indicted defendant typically enjoys and a more favorable rating than the McDonnells would enjoy where they were unknown. In short, because the McDonnells never pursued transfer, their claim of prejudice starts off being less persuasive than in Skilling.

Moreover, in Skilling, the collapse of Enron caused "widespread community impact" from the destruction of people's jobs and investments. Id. at 384. Also, a codefendant in Skilling made a "well-publicized decision to plead guilty shortly before trial." Id. at 384-85.When the Supreme Court concluded that the five-hour voir dire in Skilling sufficed—a voir dire that was about 28% shorter than the seven-hour-and-fifteen-minute voir dire conducted in this case—the Supreme Court stressed the breadth of discretion that district courts possess in conducting voir dire. "No hard-and-fast formula dictates the necessary depth or breadth of voir dire." Id. at 386. The Court continued, "Jury selection, we have repeatedly emphasized, is 'particularly within the province of the trial judge.'" Id. at 386 (quoting Ristaino v. Ross, 424 U.S. 589, 594–95 (1976)). This rule applies with special force to pretrial publicity. See id. at 386.

In evaluating voir dire, the Supreme Court also noted that "other measures . . . were used to mitigate the adverse effects of publicity." Id. at 388 n.21 (quoting Nebraska Press Ass'n., 427

---

[5] One poll reported in the Washington Post on January 23, 2014, found that Mr. McDonnell "has a job approval rating of 57 percent." Exhibit A. The article continued, "In the first six days the poll was in the field, that score stood at 59 percent. In the last two days of surveying, following the news of McDonnell's indictment, his rating dropped to 49 percent approval, 38 percent disapproval." Id. Another poll "gave McDonnell a 45 percent job approval rating, with 24 percent disapproving and a higher percentage of voters who were unsure than the CNU poll." Id.

U.S. at 565). These other steps—taken in this case also—include "the prophylactic effect of 'emphatic and clear instructions on the sworn duty of each juror to decide the issues only on evidence presented in open court.'" Id. The district court in Skilling also "exercised its discretion to grant the defendants two extra peremptories," id., while in this case this Court granted the defendants together 16 peremptory challenges instead of the 10 provided jointly to codefendants under Fed. R. Crim. P 24(b)(2). The district court in Skilling also sent jurors a 77-item questionnaire, while in this case prospective jurors received a 99-item questionnaire that "helped to identify prospective jurors excusable for cause and served as a springboard for further questions to put to the remaining members of the array." Skilling, 561 U.S. at 388 & n.22. And the district court in Skilling "gave Skilling's counsel relatively free rein to ask venire members about their responses on the questionnaire." Id.

This last point highlights a critical error in the defendants motion for a new trial. The core claim that the McDonnells make is that this Court was required to conduct individual voir dire of each prospective juror about pretrial publicity and that the McDonnells did not receive a sufficient opportunity to test the views of individuals jurors. Both points are false. In evaluating voir dire on pretrial publicity in particular, the Fourth Circuit has held that it is "well established that a trial judge may question prospective jurors collectively rather than individually." United States v. Bailey, 112 F.3d 758, 770 (4th Cir. 1997) (quoting United States v. Bakker, 925 F.2d 728, 734 (4th Cir. 1991)). And while the district judge in Skilling chose to conduct individual voir dire on pretrial publicity (during voir dire that was overall shorter than in this case), the Supreme Court stressed, "No hard-and-fast formula dictates the necessary depth or breadth of voir dire." Skilling, 561 U.S. at 386.

In claiming a legal entitlement to individual questioning, the McDonnells invoke United States v. Hankish, 502 F.2d 71 (4th Cir. 1974), a case about jurors' exposure to publicity during trial after the jurors were empaneled and where the time devoted to questioning 12 jurors and a few alternates is substantially less than questioning an entire venire. But whatever the current legal force of Hankish for jurors' exposure to news during trial, as Bailey and Bakker held, when a district court is questioning the entire venire about pretrial publicity, the court possesses discretion to pose questions to the venire collectively.

In seeking to make the collective questions seem inadequate, the McDonnells ignore the context of the voir dire. Before this Court exercised its discretion to "question prospective jurors collectively rather than individually" about pretrial publicity, Bailey, 112 F.3d at 770, this Court had already posed 29 questions to the entire venire collectively, and in response to those collective questions, individual prospective jurors had stood up 274 times by the Government's count to volunteer answers to those 29 questions. Thus, when this Court asked questions to the entire venire, the prospective jurors showed no hesitation in answering where appropriate. This Court had also shown the jurors that it would receive confidentially the answers to question that were sensitive and did conduct individual questioning on prospective jurors' criminal records and disabilities.

Moreover, and significantly, after posing the collective questions on pretrial publicity, this Court gave the McDonnells a full opportunity—which they employed—to examine individual jurors who gave them concern. This Court asked defense counsel that "if you got specific folks who we need to look at specific responses let me know." Tr. 141. Defense counsel then requested and received individual questioning about specific jurors, leading to the successful exclusion of prospective jurors. See, e.g., Tr. 150, 153. And this Court explained that it also "went through [the questionnaires] with a fine-tooth comb" and had prepared its own list of potentially problematic jurors. Tr. 142.

After this individual questioning, this Court asked defense counsel, "Anybody else?" Tr. 155. Defense counsel responded, "Not on publicity." Id. This failure to pursue further questioning directly undermines the McDonnells' claims. The 99-item questionnaire armed the McDonnells with a host of information for inquiring at voir dire in greater detail about prospective jurors who concerned them. Indeed, the whole point of the questionnaires was to facilitate voir dire and make it more accurate and efficient. This is a point that the Supreme Court made in Skilling. 561 U.S. at 388 n.22. In this case, questions 47, 48, 49, and 50 of the questionnaire—which the McDonnells helped create—required each prospective juror to disclose which national news media outlets they watched, which newspapers they most often read, the internet websites that they visit regularly for news and current events, and how often they watch investigative news programs. If there were stories in the media that particularly concerned the McDonnells, the prospective jurors' answers to these questions enabled the McDonnells to home in on the jurors who might concern them the most. More broadly, question 69 noted that the defendants "are well-known public figures" and asked if that would affect the jurors' ability to follow the Court's instructions. Question 77 asked, "Do you feel that there have been any actions by Robert F. McDonnell or Maureen G. McDonnell while they were Governor and First Lady of Virginia, respectively, that have affected you in a personal way?" The question also asked, "If yes, please explain." More targeted questions specifically asked about sources of information that jurors have received about this case. See, e.g., Questions 83, 84, 85, 86, 97, and 98. Likewise, the questionnaire warned jurors in question 11 that the case will receive media attention, informed them that they must decide the case "solely on the evidence presented in the courtroom," and asked if the jurors would "find it difficult to obey such an instruction for any reason?"

As in Bailey, this Court "did question individually those jurors who initial responses were less than satisfactory," 112 F.3d at 770, and any failure to follow up on answers in the questionnaires falls on the McDonnells. This Court specifically invited particular additional questions of identifiable jurors, and the McDonnells declined to pursue anything further.

Moreover, as in Skilling, the jurors who were actually selected demonstrated that the combined effect of, among other things, the questionnaires, the questioning in voir dire, the additional peremptory challenges, and the cautionary instructions did in fact work. In Skilling, the Supreme Court noted that 14 jurors and alternates "specifically stated that they had paid scant attention to Enron-related news" and that the remaining two jurors stated that they were not influenced by the news. Id. at 390. Similarly, in this case, [redacted]

In Skilling, the Supreme Court specifically rejected the dissenters' reliance on prospective jurors who were not selected. As the majority explained, "Statements by non-jurors do not themselves call into question the adequacy of the jury-selection process; elimination of these venire members is indeed one indicator that the process fulfilled its function." 561 U.S. at 390 n.24. And again, the jury's verdict acquitting on some counts supports that "the court's assessments were accurate." Id. at 395. The McDonnells identify no juror who actually voted in this case that they assert was biased. Id. at 395–96. And the McDonnells do not contend that any challenge for cause based on a juror's bias was wrongly denied. Id.

In sum, the McDonnells did not believe a change of venue was needed, received a wealth of information about prospective jurors through the questionnaires, were given an opportunity to question individual jurors that they viewed as problematic at voir dire, succeeded in striking some for cause, and declined the opportunity to question further. And the jurors selected showed no sign of having been tainted by media coverage and, by voting to acquit on some counts, demonstrated an independent view of the evidence. That there naturally was public interest in a prosecution of a former governor for corruption is not a basis for relief.

III. This Court did not abuse its discretion in declining to question the sitting jurors about whether they had in fact begun premature deliberations.

The McDonnells fail to show that there is credible evidence of premature deliberations and that, even if there were, this Court abused its discretion in declining to question the sitting jurors on that issue.

The record overwhelmingly establishes one background point that is highly relevant to whether there is credible evidence of premature deliberations: namely, both Juror No. 0356's own testimony and the testimony of the lawyer that he contacted show that Juror No. 0356 violated this Court's repeated instructions to the jury not to talk to anyone about this case. Even before trial began, [redacted] At the end of the questionnaire and [redacted] was a statement in boldface and all capital print: "I further understand that I am not to discuss this case with anyone or seek out, listen to, or read any material about this case in the media, on the internet or elsewhere until the judge in this case has instructed me otherwise." Then, at the very beginning of trial, this Court instructed the jury "not to discuss this case with anyone." Tr. 176–77 This Court repeated that instruction every day of trial, resulting in a total of at least nine more times this Court gave that instruction before August 11. See, e.g., Tr. 192–93, 422, 691, 1151, 1448, 1756, 2027, 2296, 2531. And then on August 11, this Court repeated for a tenth time in open court the instruction less than an hour before Juror No. 0356 decided to call a lawyer and bring up, on Juror No. 0356's initiative, his jury service. Tr. 2826. After receiving Juror No. 0356's call, the lawyer reported it to the prosecutors, and the United States promptly provided defense counsel with the voicemail recording—which included the lawyer's phone number—and a law enforcement agent's notes summarizing the Government's conversation with the lawyer. At the Government's request, the lawyer appeared for examination by the Court and the parties the next morning before trial.

The lawyer testified credibly before this Court that, at about 6:15 pm on August 11, 2014, Juror No. 0356 called and asked how the lawyer was doing. Sealed Chambers Conference, August 12, 2014, at 6. Juror No. 0356 noted that he hadn't heard from the lawyer in a while. Id. Juror No. 0356 knew that the lawyer was in the process of transitioning out of his active practice of litigation, id., and as publicly available information shows, the lawyer has in fact been a member of the bar for over 40 years, a fact corroborated by what was apparent to those present at the hearing. After Juror No. 0356 discussed some personal matters, Juror No. 0356 told the lawyer that "I am calling you because I am a Foreman on a jury." Id. at 7 Juror No. 0356 continued that "there are 12 people, and they are kind of all over the place and I don't know what to do." Id. The lawyer said that Juror No. 0356 seemed "stressed." Id. Juror No. 0356 added, "I'm put up in a hotel here in the McDonnell case." Id. at 8. The lawyer responded, "Whoa," and said "I know you think you have the right to an attorney, and I can understand that because I've been your attorney. But when you are in the jury, on the jury, I can't talk to you and you shouldn't be talking with me." Id. The lawyer confirmed that the two had no substantive discussion of the McDonnell case—"[a]bsolutely none, not even close." Id. at 9.

After receiving this testimony, this Court correctly found that Juror No. 0356 "violated the Court's instruction, simply by making the phone call and identifying himself as being on this jury." Id. at 10. This Court then decided to hear from Juror No. 0356. After Juror No. 0356 confirmed that he had called the lawyer the previous evening, this Court asked whether Juror No. 0356 had identified himself as a juror on the McDonnell case.

Juror No. 0356 first said that he had called the lawyer "on some other business" and then acknowledged that he "had mentioned that." Id. at 13. Juror No. 0356 continued, "I was asking him if in the jury room, when it is all over, what is the normal procedure, I mean, how does that work. I had never been to that point on a criminal trial like this." Id.

When this Court asked Juror No. 0356 whether he had told the lawyer that he was the foreman, Juror No. 0356 denied making that statement and sought to minimize his contact:

> No, no, no. I said, "Is it possible to be open with me as well as anyone else?" He said, "Are you talking about the McDonnell trial?" I said, "Yes." He said, "Well, we can't talk about it any further." And that was it. But the call, the phone call originated about some other legal stuff that we were dealing with.

Id. Probing further, this Court asked Juror No. 0356 whether he had said that he had 12 people all over the place:

> Court: Did you tell him you've got 12 people all over the place?
>
> Juror: Twelve people all over the place?
>
> Court: Right.

> Juror: What I meant, I did say that. What I meant by that was we didn't know, I didn't know where the charges referred to in what we were, the lawyers and so forth were talking about in the trial. And that's why this morning I asked if we could get a copy of the charges on each individual. That's what that was, you know—that's what I meant by "it is all over the place." I don't know based on what you told us when we started, and writing it down, I didn't get it all. You were talking fast. And I wanted a copy of the 12 charges.
>
> Court: You say "12 people all over the place," that indicates that you have talked to 12—
>
> Juror: No, no, no. It wasn't intended like that at all. Not at all. No. I didn't talk to anyone about it, about the specifics of the case or anything, you know. Different comments are made when you walk back in there, like, "Wow glad that's over with," or that sort of thing, whatever. I didn't call [the lawyer] about this case, by no means. It was about something else.

Id. at 13–14. This Court then asked if the parties "have any questions for him?" Id. at 14. And defense counsel responded, "No questions." Id. This Court concluded, "All right, obviously he is still out." Id.

The McDonnells' position on Juror No. 0536 is internally inconsistent. They have simultaneously argued that (a) Juror No. 0356 should not be dismissed even though he himself admitted that he called the lawyer, identified that he was a juror on the McDonnell case, and asked for advice because the "jurors are all over the place," and at the same time, the McDonnells are implicitly arguing that (b) Juror No. 0356 should not be believed when he sought to explain away the statement that the "jurors are all over the place" and denied that he said he was the "foreman."

What the record shows is that Juror No. 0356 unmistakably violated an order that this Court gave him about a dozen times over two weeks, and in violating the Court's repeated order, he inflated his role by incorrectly stating that he was the foreman[6] (an assertion that he later denied making) and, in keeping with his overstatement, claimed that he needed to address "12 people all over the place." Moreover, in response to this Court's questions, Juror No. 0356 contended that his statement about 12 people really related to 12 counts (when there are in fact 14 counts in the indictment). This is not credible evidence that other jurors were prematurely deliberating.

Juror No. 0356 was promptly dismissed from the jury before the trial resumed after his improper contact with the lawyer. Under the Fourth Circuit's law, "Although external jury influences necessitate a thorough judicial inquiry, no such obligation is imposed with regard to an internal jury influence." Wolfe v. Johnson, 565 F.3d 140, 161 (4th Cir. 2009). And a "district court has broad discretion in choosing how to handle a claim of juror bias or misconduct." United States v. Basham, 561 F.3d 302, 321 n.9 (4th Cir. 2009) (quoting United States v. Barnette, 390 F.3d 775, 808 (4th Cir. 2004) (citations omitted), vacated on other grounds, 546 U.S. 803 (2005)). "The Fourth Circuit follows the view that the trial court may deal with [claims of juror misconduct] as it feels the particular circumstances require and [will] only reverse for abuse of discretion." Id. (quoting United States v. Gravely, 840 F.2d 1156, 1159 (4th Cir. 1988)). This discretion follows in part because "the circumstances in which juror misconduct can occur are probably as varied as all of human experience." Barnette, 390 F.3d at 808.

Given the circumstances here—where there is no credible evidence that the jury has been prematurely deliberating and this Court issued detailed curative jury instructions, see, e.g., Tr. 3076–77—the policy of preserving jury secrecy and independence, as well as the need to avoid the risk of influencing the jury through the investigation itself, weighs against an inquiry. This

---

[6] In the jury box, Juror No. 0356 was seated in the front-row seat closest to the Court clerk, where a foreman customarily sits at the conclusion of a case.

Court's unmistakable instructions, coming on the heels of dismissing a juror, impressed on jurors the importance of following the Court's instructions.

As the Eleventh Circuit has aptly observed, in deciding how best to approach juror conduct that does not involve external information being passed to a jury, "There are often no obviously right or wrong answers to the questions that arise." United States v. Dominguez, 226 F.3d 1235, 1246 (11th Cir. 2000). Thus, "when a jury problem involves the possibility of internal misconduct, the trial judge's 'discretion extends even to the initial decision of whether to interrogate the jurors.'" Id. Because of the competing considerations at play, and the need to rely on the district court's on-the-ground assessment, "The most salient aspect of the law in this area is the breadth of discretion given to judges who are called upon to deal with the possibility of juror misconduct." Id. And again, the jury instructions that this Court provided obviated any colorable claim of error. Cf. United States v. Lemus, 542 F.2d 222, 223–24 (4th Cir. 1976) (per curiam).[7]

IV The Court did not erroneously admit Rule 404(b) evidence.

Mr. McDonnell further complains that two pieces of evidence were admitted contrary to Rule 404(b): (1) evidence that William Goodwin provided a vacation to the McDonnell family that was not reported on Mr. McDonnell's SOEI, and (2) evidence that Mr. McDonnell's staff arranged for free golf vacations.

---

[7] In footnote 5 of his motion for a new trial, Mr. McDonnell asserts that "it is unclear on the current record" whether the lawyer "violated his ethical obligations." Any argument on this point should be deemed waived. First, at the August 12 hearing, Mr. McDonnell never raised any ethical issue and did not act as if he believed the inquiry into Juror No. 0356's communications with the lawyer implicated a violation of the ethics rules. Second, Mr. McDonnell offers no authority supporting his claim that the ethics rules encourage sitting jurors to reach out to lawyers, rather than the Court, by protecting the confidentiality of the jurors' communications made in violation of court orders. Third, in any event, the McDonnells lack standing to assert any purported breach of a duty of confidentiality between Juror No. 0356 and the lawyer.

A. The Goodwin Evidence.

As an initial matter, the United States presented sufficient evidence to prove that Mr. McDonnell and Mr. Goodwin were not "personal friends." Although Mr. McDonnell answered affirmatively that Mr. Goodwin was a personal friend, Tr. 5051, he further testified that he socialized with Mr. Goodwin only a "[c]ouple of times," Tr. 5051–52, and that he and Mr. Goodwin spoke on the telephone "[m]aybe twice" without discussing business, Tr. 5052–53. Mr. McDonnell testified that he had known Mr. Goodwin for "about ten years." Tr. 5051. But Mr. McDonnell was uncertain how many children Mr. Goodwin had and their names. Tr. 5053. Mr. McDonnell testified that he exchanged "[m]aybe just one or two" text messages with Mr. Goodwin and did not have his cell phone until "[m]aybe '12." Tr. 5053. Mr. McDonnell could not recall whether Mr. Goodwin was invited to either of his daughters' weddings. Tr. 5054. When asked to define a "personal friend," Mr. McDonnell testified that he included people with whom he felt "an affinity with, that you have mutual respect for," including individuals with whom he merely felt a "common bond, because of our children, because of our love for this state." Tr. 5054–55. And although Mr. McDonnell did not disclose the Kiawah Island vacation from Mr. Goodwin on his 2012 SOEI because it was "personal," he did disclose Mr. Goodwin's gift of the use of Keswick that same year. Tr. 5296–97 Given the facts that Mr. McDonnell admitted, a jury was not required to accept his conclusory claim that he was a personal friend of Mr. Goodwin's. Cf United States v. Nevils, 598 F.3d 1158, 1165 n.2 (9th Cir. 2010) (en banc). Thus, even without direct testimony from Mr. Goodwin, Mr. McDonnell's assertion that he was a personal friend does not withstand common sense.

Moreover, the Goodwin evidence was intrinsic to Mr. McDonnell's scheme to defraud. Evidence that is "intrinsic to the alleged crime do[es] not fall under Rule 404(b)'s limitations." United States v. Otuya, 720 F.3d 183, 188 (4th Cir. 2013). The SOEI on which Mr. McDonnell decided not to report the Goodwin gift is the same form on which Mr. McDonnell failed to disclose gifts and loans from Mr. Williams. And even if the evidence were not intrinsic but, rather, 404(b) evidence, it showed Mr. McDonnell's knowledge of the SOEI and the existence of the "personal friend" exception. It also was evidence of Mr. McDonnell's lack of mistake or accident in failing to disclose the gifts and loans from Mr. Williams. The Fourth Circuit has characterized Rule 404(b) "as an inclusive rule, admitting all evidence of other crimes or acts except that which tends to prove only criminal disposition." United States v. Powers, 59 F.3d 1460, 1464 (4th Cir. 1995) (internal quotation omitted) (emphasis added).

And even if this evidence were somehow improperly admitted, Mr. McDonnell has suffered no prejudice. The cases on which he relies for the proposition that 404(b) evidence "could easily tip the scales toward a guilty verdict" are inapposite to the present facts. See, e.g., United States v. Lee, 724 F.3d 968 (7th Cir. 2013) (district court erred in admitting defendant's prior conviction for possessing cocaine in defendant's trial for new crack cocaine offense); United States v. Lail, 846 F.2d 1299 (11th Cir. 1988) (district court erred in admitting during bank-robbery trial evidence of defendant's past uncharged bank robbery where defendant abducted bank manager). Evidence that Mr. McDonnell used the "personal friend" exception to avoid reporting Mr. Goodwin's gift is a far cry from evidence of a prior conviction or uncharged criminal conduct at issue in those cases.

B. The Free Golf Vacation Email

The United States properly introduced Government Exhibit 627, pertaining to free golf vacations sought by Mr. McDonnell, to rebut assertions he made during his direct testimony. Exhibit 627 was a January 2013 email exchange between Emily Rabbitt (then the current travel aide) and Adam Zubowsky (former travel aide), explaining that Mr. McDonnell wanted vacation information about golf courses where he could "play for free, or at a reduced cost," and sought similarly-priced lodging. The United States attempted to introduce the email during the testimony of Emily Rabbitt, but the Court sustained Mr. McDonnell's objection and excluded it. Tr. 2868-69.[8]

Later, during his direct examination, Mr. McDonnell told the jury that the "most important gift" he received as governor was "having some time with his family." Tr. 4853. Implicit in this statement, and undergirding his entire direct testimony, was the notion that he accepted gifts from Mr. Williams and others simply to spend time with his family and that the luxuriousnessness of the gifts had no bearing. Government Exhibit 627 contradicts this assertion. On cross examination, the United States first asked Mr. McDonnell about the information contained in the email, without mentioning the email. See Tr. 5135-36. Mr. McDonnell denied everything in the exhibit. See id. The Government then introduced the exhibit and again inquired about the statements therein. Again, Mr. McDonnell's account contradicted the exhibit. The free golf vacation email was not Rule 404(b) evidence; it was offered to rebut Mr. McDonnell's assertion that he didn't seek gifts and he simply accepted gifts to spend time with his family. See, e.g., 1 McCormick on Evidence § 45 (7th ed. 2013); cf. United States v. Leavis, 853 F.2d 215, [8] Mr. McDonnell mistakenly argues that Ms. Rabbitt did not testify when, in fact, she did on August 12, 2014. In addition, Mr. Zubowsky had been subpoenaed to testify and was equally available to all parties, but neither defendant chose to call him to testify in their defense.

---

220 (4th Cir. 1988) (affirming introduction of prior conviction "to contradict specific statements by Leavis on direct examination").

Moreover, the email did not contain inadmissible hearsay. Ms. Rabbitt was writing in her capacity as an agent or employee of Mr. McDonnell, and her statements were being used by the Government against Mr. McDonnell. See Fed. R. Evid. 801(d)(2)(D). Mr. Zubowsky was simply conveying information provided to him by Mr. McDonnell. See Fed. R. Evid. 801(d)(2)(A).

Finally, even if the email were improperly admitted, which it plainly was not, any error in the admission of one email that merely described Mr. McDonnell's desire to play golf at a reduced cost could hardly have had any bearing on the jury's verdict. The Court explicitly instructed the jury that the "defendants are not on trial for any act or conduct or offense not alleged in the indictment." Tr. at 6126. And "jurors are presumed to follow instructions from the court." United States v. Alexander, 2014 WL 2434593 *6 (E.D.Va. May 29, 2014).

V Conclusion

For all of these reasons, Mr. McDonnell's motion (Doc. No. 511) should be denied.

Respectfully submitted,

DANA J. BOENTE
United States Attorney

JACK SMITH
Chief, Public Integrity Section
Criminal Division
U.S. Department of Justice

By:______/s/________
Ryan S. Faulconer
Richard D. Cooke
Michael S. Dry
Jessica D. Aber
Counsel for the United States
U.S. Attorney's Office
600 E. Main Street, Suite 1800
Richmond, VA 23219
Phone: 804-819-5400
Fax: 804-771-2316
Email: ryan.faulconer2@usdoj.gov
richard.cooke@usdoj.gov
michael.s.dry@usdoj.gov
jessica.d.aber@usdoj.gov

CERTIFICATE OF SERVICE

I hereby certify that on October 30, 2014, I will electronically file the foregoing with the Clerk of Court using the CM/ECF system, which will then send a notification of such filing ("NEF") to all counsel of record.

By: /s/
Ryan S. Faulconer
Counsel for the United States
U.S. Attorney's Office
600 E. Main Street, Suite 1800
Richmond, VA 23219
Phone: 804-819-5400
Fax: 804-771-2316
Email: ryan.faulconer2@usdoj.gov

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
EASTERN DISTRICT OF VIRGINIA
RICHMOND DIVISION

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,

v.

ROBERT F. MCDONNELL,

and

MAUREEN G. MCDONNELL,

Defendants.

Action No. 3:14-CR-12

MEMORANDUM OPINION

THIS MATTER is before the Court on Defendant Robert F. McDonnell's Motion #40 ("Motion") (ECF No. 511). The Government filed an Opposition Memorandum ("Opp'n Mem.") (ECF No. 530) on October 14, 2014. McDonnell subsequently filed a reply on October 24, 2014 ("Reply Mem.") (ECF No. 541). The parties have not requested a hearing on this matter, and the Court finds that oral argument is unnecessary. E.D. Va. Loc. Crim. R. 47(J). For the reasons set forth below, the Motion is hereby DENIED.

I. BACKGROUND

Defendant Robert F. McDonnell ("McDonnell") served as the 71st Governor of the Commonwealth of Virginia from January 2010 to January 2014. His wife, Maureen G. McDonnell ("Mrs. McDonnell"), served as the First Lady of Virginia.

During his campaign for Governor, McDonnell met Jonnie Williams ("Williams"). Williams was the Chief Executive Officer of Star Scientific, Inc. ("Star Scientific"). Beginning in or about 2007, Star Scientific focused on utilizing certain alkaloids in the tobacco plant, namely anatabine, to address issues related to the desire to smoke. The company engaged in the development, manufacture, and marketing of two anatabine-based dietary supplements: CigRx and Anatabloc. To gain customer and physician approval of its products, Star Scientific sought scientific studies of anatabine.

On January 21, 2014, McDonnell, along with his wife, was charged in a 14-count indictment, with Counts 1-11 alleging that he committed and conspired to commit honest-services wire fraud and extortion under color of official right. Specifically, the indictment alleged that "the defendants participated in a scheme to use ROBERT MCDONNELL's official position as the Governor of Virginia to enrich the defendants and their family members by soliciting and obtaining payments, loans, gifts, and other things of value from [Williams] in exchange for ROBERT MCDONNELL performing official actions on an as-needed basis, as opportunities arose, to legitimize, promote, and obtain research studies for Star Scientific's products, including Anatabloc." Indictment ¶ 22. On September 4, 2014, a jury convicted McDonnell on Counts 1-11.

On September 18, 2014, McDonnell filed the instant Motion, asking the Court to vacate the jury's "flawed" verdict and grant a new trial based on the following four reasons: (1) the Court's jury instructions were legally erroneous because they (i) allowed the jury to convict McDonnell on an erroneous understanding of "official act," and (ii) allowed a conviction on the theory that McDonnell accepted things of value that were given for future unspecified action; (2) McDonnell was deprived of his right to an impartial jury due to an inadequate inquiry into each prospective juror's exposure to the "near constant, overwhelmingly prejudicial publicity" before the trial; (3) the Court's failure to voir dire the jurors based on evidence of juror misconduct; and (4) the Court erroneously admitted highly prejudicial Rule 404(b) evidence that McDonnell received things of value from William Goodwin and that McDonnell's staff organized free golf for him.

II. LEGAL STANDARD

Under Federal Rule of Criminal Procedure 33, "the [district] court may vacate any judgment and grant a new trial if the interest of justice so requires." Fed. R. Crim. P 33(a). A motion for a new trial brought on the basis of any ground besides newly discovered evidence "must be filed within 14 days after the verdict or finding of guilty." Fed. R. Crim. P 33(b)(1)–(2).

Whether to award a new trial is within the district court's broad discretion. See United States v. Smith, 451 F.3d 209, 216–17 (4th Cir. 2006). The discretion to award a new trial, however, should be used sparingly, and "only when the evidence weighs heavily against the verdict." United States v. Perry, 335 F.3d 316, 320 (4th Cir. 2003) (citations and internal quotation marks omitted).

III. DISCUSSION

A. Claim 1: The Court's Jury Instructions Were Legally Erroneous

Based on United States v. Jennings, 160 F.3d 1006 (4th Cir. 1998), McDonnell harps on the argument that "vague expectations of some future benefit" are not "sufficient to make a payment a bribe." He claims that upholding his conviction based on the Government's overbroad interpretation of "official act" would set a precedent of criminalizing routine political courtesies. McDonnell's contentions, however, miss the mark.

(1) Erroneous Understanding of "Official Act"

McDonnell first argues that the Court's jury instructions turned established legal principles "on their head" by allowing the jury to convict McDonnell on an erroneous understanding of "official act."

The Hobbs Act, 18 U.S.C. § 1951, criminalizes extortion, or the obtaining of property from another, with the official's consent, under color of official right. 18 U.S.C. § 1951(b)(2). At common law a public official committed extortion when he took "by color of his office" money that was not due to him for the performance of his official duties. Evans v. United States, 504 U.S. 255, 260 (1992). The portion of the present-day Hobbs Act that refers to official misconduct continues to mirror this common-law definition. Id. at 264. Thus, to prosecute a violation of the Hobbs Act, "the Government need only show that a public official has obtained a payment to which he was not entitled, knowing that the payment was made in return for official acts." Id. at 268 (emphasis added).

Similarly,"[t]he intangible right of honest services refers to the public's right to a government official's honest, faithful, and disinterested services." United States v. Harvey, 532 F.3d 326, 333 (4th Cir. 2008) (quoting United States v. Mandel, 591 F.2d 1347, 1362 (4th Cir. 1979)) (internal quotation marks omitted). As such, acceptance of a bribe, or the exchange of a thing or things of value for official action by a public official[1], constitutes a violation of this public right. Id.

This case hinges on the interpretation of an "official act" and whether McDonnell's actions constitute such. At its most basic definition, an "'official act' means any decision or action on any question, matter, cause, suit, proceeding or controversy, which may at any time be pending, or which may by law be brought before any public official, in such official's official capacity, or in such official's place of trust or profit." 18 U.S.C. § 201(a)(3). More specifically, official action is conduct that is taken "as part of a public official's position"—whether pursuant to an explicit duty or as a matter of "clearly established settled practice." United States v. Jefferson, 674 F.3d 332, 353 (4th Cir. 2012). Obviously, however, McDonnell challenges the finer aspects of this elementary definition.

Clearly the bribery statute does not encompass every action taken in one's official capacity, see id. at 356, or else absurd outcomes would assuredly result. But, on the other hand, "[e]very action that is within the range of official duty comes within the purview of [this statute]." United States v. Birdsall, 233 U.S. 223 (1914). Thus, to distinguish between the apparent fine line of routine official duties and public corruption, the Court must look to whether a quid pro quo agreement existed.

A quid pro quo agreement evinces a sort of "I'll scratch your back if you scratch mine" arrangement. Jennings, 160 F.3d at 1014. In other words, "[b]ribery requires the intent to effect an exchange of money (or gifts) for specific action (or inaction), but each payment need not be correlated with a specific official act." Id. "The quid pro quo requirement is satisfied so long as the evidence shows a course of conduct of favors and gifts flowing to a public official in exchange for a pattern of official actions favorable to the donor.' Thus, all that must be shown is that payments were made with the intent of securing a specific type of official action or favor in return." Id. (citation and internal quotation marks omitted).

---

[1] Tr. Vol. XXVI 6100:9–11.

Admittedly, mere "[i]ngratiation and access" may not alone create a quid pro quo agreement within the meaning of the bribery statutes. See Citizens United, 558 U.S. 310, 360 (2010). As Judge Merritt recently observed, > Subjective intent is the keystone of bribery. The influence of money in politics is growing by leaps and bounds, and the subjective intent of the public official receiving the money is perhaps the last and only distinguishable feature between criminal "quid pro quo bribery" and permissible "ingratiation." The exchange of money for a vote is a crime that threatens the foundation of democracy. Buckley v. Valeo, 424 U.S. 1, 26–27, 96 S.Ct. 612, 46 L.Ed.2d 659 (1976). The exchange of money for "ingratiation and access is not corruption" at all; indeed, the exchange is so essential to the foundation of democracy that it is protected by the First Amendment. McCutcheon v. FEC, —U.S. —, 134 S.Ct. 1434, 1441,188 L.Ed.2d 478 (2014) (internal edits omitted). We are left to distinguish the two as best we can by looking into the subjective intent of the public official. And by we, I mean the jury.

United States v. Dimora, 750 F.3d 619, 632 (6th Cir. 2014) (Merritt, J., dissenting). Thus, to distinguish between mere access and federal corruption, the Court should look to McDonnell's subjective intent in receiving the money.

The Government provided substantial evidence for the jury to conclude that McDonnell knew what Williams was seeking, specifically, research studies for Star Scientific's Anatabloc product. Through Williams' direct examination, the Government elicited testimony that in October of 2010, McDonnell flew back from California to Virginia on Williams' private jet. Tr. Vol. III 658:18–20. On that flight Williams explained to McDonnell that he "needed testing and [he] wanted to have this done in Virginia." Id. at 660:7–8. Williams testified that he asked McDonnell if McDonnell "[w]ould connect [him] with the person in Virginia in [McDonnell's] administration so that [he could] move this forward." Id. at 660:9–11. Moreover, and most tellingly, in June 2011, Williams sent a letter to McDonnell that specifically described the context within which Williams sought official action from McDonnell. Tr. Vol. IV 701–705; Gov't Ex. 162. And McDonnell admitted on cross-examination that he received the letter, Tr. Vol. XXI 5036:10, and at least read the portion of the letter suggesting that McDonnell initiate a "Virginia study" of Anatabloc at UVA and the Medical College of Virginia ("MCV"), id. at 5037:3–11. Thus, based on the evidence presented, the jury could have properly determined that in accepting Williams' gifts and loans, McDonnell understood the implicit quid pro quo.

The next logical question the Court must now address is whether the Government provided sufficient evidence of the "quo," that is the "official action," in this case. McDonnell argues that the Government invited the jury to find that he had performed official acts merely by acting in his official capacity, so long as there was some connection to "Virginia business development." (Mem. in Supp. of Mot. at 4.) But contrary to McDonnell's argument, the Government did not rely on vague, broadly defined actions or matters. The Government instead pointed to five specific actions taken by McDonnell "to legitimize, promote, and obtain research studies for Star Scientific products."

One such example is the meeting between McDonnell, Lisa Hicks-Thomas ("Hicks-Thomas"), McDonnell's Secretary of Administration, and Sarah Wilson ("Wilson"), the Virginia Department of Human Resource Management Director. In that meeting, McDonnell pulled out a bottle of Anatabloc and said that he had been taking the pills and "they were working well for him, and [] he thought it would be good for [] state employees." Tr. Vol. XI 2676:15-19. Hicks-Thomas testified that McDonnell then asked if she and Wilson would "meet with the people." Id. at 2676:19–20 (emphasis added). After the meeting, both women then went down to Hicks-Thomas' office and looked up Anatabloc on the computer. Id. at 2677:1–5. Or, for another example, the email to Jason Eige ("Eige"), the Governor's counsel and policy advisor, in which McDonnell said, "Please see me about Anatabloc issues at VCU and UVA." Tr. Vol. VII 1666:9–10. Eige subsequently responded, "Will do. We need to be careful with this issue." Id. at 1666:12.

In each example, McDonnell attempted to use his gubernatorial position to influence governmental decisions, specifically attempting to obtain research studies for Star Scientific. McDonnell clearly had influential power over Hicks-Thomas, for example, as she testified that she reported to the Governor and he had the power to fire her. Tr. Vol. XI 2673:14–15, 19–20; see United States v. Carson, 464 F.2d 424, 433 (2d Cir. 1972) ("There is no doubt that federal bribery statutes have been construed to cover any situation in which the advice or recommendation of a Government employee would be influential ").

These actions were within the range of actions on questions, matters, or causes pending before McDonnell as Governor as multiple witnesses testified that Virginia business and economic development was a top priority in McDonnell's administration. Tr. Vol. IX 2037:17–23; 2234:22–25. His campaign slogan was "Bob's for Jobs." Id. at 2232:17–19. And several former McDonnell staffers testified about the various ways that McDonnell would customarily take action on questions, matters and causes of Virginia business and economic development, including hosting events and having meetings. See id. at 2235:14–16; Tr. Vol. XI 2545:14–16.

The alleged exchange in this case was not simply receiving things of value in return for official action in the abstract; McDonnell fails to account for the permissible inferences the jury may have drawn with regards to the timing of Williams' gifts and McDonnell's official actions. Moreover, the Court's instructions explicitly required the jury to find a quid pro quo agreement. Tr. XXVI 6100:9–13 ("Bribery involves the exchange of a thing or things of value for official action by a public official. In other words, a quid pro quo. You've heard that phrase, the Latin phrase, meaning 'this for that' or 'these for those.'") The Court specified that the indictment alleged that the McDonnells accepted things of value from Williams "in exchange for Robert McDonnell and the Office of the Governor of Virginia performing official actions on an as-needed basis as opportunities arose to legitimize, promote, and obtain research studies for Star Scientific products." Id. at 6089:18–22. These instructions cemented the view that an "official act" is not simply any action related to a broadly defined matter that was taken in McDonnell's official capacity–rather, it was an action taken specifically with respect to Star Scientific.

McDonnell attempts to analogize his case with United States v. Sun-Diamond Growers of Calif., 526 U.S. 398 (1999). In that case, the Supreme Court discussed the illegal gratuity statute, 18 U.S.C. § 201, and differentiated between an illegal gratuity and a bribe, with the latter requiring proof of a quid pro quo. In its opinion, the Supreme Court noted that to give effect to the statute's language "some particular official act [must] be identified and proved." Id. at 406. If an alternative reading was allowed, the Supreme Court noted that actions such as a high school principal's gift of a school baseball cap to the Secretary of Education on the occasion of the latter's visit to the school, or a group of farmers' complimentary lunch for the Secretary of Agriculture in conjunction with his speech to the farmers would be criminalized. Id. at 407. The Court admitted that while these actions are assuredly "official acts" in some sense, they are not "official acts" within the meaning of the statute. Id. The Supreme Court refused to read the illegal gratuity statute as a "prohibition of gifts by reason of the donee's office." Id. at 408. The Court ultimately held that the Government needed to "prove a link between a thing of value conferred upon a public official and a specific 'official act' for or because of which it was given." Id. at 414.

As an initial matter, the Supreme Court in Sun-Diamond did not rule on what constitutes an official act; the Court instead "simply embraced a narrow reading of the illegal gratuity statute." Jefferson, 674 F.3d at 355. However, that being said, here the evidence presented by the Government did not simply show that Williams gave gifts and loans to McDonnell by reason of McDonnell's gubernatorial position. Rather, the jury permissibly reasoned that Williams' gifts were tied to the five identified "official acts" and thus fulfilled the requisite quid pro quo agreement.

McDonnell next challenges two specific lines of the Court's jury instructions, but as explained below, both of McDonnell's arguments are equally unavailing.

(i) Settled Practice Instruction

In its instructions to the jury, this Court first defined the definition of "official act" as spelled out under 18 U.S.C. § 201(a)(3). The Court then continued:

> Official action as I just defined it includes those actions that have been clearly established by settled practice as part of a public official's position, even if the action was not taken pursuant to responsibilities explicitly assigned by law. In other words, official actions may include acts that a public official customarily performs, even if those actions are not described in any law, rule, or job description.

Tr. Vol. XXVI at 6102:23–6103:5. McDonnell objects to this instruction, arguing that although an official act may include actions established by settled practice, "the bare fact that an action is a settled practice does not make it an official act." (Mem. in Supp. of Mot. at 6.) McDonnell contends that this "unwieldy language" would inevitably lead the jury to erroneously conclude that an official act is any settled practice of an official.

However, McDonnell fails to align his argument with controlling Fourth Circuit precedent. In Jefferson, the district court had delivered a nearly identical instruction. 674 F.3d 332. In explaining § 201(a)(3)'s statutory definition of an "official act," the Court charged the jury that "[a]n act may be official even if it was not taken pursuant to responsibilities explicitly assigned by law. Rather, official acts include those activities that have been clearly established by settled practice as part [of] a public official's position." Id. at 353. Jefferson appealed his conviction, arguing, inter alia, that the district court's "official act" bribery instruction was fatally erroneous. Id. The Fourth Circuit rejected Jefferson's challenge to the district court's instructions. The Court refused to exclude from the bribery statute's definition of an official act settled practices by a public official. Id. at 356.

In comparing this Court's instruction with that presented in Jefferson, the given instruction was appropriate. McDonnell argues, without citation, that the instruction elides the critical distinction between settled practices that are official acts and those that are not. However, McDonnell fails to consider the entirety of the instruction given. See United States v.

Rahman, 83 F.3d 89, 92 (4th Cir. 1996). The jury was not authorized to ignore the directive that an "official action" must still pertain to a pending question, matter or cause that was before McDonnell. "In other words, the jury could not rely exclusively on [McDonnell's] settled practices." Jefferson, 674 F.3d at 357. Viewed in this context, this Court, like the Fourth Circuit in Jefferson, holds that "the 'settled practice' instruction did not impermissibly expand the term 'official act.'" Id. at 358.

(ii) Series of Steps Instruction

The Court's charge to the jury also included the following instruction: "[O]fficial action can include actions taken in furtherance of longer-term goals, and an official action is no less official because it is one in a series of steps to exercise influence or achieve an end." Tr. Vol. XXVI 6103:10–14. McDonnell argues that this charge "bears no relation to the actual definition of 'official act.'" (Mem. in Supp. of Mot. at 7). However, again, McDonnell's argument is unsupported by Fourth Circuit precedent.

In Jefferson, the district court instructed the jury that "the quid pro quo requirement is satisfied if you find that the government has established beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant agreed to accept things of value in exchange for performing official acts on an as-needed basis ...." 674 F.3d at 358. The Court highlighted the fact that it is unnecessary "to link every dollar paid to one of the Jefferson family companies to a specific meeting, letter, trip, or other action by Jefferson to fulfill his end of a corrupt bargain." Id. at 359. Rather, it is enough that the "payor intended for each payment to induce the official to adopt a specific course of action." Id. (quoting United States v. Quinn, 359 F.3d 666, 673 (4th Cir. 2004)) (internal quotations omitted) (emphasis added). In other words, so long as the government's "evidence shows a course of conduct of favors and gifts flowing to a public official in exchange for a pattern of official actions favorable to the donor," then the quid pro quo requirement is satisfied. Id. Here, the Court's instruction merely rephrased Jefferson's teachings that bribery can be accomplished through an ongoing course of conduct. Id. (quoting United States v. Ganim, 510

F.3d 134, 149 (2d Cir. 2007)).

(2) Promise of Unspecified Future Action

The Court additionally included an instruction that read:

> Bribery also includes a public official's solicitation or agreement to accept a thing of value in exchange for official action whether or not the payor actually provides the thing of value and whether or not the public official ultimately performs the requested official action or intends to do so. Thus, it is not necessary that the scheme actually succeeded or that any official action was taken by the public official in the course of the scheme. What the government must prove is that the defendant you are considering knowingly devised and participated in a scheme or artifice to defraud the public and the government of their right to a public official's honest services through bribery.

Tr. Vol. XXVI 6100:18–6101:5. McDonnell challenges this instruction as well, arguing that the Court's instructions improperly invited the jury to convict him based on a promise of unspecified future action. He argues that if a corrupt agreement is all that the Government must prove, the jury must also be instructed that, to find such an agreement, it must find that the things of value were given in exchange for some specific official act or course of conduct. In other words, he contends that "the instructions failed to explain that quid pro quo corruption involves the 'intent to induce a specific act.'" (Mem. in Supp. of Mot. at 9.)

McDonnell's argument with respect to this issue revolves around the Fourth Circuit's opinion in Jennings. In that case, the Fourth Circuit held that the district court's instruction on the "corrupt intent" element of bribery left out the requirement of intent to engage in a quid pro quo. Jennings, 160 F.3d at 1020. "The definition fail[ed] to explain that 'corrupt intent' is the intent to induce a specific act." Id. at 1021. In other words, none of the court's instructions "stated that Jennings [the bribe-payor] must have given money to Morris [the bribe-payee] in exchange for some specific official act or course of action . . . ." Id. at 1022. Rather, the district court only "charged that it was sufficient if Jennings paid Morris to influence him (Morris) 'in connection with' or 'in reference to' [government business]." Id. This instruction, the Fourth Circuit held, could have described a situation that only involved a "vague expectation of some future benefit." Id.

First, to address a subsidiary argument, the Supreme Court has stated that "fulfillment of the quid pro quo is not an element of [bribery]." Evans, 504 U.S. at 268. Rather, "the offense is completed at the time when the public official receives a payment in return for his agreement to perform specific official acts." Id. (emphasis added). Furthermore, this agreement need not be express but instead may be established by circumstantial evidence. Jennings, 160 F.3d at 1014.

Secondly, and most importantly, quite unlike the jury instruction given in Jennings that "left out the quid pro quo requirement," id. at 1021, this Court explicitly stated that bribery requires a quid pro quo, meaning "this for that" or "these for these." Tr. Vol. XXVI 6100:11–13. The given instructions were not "too general," Jennings, 160 F.3d at 1022, because they explained that an item of value must be given in exchange for official action. Specifically, that official action was intended to "legitimize, promote, and obtain research studies for Star Scientific's products." Tr. Vol. XXVI at 6089:21–22. Taken as a whole, see Rahman, 83 F.3d at 92, the Court's instructions did not advise the jury to convict McDonnell on a promise of unspecified future action. See Jennings, 160 F.3d at 1022 ("If any of the court's four explanations of 'corrupt intent' required the jury to find a relatively specific quid pro quo, the jury instruction would have been saved.").

(2) Claim 2: Court's Voir Dire on Pretrial Publicity was Inadequate

McDonnell argues that the voir dire process failed to provide reasonable assurances that bias would be discovered. He contends that the Court's failure to conduct an independent inquiry of each prospective juror to determine what affect the "avalanche" of prejudicial pretrial publicity had on the juror's impartiality necessitates the grant of a new trial. However, in the province of voir dire, the district court holds the reigns.

Jury voir dire is an essential element in guaranteeing a criminal defendant's Sixth Amendment right to an impartial jury. United States v. Lancaster, 96 F.3d 734, 738 (4th Cir. 1996). Federal Rule of Criminal Procedure 24 provides the basic procedure for empaneling a jury in a federal criminal trial:

> (1) In General. The court may examine prospective jurors or may permit the attorneys for the parties to do so.
> (2) Court Examination. If the court examines the jurors, it must permit the attorneys for the parties to:
> (A) ask further questions that the court considers proper; or
> (B) submit further questions that the court may ask if it considers them proper.

Fed. R. Crim. P 24(a).

Beyond this rule, the voir dire process is essentially committed to the sound discretion of the district court "because the determination of impartiality, in which demeanor plays such an important part, is particularly within the province of the trial judge." Lancaster, 96 F.3d at 738 (citations and internal quotation marks omitted); see also Skilling v. United States, 561 U.S. 358, 386 (2010) ("When pretrial publicity is at issue, primary reliance on the judgment of the trial court makes [especially] good sense "). The Supreme Court has refrained from dictating the subject matter of voir dire questions in all but the most limited circumstances, including capital cases and cases in which racial issues are inextricably bound up with the conduct of the trial. Lancaster, 96 F.3d at 739; see also Skilling, 561 U.S. at 386 ("No hard-and-fast formula dictates the necessary depth or breadth of voir dire."). However, one limitation restrains the district court's discretion–that being the voir dire process must "provide a reasonable assurance that prejudice would be discovered if present." Lancaster, 96 F.3d at 740 (citations and internal quotation marks omitted).

"In an era of rapid and widespread communications," the effect of pretrial publicity on a defendant's right to an impartial jury is a question that will become increasingly prominent. See United States v. Bakker, 925 F.2d 728, 734 (4th Cir. 1991). However, courts must be reluctant to instantly equate publicity with prejudice. As the Supreme Court noted, "Prominence does not necessarily produce prejudice, and juror impartiality does not require ignorance." Skilling, 561 U.S. at 381 (citing Irvin v. Dowd, 366 U.S. 717, 722 (1961)). Thus, we do not require jurors to enter the courtroom totally oblivious to the facts and issues involved in the case, "and scarcely any of those best qualified to serve as jurors will not have formed some impression or opinion as to the merits of the case." Irvin, 366 U.S. at 722. "To hold that the mere existence of any preconceived notion as to the guilt or innocence of an accused, without more, is sufficient to rebut the presumption of a prospective juror's impartiality would be to establish an impossible standard." Id. at 723. Rather, all that is required is that a juror can lay aside his initial impression or opinion and render a verdict based on the evidence presented in the courtroom. Id. Only in extreme circumstances will prejudice be presumed from the existence of pretrial publicity itself. Wells v. Murray, 831 F.2d 468, 472 (4th Cir. 1987).

In order to empanel such an impartial jury, the court should undertake a careful voir dire. Bakker, 925 F.2d at 734. This inquiry "typically entails an evaluation of the pre-trial publicity complained of and its impact, if any, on the jury " Wells, 831 F.2d at 472 (citation and internal quotation marks omitted).

McDonnell contends that the Court's error lay in its failure in relying on the juror's own assertion of impartiality, rather than conducting a probing inquiry to permit the court to reach its own conclusion. But McDonnell fails to credit the procedures employed by the Court to protect McDonnell's Sixth Amendment right.

First, the Court issued a 99-item questionnaire to 650 prospective jurors that "helped to identify prospective jurors excusable for cause and served as a springboard for further questions put to the remaining members of the array." Skilling, 561 U.S. at 388. Second, during in-court voir dire the Court acknowledged the publicity generated by the case and posed two questions to the panel: (1) "[I]f you have read, heard or seen something in the media, I want you to stand up for me;" and (2) "Based on what you have heard or read or seen relating to this case, if you are, in your mind, able to put aside whatever it is that you've heard, listen to the evidence in this case and be fair to both sides, then I want you to sit down." Tr. Vol. I 140:24–25; 141:5–9. After the entire panel answered in the affirmative to both questions, the Court summoned counsel to the bench. The Court stated it was satisfied with the panel's answers. Id. at 141:14. However, McDonnell's counsel noted his concerns about the credibility of the jurors and requested further inquiry. Id. at 141:21–23. The Court subsequently brought to the bench each juror that McDonnell's counsel identified as cause for concern and questioned each about his or her opinion of the case and ability to remain impartial. See id. at 145:2–155:12. At the end of this questioning the Court asked McDonnell's counsel if there is "anybody else" he would like to question, and McDonnell's counsel responded "not on publicity." Id. at 155:18–19. Thus, the record demonstrates that after its collective questioning, the Court allowed McDonnell to follow-up with individual jurors whom he believed provided less than satisfactory answers. See Bakker, 925 F.2d at 734. Therefore, based on the adequacy of the procedures employed, and the Court's overall discretion in managing voir dire, McDonnell's instant claim is unfounded.

(3) Claim 3: Court's Failure to Voir Dire the Jurors Based on Evidence of Juror Misconduct

McDonnell's third claim focuses on the juror, Louis DeNitto ("DeNitto"), who was stricken from the jury on August 12, 2014 on the ground that he had violated the Court's order against discussing the case with anyone. DeNitto had contacted James Watson ("Watson"), an attorney who had previously represented DeNitto in civil matters. DeNitto reportedly told Watson that he was the foreman of the jury and the jurors were "all over the place." After the issue came to light, the Court held an in-chambers conference on August 12, 2014 where both DeNitto and Watson were questioned. When interviewed by the Court, DeNitto denied saying that he was the foreman. Chambers Conf. Tr., August 12, 2014, 13:14–15. With regards to his statement that the jury was "all over the place," DeNitto stated, "What I meant by that was we didn't know, I didn't know where the charges referred to in what we were, the lawyers and so forth were talking about in the trial [sic]." Id. at 13:25–14:3. DeNitto denied that he talked to any of the jurors about the case. Id. at 14:12–14. Rather, all DeNitto admitted was that "[d]ifferent comments are made when [the jury] walks back [into the jury room], like 'Wow, glad that's over with,' or that sort of thing " Id. at 14:15–16. McDonnell then requested that (1) the entire panel be interviewed in camera given the evidence that they have been actively discussing the case, contrary to the Court's order that "[u]ntil you retire to the jury room at the end of the case to deliberate on your verdict, you simply are not to talk about this case," Tr. Vol. II, at 193:2–4; (2) the Court declare a mistrial in light of the same; and (3) the first alternate juror be struck in view of the fact that he had been sleeping through much of the trial, including the cross-examination of Williams. However, the Court denied each of McDonnell's requests.

McDonnell now contends that based on the Court's interviews of Watson and DeNitto, credible evidence existed that the jury had begun deliberating prematurely. He argues that the Court's failure to voir dire the remaining jurors despite this evidence constitutes grounds for a new trial. However, again, the Court possesses generous discretion in handling a claim of juror misconduct.

It is a well-established principal of trial administration that jurors must not engage in discussions of a case prior to the time they retire and begin formal deliberations. United States v. Resko, 3 F.3d 684, 688 (3d Cir. 1993). Accordingly, trial judges routinely admonish juries at the outset of trial not to discuss the case with anyone before the conclusion of trial. Id. at 689. In the present case, the Court gave such an instruction: "First, I instruct you that during the trial, you are not to discuss the case with anyone or permit anyone to discuss it with you. Until you retire to the jury room at the end of the case to deliberate on your verdict, you simply are not to talk about this case." Tr. Vol. II 192:25–193:4. However, it is unrealistic to believe that jurors will never comment to each other on any matter related to a trial, especially in a trial spanning a total of more than five weeks. Thus, the Court must address the issue when, such as here, jurors allegedly fail to follow the Court's explicit order.

Courts have distinguished between external jury influences and "intra-jury" communications. Wolfe v. Johnson, 565 F.3d 140, 161 (4th Cir. 2009). External influences, such as the media and pre-trial publicity, pose a far more serious threat to the defendant's Sixth Amendment right to an impartial jury "because the extraneous information completely evades the safeguards of the judicial process." Resko, 3 F.3d at 690. In contrast, when there are intra-jury communications, such as premature jury deliberations, "the proper process for jury decisionmaking has been violated, but there is no reason to doubt that the jury based its ultimate decision only on evidence formally presented at trial." Id. Thus, "[a]lthough external jury influences necessitate a thorough judicial inquiry, no such obligation is imposed with regard to an internal jury influence." Wolfe, 565 at 161.

Ultimately, like the voir dire process described above, the Court is given ample discretion in dealing with situations of jury misconduct. Resko, 3 F.3d at 690; see also United States v. Diaz, 597 F.3d 56, 62 (1st Cir. 2010) (citations omitted) ("Indeed, we have held that the court's discretion is 'at its broadest' when it responds to an allegation of premature jury deliberations."). The trial court is in a superior position to observe the jury's demeanor and the impact of any alleged premature deliberations. Resko, 3 F.3d at 690. Obviously, however, the Court must exercise caution and careful consideration when allegations of jury misconduct are brought to the Court's attention. See United States v. Gianakos, 415 F.3d 912, 921 (8th Cir. 2005).

The First Circuit has developed a multi-step framework for assessing juror misconduct, including premature deliberations: (1) ascertain whether the allegation is colorable; (2) if it is, investigate the extent of any prejudice caused and consider prophylactic measures to alleviate that prejudice; and (3) if no curative measures are adequate, the court may grant a mistrial. Diaz, 597 F.3d at 62–63. Following the First Circuit's structure, our analysis need not go any further than the first step.

Based on the Court's face-to-face examination of both DeNitto and Watson, the Court was entitled to exercise its discretion and assess the situation presented. DeNitto's alleged statement that the jurors were "all over the place" did not provide sufficient indicia of premature deliberations. "Conversations between jurors concerning the case they are hearing do not always amount to premature deliberations." Id. at 63; see also United States v. Peterson, 385 F.3d 127, 135 (2d Cir. 2004) ("Not every comment a juror may make to another juror about the case is a discussion about a defendant's guilt or innocence that comes within a common sense definition of deliberation."). The Court, however, still struck DeNitto for violating the Court's Order. After dismissing him, the Court again admonished the entire jury not to talk about the case, not "between yourselves as well as outsiders." Tr. Vol. XII 3076:18–25. There was no further evidence that the remaining jurors failed to abide by the Court's admonition.

McDonnell relies on the Third Circuit's rationale in Resko to support his argument regarding his third claim. In Resko, on the seventh day of a nine-day trial, a juror approached a court officer and told him that the members of the jury had been discussing the case during their recesses and while waiting in the jury room, in disregard of the court's admonition. 3 F.3d at 687. The court responded by distributing a two-part questionnaire, which asked: (1) whether the jurors had discussed the case with other jurors, and (2) if so, whether those discussions had led them to form an opinion as the guilt or innocence of the defendants. Id. at 688. Each of the twelve jurors answered "yes" to the first question and "no" to the latter. Id. Based on this questionnaire, the district court denied defendants' requests for individualized voir dire and denied their motions for a mistrial. Id. The Third Circuit ultimately held that the district court erred by refusing to conduct a "more searching inquiry into the potential prejudice." Id. at 686.

While McDonnell correctly alleges all of the above-stated facts from Resko, McDonnell fails to ascertain the relevant argument that distinguishes that case from the present one. In Resko, the Third Circuit concentrated on the "dearth of information" provided by the questionnaires and the consequent inability of the district court to assess the nature and extent of the jurors' premature discussions. See id. at 690–91. In other words, "the questionnaire raised more questions than it answered." Id. at 690. "[T]he very crux of the problem [] is that neither we [the Third Circuit] nor the district court know anything about the nature of the jurors' discussions." Id. at 691.

Unlike the situation in Resko, in the present case the Court "had enough information [based on the interviews of both Watson and DeNitto] to make a reasoned determination that [McDonnell] would suffer no prejudice due to the jury misconduct." Id. Resko explicitly admits that in situations where the jury engaged in premature deliberations and the court refused counsel's request for individualized voir dire, but the court had knowledge of the substance of the premature communications, other federal courts of appeals have upheld criminal convictions. Id. at 693. This is the exact situation in the present case. Therefore, McDonnell's argument must be rejected.

(4)Claim 4: The Court Erroneously Admitted Prejudicial Rule 404(b) Evidence

Finally, McDonnell argues that the Government was allowed to impugn his character in violation of Rule 404(b) on at least two significant occasions, thereby causing substantial prejudice to the defense. However, this final argument suffers the same fate as the rest.

Although "[e]vidence of other crimes, wrongs, or acts is not admissible to prove the character of a person in order to show action in conformity therewith," such evidence "may, however, be admissible for other purposes, such as proof of motive, opportunity, intent, preparation, plan, knowledge, identity, or absence of mistake or accident. " Fed. R. Evid. 404(b). "Because the rule recognizes the admissibility of prior crimes, wrongs, or acts, with only the one stated exception, it is understood to be a rule of inclusion " United States v. Queen, 132 F.3d 991, 994 (4th Cir. 1997) (citations omitted).

The principal danger Rule 404(b) seeks to avoid is the fear that defendants will be convicted simply for possessing bad character. Id. at 995. However, the Rule "also recognizes that '[e]xtrinsic acts evidence may be critical to the establishment of the truth as to a disputed issue, especially when that issue involves the actor's state of mind and the only means of ascertaining that mental state is by drawing inferences from conduct.'" Id. at 996 (quoting Huddleston v. United States, 485 U.S. 681, 685 (1988)).

In Queen, the Fourth Circuit spelled out specific findings the Court should make in order to determine that evidence should be admitted under 404(b):

> (1) The evidence must be relevant to an issue, such as an element of an offense, and must not be offered to establish the general character of the defendant. In > this regard, the more similar the prior act is (in terms of physical similarity or mental state) to the act being proved, the more relevant it becomes. (2) The act must be necessary in the sense that it is probative of an essential claim or an element of the offense.[2] (3) The evidence must be reliable. And (4) the evidence's probative value must not be substantially outweighed by confusion or unfair prejudice in the sense that it tends to subordinate reason to emotion in the factfinding process.[3]

132 F.3d at 997.

(1) Goodwin Evidence

First, McDonnell contends that the Court erroneously admitted evidence that he received things of value from William Goodwin ("Goodwin"). Specifically, the Government introduced evidence that McDonnell's draft 2012 Statement of Economic Interest ("SOEI") listed a Kiawah Island trip from Goodwin with a value of $23,312.55. See Tr. Vol. XXII 5295:9–5296:7. However, McDonnell subsequently crossed out the trip and wrote "personal," Id. at 5296:10–13, and thus McDonnell's final SOEI contained no reference to the Kiawah Island trip, id. at 5296:20–24. However, the SOEI still contained other gifts from Goodwin, including a Keswick Cabinet Retreat valued at $920. Id. at 5296:17–19. McDonnell argues that the Government never established that this evidence was relevant to an issue other than character. In essence, he argues, all the evidence did was to suggest that he had a propensity to accept expensive gifts from donors. (Mem. in Supp. of Mot. at 27.)

Under Virginia law, certain state officials, including the Governor, are required to annually file a standardized disclosure of their personal economic interests, commonly referred to as the SOEI. The SOEI requires a state official to disclose, inter alia, gifts or entertainment valued in excess of fifty dollars received by the state official from any business or individual other than a relative or close personal friend. The Government introduced the Goodwin evidence at trial in order to prove McDonnell's prior improper manipulation of this "personal friend" exception because although McDonnell testified that Goodwin was supposedly his personal friend, id. at 5051:21–22, the Government produced sufficient evidence for a reasonable jury to reject that testimony. See id. at 5051:23–5055:20.

---

[2] The Court defines evidence as "necessary where, considered in the light of other evidence available to the government, it is an essential part of the crimes on trial, or where it furnishes part of the context of the crime." Queen, 132 F.3d at 998 (internal citations and quotation marks omitted).

[3] The court also points to "(1) a limiting jury instruction, when requested by a party, explaining the purpose for admitting evidence of prior acts, and (2) the requirement in a criminal case of advance notice, when so requested, of the intent to introduce prior act evidence" as protections against potential "pit falls" under this Rule. Queen, 132 F.3d at 997.

Contrary to McDonnell's argument that this evidence did no more than suggest to the jury that McDonnell had a propensity to accept expensive gifts from donors, the Goodwin evidence was clearly relevant to issues other than McDonnell's general character. First, the evidence showed McDonnell's knowledge of the SOEI and the existence of the "personal friend" exception. Second, McDonnell testified that, like Goodwin, he viewed Williams as a personal friend in 2012, see Tr. Vol. XXI 5109:9–14, but despite this opinion of their relationship, he still chose to disclose gifts from Williams on his 2012 SOEI. Thus, this evidence indicated an absence of mistake or accident in omitting the gifts and loans from Williams and thus was relevant to McDonnell's intent to defraud.

Applying the factors defined in Queen, evidence of McDonnell's knowledge and of the absence of mistake is relevant to, and probative of, his alleged intent to defraud—an element of the charged crimes; the prior act alleged is similar to the act the Government sought to prove—omission of gifts from Williams pursuant to the personal friend exception; and there is nothing in the record to suggest that the evidence was unreliable or unfairly prejudicial to McDonnell. See Queen, 132 F.3d at 997. Therefore, the Goodwin evidence was properly admitted.

(2) Zubowsky Email

Secondly, McDonnell argues that the Court erroneously admitted evidence indicating that his staff organized free golf for him. This piece of evidence revolved around a January 2013 email exchange between Emily Rabbit ("Rabbit"), McDonnell's scheduler at the time, and Adam Zubowsky ("Zubowsky"). Gov't Ex. 627. Rabbit asked Zubowsky whether he had any background in planning a golf trip for the Governor and his sons. Tr. Vol. XXI 5137:23–5138:3. Zubowsky responded that Rabbit should find a golf course that will host McDonnell and his family for free.

Id. at 5138:14–16. Zubowsky then directed Rabbit to put all the information in a briefing book for McDonnell's review. Id. at 5138:21–5139:1.

McDonnell now objects to the introduction of this email, arguing that it is both inadmissible hearsay and Rule 404(b) evidence. As an initial matter, when the Government first attempted to introduce this email through its direct examination of Rabbit, McDonnell's counsel objected on the basis that the evidence is not relevant and "extraordinarily prejudicial." Tr. Vol. XII 2869:1–2. When the Government subsequently attempted to introduce the email during the cross-examination of McDonnell, his counsel again objected solely based on relevancy. Tr. Vol. XXI 5137:7–9. Thus, during trial McDonnell's counsel never objected based on hearsay or Rule 404(b). Based on Federal Rule of Evidence 103, a party may claim error in a ruling to admit or exclude evidence only if the error affects a substantial right of the party and if the party both timely objected at trial and stated the specific grounds for the objection. Fed. R. Evid. 103(a)(1). Because McDonnell's counsel objected solely on the basis of relevance, this Court properly admitted the email at trial. Despite McDonnell's apparent mistake, the Court may still consider McDonnell's present objections if the introduction of this email constituted plain error, meaning it affected McDonnell's substantial rights. Fed. R. Crim. P. 52(b); Fed. R. Evid. 103(e).

To proceed with the merits, McDonnell first argues that this email was inadmissible hearsay, and should have been excluded as such. Hearsay is an out-of-court statement that is offered in court to prove the truth of the matter asserted, Fed. R. Evid. 801(c), and is inadmissible at trial unless an exception applies, Fed. R. Evid. 802. A statement that is offered against an opposing party and was made by either the party in his individual capacity or representative capacity, or made by the party's agent or employee on a matter within the scope of that relationship and while it existed, is deemed non-hearsay. Fed. R. Evid. 801(d)(2)(A), (D).

First, the portion of the email from Rabbit is not hearsay. See Fed. R. Evid. 801(d)(2)(D). Rabbit was McDonnell's scheduler at the time and thus an employee. The statement she made in the email was within the scope of her employment relationship, as McDonnell requested that they meet to discuss golf trips in Myrtle Beach or Florida. The statement was then offered against McDonnell at trial.

Second, with respect to Zubowsky's statements in the email, McDonnell's counsel is correct that the email is hearsay that does not fall within any exception. Zubowsky was no longer employed by McDonnell at the time he sent the email and he does not purport to relate any statement made by McDonnell. However, the admission of this evidence was harmless error as it did not affect any substantial right of McDonnell and thus McDonnell's argument must be disregarded. See Fed. R. Crim. P 52(a). "Where non-constitutional error is involved, the proper test of harmlessness is whether, on appellate review, this Court can say 'with fair assurance, after pondering all that happened without stripping the erroneous action from the whole, that the judgment was not substantially swayed by error.'" United States v. Hartgrove, No. 90-5331, 919 F.2d 139, at *2 (4th Cir. Nov. 29, 1990) (quoting United States v. Urbanik, 801 F.2d 692, 698 (4th Cir. 1986)). Based on the considerable amount of evidence introduced over a five-week period during this trial, the Court can assuredly state that the jury's verdict was not swayed by one portion of one e-mail.

McDonnell next contends that this evidence also violated Rule 404(b) as the Government's only purpose in introducing it was to show McDonnell's character in an unflattering light–that he had a propensity to seek out free expensive gifts. On the other hand, the Government contends that this email "was not Rule 404(b) evidence; [rather] it was offered to rebut Mr. McDonnell's assertion that he didn't seek gifts and he simply accepted gifts to spend time with his family." (Opp'n Mem. at 29.) As support, the Government cites a section of "McCormick on Evidence," which describes impeachment by "specific contradiction." 1 McCormick on Evid. § 45 (7th ed. 2013).

"Impeachment by contradiction is a means of policing the defendant's obligation to speak the truth in response to proper questions." United States v. Gilmore, 553 F.3d 266, 271 (3d Cir. 2009) (internal quotation marks and citations omitted). Specifically, "this doctrine provides that when a witness puts certain facts at issue in his testimony, the government may seek to rebut those facts, including by resorting to extrinsic evidence if necessary." United States v. Ramirez, 609 F.3d 495, 499 (2d Cir. 2010). In sum, this form of impeachment is intended to prevent the defendant from invoking "the Federal Rules of Evidence in order to shield his perjury from contradiction." Id. Impeachment by contradiction is authorized by Federal Rule of Evidence 607 and its application is governed by Rule 403. Gilmore, 553 F.3d at 271; see also United States v. Perez-Perez, 72 F.3d 224, 227 (1st Cir. 1995) (finding that impeachment by contradiction is not governed by Rule 608(b), but by common-law principles). Most importantly, this form of impeachment is used to contradict a specific fact the defendant testified to on direct. See Ramirez, 609 F.3d at 499; Gilmore, 553 F.3d at 271; United States v. Scott, 693 F.3d 715, 722 (6th Cir. 2012).

The Government attempts to argue that the introduction of the Zubowsky email was intended to rebut McDonnell's testimony on direct that the "most important gift" he received as governor was "having some time with his family." Tr. Vol. XX 4853:22–25. However, it was not until cross-examination when the Government specifically questioned McDonnell regarding his solicitation of free golf outings. Thus, the Government cannot rest its argument of impeachment by contradiction on the general "notion" implicit in McDonnell's direct testimony.

If the Government's argument is rejected, then the Court must analyze the Zubowsky email pursuant to Rule 404(b). According to the factors defined in Queen, this evidence was relevant to McDonnell's motive for entering a corrupt agreement with Williams; the prior act alleged is similar to the act the Government sought to prove—acceptance of free gifts from Williams; and there is nothing in the record to suggest that the evidence was unreliable or unfairly prejudicial to McDonnell. See Queen, 132 F.3d at 997. Therefore, the Zubowsky email was also properly admitted.

//

//

IV. CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons, McDonnell's Motion is DENIED.

Let the Clerk send a copy of this Memorandum Opinion to all counsel of record.

An appropriate Order will issue.

/s/
James R. Spencer
Senior U. S. District Judge

ENTERED this 1st day of December 2014.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
EASTERN DISTRICT OF VIRGINIA
RICHMOND DIVISION

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,

v.

ROBERT F. MCDONNELL,

and

MAUREEN G. MCDONNELL,

Defendants.

Action No. 3:14-CR-12

ORDER

THIS MATTER is before the Court on Defendant Robert F McDonnell's Motion #40–Motion for New Trial ("Motion") (ECF No. 511). For the reasons set forth in the accompanying Memorandum Opinion, the Motion is DENIED.

Let the Clerk send a copy of this Order to all counsel of record.

It is SO ORDERED.

/s/
James R. Spencer
Senior U. S. District Judge

ENTERED this 1st day of December 2014.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
EASTERN DISTRICT OF VIRGINIA
RICHMOND DIVISION

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,

v.

ROBERT F. MCDONNELL,

and

MAUREEN G. MCDONNELL,

Defendants.

Action No. 3:14-CR-12

MEMORANDUM OPINION

THIS MATTER is before the Court on Defendant Robert F. McDonnell's Motion #39–Renewed Motion for Judgment of Acquittal Pursuant to Rule 29 of the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure ("Motion") (ECF No. 509). The Government filed an Opposition Memorandum ("Opp'n Mem.") (ECF No. 532) on October 14, 2014. McDonnell subsequently filed a reply on October 24, 2014 ("Reply Mem.") (ECF No. 540). The parties have not requested a hearing on this matter, and the Court finds that oral argument is unnecessary. E.D. Va. Loc. Crim. R. 47(J). For the reasons set forth below, the Motion is hereby DENIED.

I. BACKGROUND

Defendant Robert F. McDonnell ("McDonnell") served as the 71st Governor of the Commonwealth of Virginia from January 2010 to January 2014. His wife, Maureen G. McDonnell ("Mrs. McDonnell"), served as the First Lady of Virginia.

During his campaign for Governor, McDonnell met Jonnie Williams ("Williams"). Williams was the Chief Executive Officer of Star Scientific, Inc. ("Star Scientific"). Beginning in or about 2007, Star Scientific focused on utilizing certain alkaloids in the tobacco plant, namely anatabine, to address issues related to the desire to smoke. The company engaged in the development, manufacture, and marketing of two anatabine-based dietary supplements: CigRx and Anatabloc. To gain customer and physician approval of its products, Star Scientific sought scientific studies of anatabine.

On January 21, 2014, McDonnell, along with his wife, was charged in a 14-count indictment, with Counts 1-11 alleging that he committed and conspired to commit honest-services wire fraud and extortion under color of official right. Specifically, the indictment alleged that "the defendants participated in a scheme to use ROBERT MCDONNELL's official position as the Governor of Virginia to enrich the defendants and their family members by soliciting and obtaining payments, loans, gifts, and other things of value from [Williams] in exchange for ROBERT MCDONNELL performing official actions on an as-needed basis, as opportunities arose, to legitimize, promote, and obtain research studies for Star Scientific's products, including Anatabloc." Indictment ¶ 22. On September 4, 2014, a jury convicted McDonnell on Counts 1-11. On September 18, 2014, McDonnell filed the instant Motion, asking for a judgment of acquittal on those eleven Counts. Specifically, McDonnell contends that the Government has failed to prove that he performed or promised to perform any "official act" for Williams, and also failed to establish federal jurisdiction for Counts 5-11.

II. LEGAL STANDARD

"A defendant may move for a judgment of acquittal, or renew such a motion, within 14 days after a guilty verdict or after the court discharges the jury, whichever is later." Fed. R. Crim. P 29(c)(1). If the jury returned a guilty verdict, the court can "set aside the verdict and enter an acquittal." Fed. R. Crim. P 29(c)(2).

The test for determining if a court should grant a Rule 29(c) motion is "whether there is substantial evidence (direct or circumstantial) which, taken in the light most favorable to the prosecution, would warrant a jury finding that the defendant was guilty beyond a reasonable doubt." United States v. MacCloskey, 682 F.2d 468, 473 (4th Cir. 1982). Substantial evidence is defined as "evidence that a reasonable finder of fact could accept as adequate and sufficient to support a conclusion of a defendant's guilt beyond a reasonable doubt." United States v. Burgos, 94 F.3d 849, 862 (4th Cir. 1996). If "any rational trier of fact could have found the elements of the offense beyond a reasonable doubt," the jury's verdict must stand. United States v. United Med. & Surgical Supply Corp., 989 F.2d 1390, 1402 (4th Cir. 1993).

III. DISCUSSION

A. Claim 1: McDonnell Did Not Perform or Promise to Perform Any Specific "Official Acts" to Benefit Williams

(1) Failure to Prove "Official Act"

The critical issue that predominates in this case is what constitutes an "official act" under the federal anticorruption laws. At its most basic definition, an "'official act' means any decision or action on any question, matter, cause, suit, proceeding or controversy, which may at any time be pending, or which may by law be brought before any public official, in such official's official capacity, or in such official's place of trust or profit." 18 U.S.C. § 201(a)(3). More specifically, official action is conduct that is taken "as part of a public official's position"—whether pursuant to an explicit duty or as a matter of "clearly established settled practice." See United States v. Jefferson, 674 F.3d 332, 353 (4th Cir. 2012).

Clearly the bribery statute does not encompass every action taken in one's official capacity, see id. at 356, or else absurd outcomes would assuredly result. But, on the other hand, "[e]very action that is within the range of official duty comes within the purview of [this statute]." United States v. Birdsall, 233 U.S. 223, 230 (1914). Thus, to distinguish between the apparent fine line of routine official duties and public corruption, the Court must look to whether a quid pro quo agreement existed.

A quid pro quo agreement evinces a sort of "I'll scratch your back if you scratch mine" arrangement. United States v. Jennings, 160 F.3d 1006, 1014 (4th Cir. 1998). In other words, "[b]ribery requires the intent to effect an exchange of money (or gifts) for specific action (or inaction), but each payment need not be correlated with a specific official act." Id. "The quid pro quo requirement is satisfied so long as the evidence shows a course of conduct of favors and gifts flowing to a public official in exchange for a pattern of official actions favorable to the donor.' Thus, all that must be shown is that payments were made with the intent of securing a specific type of official action or favor in return." Id. (citation and internal quotation marks omitted).

McDonnell first contends that no evidence was introduced to prove that he ever promised to perform any specific official act for the benefit of Williams or his company. McDonnell contends that at worst he provided a vague promise to Williams to help Williams obtain studies for Star Scientific, which he argues fails to establish federal corruption. See id. at 1022. However, both of McDonnell's initial contentions especially when viewed in light most favorable to the Government fail to persuade this Court.

A quid pro quo agreement need not be expressly stated "for otherwise the law's effect could be frustrated by knowing winks and nods." Evans v. United States, 504 U.S. 255, 274 (1992) (Kennedy, J., concurring). Rather, "[t]he inducement from the official is criminal if it is express or if it is implied from his words and actions, so long as he intends it to be so and the payor so interprets it." Id. Thus, the Government was entitled to establish an implicit agreement through circumstantial evidence, which it did by using permissible temporal and contextual inferences. Moreover, quite unlike McDonnell's argument that at worst he only provided only a vague promise to Williams, substantial evidence supports the jury's finding that McDonnell actually performed official acts in exchange for gifts and loans from Williams.

Naturally, then, the Court must analyze the alleged five "official acts" presented by the Government to determine whether they were in fact "official." The five alleged "official acts" include: (1) the August 1, 2011 meeting between Williams and Molly Huffstetler, an official from the Health and Human Resources Department; (2) the August 30, 2011 Mansion event; (3) the February 17, 2012 email to Jason Eige; (4) the February 29, 2012 Healthcare Leaders Reception; and (5) McDonnell's March 21, 2012 meeting with Lisa-Hicks Thomas and Sarah Wilson. See Tr. Vol. XXV 5869:16–5870:1; 6039:25–6042:14. McDonnell argues that none of these identified actions purported to exercise, or influence the exercise of, any of the regulatory powers of the state. In other words, McDonnell argues that because he never asked or directed University of Virginia ("UVA") or Virginia Commonwealth University ("VCU") officials to conduct research on anatabine he did not take any "official action." Rather, McDonnell argues that at worst he only provided mere access to Williams. Thus, in his reply brief, McDonnell asserts that if his conviction is left standing, it "will be the only one in which a public official has ever been found guilty of bribery not for promising to himself influence the exercise of governmental power, but for merely facilitating access so that a third party could attempt to do so." (Reply Mem. at 1.)

Admittedly, mere "[i]ngratiation and access" may not alone create a quid pro quo agreement within the meaning of the bribery statutes. See Citizens United, 558 U.S. at 360. As Judge Merritt recently observed, > Subjective intent is the keystone of bribery. The influence of money in politics is growing by leaps and bounds, and the subjective intent of the public official receiving the money is perhaps the last and only distinguishable feature between criminal "quid pro quo bribery" and permissible "ingratiation." The exchange of money for a vote is a crime that threatens the foundation of democracy. Buckley v. Valeo, 424 U.S. 1, 26–27, 96 S.Ct. 612, 46 L.Ed.2d 659 (1976). The exchange of money for "ingratiation and access is not corruption" at all; indeed, the exchange is so essential to the foundation of democracy that it is protected by the First Amendment. McCutcheon v. FEC, ––U.S. ––, 134 S.Ct. 1434, 1441,188 L.Ed.2d 478 (2014) (internal edits omitted). We are left to distinguish the two as best we can by looking into the subjective intent of the public official. And by we, I mean the jury.

United States v. Dimora, 750 F.3d 619, 632 (6th Cir. 2014) (Merritt, J., dissenting). Thus, to distinguish between mere access and federal corruption, the Court must analyze McDonnell's subjective intent in receiving the money.

The Government provided substantial evidence for the jury to conclude that McDonnell knew what Williams was seeking, specifically, research studies for Star Scientific's Anatabloc product. Through Williams' direct examination, the Government elicited testimony that in October of 2010, McDonnell flew back from California to Virginia on Williams' private jet. Tr. Vol. III 658:18–20. On that flight Williams explained to McDonnell that he "needed testing and [he] wanted to have this done in Virginia." Id. at 660:7–8. Williams testified that he asked McDonnell if McDonnell "[w]ould connect [him] with the person in Virginia in [McDonnell's] administration so that [he could] move this forward." Id. at 660:9–11. Moreover, and most tellingly, in June 2011, Williams sent a letter to McDonnell that specifically described the context within which Williams sought official action from McDonnell. Tr. Vol. IV 701–705; Gov't Ex. 162. And McDonnell admitted on cross-examination that he received the letter, Tr. Vol. XXI 5036:10, and at least read the portion of the letter suggesting that McDonnell initiate a "Virginia study" of Anatabloc at UVA and the Medical College of Virginia ("MCV"), id. at 5037:3–11. Thus, based on the evidence presented, the jury could have properly determined that in accepting Williams' gifts and loans, McDonnell understood the implicit quid pro quo.

Secondly, McDonnell's argument is misguided as he assuredly did more for Williams than merely provide "access." The Government adduced substantial evidence of the "quo," that is the "official action," in this case. As stated above, "'official act' means any decision or action on any question, matter, cause, suit, proceeding or controversy, which may at any time be pending, or which may by law be brought before any public official, in such official's official capacity . . . ." 18 U.S.C. § 201(a)(3). The alleged official actions in this case were within the range of actions on questions, matters, or causes pending before McDonnell as Governor as multiple witnesses testified that Virginia business and economic development was a top priority in McDonnell's administration. Tr. Vol. IX 2037:17–23; 2234:22–25. His campaign slogan was "Bob's for Jobs." Id. at 2232:17–19. And several former McDonnell staffers testified about the various ways McDonnell would customarily take action on questions, matters and causes of Virginia business and economic development, including hosting events and having meetings. See id. at 2235:14–16; Tr. Vol. XI 2545:14–16.

Yet, McDonnell argues that because he never asked or directed any official to give Williams the governmental action he desired he did not perform any official action. However, the Court need not look any further than the March 21, 2012 meeting between McDonnell, Lisa Hicks-Thomas ("Hicks-Thomas"), McDonnell's Secretary of Administration, and Sarah Wilson ("Wilson"), the Virginia Department of Human Resource Management Director, to discredit McDonnell's argument. During that meeting McDonnell pulled out a bottle of Anatabloc and said that he had been taking the pills and "they were working well for him, and [] he thought it would be good for [] state employees." Tr. Vol. XI 2676:15-19. Hicks-Thomas testified that McDonnell then asked if she and Wilson would "meet with the people." Id. at 2676:19–20 (emphasis added). After the meeting, both women then went down to Hicks-Thomas' office and looked up Anatabloc on the computer. Id. at 2677:1–5. Or, for another example, the email to Jason Eige ("Eige"), the Governor's counsel and policy advisor, in which McDonnell said, "Please see me about Anatabloc issues at VCU and UVA." Tr. Vol. VII 1666:9–10. Eige subsequently responded, "Will do. We need to be careful with this issue." Id. at 1666:12.

In each of the aforementioned examples, McDonnell attempted to use his gubernatorial office to influence governmental decisions, (see Reply Mem. at 14), specifically attempting to obtain research studies for Star Scientific. McDonnell clearly had influential power over Hicks-Thomas, for example, as she testified that she reported to the Governor and he had the power to fire her. Tr. Vol. XI 2673:14–15, 19–20. See United States v. Carson, 464 F.2d 424, 433 (2d Cir. 1972) ("There is no doubt that federal bribery statutes have been construed to cover any situation in which the advice or recommendation of a Government employee would be influential   "). McDonnell's argument that he never followed back up with these individuals or pressured them any further is essentially irrelevant as such standard is not defined in any supporting case law.

Furthermore, McDonnell fails to account for the fact that "official action can include actions taken in furtherance of longer-term goals, and an official action is no less official because it is one in a series of steps to exercise influence or achieve an end." Tr. Vol. XXVI 6103:10–14. Thus, it is unnecessary "to link every dollar paid to [McDonnell] to a specific meeting, letter, trip, or other action by [McDonnell] to fulfill his end of a corrupt bargain." Jefferson, 674 F.3d at 359. Rather, it is enough that the "[Williams] intended for each payment to induce [McDonnell] to adopt a specific course of action." Id. (quoting United States v. Quinn, 359 F.3d 666, 673 (4th Cir. 2004)) (internal quotations omitted) (emphasis added). Therefore, just because there is no evidence that McDonnell directly asked UVA or VCU researchers to conduct studies of Anatabloc does not discount the fact that McDonnell took official actions in pursuit of achieving that ultimate goal.

In its charge to the jury, the Court defined bribery as "the exchange of a thing or things of value for official action by a public official. In other words, a quid pro quo." Tr. Vol. XXVI 6100:9–11. Substantial evidence supports the jury's finding of a quid and fairly specific, related quo. See Jennings, 160 F.3d at 1019. McDonnell did more than just provide access to Williams; he directed his employees to take action on research studies for Anatabloc. And he did so corruptly.

(2) Unconstitutionally Vague Statutes & Legal Conduct Pursuant to State Law

McDonnell next argues that the honest services fraud statute and Hobbs Act are unconstitutionally vague. He further alleges that extending the federal criminal law into state self-governance violates the Tenth Amendment and the principles of federalism.

As an initial matter, McDonnell's arguments are not an appropriate basis for an evidentiary sufficiency challenge under Rule 29. Fed. R. Crim. P 29(a) ("[T]he court on the defendant's motion must enter a judgment of acquittal of any offense for which the evidence is insufficient to sustain a conviction."). However, regardless, both arguments are without merit.

McDonnell's assertion that the charging statutes are unconstitutionally vague fails. The void-for-vagueness doctrine addresses concerns about (1) fair notice and (2) arbitrary and discriminatory prosecutions. Skilling v. United States, 561 U.S. 358, 412 (2010). The Supreme Court has held unequivocally that "[i]nterpreted to encompass only bribery and kickback schemes, § 1346 is not unconstitutionally vague." Id. The Court reached this conclusion by observing that bribery has long constituted honest services fraud and has been defined and prohibited under related federal statutes. Id. at 412–13. Moreover, the honest services fraud statute requires proof that Defendants acted with a criminal state of mind, which "further blunts any notice concern." Id. at 412.

Secondly, McDonnell's invocation of the principles of federalism is equally unpersuasive, particularly because Virginia law does not necessarily "decriminalize" the conduct for which McDonnell was convicted. Virginia Code section 2.2-3103 prohibits any officer or employee of a state or local government from "solicit[ing] or accept[ing] money or other thing of value for services performed within the scope of his official duties." Va. Code § 2.2-3103(1); see also id. § 2.2-3103(8) (prohibiting the acceptance of gifts "from a person who has interests that may be substantially affected by the performance of the officer's or employee's official duties under circumstances where the timing and nature of the gift would cause a reasonable person to question the officer's or employee's impartiality in the matter affecting the donor"). McDonnell's conduct thus falls within the province of these Virginia statutes and therefore the present argument is unavailing.

B. Claim 2: The Government Failed to Establish the Jurisdictional Basis for Hobbs Act Extortion

The Hobbs Act requires that a defendant's extortion "obstruct[], delay[], or affect[] commerce or the movement of any article or commodity in commerce." 18 U.S.C. § 1951(a). In order to satisfy this jurisdictional element, the prosecution bears the burden of proving a "reasonably probable effect on commerce, however, minimal, as a result of the extortion." United States v. Spagnolo, 546 F.2d 1117, 1119 (4th Cir. 1976). In other words, "'the connection with or effect on interstate commerce must have been at least a realistic probability at the time of the extortion.'" United States v. Buffey, 899 F.2d 1402, 1404 (4th Cir. 1990) (quoting United States v. Elders, 569 F.2d 1020, 1023–24 (7th Cir. 1978)). Thus, the Fourth Circuit has held that no particular commercial movements need actually be affected. United States v. Brantley, 777 F.2d 159, 162 (4th Cir. 1985). Instead, it is sufficient if commerce would have been affected had the extortionate project been carried through to the contemplated conclusion. Id. The Court's jury instructions mirrored this precedent:

> To find the interstate commerce element satisfied, it is not necessary to find that a defendant actually intended to obstruct, delay, or affect commerce. Rather, the government need not [sic] only prove that the defendant you are considering deliberately performed or attempted to perform an act, the ordinary and natural consequences of which would be to obstruct, delay, or affect commerce. The effect on interstate commerce need only be slight, and it need not be adverse.

Tr. Vol. XXVI 6114:15–23.

In the present case, McDonnell argues that the Government failed to prove the requisite federal jurisdiction. He argues that there is no evidence that the alleged bribery scheme had an actual or realistically probable effect on interstate commerce. Rather than meet its burden of proof, McDonnell argues that the Government simply left it to the jury to infer a "reasonable probability" of an effect on interstate commerce. However, contrary to McDonnell's position, the Court finds that the Government presented evidence that had it been successful, the bribery scheme would have affected interstate commerce.

The Government introduced evidence that Star Scientific marketed and distributed CigRx and Anatabloc nationwide. Tr. Vol. X 2341:15–18. Testimony was also elicited that Star Scientific had a scientific office in Gloucester, Massachusetts, an executive and regulatory and legal office in Washington, D.C., and a manufacturing facility in New Jersey. Id. at 2341:25–2342:15. In its closing argument, the Government stated, "[O]bviously, had the scheme actually worked out a little better than it did for Star, then the effects on their business would have been positive and would have affected interstate commerce." Tr. Vol. XXV 5891:16–19. Viewing the evidence in light most favorable to the Government, the Court finds that the Government has fulfilled its burden. A reasonable finder of fact could accept the aforementioned evidence as adequate and sufficient in establishing a realistic probability of an effect on interstate commerce.

//

IV. CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons, McDonnell's Motion is DENIED.

Let the Clerk send a copy of this Memorandum Opinion to all counsel of record.

An appropriate Order will issue.

/s/
James R. Spencer
Senior U. S. District Judge

ENTERED this 1st day of December 2014.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
EASTERN DISTRICT OF VIRGINIA
RICHMOND DIVISION

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,

v.

ROBERT F MCDONNELL,

and

MAUREEN G. MCDONNELL,

Defendants.

Action No. 3:14-CR-12

ORDER

THIS MATTER is before the Court on Defendant Robert F. McDonnell's Motion #39-Renewed Motion for Judgment of Acquittal Pursuant to Rule 29 of the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure ("Motion") (ECF No. 509). For the reasons set forth in the accompanying Memorandum Opinion, the Motion is DENIED.

Let the Clerk send a copy of this Order to all counsel of record.

It is SO ORDERED.

/s/
James R. Spencer
Senior U. S. District Judge

ENTERED this __1st__ day of December 2014.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
FOR THE EASTERN DISTRICT OF VIRGINIA
RICHMOND DIVISION

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,)
)
v.) CRIMINAL NO. 3:14-CR-00012
)
ROBERT F. MCDONNELL) JUDGE JAMES R. SPENCER
MAUREEN G. MCDONNELL)

MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT OF DEFENDANT ROBERT F. MCDONNELL'S MOTION # 45 – MOTION TO UNSEAL CERTAIN SEALED PORTIONS OF THE RECORD

In order to facilitate the orderly and efficient litigation of the appeal in this case, and in keeping with the constitutionally founded principle of openness of criminal proceedings, Defendant Robert F. McDonnell moves to unseal certain sealed portions of the record. Specifically, Mr. McDonnell moves to unseal (1) REDACTED and (2) all pleadings, opinions, and orders filed in the course of the pretrial proceedings concerning a forensic image of Mr. Williams' iPhone, including both those filed in the miscellaneous civil proceeding in which Mr. Williams sought return of the image and those filed in Mr. McDonnell's criminal case.[2]

REDACTED

---

[2] Mr. McDonnell is concurrently filing a Motion to Supplement the Record on Appeal ("Motion to Supplement") in which he seeks to include the record of the miscellaneous civil proceeding in the record on appeal in this case. This consolidation is necessary in light of the

I.

REDACTED

Fourth Circuit's previous holding that it lacked jurisdiction to review this Court's decision in the separate miscellaneous proceeding. The Fourth Circuit held that the iPhone proceeding was, "[a]t its essence, a discovery dispute inextricably intertwined with the criminal prosecution" and that Mr. McDonnell's appeal from this Court's order compelling him to relinquish the iPhone image was therefore interlocutory. Order of Dismissal, In re Grand Jury Subpoenas, No. 14-4495 (4th Cir.), Dkt. 43, at 2. The Fourth Circuit further held that Mr. McDonnell could obtain review of the decision in the miscellaneous action after judgment was entered in his criminal case. See id. at 3-4. Consolidation of the record will enable the review contemplated by the Fourth Circuit to go forward.

REDACTED

REDACTED

REDACTED

II. THERE IS NO BASIS FOR THE CONTINUED SEALING OF THE IPHONE PROCEEDINGS.

Mr. McDonnell also requests the unsealing of all filings and orders made in connection with Mr. Williams' motion to obtain the return of an imaged copy of his iPhone that was produced to Mr. McDonnell by the Government pursuant to Federal Rule of Criminal Procedure 16. These record items include (1) all filings and orders made in the miscellaneous civil proceeding that Mr. Williams initiated, putatively in connection with the then-terminated grand jury investigation of Mr. McDonnell and his wife, seeking return of the iPhone image, see App'xs 4 to 33 to Motion to Supplement; and (2) Mr. McDonnell's Motion for Clarification filed in this criminal action, related documents, and this Court's order disposing of it, see Exs. C to F.

The proceedings pertaining to Mr. Williams' iPhone were not appropriately sealed in the first instance because the iPhone was never subpoenaed by, or produced to, the grand jury. Even assuming, however, that the proceedings were properly sealed at the time they took place, secrecy is no longer warranted. There is no risk of the "unauthorized disclosure of a matter occurring before a grand jury," Fed. R. Crim. P 6(e)(6), because all of the salient facts have long been exposed to the public gaze.

REDACTED

A. The Sealing of the iPhone Proceedings in the First Instance Was Improper.

At the time that he initiated the miscellaneous civil proceeding seeking return of the imaged copy of his iPhone, Mr. Williams moved to seal indefinitely the case and all documents filed in it. In support of his sealing motion, Mr. Williams stated that the miscellaneous proceeding "involves the protection of information disclosed pursuant to grand jury subpoenas in the Eastern District of Virginia." Mem. in Support of Movant's Mot. to Seal Case and Documents, App'x 5 to Motion to Supplement, at 3. On the basis of this assertion, Mr. Williams invoked the secrecy provisions of Federal Rule of Criminal Procedure Rule 6(e), which states that specified persons, including government attorneys, "must not disclose a matter before the grand jury." Mr. Williams' statement, however, was inaccurate, and his invocation of Rule 6(e) was improper.

The iPhone image was not produced pursuant to a grand jury subpoena. Rather, Mr. Williams provided it voluntarily to the Government in response to an independent request from government investigators. See App'x 6 to Motion to Supplement, at Ex. 1. Specifically, after reviewing certain photographs that were subpoenaed by the grand jury, the Government—in the context of negotiating an immunity deal with Mr. Williams—asked for the iPhone image so that it could extract metadata associated with the photographs. See id. There is no indication that any information from the iPhone image was ever presented to the grand jury. Indeed, on appeal from this Court's order compelling Mr. McDonnell to relinquish the iPhone image, after Mr. McDonnell pointed out that the iPhone image had never been subpoenaed by or presented to the grand jury, neither Mr. Williams nor the Government attempted to make a contrary showing. See Principal Br. of Appellants, In re Grand Jury Subpoenas, No. 14-4495 (4th Cir.), Dkt. 22, at 31-36 (stating that the iPhone image was neither subpoenaed by nor presented to the grand jury and so did not fall under Rule 6(e)); Response Br. of Appellee Jonnie R. Williams, In re Grand Jury Subpoenas, No. 14-4495 (4th Cir.), Dkt. 27 (making no argument that Rule 6(e) was validly invoked); Response Br. of the Gov't, In re Grand Jury Subpoenas, No. 14-4495 (4th Cir.), Dkt. 30, at 35-36 (acknowledging that the grand jury never subpoenaed the contents of the iPhone image).

To be sure, the Government asked for the iPhone image after seeing certain grand jury materials, but this tenuous connection with the grand jury investigation was insufficient to justify the invocation of Rule 6(e)'s secrecy provisions. Courts have made clear that not all documents that have some connection to a grand jury proceeding constitute "matter[s] occurring before the grand jury" qualifying for the protection of the Rule. As the D.C. Circuit has stated, Rule 6(e) "does not require that a veil of secrecy be drawn over all matters occurring in the world that happen to be investigated by a grand jury." SEC v. Dresser Indus., Inc., 628 F.2d 1368, 1382 (D.C. Cir. 1980). Rather, "Rule 6(e)(2) protects from disclosure only the essence of what takes place in the grand jury room, in order to preserve the freedom and integrity of the deliberative process." In re Grand Jury Subpoena, 920 F.2d 235, 241 (4th Cir. 1990) (internal quotation marks and citation omitted). In determining whether Rule 6(e) applies, courts will consider whether disclosure of grand jury matters would reveal "the identities of witnesses or jurors, the substance of testimony, the strategy or direction of the investigation, the deliberations or questions of the jurors, [or] the like." Dresser Indus., Inc., 628 F.2d at 1382. Disclosure of the fact that the Government requested, and Mr. Williams produced, the iPhone would reveal no such information because the exchange was wholly independent of the grand jury investigation.

This independence of the grand jury from government investigators is matter of constitutional law. "Recognizing [the] tradition of [grand jury] independence, [the Supreme Court has] said that the Fifth Amendment's 'constitutional guarantee presupposes an investigative body 'acting independently of either prosecuting attorney or judge.'" United States v. Williams, 504 U.S. 36, 49 (1992) (quoting United States v. Dionisio, 410 U.S. 1, 16 (1973) (emphasis added)). The grand jury is not, the Williams Court emphasized, "a constituent element of a 'criminal prosecution.'" 504 U.S. 36, 49 (1992) (quoting U.S. Const. amend. VI). The Government's request for the iPhone image and Mr. Williams' production of it therefore could not reveal, even indirectly, anything about the substance or scope of the grand jury's deliberations.

In sum, the iPhone image is simply not akin to documents "naming or identifying grand jury witnesses; quoting or summarizing grand jury testimony; evaluating testimony; discussing the scope, focus and direction of the grand jury investigations; [or] identifying documents considered by the grand jury and conclusions reached as a result of the grand jury investigations," all of which are properly protected under Rule 6(e). Fund for Constitutional Government v. National Archives & Records Service, 656 F.2d 856, 869 (D.C. Cir. 1981). It was not produced at the grand jury's behest, it was not presented to the grand jury, and it was never otherwise made part of the record of the grand jury proceedings. The miscellaneous civil proceeding should never have been sealed under Rule 6(e) and should be unsealed now. By the same token, Mr. McDonnell's Motion for Clarification and related filings from this criminal action, which were filed under seal in order to preserve the confidentiality of the miscellaneous matter, should also be unsealed.

B. Even Assuming There Was A Valid Basis for Sealing the iPhone Proceedings in the First Instance, Sealing Is No Longer Appropriate Now That the Material Facts About the Grand Jury Proceeding Are Public.

Even if the iPhone proceedings bore a close enough relationship to the grand jury investigation to warrant sealing at the time they were initiated, there is no basis for keeping them sealed now. Because neither the iPhone image nor the Government's request for it qualifies as a "matter occurring before the grand jury," the record of the proceedings pertaining to the iPhone might constitute, at best, a "record relating to [a] grand jury proceeding" within the meaning of Federal Rule of Criminal Procedure 6(e)(6).[4] Rule 6(e)(6) provides that such records "must be kept under seal to the extent and as long as necessary to prevent the unauthorized disclosure of a matter occurring before a grand jury." The phrase "as long as necessary" indicates that Rule 6(e)(6) does not authorize the indefinite sealing of records that once had some relation to ongoing grand jury proceedings. Rather, courts have held that Rule 6(e)(6) may no longer be invoked to justify the sealing of records and proceedings once the salient facts about the grand jury investigation have been made public. See, e.g., In re: Fed. Grand Jury Proceedings 03-01, 337 F. Supp. 2d 1218, 1220-21 (D. Or. 2004) ("The Government's assertion of grand jury secrecy under Rule 6(e)(6) is moot on the open record in this matter. Specifically, any need to keep the records sealed to protect the disclosure of Mayfield's identity is moot because Mayfield's identity as a material witness has been known publically since the time of his arrest." (citation omitted)). Cf. In re Charlotte Observer, 921 F.2d 47, 50 (4th Cir. 1990) (refusing to enjoin the publication of previously disclosed grand jury material because "[o]nce announced to the world, the information lost its secret characteristic").

---

[4] Mr. McDonnell does not concede that the iPhone proceedings fall into this category. As the advisory committee note indicates, Rule 6(e)(6) was intended to preserve the secrecy of records bearing a direct relationship to grand jury investigations such as grand jury subpoenas and immunity orders. See Fed. R. Crim. P. 6 advisory committee's note (1983). Mr. Williams' request for the return of information he produced to the Government independently of the grand jury investigation is not analogous to such documents.

Here, the only facts about the now-terminated grand jury investigation that would be revealed by the unsealing of the iPhone proceedings are (1) that the McDonnells were the subject of the investigation, (2) that the grand jury subpoenaed certain other materials from Mr. Williams, and (3) that Mr. Williams was an important witness in the case against the McDonnells. All of these facts are now very well known to the public. The McDonnells have now been not only indicted but tried; Mr. Williams has testified; and the Government has presented all of its evidence in the criminal case. Any valid confidentiality concern that may arguably have once justified the sealing of the iPhone proceedings is now moot. Mr. McDonnell therefore requests that these proceedings be unsealed.

CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons, Mr. McDonnell requests that the Court unseal

REDACTED and all of the records pertaining to the dispute over Mr. Williams' iPhone. Unsealing is not only consistent with the First and Sixth Amendment principle of openness of criminal trials, it will also enable Mr. McDonnell to litigate the appeal in his case in an orderly and efficient manner.

Dated: October 23, 2014

Respectfully submitted,

/s/ Jonathan A. Berry
Henry W Asbill (pro hac vice)
Noel J. Francisco (pro hac vice)
Ryan D. Newman (pro hac vice)
James M. Burnham (pro hac vice)
Jonathan A. Berry (VSB No. 81864)
JONES DAY
51 Louisiana Avenue, N.W
Washington, D.C. 20001
Telephone: (202) 879-3939
Facsimile: (202) 626-1700

John L. Brownlee (VSB No. 37358)
HOLLAND & KNIGHT LLP
800 17th Street, N.W
Suite 1100
Washington, D.C. 20006
Telephone: (202) 828-1854
Facsimile: (202) 955-5564

Counsel for Robert F McDonnell

CERTIFICATE OF SERVICE

I, Jonathan A. Berry, am a member of the Bar of this Court. I certify that on October 23, 2014, I caused to be served a true copy of the foregoing via electronic email on the following individuals:

Michael S. Dry
David V. Harbach II
Jessica D. Aber
Ryan S. Faulconer
United States Attorney's Office
600 E. Main Street, Suite 1800
Richmond, Virginia 23219-2447
Telephone: (804) 819-5400
Facsimile: (804) 771-2316
michael.s.dry@usdoj.gov

William A. Burck
Stephen M. Hauss
Heather H. Martin
QUINN EMANUEL URQUHART & SULLIVAN, LLP
777 Sixth Street NW, 11th Floor
Washington, DC 20001
Telephone: (202) 538-8000
Facsimile: (202) 538-8100
williamburck@quinnemanuel.com

Dated: October 23, 2014

Respectfully submitted,

/s/ Jonathan A. Berry
Jonathan A. Berry (VSB No. 81864)
JONES DAY
51 Louisiana Avenue, N.W
Washington, DC 20001
Telephone: (202) 879-3939
Facsimile: (202) 626-1700
Email: jberry@jonesday.com

Counsel for Robert F. McDonnell

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
FOR THE EASTERN DISTRICT OF VIRGINIA
RICHMOND DIVISION

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,	)
	)	CRIMINAL NO. 3:14-CR-00012
v.	)
	)	JUDGE JAMES R. SPENCER
ROBERT F. MCDONNELL	)
MAUREEN G. MCDONNELL	)	UNDER SEAL

REPLY OF DEFENDANT ROBERT F. MCDONNELL TO THE GOVERNMENT'S RESPONSE TO MOTION # 45 – MOTION TO UNSEAL CERTAIN SEALED PORTIONS OF THE RECORD

The First Amendment and the Sixth Amendment establish a presumption of openness of criminal proceedings. See Press-Enterprise Co. v. Superior Court of California, 464 U.S. 501, 505, 508 (1984) ("Press-Enterprise I"); Waller v. Georgia, 467 U.S. 39, 45-46 (1984). The Government has not shown that this presumption is overcome with respect to any of the materials Mr. McDonnell seeks to unseal.

I.

REDACTED

REDACTED

REDACTED

REDACTED

II. THE IPHONE PROCEEDINGS

The Government does not oppose unsealing of the iPhone proceedings. See Response at 5, 9 (stating that the Government defers to the Court on this point). Notwithstanding its position, the Government offers a lengthy discussion that (1) faults Mr. McDonnell for failing to serve sealed papers on a non-party to this case, Response at 4, (2) rebuts an argument that Mr. McDonnell did not make about this Court's supervisory authority over grand jury proceedings, Response at 7, and (3) argues that the contents of the iPhone itself should remain sealed, Response at 9, even though the iPhone itself is not part of the record in this case and Mr. McDonnell accordingly has not moved for its unsealing. This irrelevant discussion provides no basis for the continued sealing of the litigation over the iPhone.

As for the serving of papers on Mr. Williams, he is—by his own design—not a party to this case. It was Mr. Williams' choice to litigate his interest in the iPhone in a sealed proceeding ex parte from the McDonnells rather than intervene in the ongoing criminal case, and the Government, at the time, raised no objection. Indeed, Mr. Williams' position on appeal from the miscellaneous civil action pertaining to the iPhone was that it would not be necessary for him to intervene in this criminal case because he presumed the Government would adequately represent his interests in any future proceedings. See Response Br. of Appellee Jonnie R. Williams, In re Grand Jury Subpoenas, No. 14-4495 (4th Cir.), Dkt. 27, at 16 (stating that Mr. Williams is not a necessary party to future proceedings because "[a]fter winning a conviction, presumably the Government will defend the district court's pre-trial orders"). In any event, Mr. McDonnell does not intend to oppose the Government's request that his Motion to Unseal be unsealed for the limited purpose of sharing it, in relevant part, with Mr. Williams.

The Government's other arguments about the scope of Rule 6(e)'s grand jury secrecy provisions and the scope of this Court's supervisory authority are entirely irrelevant in light of the fact that the iPhone was never subpoenaed by or presented to the grand jury and therefore cannot be considered a "matter occurring before a grand jury" within the scope of the Rule. See Motion to Unseal at 5-8. The Government does not argue that the iPhone was presented to the grand jury; its only response is to suggest that "it is fair to consider the production of the iPhone by Mr. Williams to the government as occurring incident to grand jury proceedings, even though the grand jury never subpoenaed the entire contents of the iPhone." Response at 6. But the Government does not cite any authority supporting the proposition that the extraordinary secrecy protections afforded to grand jury proceedings can be extended to matters "incident to grand jury proceedings," whatever that capacious phrase means. Moreover, the Government's proposed rule that the district court's grand jury power extends to materials requested by government investigators as part of their independent follow-up in the wake of a grand jury subpoena contravenes the constitutional principle of grand jury independence expounded by the Supreme Court. The grand jury is not "a constituent element of a 'criminal prosecution.'" United States v. Williams, 504 U.S. 36, 49 (1992) (quoting U.S. Const. amend. VI). "[T]he whole theory of [the grand jury's] function is that it belongs to no branch of the institutional Government, serving as a kind of buffer or referee between the Government and the people." Id. at 48. Finally, the Government's suggestion that Mr. McDonnell somehow recognized that the civil iPhone proceeding was legitimately associated with the grand jury investigation because he intervened in it, Response at 6, is utterly implausible given the fact that, at the time this Court directed Mr. McDonnell to intervene in that proceeding in order to avoid forfeiting any objection to relinquishing the iPhone, Mr. McDonnell did not have access to the sealed record and had no way of assessing whether Rule 6(e)'s secrecy provisions had been validly invoked by Mr. Williams and the Government.

In any event, at the end of the day the Government appears only to argue that the contents of the iPhone itself should remain sealed, which is not at issue here. Because the Government does not oppose unsealing the proceedings pertaining to the iPhone, this Court should do so.

Dated: November 7, 2014

Respectfully submitted,

/s/ Jonathan A. Berry
Henry W Asbill (pro hac vice)
Noel J. Francisco (pro hac vice)
Ryan D. Newman (pro hac vice)
James M. Burnham (pro hac vice)
Jonathan A. Berry (VSB No. 81864)
JONES DAY
51 Louisiana Avenue, N.W
Washington, DC 20001
Telephone: (202) 879-3939
Facsimile: (202) 626-1700

John L. Brownlee (VSB No. 37358)
HOLLAND & KNIGHT LLP
800 17th Street N.W
Suite 1100
Washington, DC 20006
Telephone: (202) 828-1854
Facsimile: (202) 955-5564

Counsel for Robert F McDonnell

CERTIFICATE OF SERVICE

I, Jonathan A. Berry, am a member of the Bar of this Court. I certify that on November 7, 2014, I caused to be served a true copy of the foregoing via electronic email on the following individuals:

Michael S. Dry
David V Harbach II
Jessica D. Aber
Ryan S. Faulconer
United States Attorney's Office
600 E. Main Street, Suite 1800
Richmond, Virginia 23219-2447
Telephone: (804) 819-5400
Facsimile: (804) 771-2316
michael.s.dry@usdoj.gov

William A. Burck
Stephen M. Hauss
Heather H. Martin
QUINN EMANUEL URQUHART & SULLIVAN, LLP
777 Sixth Street NW, 11th Floor
Washington, DC 20001
Telephone: (202) 538-8000
Facsimile: (202) 538-8100
williamburck@quinnemanuel.com

Dated: November 7, 2014

Respectfully submitted,

/s/ Jonathan A. Berry
Jonathan A. Berry (VSB No. 81864)
JONES DAY
51 Louisiana Avenue, N.W
Washington, DC 20001
Telephone: (202) 879-3939
Facsimile: (202) 626-1700
Email: jberry@jonesday.com

Counsel for Robert F. McDonnell

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
FOR THE EASTERN DISTRICT OF VIRGINIA
RICHMOND DIVISION

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,	)
	)	CRIMINAL NO. 3:14-CR-00012
v.	)
	)	JUDGE JAMES R. SPENCER
ROBERT F. MCDONNELL	)
MAUREEN G. MCDONNELL	)	UNDER SEAL

STATEMENT OF DEFENDANT ROBERT F. MCDONNELL RESPECTING THE "OPPOSITION TO UNSEALING" FILED BY JONNIE R. WILLIAMS, SR. IN THE CLOSED CASE IN RE GRAND JURY SUBPOENAS, No. 3: 14-ms-67

On November 17, 2014, counsel for Jonnie R. Williams, Sr. served Mr. McDonnell with a document captioned "Jonnie R. Williams Sr.'s Opposition to Unsealing" that was putatively filed in the closed civil case In re Grand Jury Subpoenas, No. 3: 14-ms-67 ("Williams Opp'n"). Mr. Williams' filing in the closed civil case is improper. See Ziadeh v. United States, 2014 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 2645, at *8 (E.D. Va. Jan. 9, 2014) ("A litigant may not simply file a motion in a closed case."). Moreover, by choosing not to intervene in Mr. McDonnell's criminal case and not to file an opposition to Mr. McDonnell's Motion to Unseal in this criminal case, Mr. Williams has effectively waived any opposition to Mr. McDonnell's motion. In the event, however, that the Clerk's Office accepts Mr. Williams' improper filing and this Court chooses to consider it, Mr. McDonnell submits this Statement Respecting Mr. Williams' "Opposition to Unsealing."

Mr. Williams erroneously contends that the constitutional presumption of openness that applies to criminal proceedings is not applicable to the proceedings in which he sought the return of an imaged copy of his iPhone because those proceedings "arose directly from a grand jury subpoena," were "incident to [a] grand jury subpoena[]," or were "ancillary to" a grand jury investigation. Williams Opp'n 3, 4, 6. This attempt to shift the burden of justifying continued sealing to Mr. McDonnell is factually and legally flawed; Rule 6(e)'s secrecy provisions were not validly invoked by Mr. Williams in the first instance.

As a factual matter, Mr. Williams never testified before the grand jury and was not, as he claims, a "grand jury witness," Williams Opp'n at 1, 2.[1] Nor, contrary to Mr. Williams' contention, was the search for metadata associated with photographs that were produced pursuant to a grand jury subpoena itself part of the grand jury's investigation. Mr. Williams' ex post characterization of the facts, see Williams Opp'n at 3-4, is contradicted by the Government's own account of events, provided at the time it first notified Mr. McDonnell that the iPhone image it had disclosed to him pursuant to Fed. R. Crim. P. 16 might contain privileged information. There, the Government stated, "[w]e subsequently requested that McGuireWoods produce a forensic image of Mr. Williams's iPhone to us to allow the Government to attempt to obtain metadata and other electronic information about certain specific pictures on Mr. Williams's iPhone." March 10, 2014 Letter from Dana J. Boente & Jack Smith to Henry W. Asbill et al., filed under seal as Exhibit 1 to Appendix 6 to Mr. McDonnell's Mot. #44 to Supplement the Record on Appeal, dkt. no. 539 (emphasis added). As Mr. McDonnell explained in his Memorandum, and as neither Mr. Williams nor the Government disputed on appeal from this Court's order in In re Grand Jury Subpoenas, there is no indication that either metadata from the subpoenaed photographs or any other information from the iPhone image was ever presented to the grand jury. See Mem. at 6-7; Principal Br. of Appellants, In re Grand Jury

---

[1] Although the grand jury proceedings themselves remain sealed, Mr. McDonnell understands that Mr. Williams did not testify before the grand jury because the Government, in its Jencks Act production in his criminal case, did not provide Mr. McDonnell with any transcripts of grand jury testimony by Mr. Williams, who was the Government's star witness in its criminal case against Mr. McDonnell.

Subpoenas, No. 14-4495 (4th Cir.), Dkt. 22, at 31-36 & n.6 (stating that the iPhone image was neither subpoenaed by nor presented to the grand jury and that the record did not indicate that the metadata had been presented to the grand jury); Response Br. of Appellee Jonnie R. Williams, In re Grand Jury Subpoenas, No. 14-4495 (4th Cir.), Dkt. 27 (making no counter-argument); Response Br. of the Gov't, In re Grand Jury Subpoenas, No. 14-4495 (4th Cir.), Dkt. 30, at 35-36 (acknowledging that the grand jury never subpoenaed the contents of the iPhone image).

It is therefore irrelevant whether certain metadata on the iPhone image might arguably have been responsive to the subpoena that the grand jury actually issued. The Fourth Circuit has expressly held that where there are ongoing parallel grand jury and government investigations, and the government, using its own investigative means, obtains material that also happens to be responsive to a grand jury subpoena, that material is not protected by Rule 6(e). In re Grand Jury Subpoena (Under Seal), 920 F.2d 235, 241-43 (4th Cir. 1990) (finding no violation of Rule 6(e) where the government had shared with other investigators materials it obtained by search warrant and "grand jury subpoenas were effected for the same records and materials that were obtained by the search warrants"). It does not matter that the government's own investigation and the grand jury's investigation were happening simultaneously or that the two investigations were focused on the same underlying events. The salient point is that neither the iPhone image nor any metadata on it was produced pursuant to a grand jury subpoena, and neither was ever presented to the grand jury. Thus, neither ever constituted a "matter occurring before a grand jury" within the meaning of Rule 6(e). There is a fundamental constitutional distinction between the prosecutors and the grand jury that Mr. Williams simply ignores. See United States v. Williams, 504 U.S. 36, 49 (1992).[2]

Nor is there any legal foundation for Mr. Williams argument that the iPhone proceedings were properly sealed because they were "ancillary to" a grand jury investigation or because the image was supposedly produced "incident to [a] grand jury subpoena[]." Williams Opp'n at 6-7, 4. Proceedings "ancillary to" grand jury proceedings include matters where judicial intervention is required to ensure witnesses' compliance with a actual grand jury subpoena. As the D.C. Circuit explained in a case relied on by Mr. Williams, in such "ancillary" proceedings "[t]he judge may be called upon to decide a witness's motion to postpone the date of testimony or to quash the subpoena," or to make a ruling when a witness asserts a testimonial privilege and "the grand jury may seek a court order compelling the witness to answer," or to issue an order granting use immunity where a subpoenaed witness invokes the Fifth Amendment right against self-incrimination. In re Motions of Dow Jones & Co., 142 F.3d 496, 498 (D.C. Cir. 1998). See also In re Grand Jury Subpoenas, Judith Miller, 493 F.3d 152, 154 (D.C. Cir. 2007) (refusing to unseal a matter "ancillary to" a grand jury proceeding where the court had addressed a subpoenaed witness s refusal to testify on the ground of reporter's privilege). The proceeding in which Mr. Williams sought the return of property he had voluntarily provided to the Government pursuant to its own independent investigation and not pursuant to a grand jury subpoena was not "ancillary to" the grand jury investigation of Mr. and Mrs. McDonnell in any such way.

---

[2] While the letter Mr. Williams' counsel provided accompanying the production of the iPhone image stated that the image was "submitted in connection with the grand jury investigation and are subject to Federal Rule of Criminal Procedure 6(e)," June 24, 2013 Letter from Anne Bentley McCray to Michael S. Dry, filed under seal as Exhibit 2 to Appendix 6 to Mr. McDonnell's Mot. #44 to Supplement the Record on Appeal, dkt. no. 539, a party cannot expand the scope of Rule 6(e)'s protection by simply stating that a particular document comes within its purview.

As for the theory that Rule 6(e) covers materials produced "incident to" grand jury subpoenas, neither Mr. Williams nor the Government has ever produced any legal authority supporting this non-textual expansion of the Rule. Rule 6(e) provides for the confidentiality of "a matter occurring before a grand jury." Courts have debated the extent to which the Rule covers documents produced pursuant to grand jury subpoenas, as distinct from grand jury deliberations, transcripts of testimony, and other proceedings that actually take place in the grand jury room. See, e.g., In re Grand Jury Subpoena, 920 F.2d 235, 241 (4th Cir. 1990); SEC v. Dresser Indus., Inc., 628 F.2d 1368, 1382 (D.C. Cir. 1980). But neither Mr. Williams nor the Government cites any authority indicating that materials that were neither subpoenaed nor reviewed by the grand jury become protected by Rule 6(e) because they were produced to government investigators in circumstances bearing some factual connection to a grand jury proceeding. Indeed, the Fourth Circuit's decision in In re Grand Jury Subpoena (Under Seal), 920 F.2d 235, forecloses this argument.

Finally, Mr. Williams' invocation of his supposed privacy interests falls wide of the mark. Mr. McDonnell has not sought unsealing of the iPhone image itself; rather, he seeks only unsealing of the litigation pertaining to the iPhone image—litigation that the Fourth Circuit held was essentially part of Mr. McDonnell's criminal case. See Order of Dismissal, In re Grand Jury Subpoenas, No. 14-4495 (4th Cir.), Dkt. 43, at 2 (stating that the iPhone proceeding was, "[a]t its essence, . . . a discovery dispute inextricably intertwined with the criminal prosecution"). To the extent certain of the filings contain descriptions of independently sealed material—such as the content of grand jury subpoenas, see Williams Opp'n 5—that is properly protected by Rule 6(e), Mr. McDonnell does not object to the redaction of such descriptions. But to continue to keep all of the proceedings pertaining to the iPhone image under seal in deference to Mr.

Williams' desire to shield from public view the existence of a "discovery dispute inextricably intertwined with the criminal prosecution" contravenes the First and Sixth Amendments and the presumption of openness of criminal proceedings that they establish.[3] This Court should therefore grant Mr. McDonnell's Motion to Unseal.

Dated: November 18, 2014

Respectfully submitted,

/s/ Jonathan A. Berry
Henry W Asbill (pro hac vice)
Noel J. Francisco (pro hac vice)
Ryan D. Newman (pro hac vice)
James M. Burnham (pro hac vice)
Jonathan A. Berry (VSB No. 81864)
JONES DAY
51 Louisiana Avenue, N.W
Washington, DC 20001
Telephone: (202) 879-3939
Facsimile: (202) 626-1700

John L. Brownlee (VSB No. 37358)
HOLLAND & KNIGHT LLP
800 17th Street N.W
Suite 1100
Washington, DC 20006
Telephone: (202) 828-1854
Facsimile: (202) 955-5564

Counsel for Robert F McDonnell

---

[3] Mr. McDonnell notes, in this regard, that the Fourth Circuit denied sealing of the appellate proceedings pertaining to the iPhone. Order, In re Grand Jury Subpoenas, No. 14-4495 (4th Cir.), Dkt. 45.

CERTIFICATE OF SERVICE

I, Jonathan A. Berry, am a member of the Bar of this Court. I certify that on November 18, 2014, I caused to be served a true copy of the foregoing via electronic email on the following individuals:

Michael S. Dry
David V. Harbach II
Jessica D. Aber
Ryan S. Faulconer
United States Attorney's Office
600 E. Main Street, Suite 1800
Richmond, Virginia 23219-2447
Telephone: (804) 819-5400
Facsimile: (804) 771-2316
michael.s.dry@usdoj.gov

William A. Burck
Stephen M. Hauss
Heather H. Martin
QUINN EMANUEL URQUHART & SULLIVAN, LLP
777 Sixth Street NW, 11th Floor
Washington, DC 20001
Telephone: (202) 538-8000
Facsimile: (202) 538-8100
williamburck@quinnemanuel.com

Dated: November 18, 2014

Respectfully submitted,

/s/ Jonathan A. Berry
Jonathan A. Berry (VSB No. 81864)
JONES DAY
51 Louisiana Avenue, N.W
Washington, DC 20001
Telephone: (202) 879-3939
Facsimile: (202) 626-1700
Email: jberry@jonesday.com

Counsel for Robert F. McDonnell

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
FOR THE EASTERN DISTRICT OF VIRGINIA
RICHMOND DIVISION

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,	)
	)	CRIMINAL NO. 3:14-CR-00012
v.	)
	)	JUDGE JAMES R. SPENCER
ROBERT F. MCDONNELL	)
MAUREEN G. MCDONNELL	)	UNDER SEAL

REPLY OF DEFENDANT ROBERT F. MCDONNELL TO THE GOVERNMENT'S RESPONSE TO MOTION # 44 – MOTION TO SUPPLEMENT THE RECORD ON APPEAL

The Government does not oppose Mr. McDonnell's motion to supplement the record on appeal in any material respect. This Court should therefore grant Mr. McDonnell's motion in its entirety. The Government, however, makes an improper request to include in the record on appeal materials that were never submitted to or considered by this Court. Mr. McDonnell requests that this Court deny the Government's improper request and exclude from the record the letters the Government has attached to its Response as Exhibit D.

The Government also engages in substantial discussion of supposed waiver issues. Mr. McDonnell has never suggested that by consenting to the inclusion of materials in the record the Government is conceding any merits points for the purposes of appeal. In any event, all arguments concerning waiver may be properly presented to the Fourth Circuit in due course, and there is no need for this Court to address the Government's irrelevant discussion at this time.

I. DEFENSE REQUESTS #1-2

The Government characterizes Mr. McDonnell's request that this Court include the trial and hearing transcripts listed in his original Motion as unnecessary, but does not oppose it. Mr. McDonnell made the request out of an abundance of caution and in recognition that under Local Criminal Rule 57.3(D), "[u]nless otherwise directed by the Court, the record on appeal in criminal cases shall not include arguments of counsel, including arguments of counsel on motions." His unopposed request should be granted.

II. DEFENSE REQUESTS #3-5

The Government does not oppose Mr. McDonnell's request to include the parties' proposed questions for the juror questionnaire, redacted juror questionnaires, and other additional questions proposed during the July 28 voir dire. Mr. McDonnell's unopposed request should therefore be granted.

Mr. McDonnell has no objection to including in the record on appeal the materials attached to the Government's Response as Exhibits A-C, as these papers were submitted to the Court in connection with the voir dire process. See Fed. R. App. P. 10(a)(1).

The Government suggests that Mr. McDonnell has waived any argument regarding the Court's pre-screening of juror questionnaires before providing them to the parties. This argument is based on sheer speculation about what Mr. McDonnell may argue on appeal and is premature. This Court need not address it.

III. DEFENSE REQUEST #6

The Government does not oppose Mr. McDonnell's request to include in the record in this criminal case the record of the proceedings pertaining to an imaged copy of Mr. Williams' iPhone in In re Grand Jury Subpoenas, No. 3:14-ms-67. It states, however, that if Mr. McDonnell's motion to include these materials in the record on appeal is granted, this Court should include in the record "pertinent letters" that it attaches to its Response as Exhibit D. This request is entirely improper and should be denied.

As far as Mr. McDonnell is aware, the letters that the Government proposes to include in the record were never submitted to the district court in any filing, and they were never considered by the district court in its disposition of any matter during the proceedings in this case.[1] "[Federal Rule of Appellate Procedure] 10(e) is not designed to allow a district court 'to add to the record on appeal matters that did not occur there in the course of proceedings leading to the judgment under review.'" Allen v. Minnstar, Inc., 8 F.3d 1470, 1474 (10th Cir. 1993) (quoting Jones v. Jackson Nat'l Life Ins. Co., 819 F. Supp. 1385, 1387 (W.D. Mich. 1993)). See also United States v. Ameline, 409 F.3d 1073, 1112 (9th Cir. 2005) ("Normally, documents or exhibits that were not filed with the district court, admitted into evidence, nor considered by the district court cannot be filed as part of the record."); Fassett v. Delta Kappa Epsilon, 807 F.2d 1150, 1165 (3d Cir. 1986) (same). The Government has requested that the Court include these letters in the record without either acknowledging that they were never submitted to the Court or offering any argument for why Rule 10(e) allows the inclusion of this material. It merely states that the letters are "pertinent," which is not a proper basis for supplementing the record on appeal with non-record materials. See Fed. R. App. P. 10(e). The Government's improper request should be denied, and this Court should exclude from the record Exhibit D to the Government's Response.

The Government's extensive review of the history of the iPhone litigation and suggestion that Mr. McDonnell somehow waived any claim of error in regard to those proceedings is, again, irrelevant. Any arguments regarding waiver should be raised before the Fourth Circuit on appeal, and this Court need not address them here. Mr. McDonnell does note, however, that as the Government acknowledges, he received the iPhone image as part of the Government's Rule 16 discovery; he affirmatively intervened in a separate proceeding to argue that he should not be required to relinquish the iPhone; and after he was subsequently ordered to turn over the iPhone, he pursued an expedited appeal before the Fourth Circuit, which then determined that Mr. McDonnell could obtain review of his claims on appeal from the judgment in his criminal case. The Government suggests that after this extensive litigation, Mr. McDonnell was required, in order to preserve the issue, to "use the discovery tools available to [him] under Rule 16" in some unspecified manner and ask this Court to order the return to him of material it had already ordered him to relinquish. This suggestion is nonsensical.

---

[1] By email on November 5, 2014, counsel for Mr. McDonnell requested that the Government identify when, if at all, these letters were filed in the district court. See Exhibit A. As of the time of filing this Reply, the Government has not responded to the defense's request.

Dated: November 6, 2014

Respectfully submitted,

/s/ Jonathan A. Berry
Henry W. Asbill (pro hac vice)
Noel J. Francisco (pro hac vice)
Ryan D. Newman (pro hac vice)
James M. Burnham (pro hac vice)
Jonathan A. Berry (VSB No. 81864)
JONES DAY
51 Louisiana Avenue, N.W
Washington, DC 20001
Telephone: (202) 879-3939
Facsimile: (202) 626-1700

John L. Brownlee (VSB No. 37358)
HOLLAND & KNIGHT LLP
800 17th Street N.W
Suite 1100
Washington, DC 20006
Telephone: (202) 828-1854
Facsimile: (202) 955-5564

Counsel for Robert F. McDonnell

CERTIFICATE OF SERVICE

I, Jonathan A. Berry, am a member of the Bar of this Court. I certify that on November 6, 2014, I caused to be served a true copy of the foregoing via electronic email on the following individuals:

Michael S. Dry
David V Harbach II
Jessica D. Aber
Ryan S. Faulconer
United States Attorney's Office
600 E. Main Street, Suite 1800
Richmond, Virginia 23219-2447
Telephone: (804) 819-5400
Facsimile: (804) 771-2316
michael.s.dry@usdoj.gov

William A. Burck
Stephen M. Hauss
Heather H. Martin
QUINN EMANUEL URQUHART &
SULLIVAN, LLP
777 Sixth Street NW, 11th Floor
Washington, DC 20001
Telephone: (202) 538-8000
Facsimile: (202) 538-8100
williamburck@quinnemanuel.com

Dated: November 6, 2014

Respectfully submitted,

/s/ Jonathan A. Berry
Jonathan A. Berry (VSB No. 81864)
JONES DAY
51 Louisiana Avenue, N.W
Washington, DC 20001
Telephone: (202) 879-3939
Facsimile: (202) 626-1700
Email: jberry@jonesday.com

Counsel for Robert F McDonnell

IN THE UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
FOR THE EASTERN DISTRICT OF VIRGINIA

Richmond Division

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA)
)
v.)
) No. 3:14cr12
ROBERT F. MCDONNELL and) MAUREEN G. MCDONNELL,) UNDER SEAL
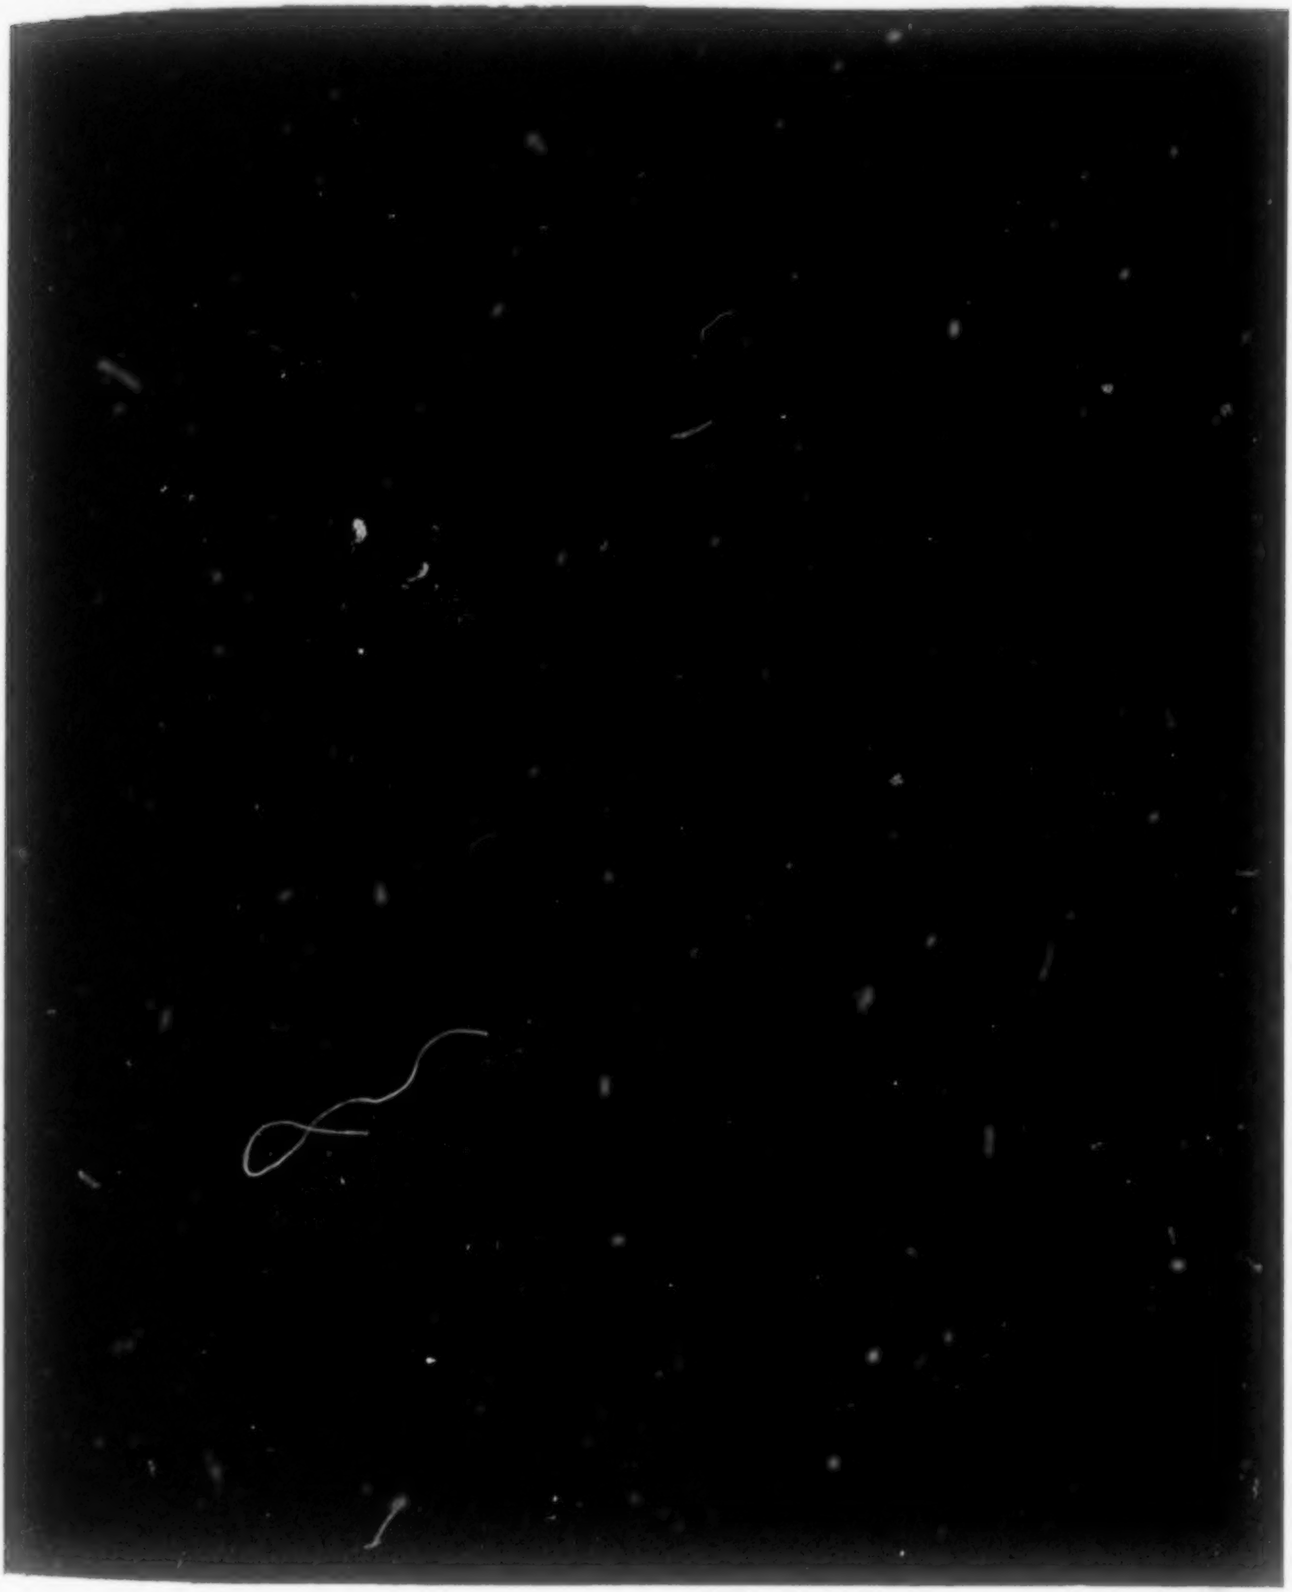
Defendants.)

GOVERNMENT'S RESPONSE TO DEFENDANTS' MOTIONS TO UNSEAL

The United States of America, by and through the undersigned attorneys, hereby responds to the defendants' motions to unseal portions of the record. See Doc. Nos. 537, 550 (motions to seal the defendants' underlying motions to unseal). In those motions, both defendants request that two portions of the record be unsealed. [redacted] The second is the litigation over the contents of Williams's iPhone in In re Grand Jury Subpoenas, No. 3:14ms67, as well as certain related pleadings filed in this case that are attached to Mr. McDonnell's motion to unseal as Exhibits C through F. The United States addresses each request below. Mr. McDonnell also requests that the transcript of the in-chambers conference on August 12, 2014, be unsealed, but the United States does not address that issue here given that this Court has already unsealed that transcript.[1]

---

[1] The United States does not oppose unsealing of the voicemail transcript and the agent notes that were submitted at the August 12 hearing, which are attached to Mr. McDonnell's motion to unseal as Exhibits A and B. The United States notes, however, that the defendants should redact the phone numbers contained on the last two lines of Exhibit A before it is unsealed. The voicemail transcript and notes disclose nothing of importance beyond what has been disclosed with the unsealing of the August 12 transcript.



[redacted]

II. The iPhone Litigation in In re Grand Jury Subpoenas, No. 3:14ms67

This Court has already determined that the iPhone litigation should be sealed, and the Fourth Circuit ordered some unsealing of the defendants' dismissed interlocutory appeal, while leaving undisturbed the sealing that this Court imposed. The defendants argue nevertheless that all filings and orders in the litigation over the iPhone should now be unsealed, both in No. 3:14ms67 and in the pleadings attached as Exhibits C through F to Mr. McDonnell's motion to unseal. In making that request, however, the defendants made no effort to serve the lawyers for the party most affected by their request, Jonnie Williams, Sr., and who was an active participant in both the litigation in this Court and the Fourth Circuit over the iPhone. Because the defendants' request to unseal the iPhone litigation is itself currently under seal, the United States has been unable to provide the filing to Williams's counsel and have sought leave from this Court for limited unsealing of the defendants' motion to effectuate that. Extensive litigation over the sealing of pleadings at this juncture is premature until Williams's position is known. The United States thus defers to the Court pending resolution of the United States' motion for limited unsealing and the receipt of any pleadings from Williams, the party that initially sought sealing in No. 3:14ms67

But the United States does oppose the defendants' unduly restrictive view of a district court's authority in grand jury investigations. This argument is of course relevant to both whether the iPhone itself should be kept under seal and whether the litigation about the iPhone should be sealed.

The defendants argue that the iPhone litigation was not properly sealed in the first instance. But the defendants ignore a district court's supervisory powers over grand jury matters. "Although the grand jury operates with great independence, 'the powers of the grand jury are not unlimited and are subject to the supervision of a judge.'" In re Grand Jury, John Doe No. G.J.2005-2, 478 F.3d 581, 584–85 (4th Cir. 2007) (quoting Branzburg v. Hayes, 408 U.S. 665, 688 (1972)). See also In re United States of America, 441 F.3d 44, 57–58 (1st Cir. 2006) ("The inherent supervisory authority over grand juries is well recognized."); Federal Practice and Procedure § 101 n.18 (collecting cases). Such supervisory authority includes compelling the production of evidence to the grand jury. See United States v. Williams, 504 U.S. 36, 48 (1992).

This supervisory power also permits district judges to protect privileges and claw back materials improperly produced in a grand jury investigation. See, e.g., In re Grand Jury Investigation, 59 F.3d 17, 19 (2d Cir. 1995) (holding that a party may "invoke[] the court's supervisory powers over the grand jury and its use of compulsory process" to obtain an order to access grand jury materials to which it had a "contractual interest"); In re GJ Investigation, 142 F.R.D. 276, 283 (M.D.N.C. 1992) (ordering government to return privileged documents that were inadvertently produced in response to a grand jury subpoena).

In this case, the grand jury issued subpoenas that triggered the production of documents from Williams's iPhone. Williams produced 137 documents from his iPhone to the government, including two identical pictures of defendant Robert McDonnell posing with a Rolex watch, but Williams did not produce any metadata associated with the pictures. As a result, the government requested that Williams provide an image of his iPhone for the limited purpose of allowing the government to search for metadata associated with these two pictures.

Under such circumstances, it is fair to consider the production of the iPhone by Williams to the government as occurring incident to grand jury subpoenas, even though the grand jury never subpoenaed the entire contents of the iPhone. Williams understood the context as such when he noted, in the June 24, 2013 letter that accompanied the production, that "[t]hese documents are submitted in connection with the grand jury investigation being conducted in Richmond, Virginia." And defendants appear to have understood it as such when they intervened in the grand jury litigation and opposed Williams's motion for a return of property on the merits, rather than by contesting the legitimacy of the grand jury proceedings.

As part of its supervisory function over production of evidence to the grand jury, this Court had the power to strip the government of the iPhone image. Moreover, once the defendants received notice and an opportunity to be heard in the grand jury litigation, this Court was entitled to order them to surrender the iPhone images in their possession.

Were this Court limited to clawing back materials from the government (and not from defendants), the Court's authority to order the return of materials produced incident to grand jury subpoenas would be badly compromised. For instance, a district court plainly has the authority to rectify unintentional and inadvertent waivers of privilege when appropriate, including by clawing back privileged materials produced to the grand jury. See Fed. R. Evid. 502; In re GJ

Investigation, 142 F.R.D. at 283. Yet such authority would be pointless if the party seeking return of documents could not also recover them from defendants in the criminal action resulting from the grand jury investigation. See Hawkins v. Stables, 148 F.3d 379, 384 n.4 (4th Cir. 1998) (explaining when disclosure waives privilege).

Indeed, under the rule the defendants propose, a district court's supervisory authority over grand jury proceedings would appear to permit document clawbacks prior to indictment and criminal discovery—because defendants would not have any possession, lawful or otherwise, of such materials—but not post-indictment and criminal discovery. Therefore, the defense rule would force grand jury witnesses to litigate all potential disclosure issues at the subpoena stage, resulting in premature and speculative litigation. That is not the law, as the Third Circuit has explained:

> If we were to hold that a witness furnishing documents to a grand jury could not be heard to object to their production under Rule 16, the inevitable effect would be to move the litigation over preservation of confidentiality back to the investigation stage, thus multiplying the instances in which subpoenaed witnesses would resist.

United States v. RMI, 599 F.2d 1183, 1190 (3d Cir. 1979); see also United States v. Hubbard, 650 F.2d 293, 305 (D.C. Cir. 1980) ("Minimizing the initial intrusiveness of necessary governmental activity is one means of serving fundamental privacy interests, but controlling broadside disclosure of materials or information obtained by intrusive means is another.").

Similarly, the principle of grand jury secrecy is well-established. The Supreme Court has identified a number of reasons underlying the policy of grand jury secrecy, including "to encourage free and untrammeled disclosures by persons who have information with respect to the commission of crimes." United States v. Procter & Gamble Co., 356 U.S. 677, 681–82 n.6 (1958).

While the principle of grand jury secrecy is at its apex in the investigation stage, the encouragement and protection of grand jury witnesses persist after an indictment is returned. "For in considering the effects of disclosure on grand jury proceedings, the courts must consider not only the immediate effects upon a particular grand jury, but also the possible effect upon the functioning of future grand juries." Douglas Oil Co. of Cal. v. Petrol Stops Nw., 441 U.S. 211, 222 (1979). "The primary reason for secrecy after the investigation is over is the need to encourage future grand jury witnesses to come forward and provide information about crimes." Federal Practice and Procedure § 106. "[C]ourts have correctly recognized that encouraging future witnesses is 'a reason for secrecy which can be ignored by no court. It is a reason of paramount importance.'" Id. (quoting United States v. Scott Paper Co., 254 F Supp. 759, 761 (W.D. Mich. 1966); see also State of Illinois v. Sarbaugh, 552 F.2d 768, 774-75 (7th Cir. 1977) (recognizing that witness protection and encouragement survive as bases for grand jury secrecy following the return of an indictment).

The defendants argue that the iPhone litigation cannot count as "a matter occurring before the grand jury" under Fed. R. Crim. P 6(e), and case law on the scope of "a matter occurring before the grand jury" is unsettled. Some decisions of the Fourth Circuit imply a broad scope. See, e.g., In re GJ Subpoenas, April, 1978, 581 F.2d 1103, 1108-09 (4th Cir. 1978) ("Rule 6(e)… provides generally that materials secured by the grand jury in the course of its investigation shall not be disclosed except as authorized as authorized in subsection (2)"). Others indicate a more narrow definition. See In re Grand Jury Subpoena, 920 F.2d 235, 241 (4th Cir. 1990) ("Rule 6(e)(2) protects from disclosure only the essence of what takes place in the grand jury room, in order to preserve the freedom and integrity of the deliberative process") (internal quotation marks omitted). The state of the law outside this Circuit is equally unsettled.

See In re John Doe GJ Proceedings, 537 F Supp. 1038, 1043 (D. R.I. 1992) (collecting cases); Federal Practice and Procedure § 106 n. 32 (same).

However, this Court need not determine whether the iPhone qualifies for protection under Rule 6(e) in order to affirm the district court's reliance on grand jury secrecy. As the Third Circuit recognized in RMI, "Plainly, the policies behind Rule 6(e) secrecy are implicated by the pre-trial production of grand jury documents." 599 F.2d at 1188. The court in RMI observed, "To be sure, the documents were sought by the defendants under Rule 16(a)(1)(C), and not under Rule 6(e), because they are to be used in a criminal, not civil, proceeding." But the court held, "Since the policies of secrecy apply both to criminal trials under Rule 16 and to civil actions under Rule 6, the analysis of the Douglas Oil and Sarbaugh Courts seems eminently applicable." Id. at 1189.

But ultimately, even if the iPhone litigation were not deemed to be properly covered by grand jury secrecy, the contents of the iPhone itself were properly kept under seal pursuant to the protective order and Fed. R. Crim. P 16(d). The defendants' request for the contents of the iPhone was a fishing expedition, as this Court previously held. The defendants could have identified relevant evidence, but failed to do so, that could have been subpoenaed under Fed. R. Crim. P. 17. That leaves the question whether the litigation about the iPhone, as distinct from the contents of the iPhone itself, should be kept under seal. The United States defers to the Court on whether to keep the litigation, as distinct from the contents of the iPhone, under seal.

Respectfully submitted,

DANA J. BOENTE
United States Attorney

JACK SMITH
Chief, Public Integrity Section
Criminal Division
U.S. Department of Justice

By: Richard Cooke
Richard D. Cooke
Ryan S. Faulconer
Michael S. Dry
Jessica D. Aber
Counsel for the United States

U.S. Attorney's Office
600 E. Main Street, Suite 1800
Richmond, VA 23219
Phone: 804-819-5400
Fax: 804-771-2316
Email: richard.cooke@usdoj.gov
ryan.faulconer2@usdoj.gov
michael.s.dry@usdoj.gov
jessica.d.aber@usdoj.gov

CERTIFICATE OF SERVICE

I hereby certify that on November 4, 2014, I will electronically mail a copy of this pleading to counsel for defendants Robert F McDonnell and Maureen G. McDonnell.

By: ____________________
for Jessica D. Aber
Counsel for the United States
U.S. Attorney's Office
600 E. Main Street, Suite 1800
Richmond, VA 23219
Phone: 804-819-5400
Fax: 804-771-2316
Email: jessica.d.aber@usdoj.gov

IN THE UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
FOR THE EASTERN DISTRICT OF VIRGINIA

Richmond Division

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA	)
	)
v.	)
	)	No. 3:14cr12
ROBERT F. MCDONNELL and	)
MAUREEN G. MCDONNELL,	)	UNDER SEAL
Defendants.	)

GOVERNMENT'S RESPONSE TO DEFENDANTS' MOTIONS TO SUPPLEMENT THE RECORD

The United States of America, by and through the undersigned attorneys, hereby responds to the defendants' motions to supplement the record. See Doc. Nos. 539, 552. In those motions, both defendants make six requests to supplement the record with various materials, including certain materials currently filed under seal. The United States addresses each request below.

I. Defense Requests #1–2

The defendants' first two requests are that this Court make various trial and hearing transcripts part of the record for an appeal. Those requests are unnecessary. Under Fed. R. App. P. 10(a), the record on appeal includes all hearing and trial transcripts. As Rule 10(a) states, the "following items constitute the record on appeal: (1) the original papers and exhibits filed in the district court; (2) the transcript of proceedings, if any; and (3) a certified copy of the docket entries prepared by the district clerk."

II. Defense Requests #3–5

The defendants' third, fourth, and fifth requests relate to the parties' proposed questions for the juror questionnaire, the final version of the questionnaire that this Court mailed to the jurors, redacted copies of the responses that prospective jurors mailed back to the Court, and additional questions proposed by Mr. McDonnell during voir dire. To the extent those materials are not deemed "papers . . . filed in the district court" under Fed. R. App. P. 10(a)(1), the United States does not object to deeming those documents to be part of the record. See Fed. R. App. P. 10(e) (providing mechanism for supplementing record). But all of the unredacted juror questionnaires should be deemed part of the record—while being kept under seal.

But if the defendants intend to litigate issues implicating the juror questionnaires, the full questionnaires should be available to the United States Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit, even if the unredacted questionnaires are not publicly available. The United States does not object to deeming the redacted questionnaires to be part of the record as well, and if those redacted questionnaires provide sufficient information to address any argument that is raised on appeal, then so much the better. That will decrease the amount of sealed briefing necessary on appeal, if any.

Similarly, the defendants have not included in their proposed supplements to the record certain materials related to the juror questionnaires that the parties submitted to the Court but that were not filed in the public record. The United States has attached those materials to this pleading as Exhibits A through C in the interest of completeness, and in the event the Court grants the defendants' motion with respect to the juror questionnaire issues, the United States asks that the Court include Exhibits A through C as well.

The United States notes, however, that by agreeing that the various materials related to the juror questionnaires should be deemed part of the record, the United States is not agreeing that the defendants have in fact preserved any particular argument related to the juror questionnaires. Objections must be timely raised "when the court ruling or order is made or sought." Fed. R. Crim. P 51(b). In this regard, the United States notes for the record that the defendants never objected before or during voir dire to the Court's pre-screening of juror questionnaires before providing them to the parties, despite being aware of the Court having done so.

III. Defense Request #6

The defendants also ask to add to the record in their criminal cases the entire record in In re Grand Jury Subpoenas, No. 3:14ms67, related to Jonnie Williams's iPhone. Although the United States does not oppose that request, it first notes that the defendants have not included a pertinent letters that should be made part of that record if the defendants' motion is granted. This are attached as Exhibit D.

Moreover, it is again important to distinguish between adding materials to the record and making a properly preserved, timely objection. The defendants up until this point treated the ultimate resolution of the iPhone litigation as part of a separate matter and indeed invoked that point in claiming that there was jurisdiction for an interlocutory appeal. But after they returned their copy of the iPhone in No. 3:13ms67, and after the Fourth Circuit rejected their argument that there was jurisdiction for an interlocutory grand jury appeal, the defendants did not argue to this Court that the Fourth Circuit's ruling undermined this Court's prior ruling requiring them to return the iPhone, and did not seek any further relief in the criminal case. Had they done so, this Court could have addressed the iPhone matter under the rubric of Fed. R. Crim. P. 16(d)(1), using a materially indistinguishable analysis from what the Court did in the grand jury litigation. The information contained on the iPhone is subject to this Court's protective order entered pursuant to Fed. R. Crim. P 16(d)(1), and by its terms, Rule 16(d)(1) allows a court to claw back information for good cause.

To assist the Court, the United States briefly reviews the history of the iPhone litigation and why the defendants have not actually invoked the Court's authority under Rule 16 to resist returning the iPhone. At bottom, the defendants contend that their rights were violated because they could not access information on the iPhone that the government has never reviewed at any point, that the government returned to Williams before trial, and that the defendants could have subpoenaed under Fed. R. Crim. P 17(c) if they could articulate any conceivable grounds on which it could be deemed relevant.

On May 22, 2013, Jonnie Williams, Sr. produced 137 documents from his iPhone that were responsive to grand jury subpoenas. That production included two pictures showing Mr. McDonnell posing with a Rolex watch. Anticipating that in a trial, Mr. McDonnell would dispute whether he had sent Williams the photos, the United States sought to perform a single search of metadata associated with the photos. On June 24, 2013, Williams's counsel provided a DVD containing an image of the iPhone to the government so that the United States could perform that limited metadata search for the two images of Mr. McDonnell posing with the Rolex. In an accompanying letter, Williams's counsel noted that "[t]hese documents are submitted in connection with the grand jury investigation being conducted in Richmond, Virginia," and stated that the documents "are subject to Federal Rule of Criminal Procedure 6(e) and any other applicable policies."

The prosecutors performed the limited metadata search in the presence of Williams's counsel, were unable to glean any useful information, returned the original forensic image to Williams's counsel, and believed that the government had not retained any copies of that image. Williams's counsel had requested that the government return or destroy any copies of the iPhone, and no government actor ever inspected the contents of the iPhone image, except for performing the limited metadata search on the Rolex photos. As it turned out, however, the forensic image of the phone was not deleted; rather, computer technicians simply stored the data in a way that the prosecutors could no longer access. Meanwhile, although the government's discovery obligations do not require the government to produce to defendants all materials obtained from third parties, the government sought to produce all materials from third parties to the defendants in an abundance of caution in light of the defendants' repeated requests for "every shred of evidence in [the government's] possession." As a result, when the government made document productions to the defendants, the image of the iPhone was inadvertently produced to the defendants.

On February 24, 2014, when the prosecutors learned of the inadvertently retained copies of the iPhone that was also produced to the defendants, the government notified Williams's counsel, who stated that they would seek an order from the Court requiring the return of the iPhone. On March 10, 2014, the government transmitted a letter to defense counsel, with copies to Williams's counsel, describing the relevant facts and chronology about the iPhone and referring to the protective order that this Court entered that allowed third parties to assert "any privilege or protection."

In response, Williams filed a motion for return of the iPhone information on March 12, 2014, and styled the motion as "In re: Grand Jury Subpoenas." And on March 13, 2014, this Court ordered the government to return any copies of the forensic iPhone image and seek the return of any copies produced to third parties. The next day, the government moved to unseal this Court's order so that it could be provided to the McDonnells, and as soon as that motion was granted, the government provided the order to the McDonnells.

Meanwhile, the defendants waited more than two months to formulate a position on the return of the iPhone, and on May 17, 2014, the McDonnells asserted in an email their position that they were entitled to all the data on the iPhone. The next day, Williams filed a motion asking the Court to return the iPhone image, and the McDonnells filed pleading in their criminal case asking the Court to clarify its order of March 13, 2014.

On June 4, 2014, this Court denied Williams's motion, explaining that the McDonnells are "not parties to this action." And on the same day, the McDonnells filed a motion for a subpoena duces tecum under Fed. R. Crim. P 17(c) to obtain information from the iPhone, and this Court granted that motion in part on June 6, 2014. Also on June 6, this Court granted a request by Williams for limited unsealing to allow Williams to disclose the March 13 order to the McDonnells but deferred judgment on the merits of Williams's request "until the McDonnells have been given notice and an opportunity to respond." Williams disclosed the order to the McDonnells on June 6 as well, and on June 9, 2014, this Court issued an order inviting the defendant, "[s]hould [they] wish to be heard on the Motion," to "submit a response in this action on or before Wednesday, June 11, 2014." The Court also warned that "[f]ailure to respond to the Motion may be deemed a waiver of any objection to the motion."

On June 11, 2014, the defendants filed motions to intervene in the grand jury litigation and opposed Williams's request for return of private information, and on June 18, 2014, this Court ordered the McDonnells to return the data from the iPhone. The McDonnells did so and then brought an interlocutory appeal, citing authority dealing with grand jury appeals as the basis for jurisdiction.

When the Fourth Circuit dismissed the defendants' appeal, the Fourth Circuit concluded that jurisdiction was lacking because the defendants were raising a discovery dispute and could appeal after conviction. Among other points, the Fourth Circuit noted that "[a]t its essence, the district court's order here was not a final order in a separate action, but rather, resolution of a discovery dispute inextricably intertwined with the criminal prosecution." No. 14-4495, dkt no. 43 at 2. The Fourth Circuit noted that discovery disputes may not be appealed before final judgment. "This case is no exception, notwithstanding the fact that the district court's order was entered under a separate case number." Id. at 3. The Fourth Circuit added that the defendants "will have ample opportunity to seek review of the district court's order if they are convicted." Id. at 4.

The Fourth Circuit's conclusion that the defendants could seek review after conviction did not address what the defendants must do to preserve a challenge and raise a discovery claim. A protective order was entered in this case, and after intervening in the grand jury litigation, appealing and having that appeal dismissed, the defendants have never sought relief under the discovery tools available to them under Rule 16. Although the grand jury litigation can be made part of the record in their criminal case, doing so is not a substitute for properly raising and litigating their claim in their criminal case.

Respectfully submitted,

DANA J. BOENTE
United States Attorney

JACK SMITH
Chief, Public Integrity Section
Criminal Division
U.S. Department of Justice

By:
Richard D. Cooke
Ryan S. Faulconer
Michael S. Dry
Jessica D. Aber
Counsel for the United States

U.S. Attorney's Office
600 E. Main Street, Suite 1800
Richmond, VA 23219
Phone: 804-819-5400
Fax: 804-771-2316
Email: richard.cooke@usdoj.gov
ryan.faulconer2@usdoj.gov
michael.s.dry@usdoj.gov
jessica.d.aber@usdoj.gov

CERTIFICATE OF SERVICE

I hereby certify that on November 3, 2014, I will electronically mail a copy of this pleading to counsel for defendants Robert F. McDonnell and Maureen G. McDonnell.

By: Jessica D. Aber

Jessica D. Aber
Counsel for the United States
U.S. Attorney's Office
600 E. Main Street, Suite 1800
Richmond, VA 23219
Phone: 804-819-5400
Fax: 804-771-2316
Email: jessica.d.aber@usdoj.gov

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
EASTERN DISTRICT OF VIRGINIA
RICHMOND DIVISION

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,

v.

ROBERT F MCDONNELL,

and

MAUREEN G. MCDONNELL,

Defendants.

Action No. 3:14-CR-12

MEMORANDUM ORDER

THIS MATTER is before the Court on Defendant Robert F. McDonnell's Motion #45 – Motion to Unseal Certain Sealed Portions of the Record ("Mr. McDonnell's Motion") (ECF No. 611), and Defendant Maureen G. McDonnell's Motion #30 – Motion to Unseal Certain Sealed Portions of the Record ("Mrs. McDonnell's Motion") (ECF No. 619) [collectively referred to as the "Motions"]. The Government filed a response in opposition (ECF No. 617), and Mr. McDonnell subsequently filed a reply (ECF No. 613). Additionally, Jonnie R. Williams ("Williams") filed an Opposition to Unsealing in the miscellaneous civil case styled In re Grand Jury Subpoenas, No. 3:14-ms-67 The parties have not requested a hearing on this matter, and the Court finds that oral argument is unnecessary. See E.D. Va. Loc. Crim. R. 47(J).

Both Mr. and Mrs. McDonnell's Motions request identical relief to unseal (1) the August 12, 2014 transcript of the in-chambers conference; (2) a previously sealed proceeding; and (3) all pleadings, opinions, and orders filed in pretrial proceedings concerning the forensic image of Williams' iPhone, including both those filed in the miscellaneous civil action in which Williams sought return of the image, In re Grand Jury Subpoenas, No. 3:14-ms-67 ("iPhone litigation"), and those filed in the McDonnells' criminal case (see Mr. McDonnell's Mot. Exs. C to F).

I. August 12, 2014 Transcript of In-Chambers Conference

As to the August 12, 2014 transcript, Mr. McDonnell's Motion is DENIED as MOOT as this transcript was previously unsealed by the Court. See O., October 29, 2014, ECF No. 546. However, the defendants additionally request to unseal the transcript of a voicemail message left for the Government by Jim Watson, Mr. Louis DeNitto's lawyer, and notes of the interview the Government subsequently conducted with Mr. Watson. (See Mr. McDonnell's Mot. Exs. A, B.) Because the Court previously granted the defense's request to include these documents in the record, and because the transcript and notes disclose nothing of importance beyond what has already been disclosed with the unsealing of the August 12 transcript, the Motions are GRANTED to the extent they request such relief. However, Mr. McDonnell is DIRECTED to first redact the telephone numbers contained on the last two lines of his Exhibit A before unsealing.

II. Previously Sealed Proceeding

Pursuant to this Court's Memorandum Order on January 8, 2015 (ECF No. 607), which granted the Motions to Seal to the extent they referred to a previously sealed proceeding, the present Motions are hereby DENIED as MOOT to the extent they also refer to that same sealed proceeding.

III. iPhone Litigation[1]

In this case, the grand jury issued subpoenas that triggered the production of documents from Williams' iPhone. Williams produced 137 documents from his iPhone to the government, including two identical pictures of Robert McDonnell posing with a Rolex watch. However, Williams did not produce any metadata associated with the pictures. As a result, on June 24, 2013, pursuant to an agreement with the Government, Williams produced a forensic image of his iPhone for the limited purpose of allowing the Government to perform a single search of the iPhone's metadata associated with these two pictures.

---

[1] It is important to note that in his reply, Mr. McDonnell expressly states that Williams' iPhone itself is not part of the record in this case and accordingly has not moved for its unsealing. (Reply Mem. at 4.) Therefore, the contents of the iPhone will not be unsealed.

The iPhone image was then erroneously turned over to the McDonnells, who refused to return the contents to Williams. This litigation was heard in a miscellaneous civil case, In re Grand Jury Subpoenas, No. 3:14-ms-67. On June 18, 2014, this Court issued a Sealed Order directing the McDonnells to return to Williams' counsel all copies of the forensic image of Williams' iPhone. The Court found Williams' privacy interests would be "irreparably harmed" if the McDonnells were allowed access to the full contents of the iPhone image.

Rule 6(e) forbids certain persons from disclosing "a matter occurring before the grand jury," Fed. R. Crim. P. 6(e)(2), and thus requires that "[r]ecords, orders, and subpoenas relating to grand-jury proceedings must be kept under seal to the extent and as long as necessary to prevent disclosure of a matter occurring before a grand jury," Fed. R. Crim. P 6(e)(6). Grand jury proceedings are conducted under a veil of "secrecy to encourage witnesses to testify 'fully and frankly,' to prevent those about to be indicted from fleeing, and to ensure that 'persons who are accused but exonerated by the grand jury will not be held up to public ridicule.'" In re Grand Jury Subpoena, Judith Miller, 493 F.3d 152, 154 (D.C. Cir. 2007) (quoting Douglas Oil Co. v. Petrol Stops Nw., 441 U.S. 211, 219 (1979)). Accordingly, "there is no First Amendment right of access to grand jury proceedings, nor do First Amendment protections extend to ancillary materials dealing with grand jury matters " Id. (internal quotation marks and citation omitted).

However, the secrecy associated with grand jury proceedings is not absolute. "Matters occurring before a grand jury" could essentially be "anything that may reveal what has transpired before the grand jury." United States v. Rosen, 471 F. Supp. 2d 651, 654 (E.D. Va. 2007) (quoting In re Grand Jury Subpoena, 920 F.2d 235, 241 (4th Cir. 1990)) (internal quotation marks omitted). But, importantly, "Rule 6(e) protects from disclosure 'only the essence of what takes place in the grand jury room, in order to preserve the freedom and integrity of the deliberative process.'" In re Grand Jury Subpoena, 920 F.2d at 241. "In other words, a disclosure of 'matters before the grand jury' must reveal some 'secret aspect of the inner workings of the grand jury.'" Rosen, 471 F. Supp. 2d at 654 (quoting United States v. Dynavac, 6 F.3d 1407, 1413 (9th Cir. 1993)). Additionally, "even evidence closely related to a grand jury investigation is not a 'matter occurring before the grand jury' unless it was actually presented before the grand jury." Id. at 655.

Furthermore, when grand jury investigations have terminated, the reasons for continued secrecy are few. In re Grand Jury Proceedings GJ-76-5 & GJ-75-3, 800 F.2d 1293, 1300–01 (4th Cir. 1986). And "[i]f the grand jury investigation not only has terminated, but, in addition, the resulting criminal proceedings themselves have been concluded without any threat of other prosecutions, the reasons for secrecy are weakened even further." Id. at 1301 (citation omitted). Finally, if the grand jury materials have already been disclosed, then this disclosure "has breached the secrecy theretofore attaching to such materials." Id.

In the present case, Williams contends that both the photographs and metadata were produced pursuant to the grand jury subpoenas, while the McDonnells argue that the grand jury only subpoenaed the photographs and the Government separately requested the metadata. The Government defers to the judgment of the Court on this matter.

On March 10, 2014 the Government wrote a letter to McDonnells' counsel regarding the "inadvertent possible production of a forensic image of an iPhone." (App'x 25 to Robert F. McDonnell's Motion to Supplement the Record on Appeal, ECF No. 615). That letter states,

> Before June 24, 2013, McGuire Woods had produced to us all material from Mr. Williams's iPhone that McGuire Woods determined was responsive to the grand jury subpoena served on Mr. Williams We subsequently requested that McGuire Woods produce a forensic image of Mr. Williams's iPhone to us to allow the Government to attempt to obtain metadata and other electronic information about certain specific pictures on Mr. Williams's iPhone of Mr. McDonnell posing with a Rolex watch.

The quoted language from the letter indicates that the metadata was requested by the Government after Williams produced 137 iPhone files[2] pursuant to the grand jury subpoena, and thus the request for the metadata does not reveal some "secret aspect" of the inner workings of the grand jury. See Rosen, 471 F. Supp. 2d at 654. Additionally, there is no indication that any metadata from the subpoenaed photographs was ever presented to the grand jury. See id. at 655. Furthermore, the grand jury investigation has long been terminated, the McDonnells' criminal case has concluded, and the public knows that Williams was an essential government witness, thereby curbing the need for secrecy of these proceedings. See In re Grand Jury Proceedings GJ-76-5 & GJ-75-3, 800 F.2d at 1301. Because unsealing the miscellaneous case would not jeopardize grand jury secrecy, the Motions are hereby GRANTED with respect to the iPhone litigation. Accordingly, the Clerk is DIRECTED to UNSEAL the miscellaneous civil case, In re Grand Jury Subpoenas, 3:14-ms-67, as well as all pleadings and corresponding exhibits, opinions and orders filed in criminal case no. 3:14-CR-12, which are related to this matter. (ECF Nos. 203, 204, 205, 206, 554, and 561).

---

[2] See App'x 6 to Robert F. McDonnell's McDonnell's Motion to Supplement the Record on Appeal, ECF No. 615.

Let the Clerk send a copy of this Order to all counsel of record.

It is SO ORDERED.

/s/
James R. Spencer
Senior U. S. District Judge

ENTERED this 12th day of January 2015.

AO 245B (Rev. 12/03)(VAED rev. 2) Sheet 1 - Judgment in a Criminal Case

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
Eastern District of Virginia
Richmond Division

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA
v.

ROBERT F McDONNELL
Defendant.

Case Number: 3:14cr00012-001

USM Number: 83758-083

Defendant's Attorney:
JOHN BROWNLEE, ESQ.,
HENRY ASBILL, ESQ.

AMENDED JUDGMENT IN A CRIMINAL CASE
(ONLY CHANGE: Corrected Offense End date on Count 10)

The defendant was found guilty on Count(s) after a plea of not guilty to Counts 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10 and 11 of the Indictment.

The defendant is adjudicated guilty of these offenses.

Title and Section	Nature of Offense	Offense Class	Offense Ended	Count
18 U.S.C. 1349	CONSPIRACY TO COMMIT HONEST-SERVICES WIRE FRAUD	Felony	3/2013	1
18 U.S.C. 1343	HONEST-SERVICES WIRE FRAUD	Felony	5/26/2011	2
18 U.S.C. 1343	HONEST-SERVICES WIRE FRAUD	Felony	3/12/2012	3
18 U.S.C. 1343	HONEST-SERVICES WIRE FRAUD	Felony	5/22/2012	4
18 U.S.C. 1951	CONSPIRACY TO OBTAIN PROPERTY UNDER COLOR OF OFFICIAL RIGHT	Felony	3/2013	5
18 U.S.C. 1951 AND 2	OBTAINING PROPERTY UNDER COLOR OF OFFICIAL RIGHT	Felony	5/23/2011	6 & 7
18 U.S.C. 1951 AND 2	OBTAINING PROPERTY UNDER COLOR OF OFFICIAL RIGHT	Felony	5/29/2011	8
18 U.S.C. 1951 AND 2	OBTAINING PROPERTY UNDER COLOR OF OFFICIAL RIGHT	Felony	1/7/2012	9
18 U.S.C. 1951 AND 2	OBTAINING PROPERTY UNDER COLOR OF OFFICIAL RIGHT	Felony	3/6/2012	10
18 U.S.C. 1951 AND 2	OBTAINING PROPERTY UNDER COLOR OF OFFICIAL RIGHT	Felony	5/22/2012	11

The defendant has been found not guilty on Count(s) 12 and 13 of the Indictment.

The defendant is sentenced as provided in pages 2 through 7 of this Judgment. The sentence is imposed pursuant to the Sentencing Reform Act of 1984.

It is ordered that the defendant shall notify the United States Attorney for this district within 30 days of any change of name, residence, or mailing address until all fines, restitution, costs, and special assessments imposed by this judgment are fully paid. If ordered to pay restitution, the defendant must notify the court and United States Attorney of material changes in economic circumstances.

01/06/2015
Date of Imposition of Judgment

/s/
James R. Spencer
Senior U. S. District Judge

01/06/2015

Case Number: 3:14cr00012-001
Defendant's Name: ROBERT F. McDONNELL

IMPRISONMENT

The defendant is hereby committed to the custody of the United States Bureau of Prisons to be imprisoned for a total term of: TWENTY FOUR (24) MONTHS IMPRISONMENT ON COUNTS 1-11, ALL TO BE SERVED CONCURRENTLY

The Court makes the following recommendations to the Bureau of Prisons:

THAT THE DEFENDANT BE DESIGNATED TO A FACILITY NEAR HIS HOME IN THE RICHMOND METROPOLITAN AREA.

The defendant shall surrender for service of sentence at the institution designated by the Bureau of Prisons: before 2 p.m. on 02/09/2015. If no designation has been made, the defendant is to report to the U.S. Marshal in Richmond, Virginia.

RETURN

I have executed this judgment as follows:

Defendant delivered on ______________________________ to ______________________________ at ______________________________, with a certified copy of this Judgment.

____
UNITED STATES MARSHAL

By ______________________________ DEPUTY UNITED STATES MARSHAL

Case Number: 3:14cr00012-001
Defendant's Name: ROBERT F. McDONNELL

SUPERVISED RELEASE

Upon release from imprisonment, the defendant shall be on supervised release for a term of TW0 (2) YEARS ON COUNTS 1-11, ALL TO BE SERVED CONCURRENTLY

The Probation Office shall provide the defendant with a copy of the standard conditions and any special conditions supervised release.

The defendant shall report to the probation office in the district to which the defendant is released within 72 hours of release from the custody of the Bureau of Prisons.

The defendant shall not commit another federal, state or local crime.

The defendant shall not unlawfully possess a controlled substance. The defendant shall refrain from any unlawful use of a controlled substance. The defendant shall submit to one drug test within 15 days of release from imprisonment and periodic drug tests thereafter, as determined by the court.

The above drug testing condition is suspended, based on the court's determination that the defendant poses a low risk of future substance abuse.

The defendant shall not possess a firearm, ammunition, destructive device, or any other dangerous weapon.

If this judgment imposes a fine or restitution obligation, it is a condition of supervised release that the defendant pay any such fine or restitution in accordance with the Schedule of Payments set forth in the Criminal Monetary Penalties sheet of this judgment.

STANDARD CONDITIONS OF SUPERVISION

The defendant shall comply with the standard conditions that have been adopted by this court set forth below:

1) the defendant shall not leave the judicial district without the permission of the court or probation officer;
2) the defendant shall report to the probation officer and shall submit a truthful and complete written report within the first five days of each month;
3) the defendant shall answer truthfully all inquiries by the probation officer and follow the instructions of the officer;
4) the defendant shall support his or her dependants and meet other family responsibilities;
5) the defendant shall work regularly at a lawful occupation, unless excused by the probation officer for schooling, training, or other acceptable reasons;
6) the defendant shall notify the probation officer at least ten days prior to any change in residence or employment;
7) the defendant shall refrain from excessive use of alcohol and shall not purchase, possess, use, distribute, or any narcotic or other controlled substance or any paraphernalia related to such substances, except as prescribed by a physician;
8) the defendant shall not frequent places where controlled substances are illegally sold, used, distributed, or administered;
9) the defendant shall not associate with any persons engaged in criminal activity and shall not associate with any person convicted of a felony, unless granted permission to do so by the probation officer;
10) the defendant shall permit a probation officer to visit him or her at any time at home or elsewhere and shall permit confiscation of any contraband observed in plain view of the probation officer;
11) the defendant shall notify the probation officer within seventy-two hours of being arrested or questioned by a law enforcement officer;
12) the defendant shall not enter into any agreement to act as an informer for a special agent of a law enforcement agency without the permission of the court;
13) as directed by the probation officer, the defendant shall notify third parties of risks that may be occasioned by the defendant's criminal record or personal history or characteristics and shall permit the probation officer to make notifications and to confirm the defendant's compliance with such notification requirement.

Case Number: 3:14cr00012-001
Defendant's Name: ROBERT F. McDONNELL

SPECIAL CONDITIONS OF SUPERVISION

While on supervised release, pursuant to this Judgment, the defendant shall also comply with the following additional special conditions:

1) The defendant shall not incur new credit card charges or open additional lines of credit without the approval of the probation officer.

2) The defendant shall provide the probation officer with access to requested financial information.

3) As reflected in the presentence report, the defendant presents a low risk of future substance abuse and therefore, the Court hereby suspends the mandatory condition for substance abuse testing as defined by 18 U.S.C. 3563 (a)(5). However, this does not preclude the United States Probation Office from administering drug tests as they deem appropriate.

4) The defendant shall pay the balance owed on any court-ordered financial obligations in monthly installments of not less than $100, starting 60 days after supervision begins until paid in full.

Case Number: 3:14cr00012-001
Defendant's Name: ROBERT F. McDONNELL

CRIMINAL MONETARY PENALTIES

The defendant must pay the total criminal monetary penalties under the Schedule of Payments on Sheet 7.

Count	Assessment	Fine	Restitution
1	$100.00	$0.00	$0.00
2	$100.00	$0.00	$0.00
3	$100.00	$0.00	$0.00
4	$100.00	$0.00	$0.00
5	$100.00	$0.00	$0.00
6	$100.00	$0.00	$0.00
7	$100.00	$0.00	$0.00
8	$100.00	$0.00	$0.00
9	$100.00	$0.00	$0.00
10	$100.00	$0.00	$0.00
11	$100.00	$0.00	$0.00
TOTALS:	$1,100.00	$0.00	$0.00

No fines have been imposed in this case.

Defendant's Name:	ROBERT F. McDONNELL
Case Number:	3:14cr00012-001

SCHEDULE OF PAYMENTS

Having assessed the defendant's ability to pay, payment of the total criminal monetary penalties are due as follows:

Payment to begin immediately.

Unless the court has expressly ordered otherwise, if this judgment imposes imprisonment, payment of criminal monetary penalties is due during imprisonment. All criminal monetary penalties, except those payments made through the Federal Bureau of Prisons' Inmate Financial Responsibility Program, are made to the Clerk of the Court.

The defendant shall receive credit for all payments previously made toward any criminal monetary penalties imposed.

Payments shall be applied in the following order: (1) assessment (2) restitution principal (3) restitution interest (4) fine principal (5) fine interest (6) community restitution (7) penalties and (8) costs, including cost of prosecution and court costs.

Nothing in the court's order shall prohibit the collection of any judgment, fine, or special assessment by the United States.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
FOR THE EASTERN DISTRICT OF VIRGINIA
RICHMOND DIVISION

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,	)
	)	CRIMINAL NO. 3:14-CR-00012
v.	)
	)	JUDGE JAMES R. SPENCER
ROBERT F. MCDONNELL	)
MAUREEN G. MCDONNELL	)

DEFENDANT ROBERT F. MCDONNELL'S NOTICE OF APPEAL

Notice is hereby given that Defendant Robert F McDonnell in the above named case hereby appeals to the United States Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit from the final judgment entered in this action on the 13th day of January, 2015.

Dated: January 13, 2015

Respectfully submitted,

/s/ Jonathan A. Berry
Henry W Asbill (pro hac vice)
Noel J. Francisco (pro hac vice)
James M. Burnham (pro hac vice)
Jonathan A. Berry (VSB No. 81864)
JONES DAY
51 Louisiana Avenue, N.W
Washington, DC 20001
Telephone: (202) 879-3939
Facsimile: (202) 626-1700

John L. Brownlee (VSB No. 37358)
HOLLAND & KNIGHT LLP
800 17th Street N.W
Suite 1100
Washington, DC 20006
Telephone: (202) 828-1854
Facsimile: (202) 955-5564

Counsel for Robert F McDonnell

CERTIFICATE OF SERVICE

I, Jonathan A. Berry, am a member of the Bar of this Court. I hereby certify that on this 13th day of January, 2015, I caused the foregoing to be electronically filed with the Clerk of Court using the CM/ECF system, causing it to be served on all registered users.

Dated: January 13, 2015

Respectfully submitted,

/s/ Jonathan A. Berry
Jonathan A. Berry (VSB No. 81864)
JONES DAY
51 Louisiana Avenue, N.W
Washington, DC 20001
Telephone: (202) 879-3939
Facsimile: (202) 626-1700
Email: jberry@jonesday.com

Counsel for Robert F McDonnell

ORAL ARGUMENT REQUESTED

No. 15-4019

UNITED STATES COURT OF APPEALS FOR THE FOURTH CIRCUIT

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,
Appellee,

v

ROBERT F MCDONNELL,
Defendant-Appellant.

On Appeal from the United States District Court for the Eastern District of Virginia, Richmond Division, James R. Spencer, District Judge

DEFENDANT-APPELLANT'S MOTION FOR RELEASE PENDING APPEAL

Noel J. Francisco
Counsel of Record
Henry W Asbill
Charlotte H. Taylor
James M. Burnham
JONES DAY
51 Louisiana Avenue N.W
Washington, DC 20001
Telephone: (202) 879-3939
Facsimile: (202) 626-1700
njfrancisco@jonesday.com

John L. Brownlee
HOLLAND & KNIGHT LLP
800 17th Street N.W
Suite 1100
Washington, DC 20006
Telephone: (202) 828-1854
Facsimile: (202) 955-5564

Counsel for Defendant-Appellant
Robert F McDonnell

Defendant-Appellant Robert F McDonnell moves for release pending appeal pursuant to 18 U.S.C. § 3143(b). He has been ordered to report to the Bureau of Prisons by February 9, 2015 and therefore requests expedited briefing and disposition of this matter prior to that date. Should the Court desire additional time to consider the issue, he respectfully requests a brief administrative stay of his reporting date pending this Court's disposition of this motion.[1]

This case presents the substantial issue of whether this Court is prepared to become the first court in history (besides the district court) to hold that actions not attempting to exercise any governmental power nonetheless constitute "official actions" so long as they are things that officials customarily do—a decision that would create a conflict with decisions of the Supreme Court, the D.C., First, and Eighth Circuits, as well as this Court's prior decisions, and that would revolutionize politics by dramatically expanding the general federal corruption laws to make every political fundraiser that exchanges "access" or "credibility" for campaign contributions into a federal felony. That risk is particularly acute where, as here, the district court instructed that "[t]here has been no suggestion in this case that Mr. McDonnell violated Virginia law." Tr. Vol. XXVI, at 6125. To date, the Government has not cited any in any jurisdiction with facts remotely resembling the facts here. Nor has the district court ever cited—let alone distinguished—any of the well-reasoned out-of-circuit decisions Mr. McDonnell has repeatedly invoked that show that the facts proved were not a crime and, regardless, that the jury instructions were prejudicially overbroad. Indeed, the district court agreed with Mr. McDonnell about several legal limits on "official action," yet never explained why it declined to tell the jury about any of those limits in its instructions—an omission that invited the jury to convict Mr. McDonnell for conduct that is lawful under the district court's own post-trial opinions.

---

[1] Mr. McDonnell notes for the Court's convenience that he believes one or more amici curiae may seek to file briefs in support of this motion for bond pending appeal.

The district court has, however, recognized that the Government's case against Mr. McDonnell falls well outside the heartland of public corruption cases. As the district court put it at sentencing: "Imagine if these Guidelines were mandatory and the Court had no choice but to sentence Governor McDonnell to seven or eight years in prison. That would be unfair. It would be ridiculous under these facts." Sent. Tr. at 175, Ex. C (emphasis added). While the district court declined to grant bond, its recognition that this case is atypical underscores the fact that Mr. McDonnell's appeal, at a minimum, presents "a 'close' question or one that very well could be decided the other way," United States v. Steinhorn, 927 F.2d 195, 196 (4th Cir. 1991) (granting bond pending appeal), which is all Mr. McDonnell need show here. Should this Court agree that Mr. McDonnell has made that low showing, "the statute establishes a right to liberty that is not simply discretionary but mandatory." United States v. Abuhamra, 389 F.3d 309, 319 (2d Cir. 2004). Mr. McDonnell's appeal will raise several questions that easily satisfy this standard.[2]

First, to convict Mr. McDonnell, a properly instructed jury had to find that he performed or promised to perform "official acts" in exchange for gifts and loans. There are substantial questions whether (1) the Government proved this critical element, and (2) the district court properly instructed the jury on it. The Government's theory was not that Mr. McDonnell exercised (or pressured others to exercise) actual governmental power. Instead, it alleged that Mr. McDonnell's "official acts" consisted of sending an email asking his in-house counsel to "see me" about an issue, attending two events, arranging one meeting, and suggesting one other meeting. No federal or state judicial decision has ever upheld a bribery conviction on such facts or approved instructions permitting a conviction for such customary actions that do not make (or pressure someone else to make) actual governmental decisions. To the contrary, opinions from the Supreme Court and the First, Eighth, and D.C. Circuits all make clear that providing a referral, sending an informational inquiry, or appearing in public are not—without more—"official acts." This issue thus obviously presents a substantial question.

---

[2] Mr. McDonnell's appeal will raise additional substantial issues and he in no way concedes here that his other appellate issues are any less substantial.

Second, there is also a substantial question whether the district court conducted sufficient voir dire of the jurors on pretrial publicity—an issue of first impression in this Court post-Skilling. During the months leading up to Mr. McDonnell's trial, there was massive negative and inaccurate publicity surrounding the case. The district court, however, rejected Mr. McDonnell's request for individualized voir dire of potential jurors who had been exposed to such publicity, despite longstanding precedent holding that jurors in high-publicity cases should be "examined, individually and outside the presence of the other jurors, to determine the effect of [pretrial] publicity," United States v. Hankish, 502 F.2d 71, 77 (4th Cir. 1974).

Finally, bond pending appeal is particularly appropriate given that the district court imposed a twenty-four month sentence. The appellate process takes time, particularly in a complex case following a five-week jury trial. In such circumstances, requiring Mr. McDonnell "to serve most or all of his sentence before his appeal has been decided" and "[i]ncarcerating [him] 'immediately upon conviction'" would "substantially diminish the benefit he would ordinarily receive from an appeal." United States v. Garcia, 340 F.3d 1013, 1019 (9th Cir. 2003).[3] The possibility of this grave injustice provides another compelling reason to grant bond.

FACTUAL BACKGROUND

The Government's case below focused on Mr. McDonnell's interactions with Jonnie R.

---

[3] See also, e.g., United States v. Jackson, 32 F.3d 1101, 1104 (7th Cir. 1994) ("[W]e would encourage defendants facing relatively short sentences to seek release pending appeal or move for an expedited appeal because it is often difficult to file an appeal, docket it, set a briefing schedule, hear oral argument, and draft an opinion before a very short sentence has been served."); United States v. McManus, 651 F. Supp. 382, 383-84 (D. Md. 1987) ("There seems little point to an appeal if the defendant will serve his time before a decision is rendered.").

Williams, Sr., the CEO of a Virginia public company, while Mr. McDonnell was Governor of Virginia. The Indictment charged that, in exchange for golf and loans, Mr. McDonnell took "official action" to assist Mr. Williams and his company, Star Scientific ("Star").

1. The Government's case hinged on "five specific actions taken by McDonnell " New Trial Op. at 6, Dkt. 567; see also Tr. Vol. XXV at 6040-42. They were:

(1) Mr. McDonnell sent an email to his chief counsel asking the counsel to "see me" about an issue related to Mr. Williams. (The counsel never actually saw him.) See Tr. Vol. VII, at 1665-68.

(2) Mr. McDonnell's wife invited Mr. Williams, some of Mr. Williams' associates, and private doctors recommended by Mr. Williams to a reception for "Healthcare Leaders." (Nothing else happened.) See Tr. Vol. IV, at 761-63, 783-85; Tr. Vol. IX, at 2121, 2165.

(3) Mr. McDonnell possibly suggested to two subordinates that they meet with Star. (The subordinates disagreed about whether Mr. McDonnell made the request, they never met with anyone, and they never heard about it again from Mr. McDonnell or anyone else.) See Tr. Vol. XI, at 2654-55, 2675-76; 2679-80, 2668-69.

(4) Mr. McDonnell asked a subordinate to send a staffer to a meeting with Mr. Williams, immediately after which the staffer sent Mr. Williams a "blow-off email." (Nothing else happened.) See Tr. Vol. VII, at 1492-93, 1507-08, 1517-18 (the email was "'No' with a smile"), 1522, 1507:8-22; id. at 1517:22-1518:2.

(5) Mr. McDonnell appeared at a luncheon held at the Executive Mansion and paid for by his PAC, featuring Mr. Williams and researchers from the University of Virginia ("UVA") and Virginia Commonwealth University ("VCU"), at which Mr. Williams presented a portion of $200,000 from Star to those researchers as planning grants to prepare Tobacco Commission research proposals. (No proposals were ever submitted, nobody from the McDonnell Administration ever mentioned them again, nor did anyone ever contact the Commission.) See Tr. Vol. IV, at 727-28, 733-34; Tr. Vol. VIII, at 1793-95, 1810-12.

Mr. McDonnell repeatedly argued that none of these actions qualify as "official acts" because in none of them did he make, nor pressure someone else to make, any actual decision or take any other action on any pending governmental matter.[4] He requested numerous instructions reflecting that legal principle, including ones specifying that "merely arranging a meeting, attending an event, hosting a reception, or making a speech are not, standing alone, 'official acts,' even if they are settled practices of the official," Robert F McDonnell's Prop. Jury Instructions, Dkt. 287, at 79; that "[t]he questions you must decide are both whether the charged conduct constitutes a 'settled practice' and whether that conduct was intended to or did in fact influence a specific official decision the government actually makes," id. at 79-80; and that "mere ingratiation and access are not corruption," id. at 79.

---

[4] In addition to moving to dismiss the indictment on this basis, see Mem. Def. Mot. to Dismiss Counts 1-11 of the Indictment, Dkt. 106, at 7-19, he moved for a new trial on this

The district court refused these requests and declined to provide a definition of "official act" that limited it in any relevant way, even though this legal issue went to the heart of Mr. McDonnell's defense. Instead, after quoting the statutory definition of "official action" from 18 U.S.C. § 201(a)(3),[5] the district court stated (Tr. Vol. XXVI, at 6102:23-6103:14):

> Official action as I just defined it includes those actions that have been clearly established by settled practice as part of a public official's position, even if the action was not taken pursuant to responsibilities explicitly assigned by law. In other words, official actions may include acts that a public official customarily performs, even if those actions are not described in any law, rule, or job description. And a public official need not have actual or final authority over the end result sought by a bribe payor so long as the alleged bribe payor reasonably believes that the public official had influence, power or authority over a means to the end sought by the bribe payor. In addition, official action can include actions taken in furtherance of longer-term goals, and an official action is no less official because it is one in a series of steps to exercise influence or achieve an end.

2. Seizing on the unqualified statement that the statutory definition of "official action" "includes those actions that have been clearly established by settled practice as part of a public ground, see Mem. Def. Mot. for New Trial, Dkt. 548, at 2-11, and three times moved for an acquittal on it, see Dkt. 409, at 12-17; Trial Tr. Vol. XXIV, at 5731-33; Dkt. 510, at 3-15.

---

(continued...)

[5] The statute prohibiting bribery for federal officials defines "official act" as follows: "[A]ny decision or action on any question, matter, cause, suit, proceeding or controversy, which may at any time be pending, or which may by law be brought before any public official, in such official's official capacity " 18 U.S.C. § 201(a)(3).

official's position"—and the expansion of it—the Government opened its rebuttal argument by telling the jury: "Mr. Asbill talked about defining quo. But what he failed to mention is that official action includes those actions that have been clearly established by settled practice as part of a public official's position In other words, official actions may include acts that a public official customarily performs, even if those actions are not described in any law, rule or job description." Id. at 6039. Given that the status of Mr. McDonnell's actions as settled practices was not disputed—since governors unthinkingly make dozens of meeting referrals and send thousands of emails every week—the only purpose of that argument was encouraging the jury to convict Mr. McDonnell solely for engaging in settled practices. The jury obliged, convicting Mr. McDonnell on eleven counts for committing, and conspiring to commit, honest services wire fraud and Hobbs Act extortion, while acquitting him of the non-corruption charges.

3. The district court denied Mr. McDonnell's post-trial motions for a judgment of acquittal and a new trial. It conceded that "mere '[i]ngratiation and access' may not alone create a quid pro quo agreement within the meaning of the bribery statutes," New Trial Op., Dkt. 567, at 5 (quoting Citizens United, 558 U.S. 310, 360 (2010)), but nonetheless upheld Mr. McDonnell's convictions, invoking an (inapposite) Sixth Circuit dissent to hold that "to distinguish between mere access and federal corruption, the Court should look to McDonnell's subjective intent in receiving the money." Id. (citing United States v. Dimora, 750 F.3d 619, 632 (6th Cir. 2014) (Merritt, J., dissenting)). On this basis, the district court ruled that such actions as emailing his chief counsel, or suggesting a meeting with Star representatives, qualify as "official acts" because Mr. McDonnell supposedly had the overarching intent of doing things "to legitimize, promote, and obtain research studies for Star Scientific products," id. at 5-7—an alleged overarching intent that the district court's instructions did not require the jury to find.

On January 13, 2015, the district court denied bond pending appeal. See Ex. A.

ARGUMENT

The standard for granting bond pending appeal—where, as here, there is no risk of flight, no danger to the community, and the appeal is not taken solely for purposes of delay—is merely whether the appeal presents "a substantial question of law or fact" that, if successful, is "likely to result in reversal or an order for a new trial of all counts on which imprisonment has been imposed." United States v. Miller, 753 F.2d 19, 24 (3d Cir. 1985). Mr. McDonnell need not show he is likely to succeed on the merits; rather, he need show only that his appeal presents "a 'close' question or one that very well could be decided the other way." Steinhorn, 927 F.2d at 196 (emphasis added). Appellate courts thus routinely grant defendants like Mr. McDonnell bond pending appeal in light of the substantial questions that arise when the vague federal corruption laws are applied to novel facts[6]—even where, as in Jefferson and other complex cases, they ultimately affirm the convictions.[7] Indeed, just last Friday, the First Circuit granted bond in a similar pending public corruption case. See Order, United States v. O'Brien, Case No. 14-2312, Ex. D. It is thus no surprise this Court regularly grants bond pending appeal where, as here, the defendant satisfies § 3143(b). Mr. McDonnell's appeal likewise clears this low hurdle.

---

[6] See, e.g., Order, United States v. Jefferson, No. 07-CR-209 (E.D. Va. Nov 18, 2009), Dkt. 619 (granting bond pending appeal on question whether certain actions constituted "official" actions under federal law); Order, United States v. Ring, No. 08-CR-274 (D.D.C. Oct. 26, 2011), Dkt. 297, at 3 ("challenging and novel questions of law regarding" the application of the federal bribery laws in the lobbying context); Order, United States v. Siegelman, No. 07-13163-BB (11th Cir. Mar. 27, 2008), Ex. D to Mem. in Support of Def. Robert F McDonnell's Mot. for Release Pending Appeal, Dkt. 602 (adequacy of the jury instructions governing Hobbs Act conviction of former Alabama governor); Order, United States v. Ryan, No. 06-3528 (7th Cir. Nov. 28, 2006) (former Illinois governor).

[7] See United States v. Gupta, 747 F.3d 111, 122, 140 (2d Cir. 2014); United States v. Siegelman, 640 F.3d 1159, 1190 (11th Cir. 2011); United States v. Nacchio, 555 F.3d 1234, 1259 (10th Cir. 2009); United States v. Warner, 498 F.3d 666, 704-05 (7th Cir. 2007); see also, e.g., United States v. Taft, No. 04-05130 (Feb. 28, 2005), Dkt. 31; United States v. Elliot, No. 02-04836 (Nov. 1, 2002), Dkt. 14; United States v. Parker, No. 01-04109 (Feb. 21, 2001), Dkt. 10; United States v. Robinson, No. 95-07620 (April 17, 1996), Dkt. 17.

I. There Is A Substantial Question Whether Mr. McDonnell Performed Or Promised To Perform An "Official Act."

Mr. McDonnell's appeal presents the substantial question whether a public official takes "official action" when he asks an aide a question, encourages a staffer to attend a meeting, or appears at a private, closed-press event, without taking the additional step of asking anyone to take any particular action on the government's behalf. This case is the first in history to find that these sorts of actions are "official" ones under federal law. Decisions of the Supreme Court, the Eighth, First, and D.C. Circuits, and this Court all support Mr. McDonnell's position that his actions were not "official" ones. Those decisions make this a paradigmatic substantial question.

A. The Supreme Court Has Held That "Official Action" Does Not Include Everything A Public Official Does In His Official Capacity.

The Supreme Court has long been hostile to expansive constructions of the federal corruption laws. In "an area where precisely targeted prohibitions"—like ethics regulations—"are commonplace," a corruption statute "that can linguistically be interpreted to be either a meat axe or a scalpel should reasonably be taken to be the latter." United States v. Sun-Diamond Growers of Cal., 526 U.S. 398, 412 (1999). Courts "ought not expand [the bribery] piece of the regulatory puzzle so dramatically as to make many other pieces misfits." Id. Or in rejecting the old honest-services theory: "Rather than construe the statute in a manner that leaves its outer boundaries ambiguous and involves the Federal Government in setting standards of disclosure and good government for local and state officials, we read § 1341 as limited in scope to the protection of property rights." McNally v. United States, 483 U.S. 350, 359 (1987).

The Court's most recent review of these statutes in Skilling v. United States, 561 U.S. 358 (2010), unanimously rejected the Government's attempt to exploit the vagaries of honest services fraud, holding it "criminalizes only the bribe-and-kickback core of the pre-McNally case law." Id. at 409. Notably, the debate was not about whether the Government's theory was correct—all agreed it was not. It was, instead, between justices who believed the statute could be construed narrowly, id., and those who thought it unconstitutionally vague, id. at 425 (Scalia, Thomas, Kennedy, JJ., concurring in the judgment). Either approach supports Mr. McDonnell here.

The Supreme Court's decision in Sun-Diamond further supports Mr. McDonnell's position. There, the Government argued that the gratuities statute "requires only a showing that a 'gift was motivated, at least in part, by the recipient's capacity to exercise governmental power or influence in the donor's favor' without necessarily showing that it was connected to a particular official act." 526 U.S. at 405-06. The Court rejected that broad construction, explaining that when interpreting corruption provisions which are "merely one strand of an intricate web of regulations, both administrative and criminal, governing the acceptance of gifts and other self-enriching actions by public officials," courts should give those provisions "a narrow, rather than a sweeping," interpretation. Id. at 409. Consistent with that guidance, the Court explained that under the statutory definition of "official act," many of a public official's actions—such as "receiving [] sports teams at the White House, visiting [a] high school, and speaking to [] farmers about USDA policy"—"while they are assuredly 'official acts' in some sense—are not 'official acts' within the meaning of the statute." Id. at 407.

Here, the Government's legal theory and the district court's jury instructions ignore the basic teaching of these decisions. Rather than restrain itself to prosecuting conduct in "the bribe-and-kickback core of the pre-McNally case law," id. at 409, the Government has taken the position that bribery captures routine political conduct that virtually every public official undertakes on a regular basis. "[C]ampaign contributions ... no less than any other payments," can be the quid in a quid pro quo bribery scheme. United States v. Derrick, 163 F.3d 799, 816-17 (4th Cir. 1998). That means that if providing referrals to other government officials or conferring credibility constitute "official acts," then virtually every political fundraiser violates the federal bribery laws, freeing prosecutors to choose targets at will.[8] That theory is incorrect, particularly in light of the Supreme Court's recognition that the First Amendment protects this sphere of political activity, such that "government regulation may not target the general gratitude a candidate may feel toward those who support him or his allies, or the political access such support may afford." McCutcheon v. Fed. Election Comm'n, 134 S. Ct. 1434, 1441 (2014). At the very least, the correctness of that theory presents a substantial question under § 3143(b).

B. Mr. McDonnell's Position Is Supported By Decisions From Three Other Courts of Appeals And Is Distinguishable From Jefferson.

Numerous federal appellate court decisions support Mr. McDonnell's position. The district court's opinions do not even cite—much less attempt to distinguish—these rulings. And Jefferson, the case that the district court and the Government do rely on, is not on point. These decisions establish a paradigmatic "substantial question" under § 3143(b).

1. Eighth Circuit. United States v. Rabbitt, 583 F.2d 1014 (8th Cir. 1978), abrogated on other grounds by 483 U.S. 350 (1987), superseded by statute, 18 U.S.C. § 1346, an honest services fraud and Hobbs Act case, directly supports Mr. McDonnell's position. There, the Eighth Circuit reversed the Hobbs Act conviction of Missouri's Speaker of the House who "offered, for a fee , to introduce [an architectural] firm to [state officials] who might be able to secure architectural contracts for it." Id. at 1020. The court held that was not enough to support a conviction: "[W]hile Rabbitt's influence obviously helped these architects obtain state jobs, no testimony established that any state contracting officer awarded any contract to Berger-Field because of Rabbitt's influence or that Berger-Field believed Rabbitt's introduction was enough to secure the work." Id. at 1028. As the Eighth Circuit has subsequently explained, it reversed Mr. Rabbitt's conviction because he "promised only to introduce the firm to influential persons" and "did not promise to use his official position to influence those persons." United States v. Loftus, 992 F.2d 793, 796 (8th Cir. 1993).

---

[8] Government officials routinely confer increased access and credibility on their supporters. See, e.g., Jim Kuhnhenn, Barack Obama Goes to DreamWorks, Talks Banjo with Steve Martin, Huffington Post (Nov. 26, 2013) ("[President] Obama toured the DreamWorks Animation studio of one of his top political benefactors, Jeffrey Katzenberg 'Can't wait to see your next movie,' Obama added with a grin."), http://tinyurl.com/oov9z73. That includes officials who accept personal benefits like free travel—the gravamen of most convictions here. See, e.g., Maddy Sauer, Crackdown Proposed on Judges' Free Trips, Lavish Gifts, ABC News (Feb. 4, 2008) ("[C]ritics say many of these trips are little more than judicial junkets which often cause serious conflicts of interest."), available at http://goo.gl/7cHydk.

Rabbitt supports Mr McDonnell's argument that taking an official act requires more than arranging meetings so that the benefactor can discuss a matter he is concerned about. The Eighth Circuit held that it was not enough for Mr. Rabbitt to recommend bribe payors "to state contractors as qualified architects and thereby gain them a friendly ear" in pursuit of their goal of "obtain[ing] state jobs." 583 F.2d at 1028. To take "official" action, the official had take the next step of "us[ing] his official position to influence those persons." Loftus, 992 F.2d at 796.

2. First Circuit. The First Circuit's decision in United States v. Urciuoli, 513 F.3d 290, 295-96 (1st Cir. 2008), an honest-services fraud case, also strongly supports Mr. McDonnell's position. There, the court reversed the conviction of a state senator who took payments in exchange for contacting "mayors and other local officials urging them to comply with Rhode Island law" in a way that benefited the alleged bribe-payor's hospital. Id. at 294. Judge Boudin s opinion for the court held that there was "no indication that [the senator] invoked any purported oversight authority or threatened to use official powers in support of his advocacy." Id. at 296. It specifically rejected the notion that "trad[ing] on the reputation, network and influence that comes with political office" or using the "access and attention" that comes with a government title, or even the "(possibly improper) use of senate letterhead" were sufficient—standing alone—to qualify as improper official action. Id. at 296.

That decision conflicts with the Government's position. Here, too, there is no evidence (or jury instruction requiring a finding) that Mr. McDonnell ever "invoked any purported oversight authority or threatened to use official powers." Id. Moreover, the evidence in Urciuoli made clear that the defendant made payments to the public official specifically in exchange for obtaining access as part of a broader plan to convince mayors to increase ambulance service to the defendant's hospital. See id. at 292, 295. Despite a clear quid pro quo and larger plan, it was not honest services fraud because the Government had not shown "by context or threat that [the official] sought deliberately to exploit" the "leverage" of his public office. Id. at 296.

3. D.C. Circuit. The leading D.C. Circuit decision on this issue is its en banc opinion in Valdes. There, a policeman was convicted of taking payments in exchange for using an official police database to perform searches for license plates, "ostensibly to get contact information on individuals who owed [the bribe-payor] money." Valdes v. United States, 475 F.3d 1319, 1321-22 (D.C. Cir. 2007) (en banc). The D.C. Circuit held that conducting these searches for the alleged bribe-payor was not "official action." In so holding, the court rejected the Government's argument "that the bribery and gratuity statute should be construed broadly, to encompass essentially any action which implicates the duties and powers of a public official." Id. at 1322. The meaning of "official act" did not subsume "officials' moonlighting, or their misuse of government resources, or the two in combination"; rather, the Government must prove that the defendant exerted "inappropriate influence on decisions that the government actually makes." Id. at 1324-25; see also, e.g., United States v. Muntain, 610 F.2d 964, 967-68 (D.C. Cir. 1979) (vacating convictions and explaining "[t]o the extent that [defendant's] use of his official position to promote a purely private venture created an appearance of impropriety, his conduct is reprehensible, but it is not criminal."); United States v. Ring, 706 F.3d 460, 470 (D.C. Cir. 2013) (explaining the crucial difference between "making a purely informational inquiry" and acting in one's "official capacity to influence" a governmental decision).

The contrast between the D.C. Circuit's rule and the rule applied below is vividly illustrated by comparing the jury instructions here to the instructions Judge Ellen Huvelle gave in Ring. There, Judge Huvelle instructed: "Standing alone, providing gifts of meals and tickets to public officials are not crimes, even if they are provided by someone seeking to curry favor or influence with those officials." Trial Tr. Day 12, United States v. Ring, No. CR 08-274 (D.D.C. Nov. 3, 2010), Dkt. 270, at 36:8-39:21, Ex. E. She also instructed that "[t]he fact that gifts or hospitality might make a public official willing to take a lobbyist's phone call or might provide the lobbyist greater access to the official's appointment schedule is not enough by itself to demonstrate the lobbyist's intent to deprive the public of the government official's honest services," id., and that the "six terms, question, matter, cause, suit, proceeding, or controversy, refer to a class of questions or matters whose answer or disposition is determined by the Government." Id. And most importantly: "Mere favoritism, as evidenced by a public official's willingness to take a lobbyist's telephone call or to meet with a lobbyist is not an official act." Id. Here, the district court refused to instruct on these limits, even though they were central to the defense, and even though the district court's post-trial opinions themselves endorsed and relied on many of them.

4. United States v. Jefferson. The district court has never addressed the foregoing decisions. Instead, it relied on United States v. Jefferson, 674 F.3d 332 (4th Cir. 2012). See New Trial Op., Dkt. 567, at 9-11. Jefferson, however, is both factually and legally distinguishable.[9]

---

[9] If it were not, Jefferson would conflict with Rabbitt, Urciuoli, and the other cases

On the facts, Congressman Jefferson engaged in "official acts" even under Mr. McDonnell's definition. Congressman Jefferson plainly used his status as a Congressman with "oversight authority" over domestic government agencies and foreign aid as a tool "in support of his advocacy" to, among other things, (1) pressure Export-Import Bank officials to award financing to the bribe-payor; (2) persuade the U.S. Army to award military contracts to the bribe-payor; and (3) pressure Nigerian government officials to award government contracts to the bribe-payor. Take, for example, his efforts on "African trade issues." Among other things, "[i]n return [for payments], Jefferson sent letters on official letterhead, conducted official travel to Ghana, and met Ghanaian government officials to promote the interests of" the bribe-payor, 674 F.3d at 342; he attended meetings in which he "urged Nigeria's support for [the bribe-payor's] venture, id. at 343; and he "assured [the bribe-payor] that he could secure the necessary cooperation of the Nigerian government," id. at 344. This list goes on. See, e.g., id. at 341-51. Jefferson thus was a textbook case of a legislator "invok[ing his] purported oversight authority [and] threaten[ing] to use official powers in support of his advocacy." Urciuoli, 513 F.3d at 296.

And on the law, these factual differences underscore how Jefferson resolved an entirely different legal issue than the ones Mr. McDonnell will raise. As this Court explained there, Mr. Jefferson was making the "broad assertion that Sun-Diamond supersedes Birdsall" and, therefore, that "official acts" were limited only to formal legislative duties. Jefferson, 674 F.3d at 356. Here, by contrast, Mr. McDonnell has never questioned the vitality of Birdsall or, more specifically, that settled practices can be "official acts" if they otherwise involve "invok[ing] … purported oversight authority or threaten[ing] to use official powers in support of … advocacy," discussed above—a traditional ground for en banc and Supreme Court review, see Fed. R. App. P. 35(b)(1)(B); Sup. Ct. R. 10(a), that would itself raise a substantial question.

(continued…)

Urciuoli, 513 F.3d at 296. Instead, Mr. McDonnell challenges only whether his actions satisfy the statutory definition of "official action"—i.e., whether they are "decisions" or "actions" on any pending "matter." That issue finds support in the out-of-circuit cases Mr. McDonnell has cited, was not addressed in Jefferson, and will thus present a substantial question of law

C. It Is, In Turn, A "Substantial Question" Whether The Verdict Was Sound.

Decisions of the Supreme Court, three other circuits (which the district court never addressed), and this Court thus all support Mr. McDonnell's understanding of the law. And if that understanding is correct, an acquittal or new trial is necessary. The Government did not prove, and the jury instructions did not require finding, that in the "five specific actions taken by McDonnell," D. Ct. New Trial Op. at 6, he "invoked any purported oversight authority or threatened to use official powers in support" of Mr. Williams. Urciuoli, 513 F.3d at 296. At the very least, both of these issues present substantial questions under § 3143(b).

1. There Is A Substantial Question Whether The Jury's Verdict Was Supported By The Evidence Under The Proper Legal Standard.

The Government called no witness who testified that Mr. McDonnell tried to influence him or her to make any decision on the Commonwealth's behalf, much less that he "threatened to use official powers in support of his advocacy," Urciuoli, 513 F.3d at 296. In fact, every relevant witness testified to the contrary:

- Mr. Eige, the recipient of the email, testified that Mr. McDonnell "never followed back up with me or never pushed back or never directed me to actually go forward and try to make something happen with the universities." Tr. Vol. VII, at 1668.
- No witness testified that Mr. McDonnell did anything at the Healthcare Leaders Reception to encourage anyone—public official or private physician—to do anything whatsoever with respect to Star or Anatabloc, or that he even mentioned Star.
- The staffer who thought Mr. McDonnell asked her to meet with Star testified that she did not think he wanted her to do anything besides meet with Mr. Williams and make her own decision about what (if anything) to do. See Tr. Vol. XI, at 2680 (Ms. Hicks-Thomas) ("Q: Governor McDonnell never came back to you and said 'Did you meet with them? Did you take care of that?' A. Never.").

- The staffer who actually did meet with Mr. Williams sent him a "blow off" email within hours of the meeting and had "no doubt" that she was free to do precisely that. Tr. Vol. VII, at 1517:10-25 (Ms. Huffstetler); id. at 1524:10-14.
- The university researchers who attended the mansion lunch testified they did not think Mr. McDonnell wanted them to do anything in particular. See Tr. Vol. VIII, at 1795 (Dr. Lazo) ("I think the Governor's position was more of an interrogative type of a sort of questioning rather than 'Isn't this great?' or 'Isn't it this awful?'"); Tr. Vol. VII, at 1582 (Dr. Clore) ("[T]he gist of the conversation was the Governor spoke at a high level about health and wellness in Virginia and the compound, I suppose.").

The evidence thus showed only that Mr. McDonnell wanted people to make independent judgments about what to do. As Molly Huffstetler, the only staffer to actually meet with Mr. Williams during the alleged conspiracy, testified: She was "empowered to make [her] own decision about what to do going forward if at all here with Mr. Williams." Tr. Vol. VII, at 1517

2. There Is Also A "Substantial Question" Whether The Jury Instructions Were Prejudicially Overbroad.

Separate and apart from whether a jury could have found sufficient evidence to convict Mr. McDonnell under the correct legal standard, the district court failed to require this jury to make any such finding. The instructions declined to inform the jury of its obligation to find that Mr. McDonnell crossed the line drawn in Urciuoli, Rabbitt, Valdes, etc. The district court declined to inform the jury about such limitations even though it relied directly on them in its post-trial opinions, agreeing with Mr. McDonnell that "mere '[i]ngratiation and access' may not alone create a quid pro quo agreement within the meaning of the bribery statutes." New Trial Op., Dkt. 567, at 5. Though the district court repeatedly endorsed this principle post-trial, it has never explained why it rejected Mr. McDonnell's proposed instruction making the same point during the trial. See McDonnell Prop. Instr. No. 58 ("[M]ere ingratiation and access are not corruption."), Dkt. 287. Same for the district court's post-trial recognition that the Government needed to prove that Mr. McDonnell "attempted to use his gubernatorial position to influence governmental decisions," Trial Op., Dkt. 567, at 7; the court rejected an instruction conveying that precise rule. See McDonnell Prop. Instr. No. 58 ("The questions you must decide are both whether the charged conduct constitutes a 'settled practice' and whether that conduct was intended to or did in fact influence a specific official decision the government actually makes."). The district court even declined to tell the jury that "the fact that an activity is a routine activity, or a 'settled practice,' of an office-holder does not alone make it an 'official act,'" id.—an omission the Government aggressively exploited, see supra 5-6—that conflicts with Jefferson's holding that "the jury could not rely exclusively on [ ] settled practices." 674 F.3d at 357.[10]

